UPN to Present Chilling Video Record of a Family's Fateful Encounter With Extraterrestrials When ``Alien Obduction: Incident in Lake County'' Airs Tuesday, Jan. 20, 9-10 p.m. ET/PT

LOS ANGELES--(ENTERTAINMENT WIRE)--Dec. 31, 1997--

McPherson Family's Video Is the Sole Testament to the Missing Family's Fate

UPN will present a one-hour special centered on an alleged videotaped account of a family's purported encounter with what may be extraterrestrial life forms when ``Alien Abduction: Incident in Lake County'' airs Tuesday, Jan. 20 (9-10 p.m.
ET/PT).

The recently acquired videotape is the sole testament to the fate of the McPherson family, missing since last Thanksgiving Day.

(Editors please note: Regularly scheduled programming is pre-empted on this date.)

Apparently recorded and, at various times, narrated by the family's 16-year-old son, Thomas McPherson, the startling footage shows the family gathering with friends to celebrate Thanksgiving on Thursday, Nov. 27, 1997. A series of strange occurrences, caught by the camera, culminate in what appears to be a frightening encounter with strange creatures.

During the special, several people who claim to have had similar experiences relate their ordeals, and experts on aliens discuss the authenticity of the videotape.

New Poll - Canada Has Most UFO Believers

These items were found in the news section of the Sci-Fi Channel's "Sightings" page. URL:

I have changed the order a bit so that the UFO one comes first.

Happy New Year!

Stig

CANADIANS DO BELIEVE!

In Ottawa, Canada, the results of a significant new UFO survey suggest that the U.S. is no longer the ufology capital of the world. A renowned polling firm, the Angus Reid Group surveyed more than fifteen hundred carefully chosen adults who statistically speaking represent all of Canada. The pollsters found that a remarkable seventy percent of all Canadians believe in the possibility of extraterrestrial life. When asked if they think that alien beings have already visited earth, fifty percent said yes and another forty percent said that if they haven't already, they will. As Hubble probes uncharted space territory and NASA announces there may be life on Mars, a majority of Canadians may just be reflecting what the rest of the world is thinking. We are not alone.

THE THIRD MAN!

Bigfoot advocates are feeling pretty smug these days. For years, Crypto zoologists have argued that Neanderthal man and Homo Sapiens are not the only humans to have walked the earth together. There's a third human species out there they've been insisting and it turns out they're probably right.

In Java, on the banks of the Solo River, skulls of an early human species, Homo Erectus have been unearthed. And from a time when they should have been extinct. While some scientists believe that these fossils are a very early branch on Bigfoot's family tree, most will only say that it is time to challenge the belief that we are the direct descendents of Homo Erectus.

Mainstream anthropologists have only recently acknowledged that Homo Sapiens ever co-existed with anybody at all. And so, their acceptance of a third species, hovers between slow and stagnant. But some scientists are encouraged and moving forward quickly. The discovery that Homo Erectus has apparently outlived its supposed extinction by more than two hundred thousand years gives hope to those who feel that reports of Bigfoot's extinction are greatly exaggerated.

CHUPACABRAS ON THE NET!

On the World Wide Web, a blood sucking humanoid first discovered in Puerto Rico is now invading *the Internet. The Chupacabra or goat sucker is the latest monster to emerge from the shadows of myth and take the heat for a mysterious string of bizarre livestock deaths. With one *mouse click, you can download images, get up to date facts with the chupacabra time line and read first hand accounts as they come in from new eyewitnesses.

I think every serious UFO researcher ought to be here, too.
Unfortunately, quite a few of them don't even own computers, and of the ones who do, many are not on the internet. I urge them at

Keith,

Thanks. I didn't really know Watts. Ran into him a time or two in Washington, DC, at meetings of the old Washington Sexual Freedom League. Since I'm not into Zen, I didn't know he was so pivotal.

Although we have been out of touch for some time, Robert Anton Wilson is an old and dear friend. You may note that in his Cosmic Trigger he says that I am the real head of the Illuminati. He also used me as a sinister character lurking in the background of a couple of his "fiction" works.

Ufo Visitation : Preparing for the Twenty-First Century

Title: Ufo Visitation : Preparing for the Twenty-First Century Author: Alan Watts
Publisher: Blanford Press
Date: 1996
My personal rating: 4/10

A very strange and on the whole disappointing book which will appeal to the more wild-believers and "New-Agers" among you.

The author believes that we have been visited for many years by UFOs (as do I) and that it is all part of an ongoing opening up of human awareness. The book deals with channelling and the messages from the "Council of Nine", the Universal Government.

It all starts quite well with some interesting sightings, and stories but soon goes in the channelling/new age aspect of UFOlogy far too much. It discusses things such as: The Universal Grid and Mind and Universe store ! (This apparently explains how telepathy and other psychic manifestations to operate) and The legend of Atlantis

The book mixes in various "scientific" ideas throughout to try and prove certain points, but only succeeds in confusing the reader more. The book tries to explain to many mysteries such as crop circles, Channelling, Spontaneous Combustion, Atlantis, anti-gravity, mysterious animals etc. etc. and tries to link them all into the UFO field.

Only for you out there who like me what to read about all aspects of UFOlogy, including the "crazier" stuff.

UFO QUEST by Alan Watts

Reviewed by Barbara Russell
Published by Blandford 7.99 Pbk 192pp.

For Alan Watts, the alien spacecraft is an unequivocal nuts and bolts flying machine. A trained scientist and lecturer, he has studied the phenomenon since the 'heady days' of the 1950s and 60s, when there was an unprecedented wave of UFO activity.

Alan feels that this sudden, extra-terrestrial interest in our affairs was due in part to our newly found ability to blow ourselves up. Then the various space programmes that followed the development of the atomic bomb also highlighted the need for continuing surveillance. And, interestingly, he speculates that the reason for the relative decrease in recent sightings is because of the difficulties caused by the pollution of 'space junk' that now envelopes our planet - a problem that the space powers-that-be probably never even thought of...

As a UFO witness himself, Alan speaks with respect, and even affection, for these mysterious flying machines. He regards it a 'privilege' to have witnessed a saucer-carrying leviathan, a 'great craft', that could have previously cruised our airspace.

Alan gives as much weight to anecdotal evidence as to the scientific aspects of the UFO enigma. This, of course, adds strength to the book, but at times he seems surprisingly uncritical. He devotes a whole, sympathetic chapter to George Adamski's experiences, for example. Adamski's testimony has certainly not been universally accepted. And can dowsing really give us reliable evidence about a crop circle's 'genuineness'?

But overall, I think this book will prove to be a very useful addition to the UFO canon - it goes a long way towards explaining the mysteries of the alien space craft and their apparent idiosyncratic behaviour. It is a well presented book, and the diagrams help us over most of the mathematical hurdles. As usual, the extent to which we go along with the writer's conclusions remains an individual matter.

And, finally, this from: <http://services.csi.it/~ufo/watts18.htm>

and 'translated' from Italian to English by AltaVista's on-line translator:

THE RETURN OF " FLYING DISCS " of Edoardo Russo

[" UFO Dossier - To the discovery of the wonderful machines ", Alan Watts, MEB, Padova 1996, 272 pages (UFO Quest, Great Britain 1994)]

To read this book is in great part to make a travel in the time: the substance of the book, and great part of the brought back casuistry, go back in fact to beyond thirty years ago and the text could have been written in 1964, instead that in the ' 94.

The author is former-teaching of technical institute that in first years ' 60 made part of London ufologici groups, between which the BUFORA, in order then distaccarsene when this assumed a scientific attitude towards the problem.

In all this time, beyond writing books on several arguments, Watts he has maintained the interest for the ufologia intermittent (as he demonstrates an accidental and fragmentary bibliography), he has had various personal sights of inexplicable aerial objects for he and in short it is remained firm to the cases and the arguments that had made it to get passionate to flying discs.

We find again therefore a part consisting of the text that disquisisce of electromagnetic propulsion, of anti-gravity (but without approfondirla, because the author admits not capirci nothing!), of chromatic variations of the brightness of the UFO correlated to their behavior of flight, on the base of the same approximate cognitions that studded the books of the first decade of the ufologia.

It is astonished reading reasonings to us on the operation of discs flying based on the photos (universal recognized like false) of the contattista George Adamski, or finding again disquisitions on the isoscelia of the places where they would have been observed UFO (in order not to say of the ortotenia): but end can here be thought that in bottom it is alone ignorance for the ufologica pubblicistica of last the 25 years, that it has already wide examined in depth and then abandoned as infondate all one series of false tracks.

What must think but about an author who calls " leviatani " those that for he are traditional the spaceship-mother sigariformi of years ' 50; that it excludes that the flying triangles of years ' 60 were just what they were (stratospheric footballs); that it disowns the confessions of the same witnesses whom they have admitted to have made make up photographic; which manifest an incredible superficialit2a in bringing back fished cases of sight from the disparate and disomogenee sources (comprised the novel-hoax of Langford on the "UFO in victorian age ", the fables of the Swiss contattista Meier, the " lunar cities " of the fantasista Wilson), for inferirne exactly the considerations that square with its pseudo-physical theories?  TRANSLATION ENDS HERE ***

Non =E8 quindi solo nella documentazione che l'autore si rivela una sorta di sopravvissuto ad un'epoca che non c'=E8 pi=F9, ma =E8 anche nell'atteggiamento di credenza ingenua a qualsiasi cosa sia stata scritta, detta o affermata, che Watts somiglia in un certo senso a quei soldati giapponesi che per decenni si nascondevano nelle giungle del Pacifico, ignari della fine della guerra.

Il che non toglie che, nell'attuale clima di revival ufologico italiano, la traduzione di un libro del genere pu=F2 anche accontentare il palato di neofiti dell'argomento, del tutto digiuni di quello che - nel bene e nel male - l'ufologia ha prodotto in tre decenni ricchi di sviluppi.

UFOR: Jacobs -- Resisting Abduction

Subject: UFOR: Jacobs -- Resisting Abduction

From: Blue Resonant Human <density4@cts.com>

::: Jacobs -- Resisting Abduction :::

Some brief musings on Jacob's New book:

The Threat -- The Secret Agenda:
What the Aliens Really Want ... and How They Plan to Get It 1998 by David M. Jacobs, Ph.D.
Simon & Schuster ISBN 0-684-81484-6

There is an interesting section in this provocative work which documents the apparently successful efforts of a young woman to sabotage the parasitic abductors' attempts to perform their presumably all-important "MindScan" on her. I found the account of interest for a number of reasons.

It has been noted by a prominent science fictionist that sufficiently advanced technology may be virtually indistinguishable from magic. Now this is a very popular quote amongst many UFOlogists, yet raised on a diet which consists largely of materialistic scientism, it may be difficult for many of us to perceive that the converse may apply equally well; that sufficiently advanced magick -- when filtered through the lens of our own culturally-imposed perceptual framework -- may appear to be high tech gadgetry, in much the same fashion that the angels and daemons of yesteryear have now morphed into good and bad space aliens before our very eyes.

To his credit, Dr. Jacobs can perceive one side of this with a great deal of clarity. In fact, he makes the particularly convincing point that John Mack & Edith Fiore (for instance) are therapists, not investigators. Therefore, as Jacobs so poignantly puts it, "finding out exactly what happened to the abductee is less important than what the client THINKS happened to him -- the account's accuracy or truthfulness is of little concern." [p.53]

Yet to his detriment, he then turns right around and allows his own scientific bias to run amok; fabricating an elaborate conceptual construct upon his own theory-embedded perceptions and presuppositions:

"The aliens' ability to stare into the abductees' eyes and effect a wide variety of changes in brain function is extraordinary. At first it seems almost supernatural or mystical, as if Svengali were peering into Trillby's eyes, mesmerizing her to do anything he wanted. But the mystical and supernatural are not part of the abduction phenomenon. The aliens use their advanced knowledge of human physiology to control humans..." [p.83]

The list of assumptions in the above paragraph is literally staggering when viewed with the childlike eyes of an innocent, untainted by the clever sophistry of modern scientism.

- o What is an "alien"? Is it a faerie? A gnome? An earth spirit? An elemental? A leprechaun? An angel? A daemon? An elf? A goblin? A martian?
- o An "abduction." Is it a literal, physical 3D event, or an etheric ("astral"), non-physical OOBEE type experience?

- o Why is the clearly magickal influence of these transmudane entities stripped of it's mystical wonder and relegated to the hopelessly mundane realm of some misfiring neurons?
- o Why are the clearly mystical and supernatural elements of the "alien" encounter mythos unwelcome in the dogmatic camp of latter-day scientism?
- o Do we feel somehow safer or more secure if we perceive the "bewitching spell" of the unimaginably different entities to be merely the mechanistic employment of physical technologies which affect us merely physiologically?

It strikes me that a large portion of the culturally-validated methodology of modern science en toto consists of merely labeling things in lieu of understanding their true dynamics. Our modern medical shamans, for instance, often mask the outward symptoms of a dysfunction, quietly afraid to admit they haven't a clue as to the root cause while our finest physicists have dutifully provided us with labels for 'lectrons, protons, neutrons, gluons, and even klingons yet still can't explain what holds an atom together or whether light is a particle or a wave. But hell, at least we've done a fine job labeling everything!

So we'll grant Dr. Jacobs the liberty to speculate a bit here, based upon his perception of the perceptions of others who find themselves suddenly thrust into an environment wherein there are no culturally-validated entries in the symbol-table of the language (or even the conceptual matrix of consensus reality!) with which they may adequately describe the bizarre events.

"The aliens' ability to control humans comes through the manipulation of the human brain. For example, when the alien moves close to the abductee's eyes to begin the staring procedure, almost immediately the abductee feels emotional and physical effects. One way to explain this is that the alien uses the optic nerve to gain entrance to the brain's neural pathways. By exciting impulses in the optic nerve, the alien is able to 'travel' along the optic neural pathway, through the optic chiasma, into the lateral geniculate body, and then into the primary visual cortex in the back of the brain. From there he can travel into the secondary visual cortex in the occipital lobes and continue into sites in the parietal and temporal lobes and the hypothalamus. Through that route, the alien can stimulate neural pathways, travel to many neural sites, and cause the 'firing' of neurons at whatever site he wants.

"Brain stimulation allows the alien to produce a range of effects. If the alien can connect into the neural pathways, he can reconstitute an abductee's memories. He can inject new images directly into the visual cortex, bypassing normal retinal observations, and cause people to 'see' things that become a part of their abduction 'memories.' He can activate sites within the limbic system and cause strong emotions, such as fear, anger, and affection. He can create feelings of sexual arousal that build relentlessly to a peak. And he can institute a form of amnesia that helps to preserve secrecy."

According to this culturally accepted purely physiological model, we can sleep more safely at night, for the clever space aliens, we are told, are not at all mysterious goblins of seemingly omnipotent power and dubious intent but merely some curious scientists (just like our very own scientists!) whose clumsy bedside manner has perhaps suffered a bit in lieu of the noble scientific pursuits of these lovable li'l techno-nerds from the stars.

"But wait just a minute here, Brother Blue!" you say, quickly snapping out of the spell of complacency so insidiously cast upon you by such magickal incantations as:

- o the optic neural pathways
- o the optic chiasma
- o the lateral geniculate body
- o the primary visual cortex

- o the secondary visual cortex
- o the occipital lobes
- o the parietal and temporal lobes
- o the hypothalamus
- o the limbic system

Ah, so you are far too clever to be taken in by such neuro-linguistic magick! Too wary to be bamboozled by such bewitching techno-babble. So you have seen that the entire superstructure upon which Dr. Jacobs has built this elaborate facade is comprised of nothing more than the teetering scaffolding of the proposed roller-coaster ride down the abductee's "optic nerve."

Unfortunately, as we read on, we shortly discover this candid admission: "How the aliens engage the optic nerve is, of course, unclear..."

Oops.

But just for fun here, nay in the very interest of Science Itself, let us grant this one liberty; this one small forgiveness. Let us with great grace and mercy suppose that the proposed "optic nerve" scenario is accurate. Let us fasten our photon belts and see where this exercise takes us.

"Once joined with the abductee's neural pathways, the alien essentially has free reign to do what he wants. The abductee is no longer in control of his own thoughts. The aliens can exercise absolute power over the minds and bodies of the abductees. They can make the abductees think, feel, visualize, or do anything the aliens want.

"But another abductee successfully resisted mental engagement. During a recent abduction, Reshama Kamal found that she had more muscle control than usual and she used it to prevent a neural connection. She shifted her eyes back and forth rapidly while reciting an Arabic religious phrase. The first alien tried to lock into her eyes but could not. He diverted her attention by causing a pain in her head, and he threatened not to take her home, but she refused to give in. Another alien took over and increased the threats. Still she refused to stop, although she was getting dizzy moving her eyes back and forth. A third alien tried, and then a fourth. They could not stop her from shifting her eyes. Eventually they gave up and said that they would continue the procedure at the next abduction."

What horror is this?! The friendly space brothers of John Mack and Richard Boylan have morphed into galactic bullies; our lovable Albert Einsteins From The Stars have shed their sheepish schoolboy grins and become before our very eyes Herr Doktor Mengele! What horror is this?!

"It's a damn good thing we remembered the 'optic nerve' scam!" we quietly assure ourselves, for if we can only manage to break free of the accompanying paralysis long enough, we can jiggle our eye balls real fast and stymie that godawful MindScan. Our heroine, Reshama Kamal, does just that and -- lo and behold! -- the diabolical plans of the malevolent space alien Scientists are foiled by the very Science they worship and serve! Yes, Science is once again the hero; it has proven to be the Modern Messiah we had all hoped it would be. Hurrah! Science has saved the day!

Yet there is that one troublesome detail which -- even despite his admittedly anti-Svengali-ish technological/physiological bias -- Dr. Jacobs left in the puzzle. Why did Ms. Kamal feel compelled to recite an Arabic religious phrase during the parasitic abduction? This oddly out-of-place detail simply does not fit into the rigid test tube of our Scientific model, no matter how desperately we attempt to mash it into place.

Like fingernails on the blackboard, it cries aloud in a cacophony of discordant noise; relieving itself like Schroedinger's cat all over our pretty white labcoats! How DARE it profane our carefully crafted Scientific model so arrogantly! Like that one black sheep in the family; that solitary stale Milk Dud in the package of chocolate pleasure, spinning deosil to the widdershins way of Club Scientism's doctors of spin, it simply refuses to be silenced.

Yea, it cries out to us, and we must needs listen to those cries.

What, then, are we to make of this obnoxious detail? This one single bit of hopelessly unScientific superstition? For it is this one insignificant detail which may topple our entire house of Scientific cards if we're not careful. But examine it we must, for we are Scientists! Unlike our primitive, superstitious ancestors we seek only truth and this truth can be found only by employing the Scientific Method to our research.

Like those of old who gazed upon the Medusa and were turned to stone, so we of this Scientific New Age are afflicted with paralysis when we behold the Big Black Eyes of the Space Alien Scientists. Let us then use this very Science against them. Let there be experiments!

- 1) Let (s)he who is about to be MindScanned simply close their eyes or otherwise divert their gaze. Does this stop the process consistently?
- 2) Let (s)he who is about to be MindScanned try to break free of the paralysis by:
 - a) a sheer act of will; first moving the little finger... etc.
 - b) resisting the parasites on every level
 - c) calling out to their God for helpAre any of these methods consistently effective?

Yea, let there be Scientific Experiments, my Brethren! And then let us share what we have learned, so that all may benefit thereby!

Amen and Amen;

-Brother Blue, B:.B:.
Metaphysickal Scientist

Dr John Mack and the Investigation of Abductions

From: Joseph Polanik <jpolanik@mindspring.com>
Date: Wed, 31 Dec 1997 16:46:04 -0500
Fwd Date: Thu, 01 Jan 1998 12:08:18 -0500
Subject: Dr John Mack and the Investigation of Abductions

While researching the parallels between Out of Body Experiences, OBEs, and Alien Abduction Experiences, AAEs, I came across an interesting document written by legendary Out-of-Body Experiencer, Bob Peterson, whose book, Out-of-Body Experiences: How to Have Them and What to Expect, long available on-line, has now been published by Hampton Roads Publishing.

The document is in three parts. The URL to the first part is: <http://www.winternet.com/~rsp/ufoobel.html>. Each part links to the next.

Peterson's plan is simple. He will undertake a systematic comparison between the OBE and the AAE. He uses a book by researchers Gabbard and Twemlow, With the Eyes of the Mind: An Empirical Analysis of Out-of-Body States, as his reference for the common features of the OBE. He uses Abductions by Dr John Mack as his source of information on the common features of the AAE.

Gabbard and Twemlow list 19 features that turn up time and again in OBE reports and provide a figures for the frequency with which that feature was reported in their sample.

Number	Common Features of OBEs	%
1.	Experience was more real than a dream	94
2.	OBE Body similar to physical body	76
3.	Same environment as physical body	62
4.	Felt a sense of energy	55
5.	Wanted to return to body	54
6.	Felt able to pass through objects	50
7.	Felt vibrations in body	38
8.	Part of awareness was still in body	37
9.	Was aware of presence of beings	37
10.	Heard noises in early stages	37
11.	Experienced a change in time sense	33
12.	Saw a brilliant white light	30
13.	Felt the presence of guides or helpers	26
14.	Dark tunnel with white light at end	26
15.	Felt attached to physical body	21
16.	Felt able to touch objects	18
17.	Felt that others were aware of them	14
18.	Felt a sense of border or limit	14
19.	Experienced panoramic vision	14

And, for each one of these features, Peterson cites cases where Dr Mack's clients reported the same phenomenon in Abductions.

* * *

This analysis occupies the first two sections of the document. In the third section, Peterson does the reverse analysis. He abstracts a list of 16 features of the AAE from chapter 16 of Abductions, where Dr Mack discusses this subject, and discusses the extent to which the features of an AAE can be found in OBE reports.

This is the list:

- Number Common Features of Alien Abductions:
1. "Shift in consciousness"
 2. "Hum or other odd sound"
 3. "Appearance of a light for which no usual source can be found"
 4. "Sense of a presence or even the sight of one or more alien beings"
 5. "A strong vibratory sensation in the body"
 6. "Abductees are always sure that they are not dreaming or imagining"
 7. "Rather they experience that they have moved into another reality. This is a waking reality, but a different one."
 8. "Experiencer is taken by some force, often a beam of light or some other energy at the disposal of the alien beings."
 9. "Through walls, doors, or closed windows."
 10. "Experiencers may see their home and the earth itself recede before them as they are transported into a spacecraft..."
 11. "Once inside the craft the abductees see varying numbers of alien beings..."
 12. "Telepathic communications of various sorts."
"Various procedures administered under the control of a slightly taller and older-appearing alien, spoken of by abductees as the doctor or leader." (Mack goes on to describe the varieties of the procedures that can have medical or surgical-like quality).
 14. "In some cases a person is known to have been missing, can recall, with or without hypnosis, an abduction experience"
In some cases "has returned with bodily lesions for which there
 15. seems to be no other explanation. But in other situations, 'complete' abduction does not appear to occur."
 16. "The individual may have an out-of-body experience while others see that he or she has not left the house."

After conducting this part of his analysis, Peterson concludes:

Interestingly enough, except for the references of spacecraft, bodily lesions and medical procedures, the features of alien abductions given by Mack also appear in the list of features common to OBEs.

Peterson goes on to discuss other similarities between OBEs and AAEs and the differences between them.

Here is his overall conclusion:

When we closely examine the symptoms of the typical out-of-body experience, and compare those symptoms to those of a typical alien abduction, the similarities are astounding. However, based on physical evidence, it's not reasonable to conclude that all alien abductions are really OBEs in disguise, nor that all OBEs are alien abductions in disguise. However, the similarities are strong enough to suggest that perhaps a fair number of alien abductions have been incorrectly reported as OBEs, and that a fair number of OBEs have been incorrectly reported as alien abductions.

In part 3: How many of the features common to OBEs and AAEs are also features of Awareness during Sleep Paralysis, ASP.

Hi Errol, hi All,

The following is an excerpt from a private note that I sent to my partner Pat Parrinello. It relates to the above. We're never going to get the 'serious' investigation that we need as long as there are those who are willing to tout themselves as, "experts on aliens". To me "experts on aliens" dredges up images of Dr Joyce Brothers humping a wetback. Otherwise the term has no meaning.

The note is self-explanatory.

John Velez

Excerpt from my note to Pat:

I've been invited to do some TV thing out in LA, it sounds like bullshit (they want me to review a tape of an alleged abduction!) I told the producer that I would help by providing what abduction related info I could but that I wasn't too interested in flying to LA to appear as some, "expert" (which I'm not) and pass judgement on a videotape that I know nothing about. I'm sure the 'camera whores' will jump at the opportunity but I'm not interested. Let Doc Leir and Derrel give their "expert opinions" on the videotape. We all know what experts on video analysis they both are. <HEE-HAW>

I haven't got the belly for decieving people that way. If they had asked me to appear as an abductee and to present what little evidence we do have (in order to substantiate our claims) then I would have packed my x-rays and pix, hopped the plane and gone out there to do the thing the way it should be done. That's not the case though. This sounds like more "TV hot topic" sensationalism.

The people who -are- going to appear as "experts" should preface their remarks by telling the public that there -are no "experts" when it comes to abduction- and that -none of them- are video analysis experts. I come closer to that than any of them and I'm passing on it!

If they want to express their opinions, cool. But, if they are going to sit there and spout off like they know what they're talking about, (which is what they will all do) then I want no part of it.

That kind of BS is pure "show biz" and has nothing to do with getting to the truth.

It's tough waiting and holding out for serious offers from serious people. There are so very few of them. It's a shame, this is terribly urgent business, can't wait for them to wake up and smell the coffee.

TTYL,

John

Possibly 'Moon Rush' If Lunar Probe Finds Water

'Moon rush' could be at hand if lunar probe finds water

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (January 1, 1998 01:42 a.m. EST <http://www.nando.net>)
- New Mexico scientists plan to do some "water witching" on the moon next month if NASA's Lunar Prospector is launched on time and trouble-free Monday. And if the scientists strike it water rich, Los Alamos National Laboratory space scientist Bill Feldman predicts a "moon rush" to colonize and exploit the lunar surface during the next century.

"If we can find sufficient water, it's going to be a land rush like the Oklahoma Sooners," said Feldman, project leader for the Los Alamos instrument package that will be aboard Lunar Prospector, which is scheduled to go into lunar orbit about five days after launch and map the moon over the course of the next year.

Not only would water be necessary to sustain the life of lunar colonies, but it could also be used to produce hydrogen for rocket fuel.

"We see the moon as kind of a way-station to the rest of the solar system," Feldman said early today in a telephone interview from his Los Alamos home.

The Los Alamos team is working with the mission's principal scientist, Alan Binder, an independent California researcher, and scientists at the Southwest Research Institute in San Antonio, Texas.

The "divining rods" to find water won't look anything like the Y-shaped twigs that Old West dowsers claimed could find water underground.

Instead, a high-tech neutron spectrometer, developed at the Los Alamos National Laboratory and capable of scanning for water on the lunar surface from 60 miles overhead, will be used.

The neutron spectrometer will try to detect medium-energy neutrons emitted from the lunar soil, which will indicate the presence of water. The neutrons would be generated from the bombardment of water molecules by high-energy cosmic particles constantly striking the moon.

Los Alamos Lab also has gamma-ray and alpha spectrometers aboard the spacecraft that can detect valuable elements such as aluminum, iron, uranium and titanium, and gases that might be present in the lunar crust.

Such elements would be valuable to future human prospectors because it will be cheaper and more efficient to use local resources to colonize the moon and explore the solar system than to transport them from Earth. Some also could be important as shortages develop on Earth.

"Everything looks go for Monday," Feldman said, noting that liftoff is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. and that the launch window is only two days.

"This has got to work," he added. But he said he remains "very, very, very nervous" about the $63 million mission, which is one of NASA's "faster, better, cheaper" scientific Discovery Series.

It is using a new rocket design and a new launch pad at Cape Canaveral. But the scientists have another reason to be leery.

Feldman and other Los Alamos scientists are still smarting from the loss of NASA's Mars Observer spacecraft, aboard which they had similar prospecting instruments. That spacecraft functioned perfectly en route to Mars several years ago but was lost just as controllers prepared it to enter Martian orbit.

"It was just devastating," said Feldman, who said he "was in a blue funk for months."

"You know, you mother, you parent these things for years and do everything you can to make them succeed," he said.

Well, here's a bunch of interesting developments, right on New Years Day:

NOT ONE but TWO quick posts by American on their website, one detailing a legal notice to "Corporate Terrorists", at:

<http://accpc.com/terror.htm>

The other, announcing NO SALE regarding the Transcap, at:

<http://accpc.com/white.htm>

And, I noticed some interesting <g> ACC news on

<http://www.sightings.com>

Jeff Rense's "Sightings on the Radio" web page !!

The saga continues. So that no one can make claims to the contrary, while Sightings email is on one of the Lists I sometimes post to, I did NOT send anything to Sightings asking them to publish it. That they did is as much news to me as it is to you. And that goes for other websites out their reproducing my letters: I haven't found all of them yet, but it is as big a surprise to me as to you.

While I appreciate the effort to examine a comparison of OBEs and abductions, using some standardization of effects/experiences, this is absurd! The problem, in short, is that the standardization is vague, ill-defined, and not much of a standard. (This is poor thinking masquarading as science.)

>	Number	Common Features of OBEs	%
>	1.	Experience was more real than a dream	94
>	2.	OBE Body similar to physical body	76

Or in the case of abductions, the REAL body is similar to the REAL body -- now there's a newsflash.

>	3.	Same environment as physical body	62
---	----	-----------------------------------	----

Maybe it IS the same environment as the physical body!

>	4.	Felt a sense of energy	55
---	----	------------------------	----

Is the extra energy generated internally or externally? Big difference, and very hard to define.

>	5.	Wanted to return to body	54
---	----	--------------------------	----

LOL! This is funny!

>	6.	Felt able to pass through objects	50
---	----	-----------------------------------	----

Yeah, but in the OBE experience you don't need to be in the presence of aliens (or any of their tech) to do so.

>	7.	Felt vibrations in body	38
---	----	-------------------------	----

See comments about energy above.

>	8.	Part of awareness was still in body	37
---	----	-------------------------------------	----

LOL! Hopefully, ALL of your awareness is still in your body.

>	9.	Was aware of presence of beings	37
---	----	---------------------------------	----

And sometimes a presence is just/really a presence <g>.

>	10.	Heard noises in early stages	37
---	-----	------------------------------	----

There's a big difference between the roaring/popping sounds associated with OBEs and the electronic beeps/hums, etc., experienced in the presence of spacecraft! But you would need to have experienced both in order to make the comparison.

- > 11. Experienced a change in time sense 33
- > 12. Saw a brilliant white light 30

I've never seen a white light during an OBE, but it's hard to imagine such a light turning the entire exterior of the house into daylight and having this witnessed by others (not asleep) besides the experiencer.

- > 13. Felt the presence of guides or helpers 26
- > 14. Dark tunnel with white light at end 26

Are we talking OBEs or NDEs here?

- > 15. Felt attached to physical body 21

I would hope so.

- > 16. Felt able to touch objects 18

Ditto.

- > 17. Felt that others were aware of them 14

When others are present, this is to be expected.

- > 18. Felt a sense of border or limit 14

What does this mean?

- > 19. Experienced panoramic vision 14

Obviously some of the "other wordly" or "altered" experiences common to the OBE experience DO fit the abduction scenario and perhaps for good reason. There is something very interdimensional, as we all know. But we will hardly expand our understanding of EITHER phenomenon by simply drawing false comparisons and in the process neatly sweep both under the "well, it's just a dream" or "it's not REALLY real" rug.

> Here is his overall conclusion:

>When we closely examine the symptoms of the typical out-of-body >abductions in disguise. However, the similarities are strong enough >to suggest that perhaps a fair number of alien abductions have been >incorrectly reported as OBEs, and that a fair number of OBEs have >been incorrectly reported as alien abductions.

Thanks for the real life demonstration of the limits of logic.
Wrong assumptions generate more wrong assumptions -- garbage in, garbage out.

This study makes the same mistake as those that try to corrolate abduction phenomena with EM phenomena (Persinger's work, for example). You can't corrolate vague general statements about lights, energy or the presence of beings. Not MEANINGFUL corrolations, at any rate. The only way to make these comparisons in a valid way is to ask an experiencer of both phenomena to make the evaluation. If you want to know the difference between the flavor of chicken and beef, you need to ask someone who has tasted both. Any abductee can tell you that OBEs and abductions are quite different experiences, although they do have some traits in common.

<=====

> In part 3: How many of the features common to OBEs and AAEs are also > features of Awareness during Sleep Paralysis, ASP.

And if this part of the study is conducted with the same faulty logic as the above, we can expect similar results.

Garbage in, garbage out.

Bravo John!!!

We need our own version of "Just Say No" in UFOlogy.

BTW, I have to wonder if this isn't just that video from a few years ago repackaged and redated? Sounds awfully similar.

Personally, I don't think a video camera would work during an abduction. EMF and all that.

ACC, 'Nexus' & 'Riskers' - The Thot Plickens

From: "acsa" <acsa@ix.netcom.com> ['Ed Wang']
Date: Thu, 1 Jan 1998 16:34:56 -0500
Fwd Date: Thu, 01 Jan 1998 17:45:34 -0500
Subject: ACC, 'Nexus' & 'Riskers' - The Thot Plickens

Everyone who wrote me today to ask me my opinion of NEXXUS and RISKERS, here is what I found out on a little casual inspection of their material and with a little friendly help from Lone Bob Wolf and security at ACC (they were working today, by the way...):

Boy are those guys (NEXXUS/RISKERS) stupid. For everyone: NEXXUS is an alleged organization on whose page you notice several interesting and bizarre things:

HERE IS THEIR AFFIDAVIT ABOUT THE AGE OF THEIR ORGANIZATION: IT'S ONE WEEK OLD!

NOTE THAT THEY CLAIM BRUCE MACABEE, JEFF RENSE and STANTON FRIEDMAN ARE THEIR "DIRECTORS", ALONG WITH "DOZENS OF PHYSICISTS AND SCIENTISTS", ACCORDING TO THEIR ALLEGED LEADER. ANYONE WONDER WHY A GROUP THAT WOULD LIE RIGHT FROM THE VERY START, EXPECTS TO BE BELIEVED?

RENSE, ACC/Shulman and FREIDMAN have denied being directors, according to Bob, RENSE was never even contacted by "NEXXUS".

Here's the piece of the bogus "NEXXUS" page I wanted you to see:

==== FROM "NEXXUS.ORG" =====
After only a week of getting this project going, we found ourselves under attack by the American Computer Company. To this day we have no idea as to why. Click the image to the left to find out the whole story in which this business tried to assassinate Lan Lamphere's character via the world wide web without cause. Here are our final comments on this event. As of now, it is a dead issue.

I note that NEXXUS contacted Stanton Friedman, then claimed that he was a director at NEXXUS, contacted Bruce Macabee, ACC/Shulman, and tried to get the private home phone of Jeff Rense to contact him. That is what "NEXXUS" did!

Here is how NEXXUS's SCAM goes: Call Macabee, tell him Friedman and hundreds of others are directors of NEXXUS. Then Call Friedman, say the same thing. Then call ACC and tell them Friedman and Macabee "are directors". This is obviously a "BUILDUP" Scam, and the guy who calls himself "Lan Lamphere" and resides, according to the Internic, on Salisbury St, in Norman, OK, isn't real. He is either a Government Agent working in an undercover capacity, either CIA or Air Force. Notice the timing - shortly after ACC announced the Transcapacitor, all of the sudden, this guy surfaces and runs around lying from person to person, that his newly contrived "org" NEXXUS, is directed by all the famous names he can think of in the UFO community. Then he has the gall to admit his organization is less than a week old (see above, posted three days ago, when ACC confronted him, right on NEXXUS'S website). Therefore, "NEXXUS" has only existed in the mind of the person using the name "Lan Lamphere", since December 21, 1997 (10 days)!! Hundreds of scientists and nuclear physicists, plus famous people like Friedman, Macabee, Shulman, Rense and others, in under a Week? What a bunch of shit!!

Robert "Lone Bob" Wolf, told me he had had several run ins with people who mistook him for the "BJ Wolf" that supposedly works for "riskers" on certain matters, and supposedly has a loony toons reputation. So, he did a little checking out of the Riskers group: he says his friends in Navy OSI laughingly have told him that RISKERS is a partly CIA, partly Air Force Intelligence, funded "Confidential Undercover" Group operating under control of MI located at "Tinker AFB" in Oklahoma City ("NEXXUS"), and out of the "Air Force Intelligence Special Education Section" situated at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Co. ("Riskers"). It's part of an "Information Warfare" training program operating there, they say.

Their operating membership (aside from "Jake Cravatz", "Todd Andrews" and "Myk Zimmerman" - alleged founders) all appear, according to their own website (riskers.org) to have been born in 1981 or after (making them under the age needed to drive - accordingly - no drivers licenses for verification of their identities). A perfect cover.

AND THIS GUY, Lamphere, is apparently soliciting MONEY to support his imaginary organization, right on his website, here - read:

==== From "NEXXUS.ORG" =====
Some files at Nexxus.Org have not been published to the open public by the authors. Therefore, only donors to the organization have access to these directories. If you would like to become a donor of this organization, please click here.

What an UNBELIEVABLE Scam! About as credible as Dan Wollman's (see my past archive posts on the phony "In Search Of" listserv, and Dan Wollman, masquerading as a PhD, when he, according to his college, NEVER GOT ONE!) partner, known as "The Tucson Kid" having posted a bunch of disinformation on the SISTER WEBSITE to "NEXXUS" - "RISKERS.ORG" - another nutcase site from the DISINFORMATION LEAGUE. Tucson Kid is notorious for constructing these fantastic, bogus allegations about "The Omega society" which he claims Ronald Reagan and George Bush are the heads of. He is a reportedly a low level nut in the depths of the Democratic Party food chain, spreading false information & exercising character assassination on anything Republican in nature. He's probably even been co-opted by a foreign intelligence organization, if you read his bullshit correctly.

According to a Riskers spokesperson, he is behind their "Omega" story, and worse, the Tucson Kid is also the MODERATOR of Dan Wollman's bogus bullshit "In Search Of" list server. Riskers claims they believe almost entirely in his bullshit "Omega" story. The story is intended to HIDE the existence of the E2 Organization discovered by Lone Bob Wolf and his investigators!

Hasn't anyone bothered to wonder why former presidents of the US would leave office to form a group to "run the world", particularly one with Alzheimer's, and the other who has indicated he'd like to get as far away from the Presidency as he can? And, that's what the Tucson Kid says is behind our "tax money" being wasted? What a bunch of Shit! Our tax paying money is being wasted on the likes of CREATING websites like RISKERS, NEXXUS and related List Servers (read on)!!

So: QED - obviously RISKERS, NUFOIA, NEXXUS and WOLLMAN-InSearchOf, are all part of one and the same little "grand conspiracy", and read on - you'll be surprised where I think it stems from!!

==== From "NEXXUS.ORG" =====
What is Nexxus.Org? Click Here
Nexxus.Org is a sister site to RISKERS-NUFOIA

and

==== From "RISKERS.ORG" ===== Nexxus.org: Check out nexxus.org.
This is THE scientific investigative organization on the web. It Rules, trust us!

Funny how these two Web Sites, appear really to be one and the same.

I am of the opinion that the Air Force is behind them, and is using them as a front to manipulate public opinion. The CIA is probably involved, probably because it is using the information generated by the operating personnel behind these two, er, one bogus organizations, for its own purposes.

I note that they love to bash ex-presidents, but the nearest thing they have come to a current administration official, is to suggest that Hillary Clinton knows that "Omega" exists. What poppy cock!! Mrs. Clinton thinks "It Takes a Village"!

My opinionated ultimate conclusion about Riskers and NEXXUS?

Hey, People: you're being fooled by an INTELLIGENCE TRAINING ACADEMY "living classroom" created LIVE for you on the INTERNET!!!! Very Illegal, but Lone Bob Wolf tells me the Air Force Office of Consular Operations (the legal oversight group responsible) doesn't agree "Not a Black Project, Just a Grey Project!"

Or, perhaps, an "Anti-Grey Project", Mr. Defense Secretary Cohen? Did you sign the budget that's paying for this little "Project"?

The Air Force Intelligence Personnel maintaining the sites should be arrested, and prosecuted right along side their superiors, all the way to the "top guy" operating such an ABOMINATION!!

Oh, by the way, ACC security told me they voice stress printed the person calling using the name "Lan Lamphere" last week and the week before, and the voice prints aren't even of the same person, though the originating phone number is from a desk in a residence in Norman, Oklahoma, but that the number appears to be a "repeater" which relays elsewhere in Oklahoma!!

To Tinker Air Force Base, do you think?

How Perfect ! I just may not PAY my taxes this year!!!

Congratulations!! Well done!!!

Maybe if more people start to refuse to appear on these shows (with explanation) the producers may start to ask themselves if they have missed something important for once.

A great way to fight back!

Bob and everybody,

I'm glad somebody else remembers the bogus abduction-in-progress film circulating two or three years ago. I'll bet this is the same one, recycled for the rubes by cynics who don't care a rat's ass whether it's fake or not.

From: ufotruth@ix.netcom.com
Date: Thu, 1 Jan 1998 22:58:53 -0600 (CST) Subject: IUFO: ACC/NEXXUS WE NEED TO END THIS ONCE AND FOR ALL

-> SearchNet's IUFO Mailing List

TO NEXXUS/ACC/RISKERS/NUFOIA,

This debate has turned into a monster that has taken over the internet. What we need is for ACC and NEXXUX to go on "Sightings on the Radio" and have BOTH sides present ALL of their evidence and data. Until this happens the whole UFO/ET community will be FIGHTING and FIGHTING about this when there are MUCH MORE IMPORTANT things going on!

There are some very interesting things going on that we are not even talking about.

- 1) Steven Greer/CSETI is trying to get OPEN CONGRESSIONAL HEARINGS. They have mailed SEVERAL CONGRESSMEN and need our support to get CONGRESSIONAL HEARINGS.
- 2) Steve Basset, Richard C. Hoagland, and Steven Greer are going to be on the Art Bell show monday night. Art Bell has announced that the announcement is going to be so important that he cannot tell us or the show would be off the air. Also STEVE BASSET made a post to UFO Updates in which he said that we all need to be working together because there are some very important events going on that could expose the UFO coverup within 3 months!
- 3) Apprently UPI has a videotape that shows a WHOLE FAMILY that was abducted and has been missing for months. This could be GREAT EVIDENCE to prove that UFOs/ETs are real. This show is going to come on Jan. 20
- 4) Nasa has AGREED to get pictures of the CYDONIA region EVERY CHANCE IT GETS. We need to focus on this and make sure that we do not miss something very important.
- 5) This is distracting us from the REAL RESEARCH That ACC is doing.

I am just as guilty as everyone else. I have made posts that I should not have made. But we all need to stop fighting. Personally I support the American Computer Company BUT that is MY OPINION. What we need is for both the AMERICAN COMPUTER COMPANY and NEXXUS/RISKERS/NUFOIA to go on "Sightings on the Radio" and debate until ONE SIDE either ADMITS they are at fault OR both sides AGREE to work together.

Unless ACC and NEXXUS does this then this fighting will just CONTINUE. We will keep on DESTROYING all of the unity in the UFO/ET communtty. We will keep on fighting and calling each other names. What do we want? Do we want to SETTLE THIS ONCE AND FOR ALL or keep on fighting for days, weeks, and maybe months?

Both NEXXUS and ACC could post all the documents, evidence, transcripts of phone calls, wav files, and other evidence on the "Sightings on the Radio" webpage.

(If this is alright with Jeff Rense)

If both sides have nothing to fear then both sides should go on the "Sightings on the Radio" show and DEBATE each other.

Look, I am not trying to be bossy. I apologise if I have offended anyone but I am SICK AND TIRED of all of this fighting. IT MUST END. If some how the government has caused this then this MUST END. And the only thing that can make this end is having both sides debate.

Mr. Jack Shulman and Mr. Lan Lamphere will both of you PLEASE ask Jeff Rense if you can go on his show and debate? For the sake of the ENTIRE UFO COMMUNITY PLEASE DO THIS. If you get on the show please bring ALL of your evidence so this can be over.

Best Regards,
William

Geez, I hope so. It's what I'm banking on. I figure if I show em a little "character" when they dangle their carrots in front of me one or two may ask, "what's up with this guy?" and go the extra step to find out.

Budd and others have suggested that I take the opposite action and participate in these things in order to provide a balance for the wahoos and camera whores that -always- show up on these things. I'm not comfortable with that on a lot of levels, the main one being that I'll have to get down into the mud with them and accept money, plane tickets, free hotels, free food, stipends, none of which I have earned or deserve. I cannot do the same things that I call others to task on. To me that's the definition of hipocracy.

I hear the voices saying, "dummy, I'd take it in a minute", I just can't do that. And, hey man- it wasn't easy saying no! I've never been to LA and I have friends there, one in particular that I love dearly and haven't seen in years. If you think I didn't consider doing it for those purely selfish (and very human) reasons you'd be missing an important piece. Yeah, I entertained grabbing the goodies and getting my face on TV with Whitley and pontificating about someone elses case like Joe know-it-all. It's just not me. It would mean breaking a lifetime of belief in certain values and rubbing elbows with people I wouldn't associate with under any other circumstances. I have to remain true to myself so I can stay comfortable inside my own skin.

Plus, you have no idea how good it feels to be able to look em all straight in the eye and say no, you're falling way short of the mark -there is- a higher standard. If we don't start to draw lines and demand higher standards then we'll always get, -more of the same.

Trying to do the 'right thing'

Ah the latest communique from Ed "the conduit" Wang with help from Bob "the conduit when Ed Wang isn't around" Wolf.

Personally I was always under the impression that Ed & Bob were promoters/defenders of ACC and its various tales. From what I read on the ACC site they get much of their information on Roswell via e-mail and nobody has actually seen copies of the princeton evidence list.

<snip>

> Rense and others, in under a Week? What a bunch of shit!!

When discussing bunches of shit and ACC the two appear have alot in common. Concerning the Princeton meeting where according to ACC, which claim was parroted by Wang, Jared Anderson, and allegedly some unnamed individual from FUFOR:

Did any of these individuals actually go to the meeting, or are they just "believing" the ACC story based upon their web site posting or because "Ed Wang or Bob Wolf said...."?

On their web site concerning this meeting they present an impressive list of "evidence" that was going to be presented. Has anybody actually seen it?

ACC has claimed that it was suing the Air Force. So far all I have heard is talk and tales. Does anybody actually have the case number of the lawsuit and which court it was filed in so that it could be independently verified?

Everything I have seen is "Well, Ed Wang said, based upon an e-mail with Schulman... blah blah blah.

Or Schulman said on the blah blah radio show. Remember the poor amateur astronomer who claimed to have a photo of the companion object following Hale Bopp blah blah.

He didn't check it out or verify it with anybody else, turned out untrue, but it didn't stop him from blathering it all over the radio.

As for Shulman et al lets see where they claim to have gotten information from. Just look at some quotes from the ACC web site:

"This is a story which, if true, could ultimately change.."

"It's the Public's right to decide if it is, in whole or in part, or if the party who related it to us, was portraying a fiction."=A0

"So, according to the story leaked by a reliable source to UFO-logy circles:"

"UPDATE NOTE: It has been suggested that, after he left office, the US.."

"It has allegedly been reported that it took a year or more for Bell Labs to then figure out how to commercially produce the miracle devices."

"We haven't read the book, but we have been told it pretty much appears to coincide with the above ACC story, which was related to us by a Defense Communications Consultant who had access to the people at Bell Labs who he said were involved with the alleged "alien artifacts".

"Since the time that Col. Corso was identified to American, new information, unconfirmed, has surfaced and been presented to us. Two people who wrote to us, claimed their fathers worked for Bell Labs, have identified to us, by unconfirmable email reports, ..."

So the bottom line is its rumors/gossip and otherwise being posted on the ACC web site. THEY DON'T EVEN CLAIM IT TO BE FACTUAL.

Concerning ACC's claim about how they are not in the public market place, when you go elsewhere on the ACC web site you see:

ACC's "WINTER OF '97"=AE PC SALE! Prices start at: $299!! K6 / Pent-IIIs: $599 ACC's NET-SERVERS FOR THE WAY WE WORK=AE! starting at: $1499 SPECIAL LOW-PRICE PC: ACC's EAGLE BEATS DELL, IBM...!! THE RIGHT STUFF: ACC's NEW LAPTOP is HALF the COST of IBMs 770....!!

My prediction has been that 6 months from now we will still be hearing pronouncements for Schulman, et al but nobody will present copies of any kind of evidence. However I could be wrong.

SO ED/Bob/Schulman why don't you provide us with the lawsuit case number of ACC vs USAF, and the location of the court in which alleged suit was filed for starters?

Cheers,
Robert

Hey, Tom. What was the point about the solid state pentode?
They had surface barrier transistors back then, but were they working on early field effect transistors? And, if so, what's the purpose of the fifth element in a transistor? what do you think of Shulman's claim that the device as many as 10^{23} quantum

Hi Bob, Jerry, All,

Bob wrote,

>> Personally, I don't think a video camera would work >> during an abduction. EMF and all that.

Ya know, I had the exact same thought when they first told me about this "videotape." That, and the fact that I can't see the "aliens" missing an extremely excited mind in close proximity that is filming them no less!

(Just my opinion and pure speculation) but it is my belief that these beings are telepathic. During the encounters that I remember consciously I "hear them" in my head. How could they miss a freaked out 16 year old with a videocam taping his family being abducted! Why did he just film it?

If it was me I would have been on them like ugly on ape if they were screwing with my family. The whole damn thing makes no sense.

Jerry writes,

This isn't that Jerry. This videotape was (allegedly) taken just this past Thanksgiving in Canada by a 16 year old kid while his family is being abducted! On top of which, these people are still missing according to what the producer told me. Where are the mounties or whoever handles this kind of thing in Canada? Too many unanswered questions and too little is known to form any judgements. I'll watch it along with the rest of you and we can all discuss it afterwards.

I asked, and was informed by the producer that the program is being presented as "entertainment" not news. You're a bright camper, take it from there. <VBG>

The "Experts on aliens" that they invited include:

Whitley Strieber (Author, abductee)
Doc Leir (The surgeon who removed implants from abductees in 1995)
Derrel Sims (The "Nemesis of Mondo") and Yvonne Smith (California based abduction researcher) Me (No-show!)

That list alone speaks volumes don't it? <EG>

Peace,

John Velez

Good work Ed!

Now for my only question about all this. Do you know if this "Lan Lamphere" is the same person who had the Storm Chasers website and claimed several months ago to have accidentally taken video of a UFO as it shot through a tornado? I thought that person was "Len Lamphere", but my memory may be wrong on that.

If not the same man, then pretty darned odd to have such similar names!

But maybe they are trying to discredit both ACC and Storm Chasers at the same time.

My thoughts exactly when I first heard about it.

That other video was a kick to watch, but I was always amazed that anyone took it seriously. Pretty good work for a grade
C sci-fi film, though.

I'm still waiting, BTW, for my copy of the "Alien Interview" video that the producer promised to mail me months ago!!!

Maybe I should set something up with a Vegas bookie on odds that I ever get videos promised to me!!!!

Lan Lamphere, what gives?

All,

I'm sure Glenn Campbell won't mind if I repost something here from his site. I went web surfing lookin for info on Lan Lamphere, and found this posted:

To: webmaster@ufomind.com
From: Jilain <jilain@rt66.com>
Subject: TOTAL OUTRAGE!!!

I got the following email from a friend. I am posting this here with his permission. If you will recall the incident a while back where some stormchasers caught a UFO on video. This is that gentleman. You ain't gonna believe this one!!

This is the most blantant example of prejudice, injustice, discrimination, and outright BULLCRAP I have ever seen! This is a prime example of exactly why so many do not come forward with information on the ufo/alien phenomenon. Try to do a little good, and this is the result?

Well, this ain't right, folks. This is not right at all. And I think every one of us who professes a genuine interest in the area of ufology, in any of many aspects, should be completely outraged and totally disgusted by the action of this company.

My main question on this is to any attorneys that this may reach. Is this sort of action allowed? Is there grounds for legal action against this company? They fire a man for what he does ON HIS OWN TIME and with his OWN MONEY. If this is allowed under the law, there is something seriously wrong with this country.

Read it and weep, folks. I did. The organization founded here was just getting started, and I had just began my association with it. But I could see the potential here to do great things, to do some very serious investigations, and I even had a feeling of optimism that we might actually get somewhere with this.

This is so very wrong, that this can be done to this man and his family.

I am totally outraged over this, and you all should be as well.

Jilain

As most of you know, I have worked very hard to please and help all of you with your computer viewing in the past. I have tried to make your stays at the Windchaser domain a pleasant and informative one. It is my sad duty to inform all of you that [my wife] and I will not be maintaining the Windchaser Site any longer. As of 11:31 pm cst Dec 16,1997 I was relieved of all duties at Windchaser Environmental Films. In short, I was canned. I was released because of the Nexxus Organization. Because I spent my money on what I considered to be a worth while cause, and devoted some of my time to this cause, it was viewed as a "problem" for the the owner and producers of Windchaser. They felt that I was becoming a "UFO freak" and embarrassing the company. It was not due to lack of work, or anything like that. I was just because I actually give a shit about what I was doing and the company thinks that it is an embarrassment to them. So, [my wife] and I have paid the next months bills for the Nexxus.Org site. After the 12th of January, unless I can get the money up to furnish the green backs to the server lines, the site will disappear. I am sorry, there is nothing I can do.

[My wife] and I have both cried about about this, and at the present time, I have no words to give you or my family. I wish there was something I could say that would change the circumstances. As it is right now, I will not be able to post any messages at the boards. Not because I don't have the means, but because I will not have the time while I try to look up the money for my kids Christmas this year. I have spent a lot of money attempting to get this thing started.

Peace, Coolness & Happy Holidays to all of you.

I had done a Yahoo search on Lamphere to find out if he was the same person involved with the NEXXUS group, and found that when I tried to go to the old Windchaser web site that I had bookmarked it took me to the NEXXUS site instead, and then the site crashed every time so I could go no farther in. I'm not sure what that's all about.

So anyway, it appears that Lamphere appeared from nowhere on the UFO scene, but checking some of the other links from his name appears to show valid credentials as a long time storm chaser.

Maybe he just "wiggled out" from the injustice of the events above. If he is an infiltrator from intelligence, he sure came in through a round about route.

OH, BTW, Glenn also has a photo of him on his site, but not very clear.

SETI 'Out of Tune' after all these years?

Subject: SETI 'Out of Tune' after all these years?

In Search for Intelligent Life, Did They Get a Wrong Number?

By Robert Cooke. STAFF WRITER

After straining for decades to find hints of intelligent life in space, astronomers now suspect their big radio receivers have been tuned in wrong all along.

Recently, research has shown that radio signals from afar suffer fading and distortion as they pass through the long reaches of space. But the systems designed to listen for alien radio signals - called SETI, or Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence - were set up under the assumption that any signal coming from another civilization would be a continued or repeating signal.

This could mean the current SETI programs have already recorded real messages, without recognizing them, said researchers James Cordes, Joseph Lazio and the late Carl Sagan, all of Cornell University. The scientists discussed their conclusions in a research report published recently in the Astrophysical Journal.

Over the years, SETI programs have recorded a few intriguing signals that seemed to meet all the criteria except one, the report said. The missing criterion was repeatability; the signals were never detected again, despite intensive listening.

Now, Sagan, Lazio and Cordes say that a close look shows the follow-up observations made on the sources were inadequate - one-tenth of what was needed in terms of sensitivity. Better work is needed to distinguish between accidents, including signals from satellites or radio transmissions from Earth-bound sources, and genuine messages coming from across the galaxy, they said.

Physicist Paul Horowitz, director of a SETI search called Project Beta, which uses a big dish-shaped radio telescope in Harvard, Mass., said these ideas have already been incorporated into the automated search system. The computer now conducts 120 follow-ups on each interesting signal that is detected.

And Jill Tartar, at the SETI Institute in California, said her system has already used more sensitive equipment in Green Bank, W.Va., to re-observe some of the interesting spots in the sky detected earlier.

What if...

From: Jilain <jilain@rt66.com> [Jilain Jones]
Date: Fri, 02 Jan 1998 10:36:09 -0700
Fwd Date: Fri, 02 Jan 1998 15:08:42 -0500
Subject: What if...

Late night ponderings.....

On or around December 4, 1997, Lan Lamphere gets the idea to try to pull together scientists/researchers/ufologists/general public from all over the world to study paranormal activities/events, including UFOs. He wants to take a scientific approach....a "just the facts, ma'am" mentality....to the very confusing information that surrounds everything that is generally lumped into the broad heading of "paranormal" activities and events, including UFOs. He decides to call this organization for research and investigation "Nexus.org", and base it on the Internet.

On December 16th, he is fired from his job because of his interest in UFOs specifically, his superiors quoted as saying they were afraid he would embarrass the company if he became known as a "ufo freak". I receive a copy of Lan's email, detailing his firing, and with his permission, post it to numerous email lists, under the heading "TOTAL OUTRAGE". Responses pour into Nexus.org.

Lan begins to pull together his organization, attracting scientists and ufologists from around the world. He also attracts "everyday people" who express a desire to be a part of this team that will use logical, scientific investigative methods to attempt to get some solid answers to the myriad of questions surrounding UFOs and paranormal activities. Though there is interest in studying other paranormal events, the studying of UFOs quickly takes the lead as the subject the people joining Nexus want to work on first.

Lan talks with Jack Schulman of ACC, giving him a general overview of what Nexus is all about, and offering to assist ACC in their analysis of the data/material they claim to have in their possession that led up to the development of their "transcapacitor". Schulman leads Lan to believe that he will seriously consider utilizing the facilities, personnel, and experience of those volunteering their services to Nexus. Lan authorizes the posting of a release to this effect, titled "ACC Seeking Independent Investigation", in which it is stated that Nexus and ACC have had some preliminary talks regarding Nexus assisting ACC, in a consulting capacity, in its investigation of the data/material ACC claims to possess.

Stan Friedman, after talking with Lan, faxes Jack Schulman, informing Schulman of inaccuracies in the material that company has put out concerning the Roswell incident. Schulman faxes Stan back, admitting to being "torn" over the decision as to whether or not to correct these known inaccuracies on their posted Roswell material.

On December 24, ACC makes a posting to its web page, denying contact with Nexus or any knowledge of Lan, and making false statements regarding Lan. A firestorm is ignited across the Internet. The accusations become more and more ridiculous and more and more invalid with each passing day. It doesn't go away when Nexus does not respond to the charges. It doesn't go away when Nexus does respond to the charges. Lan offers the olive branch, stating publicly on the webpage that the ACC/Nexus controversy is a dead issue as far as Nexus is concerned. ACC posts to its webpage, accusing Lan of not even existing, and Nexxus of being a terrorist organization. Ed Wang, whoever he is, posts on 1/1/98, a highly inflammatory and libelous summation of the whole event, even dragging in the names of people who are not associated with Nexxus or ACC and have had nothing to do with or commented on the whole Nexxus/ACC feeding frenzy since it started. And this posting spreads all over the internet, up to and including being posted on the "Sightings on the Radio" webpage. None of Nexxus's rebuttals are posted to that site, giving a public forum only to the ACC side of the whole affair.

Why??

ACC has been attacked rather harshly in the past, as has this Ed Wang person. The credibility of their case has been drawn into question more than once in the past year. They have been subjected to some indepth scrutiny by other individuals and organizations. But never did ACC react in such a fashion as they did when it comes to Nexxus. WHY??

What is it about Lan and Nexxus that set ACC into such a defensive mode? What is it about Nexxus that got such attention and such a swift and vehement reaction from ACC? From Jack Schulman himself?

Consider this...and remember that these are just late night thoughts on my part. Just my mind playing a fanciful game of "what if...." Nothing carved in stone here, just theorizing and thinking and wondering and pondering.....

POINT: For 50 years, UFOs have remained a mystery. There have been official denials of their existance, and charges of government coverup of information on their existance. There have been more denials by the government and military, and more charges of government coverup, with research done to support those charges. The government has countered with research on its on to counter the charges of a coverup and the existance of UFOs.

POINT: There are numerous UFO groups around the world. Each has its own agenda and method of carrying out its investigations. Rarely do you see these groups working in harmony, freely sharing information, resources, personnel, etc.

POINT: Lan Lamphere is a storm chaser/photographer. He is not a ufologist or UFO researcher, and never claimed to be. He is just a man who caught something on tape that he cannot explain after analysis of the data at his disposal. And he got curious about it. He decided to seek help in determining what these UFOs are, and decided to try to bring together science and ufology to accomplish that goal.

POINT: Todd Andrews of the RISKERS/NUFOIA organization has been involved in the UFO field for several years, running a webpage and email list that dissimnates information on the subject out over the Internet.

POINT: After the hoopla over Nexxus began, the website has been hacked more than once.

POINT: After the RISKERS/NUFOIA group joined with Nexxus, the NSA was found "snooping around" through all the files on the RISKERS site.

POINT: The NSA has been discovered going through the Nexxus.org webpage.

POINT: Todd Andrews was called twice on the phone by the NSA. He was not home to take the call, but his caller ID clearly showed the call originated at the "National Security Agency". Todd had never been contacted by the NSA prior to his becoming involved with Nexxus.

POINT: The fields of hard-core science and the fields of hard-core ufology and the fields of hard-core paranormal studies have historically been diametrically opposed to one another. Though many have said many times that these opposing sides must come together before solid, irrefutable data can be compiled that is beyond reproach, no one has ever managed to bring together these factions. Science has remained aloof from the subjects for the most part, and ufologists have remained splintered into various camps and schools of thought. The end result being that after 50 years, these things still remain a mystery in the mind of the public at large.

Now....allow me to wax conspiratorial for a moment in my late night fantasies and ramblings.....

Who stands to gain the most by the continued concealment of the truth to the origin/existence of UFOs? Who stands to gain the most by the continued public uncertainty as to whether these things actually do exist, and actually are of extraterrestrial origin? Who stands to gain the most by the continued disunity between the realms of science and the realms of ufology?

In my very humble and tired little mind's opinion, the US government stands to gain the most. If there were presented hard-core, scientifically achieved studies with irrefutable evidence as to the reality of UFOs and their ET origin, the US government and military would be exposed as liars. There could be a question of fraud on the part of the government in funding of certain R/D projects. There could be questions raised as to certain "creative bookkeeping" practices, as well as questions raised into certain tactics employed by security branches of the government. Though no legal action might be forthcoming out of that, it could topple an administration, expose some historical figures as the "not quiet such good guys" as the public was lead to believe, and expose some less than legal tactics on the part of certain government agencies divested with the job of protecting the general public. And most of all, reaction to undeniable evidence of government supported lies could spill over to the voting booth.

Just suppose, for the sake of argument, that certain scientists were taking "too much" of an interest in the study of UFOs. And just suppose that certain ufologists were weeding through the garbage and getting to some hard core facts concerning the existence of UFOs and the government's long history of deceiving the public over the issue. Would it not be in the government's best interest to distract these scientists and ufologists from their current course? Is it not common practice to create a diversion when someone is getting too close to something?

Seemingly out of the blue, a small, privately owned computer company makes its presence known in the UFO communities. How do they do this? They makes claims to have in their possession "proof" of the crash of a UFO in Roswell in 1947. And they claim to have "proof" of the existence of alien technology, and the incorporation of that technology through back engineering. They claim to have what everyone has been wanting for 50 years... undeniable proof. But they have yet to release that data/material for independent study by others for authentication of their claims. Battle lines quickly draw in the UFO community, as happens when any major event is perceived.

Now...enter Lan Lamphere. In a matter of a week or two, this one man, based on a simple idea, manages to do what no one has done, and no one in the government has wanted to be done, in 50 years. He brings together under one roof, and with one common goal, scientists and ufologists from around the world. And he gains supporters for those efforts, people willing to back the research through voluntary contribution of their time and energy, and through financial contributions to fund the investigative efforts of his proposed Nexxus.org.

Lan learns of the claims made by ACC, and extends to them an offer of assistance in their efforts. His call is well received by ACC, and he is lead to believe that his offer will be given serious consideration.

Within no time, the proverbial poop hits the fan. Only this time, it gets really nasty. Wild speculation abounds and the flames of fire are fanned to an almost unbearable intensity. People in UFO communities are at each other's throats, divided over who is the bad guy...ACC or Nexxus. An organization that was just forming is slammed and bashed all over the internet. A man who most had never even heard of a month ago is viciously attacked from all corners of the globe.

In the background of this feeding frenzy, the Nexxus website is hacked more than once. The NSA is caught snooping around the Riskers site. Todd Andrews actually is called on the phone by the NSA. Lan's phone is tapped and his email is monitored. Todd's voice mail is altered. Police are sent to Lan's home to investigate totally fabricated charges. I am branded a liar and even told that I don't exist, that Lan and I are one and the same, and doing nothing more than playing some ridiculous online mind game. I am accused of being "turned" to the "dark side", if you will, working for the government "spooks" that wander the airwaves of cyberspace. Why have we three been attacked so much, especially Lan? We have been the most vocal Nexxus members during all of this.

What if..

Even after Lan declares the controversy a dead issue as far as Nexxus is concerned, ACC continues to post libelous and threatening releases to the internet, further fueling the dividing fires sweeping over the UFO community in cyberspace.

It would seem, in review here, that someone possibly perceives the Nexxus organization as a threat to something or someone. Are they a threat to ACC? No. If ACC is sincere in its claims to desire nothing more than to expose the truth of the history of UFOS and government coverup to the public, logic would dictate that it would welcome the assistance of an organization of scientists and ufologists. If they are not sincere, then it would be in their best interest to simply ignore Nexxus. A simple "thanks, but no thanks" would have ended any potential perceived threat Nexxus represented to whatever goal ACC has. At the time of Lan's contact with Schulman, Nexxus was in its infancy. A simple "thanks, but we got it under control" would have sufficed. Why the continued attacks, even after Lan threw out the olive branch? Who would stand to gain by the continued firestorm distracting everyone?

Who stands to gain by Nexxus becoming a solid, world-wide organization dedicated to sincere, open, objective scientific analysis of the UFO/paranormal arenas? The general public does. Any new discoveries, anything learned is of value to the public at large.

Who stands to lose by Nexxus becoming a solid, world-wide organization dedicated to objective, thorough, scientifically-oriented study of these fields? It seems to me that the US government stands to lose the most. If there is truth to the alledged coverup, the government would lose the most by that information coming to light in a way that cannot be refuted. It would lose "face" and lose faith from the people it governs. It would be required to answer questions that it is not prepared to answer. And any individuals that were found to have taken part in this 50 year deception of the general public would stand to lose at the voting booth, and in the public opinion polls, and thus at the budgeting tables in Congress.

What if all of this is nothing more than a government backed disinformation/smear campaign against Lan and Nexxus? For what purpose? To keep Nexxus from becoming a solid, working organization. For what purpose? To protect the secrets they've kept for 50 years. For what purpose? Self-protection from a pissed off public that hates to find out they've been lied to on any issue.

Why ACC? Look what affiliation with controversy in the field of UFOs did for a little town in southeast New Mexico. It put it on the map. It made the name "Roswell" a household word. Why become a household word? Because name recognition sells computers. And people who own private PCs and who hook up to the internet grows everyday.

Then again, its late and I'm tired. My little ramblings here are just ponderings of a tired mind. I seriously doubt if any of my "what if's" are anywhere near the reality of the situation.

Because if that were the case, it could explain a whole lot of things. And there seems to be a concerted effort of the part of person or persons unknown at this time to make certain that some things, some of them 50 years old, are not explained.

Then again.....what do I know?

Night folks.....

What if..

The list is loaded for sure, but I'll bet it doesn't contain an expert on Canadian holidays. Must be a pretty iconoclastic bunch of Canadians celebrating Thanksgiving Day. (McPherson Family abducted while celebrating Thanksgiving, Thursday, November 27th, according to UPN release on Net.) On second thought, .....nah, I'll just be more receptive to new ideas like a Canadian family celebrating Thanksgiving before being abducted. (Wait a minute, maybe they weren't Canadians, but U.S. folks living in Canada! Oh, hell, you're right, John---ain't enough info to go on.) You missed a bet on this. <chuckling>

Tom,
I'm not sure there are any "bad guy." However, I wonder about the level of intelligence sometimes <g>.

Some bad information combined with "heightened" paranoia on thpart of ACC appears to have been the driving force behind this controversy. ACC claims to have "THE GOODS" which could bring the wrath of UNCLE SAM down on their heads (and many others I presume) so they are, I presume, rather fearful of contacts by "spooks" and even the notorious MIB (if they exist). Apparently ACC decided that the Nexxus organization was set up to somehow counter the ACC claims. Actually Nexxus, along with everyone else in the UFO field, would be happy to help ACC providing they can back up their claims with something besides words for Shulman and "mouthpieces" Mr. Wang and Mr. Wolf.

Basically we want to know... is ACC blowing smoke for some reason (increased recognition among potential computer customers? something between Shulman and AT&T that we can only speculate about?) or are they telling the truth, the whole truth (minus what is necessary to protect patent rights, of course) and and NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH.....

In th meantime we have REAL mysteries out there, including the impressive Mexico City video of Aug 6...

Bob,
This Nexxus/ACC fray has gotten way out of proportion to the initial contacts. Lan Lamphere is indeed a "stormchaser" who accidentally videotaped a fast moving object while his camera was pointed toward a developing tornado last May. For months a couple of frames were on the Windchaser site...now subsumed into Nexxus, I think. He submitted his video to several people including me for analysis. There is no doubt of th object going in a nearly straight line downward and to the left.

If this object were more then 20 ft from the camera...then it was "anomalous." I have estimated its speed as roughly 1.7 times the distance in feet give miles per hour (if 10 feet away, 17 mph; if 1000 ft away.... you tell me!) Experiments are under way to determine whether or not the object could have been within 20 ft of the camera..

Ed Wang has been part of blowing this whole thing out of proportion. He has (apparently) reported what he has been told by ACC's Jack Shulman. However, confirmation of what he was told is scant at best. ACC is and should be running the show here... but with far less speculation than they have done. They are claiming to have discovered proof the transistor was "back engineered" by Bell Labs from the Roswell material. STRONG WORDS THESE! We have heard a lot of words, with the evidence supposedly contained in notebooks which do not mention flying saucers but do refer to "object" . Apparently these notebooks provide evidence that th transistor reaeach project was set up as a "front" for the real back engineering effort.

Anyway, it is now 6 months since the original ACC claims (and Nexxus isn't a month old yet, so how could Nexxus have any affect?) and we still don't know much more than we did back in August. I might point out that ACC said the original description of the back engineering project was posted in the form of a "joke" to see if anyone would respond. Evidently th UFO community did respond....but not as a joke. Anyway, it is now 6 months since the original ACC claims (and

From my point of view this whole thing has been played wrong.

N.M. Accelerates Airlift for Stranded Herds

By Zelig Pollon

SANTA FE, N.M. (Reuters) - New Mexico stepped up its emergency relief effort for battered livestock ranchers, dropping over 100 tons of food to herds stranded by fierce snowstorms.

Six C-130 military cargo planes rumbled just 300 feet above the snow-covered high plains of eastern New Mexico Friday, dumping one-ton bales of hay to starving cattle and sheep.

Bob Redden, spokesman for the state's Office of Emergency Management, said the cargo planes airlifted 103 tons of food on Friday, the highest daily total since the emergency relief program began on Tuesday.

"What we are trying to do today is make sure that every rancher gets some hay because there are still some where herds haven't eaten in 10 days," he said.

State officials say at least 5,000 animals have been killed by a series of snowstorms since Christmas Eve and that about 180,000 more are at risk.

Farms around the city of Roswell have been the hardest hit with ranchers unable to get feed to their herds. The area rarely receives heavy snow.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture offered $2 million of disaster aid on Wednesday, agreeing to reimburse ranchers for up to 30 percent of the cost of buying feed to be airlifted in.

The famished animals are rushing to the bales of hay as soon as they hit the ground.

"There's not a straw left out there," Redden said.

"When the hay drops, it bursts on the ground and the cattle are on a dead run for it. I mean those cattle are really, really in dire need for it," said Norm Plank, vice-president of the New Mexico Farm Bureau.

Another 115 tons will be dropped on Saturday and officials hope to complete the airlift operation on Sunday.

Plank said huge drifts had buried some cattle and sheep but the full death toll will not be known until the snow thaws.

Ranchers are banding together to move large trucks and snowmobiles into the worst-affected areas to help feed the herds and break the ice off the top of frozen water ponds.

"An adult steer drinks about 10 gallons a day so, besides feed, they need water. No cow can eat enough snow to get all the water it needs," Redden said.

He said the airlift was being made more difficult by herds that had started to wander, but that ranchers had begun to see positive signs. "Yesterday, we observed some calves that had survived. That is a good sign because they are definitely the most at risk."

At the start of 1997, New Mexico ranchers had a total of 1.5 million beef cattle, 197,000 milk cows and 325,000 sheep.

The C-130 cargo planes being deployed from bases in Texas, Wyoming, Oklahoma and Minnesota.

CURRENT-ENCOUNTERS: NEXXUS

From: slk <slk@EVANSVILLE.NET> [Francis Ridge]

Fwd Date: Sat, 03 Jan 1998 10:27:23 -0500
Subject: CURRENT-ENCOUNTERS: NEXXUS

Very brief:

NEXXUS is/was probably nothing more than an attempt by someone, very young, who apparently knows everything about everything, to do something the instigators knew nothing about. I would categorize this as a ridiculous joke on all of us, if it were not so insulting and time-consuming. I don't want to waste any more time with it, except to tell you all to go back to what you were doing, and stop listening and believing all these conspiracy theories.

You have evidence for the reality of UFOs and the knowledge that WE ARE NOT alone, right now. You can't prove it with any individual case, and some tell us that 130,000 such cases on computer doesn't prove anything, either. Many have told me, lately, that we already have enough data. We just don't use it.

Lan Lamphere tried to tell me how to do everything. When I talked about databases on aircraft cases numbering around 3,000 and hundreds of cases on E-M effects on auto ignitions, or making a web site for UFO URLs he said, "It can't be done!" He didn't know we already had this information. When we bumped heads on certain UFO information and methods and I had put up with all the BS I could stand, I led him to believe we hadn't done it yet. Then the stuff hit the fan, the phone calls stopped, and NEXXUS began. With Jack Wolfe in charge of LTPs as the "leading authority on telescopes". That's when we lost our scope AND Jack.

Let's go back to work.

I have to interview the three train crews that witnessed a sighting while working the mountain sub-division of CPR.

The information I have so far is that two traincrews operating in the area and another crew deadheading in a taxi, heard a very large booming sound. Then instantly the whole valley East of Revelstoke BC lit up as if daylight. A large ball of light was seen hovering above the peak of Mount Sir Donald. After about 10 seconds, the ball of light shot straight up in to the night sky and disappeared. The event happened at 0130 on December 18th 1997. Being that 3 separate train crews and one taxi driver, (a total of 7 people), saw the event, I will be able to colaborate the information and compile a report. I will keep you all posted.

Stan and List:

Good point. However, the problem is that the producers make the good guys look like bad guys by editing out all the good stuff. As you said, truth is not their thing. That does much more harm than good.

It would better to let the producers wonder why all the good guys are boycotting them. Viewers should do the same, or agree to boycott the advertisers - I have.

To all webmasters of UFO related sites

From: John Velez <jvif@spacelab.net>

Subject: To all webmasters of UFO related sites

Hello All,

I'm curious about something and I know that there are several webmasters on this list that maintain UFO related websites. Since I opened AIC (Abduction Information Center) I've taken an inordinate number of hits from government servers.

I'm not being paranoid, and I realize that (most of them) can probably be accounted for by government employees surfing the web on their lunch hours. But it's not just government servers, it's military servers, the FAA (Federal Aviation Authority) and several other (anonymous) government agencies.

My partner Pat Parrinello tells me that if "Uncle" was really checking us out we'd never know they were there! Probably true. But then why are we taking -so many hits- from those servers on an almost daily basis?

I'm curious how many others take regular hits from (.gov) or (.mil) or (.FAA) or (.CIA) servers. If "Uncle" wants a look I figure he can knock on the front door like everybody else. I don't like being watched though and that's what this "feels like." I'm being hit by them almost everyday, sometimes three or four times a day. The possibility also exists that I'm being hit by abductees seeking information who happen to work for "Uncle" and visit me during work hours on their office computer.

Who knows?

Geez, I think I'm being watched by "Uncle" maybe I have become paranoid! Move over Dr B make room in the hot tub I may be joining you one day! <VBG>

If any other webmasters have similar experience I'd like to hear about it. I've only been on the web for two years and it's possible that this is commonplace. I -would- like to know though. So far, they have not penetrated into the private side of the website. But I don't want them snooping around at all. One of my websites is a site for abductees and I need to protect their privacy and anonymity.

"You're not paranoid if someone is -really- following you!" <G>

Israel '97

From: Chamish Barry <chamish@netmedia.net.il> [Barry Chamish]

Subject: Israel '97

STUNNING ISRAELI EVIDENCE EMERGES by Barry Chamish

One might think 1997 was a poor year of UFO activity in Israel judging by the paucity of media reports. In fact, the media clamped down hard in January '97 after they were burned on the Achiod alien/lizard story and the false prediction of mass landings on Jan.5. However, due to the superb research of David Ronen, Doron Rotem and two young newcomers, Gil Bar and Eddie Shpitz, it turns out that 1997 was a vintage year for Israeli ufology. Some of the most dramatic physical evidence of the country's intense ten years of activity emerged last year. Following is a summary of 1997.

FILMS

- Over three nights in September 1996, Elad Niger filmed a remarkable UFO over the coastal plains city of Kochav Yair from his vantage point in the nearby city of Kfar Saba. He released the films to David Ronen in March of 1997. They reveal the prettiest UFO ever filmed in Israel. It looks like a colorful apple wearing a three pronged crown.

- 1997 saw three UFOs filmed in Rishon Letzion, 20 miles south of Tel Aviv and a center of UFO activity since 1993 when giant aliens visited the apartment of Batya Shimon. Of the three clips, none is so memorable as Gil Bar's November filming of an ellipsoid disk captured in 4 PM sunlight being chased by an Israeli Air Force F-15. The UFO's high speed manoeuvres to escape the jet are most acrobatic. This is the first known instance of a military plane chasing a UFO captured on film in Israel.

- Then on November 26, Nahum Shomroni video-taped an afternoon invasion of low flying UFOs over Tel Aviv. The light conditions were perfect and the craft were flying at only an estimated 700 meters altitude. The result is a breathtaking view of three sponge-shaped, dark UFOs of a type possibly never seen before.

PHYSICAL EVIDENCE

1997 saw two disturbing animal mutilation incidents associated with UFO sightings. They continued a pattern that began in the Negev village of Klachim in Dec. '96. Sylvia and Yitzhak Kadosh witnessed "an image as big as a house sparkling like a welding torch" land near their donkey compound. The light vanished before their eyes and they hoped it would be the last time their farm suffered such an intrusion. But their hope was not realized. Two nights later, 2 donkeys were mutilated. The older one had its eyes and tongue removed and its rib cage was exposed by a surgical removal of skin and tissue. The younger animal only had the latter operation performed on it.

In July '97, the Glam family of Sde Uziah, thirty miles west of Klachim, had a UFO experience which culminated in Mrs. Glam being chased by a projector light from an unknown source. Again, two nights later, their sheep pen was invaded and five sheep were drained bloodless from precise holes drilled in their cheeks.

Doron Rotem researched both incidents and to this day, keeps an example from Sde Uziah frozen in his freezer. He admits his wife is not happy about this mutilated carcass sharing space with the family groceries.

The final incident made national news, the only UFO story to do so all year. On Nov. 2, a silver ellipsoid disk hovered over the Gaza Strip settlement of Paat Hasadeh. On Nov. 8, Yaacov Mazal-Terem awoke to discover a row of twelve pairs of holes, 5 cm. deep along the fence which enclosed his horse. The horse itself, had two 1 cm. holes surgically drilled into its front hooves. The row of holes was photographed by the national media and their origin remains a mystery. Speculation is they were alien tracks or pods from a craft.

And finally, the famed hotspot of Kadima returned gloriously to Israel's UFO history. From 1993-95, approximately 20 landing spots were discovered after nights of UFO activity in the skies. Within were shards of material later tested worldwide and found to be a nearly pure silicon. This year, the same shards were found twelve miles to the west on the beaches of Gaash and Shfayim after UFO activity was reported.

On October 10, a UFO was seen over the Kadima suburb of Tel Yitzhak. Idan Levy discovered its landing circle and found within, not shiny silicon but an unknown material that looks like grey branched coral.

SOMETHING TO LOOK FORWARD TO

I will be bringing the videos of the low flying invasion of Tel Aviv, the F-15 chasing a most distinct disk over Rishon Letzion and the colorful apple-shaped craft with a crown over Kochav Yair to the Laughlin, Nevada conference. I think conferees will agree this is a most dynamic and important trio of films.

I will also be bringing photos of the three mutilation cases as well as samples of the Kadima "coral" to be offered for serious laboratory testing.

Israel's unique and powerful wave did not diminish in 1997, it simply went unreported. That will end in Laughlin.

Dr Jacobs, 'The Skepti-bunker'!?

From: Joseph Polanik <jpolanik@mindspring.com>

Subject: Dr Jacobs, 'The Skepti-bunker'!?

I am going to quote a short section titled 'Unaware Abductees' from Dr David M. Jacobs' new book, 'The Threat --- The Secret Agenda: What the Aliens Really Want and How They Plan to Get It' [pages 120-121]. Then I'll ask a rhetorical question that expresses my concerns.

[Begin quote]

Although unaware abductees are a silent population who confound accurate statistics, they provide an excellent "reality check" for the abduction phenomenon. We can compare reports abductees made before they became aware of their abductions to those they made after hypnosis with a competent therapist. As a group, the unaware abductees consistently report a similar pattern of experiences before becoming aware of abductions.

When unaware, they explain their strange experiences in ways acceptable to society. For example, an unaware abductee will explain his nighttime odd and half-remembered visitations as "guardian angels" calling on him. An unaware abductee might explain a visitation as a deceased relative or friend reassuring him that "Everything is all right." An unaware abductee may think that he has seen "ghosts" and that his house is "haunted." One woman told me she and her family had moved many times to get away from ghosts, but every house she ever lived in was haunted.

Unaware abductees also frequently report seeing religious figures or the Devil. They report have had intense and profound communication with an animal. They describe having unexpected or unwanted "out-of-body experiences" that take place apart from trauma or meditation. They travel on the "astral plane," from which they can look down and see rooftops in their neighborhood.

The case of one graduate student is typical. She told me of seeing ghosts, UFOs, and bizarre occurrences throughout her life. In one spectacular event, when she was a young girl, she looked out of her bedroom window and saw a UFO landing in her backyard. Suddenly her distraught mother came running into her bedroom, yelling that the aliens were going to get them and that they had to hide. The student remembered nothing else in the incident. I asked her what she thought about these unusual events. She answered that her mother had told her this was just part of life, that life has its mysterious side, and that what she experienced was just a part of growing up. She was able to categorize a lifetime of extraordinary events as "normal".

Now, correct me if I'm wrong here, but isn't Jacobs admitting that a competent hypnotist can debunk people who don't believe that they've been abducted by aliens?

Oh, not just anyone, just those crazy enough to believe that they've had contact with guardian angels, deceased relative, religious figures, ghosts, the Devil or some other, socially acceptable form of anomalous experience.

The last months around the 'ACC' threads have caused me some indecision. Should I continue to post incoming 'stuff' or not?
Yes, the story has been 'news', yes there are many unanswered questions and yes, the controversy has spread and taken up way too much bandwidth.

Since most of us are able to surf the various sites and List archives involved, I'd like to suggest is that until resolution comes UpDates ignores it.

Free John Ford [Alfred's Odd Ode #211]

Apology to MW #211 (For January 3, 1998)

Write it off as wallowing in my own naivet=E9. I was hoping that the righteous notes were here. But there's none of what I'm looking for I'd really likely find; what's real's likely way beyond what's queer. Likely way beyond experience, and shot from different guns, the weave of things addresses what we're not. And it shows up in the actions of the ones that stake their claim on this puzzle they're not seeing we've all got.

It's everybody's puzzle and we all should get an answer to the mystery that lies, and cheats and teases. The ones that do research are the ones so often hurt by the 'one' that's always done just what he pleases. Remember, please, John Ford, and consider his confinement as a black mark on the labor some perform.

"=85Into UFO research? Then you might be like that jerk, the 'flying saucer killer' ol' John Ford."

Let 'the man' grind down on him without a single peep from you, and the deed is quicker done on you and me! If they cap off Johnny Ford they have drawn a stealthy sword and they slash at any chance that we'd be free.

Some of us are wolves that prowl a land we think we own, and are pissing on its corners, stems, and twigs. It is vaulting over tick turds and distracting from the search, and attracting like a swine farm full of pigs.

The *glee* that we're displaying when we're catching people human is a game the meanest children always play. And it's children we're revealing when engaged in doubtful dealing that the field's been evolved to, hard to say!

But suffer single take downs, at your peril, with indifference. It won't be long they've made their way to you. Where's salvation coming from, when you're the one that needs it! John Ford is going down, dear list, obscene, unjust -- but true.

Why should Ufologists be any better than, say, lawyers? And the answer is I'm loath to associate myself with lawyers, and would prefer the company of those that might see beyond our conspiring cultural pale -- past the tiny fractions of perception offered up by shallow inadequate senses =85 a more efficacious appreciation for what many of us presently perceive as unjustly applied and conveniently interpreted reality. I would prefer the company of Ufologists even if I knew most of them were lying to me, as I know ALL the lawyers are lying to me. Christ! That sounded an awful lot like I said ufologists are ethically and morally superior to lawyers! Somebody STOP me!

Come on! Brothers and sisters, ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls -- fellow notes -- come together on this thing!

Bug the networks! Write some E-mail; send a letter. There are many in this community that could step on a short fused truth somewhere and be the subject of these same *special* attentions

Welcome to the new year!

Hopefully, things will work out soon for me to be able to put more time into this again. I hope to do my annual the Year in Weird review (to go out to the Bufo's WEIRD WORLD list) by the end of this month. I'm going to try and get BWW out quarterly this year. Also, the new Bufo's ANOMALIT (short for "anomalous literature") REVIEW list should start going out this month. If you have questions about it, just let me know.

John,

After over 10,000 hits at the UFOIC website, I have found that
.gov and .mil are quite commonplace. But .faa and .cia are very rare, unless they are sometimes registered as 'unknown'.

John,

It might be better to ask these questions of webmasters that have non-UFO related sites. It sounds like you feel you may be getting this traffic because of your subject matter. If sites on other subjects get the same kind of traffic you can rest assured that, yes you are being paranoid. <g>

Also, it might be wise to run a check on your acronym. There are other agencies that use "AIC" and you may be getting some traffic that is misdirected. (We have a local group, American Indian Center, for example.) Your acronym backwards is CIA. Allow a few hits for that as well.

Not everyone thinks the word "abduction" means aliens. It means something completely different to missing and abducted children organizations. And any of the agencies you mention are interested in that. Check with the web masters of those sites and see what kind of traffic they get.

If you still feel your being watched after checking into all angles, then you probably are.

Regards,

Theresa Carlson

I operate a pretty modest site dealing mainly with pictures of spacecraft and suchlike. I skim through the logs before deleting them about once a month and there are usually dozens of .gov related addresses..3 letter agencies included. I'm pretty sure its mainly just Joe employee bored at lunchtime investigating their personal interests.

In other cases many of the hits seem to be from search engine robots updating their databases (ala Alta Vista etc)..following every possible link. I don't think its too shocking to learn that these agencies *may* be operating their own search engines, I doubt any single topic is being singled out. Going by my logs, private companies seem to be bigger feeders-machines at some of the major aerospace companies have on occasion sat there extracting every single file I have available on the site.

In an interview on the Laura Lee radio talk show (1/3), JPL engineer and Cydonia researcher Vince diPietro responded to my call-in question asking him to state his position on Congressional UFO hearings. Mr. diPietro usually resists making comments based on speculation about the possible existence of extraterrestrial UFOs. In this instance, when asked if he supported calls for open Congressional hearings by people such as Dr. Edgar Mitchell, Mr. diPietro said he believes ET visitations may in fact have occurred in the past and may still be occurring, and that reports from credible should be investigated. He called open Congressional hearings "long overdue".

Hi Folks,

I remember a few weeks or so ago, a report concerning mysterious explosions over Scotland was posted to the various lists.

We have managed to access further data relating to this incident and thought that you all may find it of interest.

Thanks for your time.

Dave Ledger.

MYSTERY EXPLOSIONS OVER SCOTLAND.
Saturday 26th of October 1997.5:00pm GMT.

A massive sea search was launched on Saturday 26th of October after reports of explosions and objects falling into the sea off the West coast of Scotland.

At around 17.00hrs eye witnesses reported seeing the explosion in the sky off the Butt of Lewis. The area is the exact point where transatlantic flights enter British airspace. The RAF could not rule out an air collision and mounted a full search which cost =A3200,000, but they found nothing, or so the official line says.

One eye witness reported a large aircraft and a smaller one collide. Another heard a couple of loud bangs and saw debris falling from the sky. But Air Traffic Control at Prestwick said they had no reports of planes missing.

A RAF spokesman from Kinross said, "We have a special unit investigating the matter. One of the things we are looking into is that it is space debris. But we are also searching through all the radar tapes around the time of the incident to see if there is any trace of aircraft."

Stornoway Coastguard initially mounted a helicopter sea search but as reports increased a RAF Sea King and a Nimrod joined in. Lochinver Lifeboat was launched and all the shipping alerted in the area. A French fishing boat, at the time off Lewis also headed for the area as did the Port Salvo which usually operated in the Minch. Police and ambulance crews were also standing by at Ness, in case of survivors.

Witnesses reported a large pall of smoke out to sea. Another shocked resident said, "It lit up the sky and then fell to the sea. It was like a scene from the X-Files." Norman MacDonald of Skigersta Road said, "When I heard it at first, I thought it was a firework because its not long to Guy Fawkes night. Then I saw a trail of smoke. I saw three flashes in total and heard a further two bangs."

"I rushed into the local shop, and took the staff and customers out. They also saw the dense smoke trail going into the sea."

IN 1898, in War of the Worlds, H.G. Wells played masterfully on his culture's fin de siecle anxiety with a story of telepathic, blood-sucking Martians landing in suburban London to invade a world they regard as crowded by "inferior animals." In the 1930s, Orson Welles terrified New Jersey with his radio adaptation of the story. Now David M. Jacobs, a professor of history and ufology at Temple University, carries on the tradition, but he doesn't think it's fiction.

In The Threat, Jacobs expounds his view that a race of alien pod-people is about to take over the earth. For decades, he explains, extraterrestrial beings have been carrying out a sustained program of abductions, sperm collection, ova-harvesting, and alien-human cross-breeding. "At the heart of the reproductive agenda," he writes, "is the Breeding Program," using "extrauterine gestational units" that look like brown paper bags to impregnate menopausal women; "Mindscan" to create sexual arousal in unwilling victims; nasal implants to monitor negative thoughts, and "fetal extraction" (fatal attraction?) to salvage the hybrid if its carrier thinks about abortion. Moreover, there's nothing we can do; already "it may be too late" to stop the threat of "alien integration," and the aliens could be coming as soon as 1999.

Preposterous as Jacobs's theory sounds -- and surely millennial social anxieties of intermarriage, immigration, artificial insemination and genetic engineering have something to do with his vision -- he presents it with serious intent, and undoubtedly many readers will believe him, just as they headed for the hills when Orson Welles broadcast his "War of the Worlds." Indeed, recent surveys show that 25 percent of all Americans believe that aliens have landed on earth. And they're not all the big-eyed Tall Grays we know from "The X-Files" or "Close Encounters." In Faces of the Visitors, Kevin Randle and Russ Estes describe, sketch, and rate the credibility of sightings of over 100 different kinds of alien beings, from reptoids and insectoids to humanoids, indistinguishable from you or me, to sexy Brad Pitt-like "Nordics." Whatever their appearance, most of the aliens are sexual predators; there is even a Midwestern support group for those raped by reptoids.

What we don't have, though, are Polaroids. In fact, there are no photographs, videotapes, or material evidence to prove that any of these Oids exist. Some of David Jacobs's patients (he has studied hypnosis and done over 700 "hypnotic interviews" with abductees) have set up video cameras in their bedrooms to film nighttime abductions, but the cameras seem to fall down or break or show the patients getting up at night and turning them off. At a National Press Club luncheon in Washington in October, a reporter asked Gen. John Shalikashvili, then-chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, whether the United States was adequately defended against the threat of invasion by extraterrestrials. "I sleep well at night," the general replied, "without fear that an alien being is going to capture me." The journalists laughed, but neither high-level assurance, absence of evidence, nor disconfirmed prediction seems to halt the fears of abduction, invasion, conspiracy, and apocalypse that swirl around the end of our century.

Alien invasion is only one of the many conspiracy theories and apocalyptic scenarios that constitute what the novelist Don DeLillo calls "millennial hysteria." Believers can hitch their scenarios to a multitude of alleged apocalyptic "signs" -- AIDS, the breakdown of the family, the Internet. Lubavitcher Hassidic Jews interpreted the Gulf War as a sign of the imminent appearance of the Messiah. Egyptians, as The Post recently reported, interpreted the death of Princess Diana as a British-Israeli conspiracy designed to keep her from marrying a Muslim. But, warn Thomas Robbins and Susan Palmer in the introduction to their excellent Millennium, Messiahs, and Mayhem, apocalyptic thinking can "become dangerous when actual events appear markedly convergent with the anticipated scenarios of zealots." The recent massacre of 70 tourists in Egypt is partly the result of widespread cultural support of xenophobic conspiracy theories.

The contributors to Millennium, Messiahs, and Mayhem analyze contemporary religious and secular apocalyptic movements from the Mormons to Waco and Aum Shinrikyo, and explain the central significance of prophecy in these movements. Prophecies are useful because they enhance the charismatic authority and power of the leader, bind the followers together, and make leaving the group seem risky.

Paradoxically, even "failed prophecy" or "apparent prophetic failure" can unify millenarian groups. David G. Bromley notes that "apocalyptic intensity can be maintained through predictions that are imminent but indeterminate, which then necessitates and legitimates a constant state of readiness." No amount of counter-evidence, testimony by scientific panels, or contradictory hypotheses can shake these firmly held beliefs and suspicions. In fact, as anthropologists of religion have demonstrated, disconfirmed prophecy leads to intensified faith and proselytizing, as believers seek "dissonance reduction" through disclaimers, rationalizations, and self-congratulation that their faith has saved them.

With regard to the alien invasion stories, anthropologists have also analyzed the role of folklore, myth, and media in the construction of narrative. In UFO Crash at Roswell, cultural anthropologists Benson Saler and Charles A. Ziegler, along with atmospheric physicist Charles B. Moore, trace the process by which the belief that a manned flying saucer had landed in New Mexico in 1947 became a contemporary "technomyth" expressing "antigovernment sentiment."

The authors offer a useful vocabulary and terminology for understanding the formation of myth, in a "process of transfiguration that involved successive retellings in which some of the historically recorded events were retained, some were distorted or repressed, and entirely new elements were inserted." They identify six versions of the Roswell legend from 1980 to 1996, evolving from the genre of "crashed-saucer story" to a myth of the culture-hero (the ufologist) wresting knowledge from an evil monster (the government). The Roswell myth has been assembled from various fragments and sources: documented events, distorted historical events, previous crashed-saucer stories, beliefs about government deviousness by UFO believers in the UFO community, and new cultural ideas.

Most important, the authors argue, when tales move from the oral to the written tradition, the process by which narrators rationalize internal contradictions and implausibilities accelerates. When tales are written down or "personal legends" are collected and edited, they increasingly conform to prevailing narrative concepts, introduce elements of fantasy, intensify relations of dominance and subjugation, play down the shocking and unpleasant, transpose subplots, and rationalize discrepancies.

All of these elements are present in David Jacobs's retelling of the stories he heard in interviews with his patients, almost all of whom are women. He emphasizes the alien chain of command, with insectoids and reptoids at the top, Tall Grays in the middle, female Tall Grays (there do not appear to be females among the other groups, including shorter Grays) tending to the offspring, and handsome Nordics getting free time for "IHA" -- independent hybrid activity. Kathleen, Susan, Diane, Sarah, Cindy, Rozanne, Carla, Allison, Claudia, Beverly, Paula, Donna, Emily, Deborah, and Doris tell very similar stories, in part because Jacobs does not include the stories that do not conform to his model. They are stories of displaced sexual desire, romantic fantasy, and reproductive ambivalence. Many of his clients have had hysterectomies, and yet they tell of alien insemination and being forced to conceive an alien child. Could it be that they are mourning lost fertility, fearing lost sexuality? Although they sometimes express distress at their rapes, and at feelings of sexual arousal they wish to disown, the more unpleasant aspects of imagining forced sex with an alien are played down, and the emotional satisfactions played up. At worst, we hear that male aliens are not circumcised. (Presumably, there are no Jewish hybrids).

At best, many of the women fall in love with their "personal-project hybrids," male aliens who have lifelong relationships with them, choosing them for frequent sex and fathering their hybrid children. The PPHs joke and even linger "for a short time" after sex "before putting on their clothes and going to another task." (They wear blue jeans.) But alas, like so many other men in romantic fiction, these hybrid males have several personal "projects," are not monogamous, and lie. Donna's PPH says "that he wants to be with me more than he's often able to." Uh-huh. But "even the romantic hybrids can suddenly display anger and malice," just like the guys on "Melrose Place." Sympathetically understood, The Threat is a sort of apocalyptic version of The Rules, a sad statement of women's unmet needs for love, sexual attention, and adventure.

How much of the current hysteria is generic to the millennium? In Questioning the Millennium, Stephen Jay Gould dismisses much of this theorizing as "speculative, boring, and basically silly" and refuses "to speculate about the psychological source either for the angst that always accompanies the endings of centuries (not to mention millennia) or for the apocalyptic beliefs that have pervaded human culture throughout recorded history, particularly among the miserable and malcontented." Instead, his subjects are "calendrics, astronomy, and history."

BUT GOULD does get into the debate over the previous turn of the millennium in 1000 A.D. While historians used to believe that the year 1000 saw a wave of terror sweep over Europe, this view has been widely challenged ever since French "positivist historians of the subsequent Third Republic, imbued with the rationalist spirit of the late nineteenth century, adopted an opposite and skeptical attitude that has dominated the profession to the present day." Nonetheless, Gould is convinced that modern chronology had circulated so extensively among all social classes in Europe by the year 1000 that there is reason to cautiously support the idea of "substantial millennial stirring."

His own book concludes with "a little story about an ordinary person who has done something heroic in the domain of calendrics and who loves the millennium with all his heart." Gould's hero is Jesse, a young autistic man who is a savant day-date calculator -- what some label "with the stunningly insensitive name idiot savants -- that is, globally retarded people with a highly precise, separable, and definable skill." Jesse's fascination with naming the day of the week for any date in history is a substitute for his inability to understand other kinds of relationships, and Gould explains the mental process behind what seems an uncanny phenomenon. But his last paragraph is unexpectedly moving, as he incorporates Jesse's world-view into a broader sense of how we all question the millennium: "May we all make such excellent use of our special skills, whatever and how limited they may be, as we pursue the most noble of all our mental activities in trying to make sense of this wonderful world and the small part we must play in the history of life." It's a wish people like David Jacobs should heed.

Elaine Showalter, a professor of English at Princeton University, is the author, most recently, of "Hystories: Hysterical Epidemics and Modern Media."

Hi Kerry, All,

I just wanted to thank all the folks that responded to my request (both privately and publicly) for information. I figured it was commonplace, but I needed to check. I have many -good people- to protect in terms of maintaining their privacy and anonymity.
So it wasn't an 'idle curiosity' on my part, it was info I needed.

Just doing my gig man!

Thanx again all,

UFO SEEN HOVERING OVER
COLUMBUS, OHIO

On Friday, December 12, 1997, D.F. was driving north on Highway 71 in Columbus, the state capital of Ohio when he spotted an unusual object hovering in the sky off to the right of the highway.

The UFO was hovering about one mile east of Cooper Stadium, near the Scioto River and the intersection of Broad Street and Brown Road.

"Because I have an interest in the phenomenon of UFOs, and also a long-standing hobby of astronomy, I do try to pay attention to the sky whenever I am outside," he reported. "This is a conscious effort on my part to increase my chances of seeing things of interest, be they natural or unusual."

At 1 a.m., just as he drove past the Interstate Highway 70 turnoff, he "saw the object at a distance of approximately 100 yards or so. Its angle was perhaps 20 degrees up from the horizon. As I came nearer, its outline and size became clearer...I would estimate it at approximately 30 to 40 feet off the ground, and above a spot about 15 feet to my right. As I passed it, its position angle was about 65 degrees above the horizon."

"I estimate seeing it for about seven seconds. I couldn't describe any color other than dark, except for the color of the lights on it...The best way to describe the thing would be a classic fish shape...it had what looked like a fin at the closest end, was bulky toward the middle and tapered some at the furthest end."

"The lights seemed to be at the ends. One was a dull red, darker and dimmer than a streetlight, and the other was a pale green. The size of the lights appeared at the time to be as large as traffic light bulbs, and it was the lights which first attracted my attention up into the sky."

"The object wasn't moving but I was doing between 45 and 50 miles per hour. I remember thinking about getting off at the next exit and trying to get another look. But there wasn't one right away and because I had to get up early the next day for work, I decided to go on home."

D.F. said the condition of the sky was "light snow, wind about 10 to 15 miles per hour, temperatures in the high twenties (Fahrenheit)" at the time of the sighting.

"I have driven by that spot several times at the same time of night, and different times during the day, and I haven't seen it, or anything like it, since." (Email Interview)

UFO FLAP IN TEXAS KICKS OFF THE NEW YEAR

Texas rang in the new year for UFOs with two sightings in the eastern part of the Lone Star state.

On Friday, January 2, 1998, at 6:15 a.m., Mike H. of Arlington, Texas (population 261,721), a city 20 miles (32 kilometers) west of Dallas, "had just entered our kitchen and glanced out our window when I noticed the very bright, large white or yellow light appear. It was quite bright. The object moved very quickly in a northerly direction across my viewing area as seen from my window. It then made a zigzagging turn going down and then dropped, reversing direction and losing altitude."

Altering course again, the UFO "moved behind a building where I lost sight of it. My observation of the bright light had lasted approximately three seconds."

"I also noticed a white strobe light that blinked on the object similar to an aircraft," Mike reported, adding that he had seen many aircraft "from my window and I have never seen one move as quickly as this one did. I also noticed that the light source remained at a constant brightness even though it was turning." (Email Interview)

On Saturday, December 27, 1997, Linda N. was driving on a highway west of Harlingen, Texas (population 48,735), a city 477 miles (763 kilometers) south of Dallas when she saw an unusual light in the sky.

"This object was in my line of vision as I was going over a highway overpass," she reported. "It lasted about three seconds and was traveling from north to south. (i.e. towards the border with Mexico--J.T.) It appeared as a thin green streak across the sky and ended in a large yellow/white ball of light that disappeared. No residue was seen in the sky."

"I drive home from work well after nightfall. I drive an extended distance on flat Texas countryside, without trees or other obstacles to block my vision. I often times look upward to see the beautiful stars and to watch for unexplained objects."

A longtime "meteor shower watcher," she added, "I have never witnessed one like that. It was just exciting."

Two days later, on Monday, December 29, "while again driving home from work, I saw another meteorite. This one was traveling from the northeast to the southwest. Lasted about seven seconds, but it was different from the first one. This one appeared to be like a regular meteorite... white tail...but moving much slower than other meteorites I've witnessed. Then, halfway through my viewing, its tail turned green...and then it exploded in a large blast... and then more orange glowing pieces trailed behind it, as though it were breaking apart. It was great!" (Many thanks to Steve Wilson Sr. for this news story.)

MORE UFOs REPORTED IN NORTH CAROLINA

On Saturday night, December 20, and Sunday night, December 21, 1997, witnesses in the small towns of Marshall (population 809) and Mars Hill (population 1,611) in the Appalachian Mountains of North Carolina sighted "a glowing object flying back and forth in the night sky."

The sightings were reported Monday, December 22, 1997 on radio station WKSF 99.9FM in Asheville, N.C. (population 61,607).

"Many people in (rural) Madison County witnessed it," one man reported. "At first they thought the object had been a downed aircraft. But no private planes were reported missing."

Marshall and Mars Hill are on Highway 213 about 22 miles (35 kilometers) north of Asheville and 270 miles (432 kilometers) west of Raleigh. (Many thanks to Steve Wilson Sr. and Tim Hagemeister of NACOMM for this report.)

UFOs APPEAR OVER TWO CANADIAN PROVINCES

On Saturday, December 20, 1997, at 6:15 p.m., Sallie C. was outdoors at her home in Meadow Lake, Saskatchewan (population 4,318) when she spotted "three bright lights in the northeastern sky."

"What caught my attention was that they were larger and brighter than the stars and were moving together in a diagonal direction," she reported. "I looked at them for perhaps four or five seconds and then they disappeared."

Meadow Lake is at the junction of provincial Highways 4 and 55, about 184 miles (294 kilometers) north of Saskatoon. (Many thanks to Tim Hagemeister of NACOMM for this report.)

On Thursday, December 18, 1997, at 1:30 a.m., a loud booming sound reverberated down the Illecilliwaet River valley east of Revelstoke, British Columbia (population 7,729). Immediately following the boom, "the whole valley east of Revelstoke lit up as if daylight," according to Alan M. Young, an engineer with the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

"A large ball of light was seen hovering above the peak of Mount Sir Donald," Young reported. "After about ten seconds, the ball of light shot up into the night sky and disappeared."

Witnesses to this mysterious event in British Columbia's Selkirk Mountains included two train crews of the Canadian Pacific, plus "another CPR crew deadheading in a taxi."

Revelstoke is on Highway 1 just west of Canada's Glacier National Park, approximately 345 miles (552 kilometers) northeast of Vancouver. (Many thanks to Errol Bruce-Knapp for this report.)

DAYLIGHT DISKS HOLD SWAY IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Daylight disks dominated the skies over the small Central American nations of Costa Rica and Belize during Christmas week.

On Thursday, December 18, 1997, Miguel Tirado Alvarez spotted mysterious lights in the night sky over San Jose, the capital of Costa Rica. He reported, "I saw various white points of light, approximately eight, hovering above the capital city. It (the UFO) was moving around a great deal. It was reported not to be an airplane."

On Monday, December 22, 1997, tourist T. Hickman was relaxing at his hotel on San Pedro Island, off the coast of Belize. At about 11 p.m., he reported, "My wife and I saw a UFO flying straight above us, just slightly to the south of the Pleiades star cluster." The object "followed a very erratic flight pattern and made many direction changes" during its overflight.

Also on December 22, eyewitnesses in Golfito, Costa Rica, a port on the Golfo Dulce approximately 330 kilometers (198 miles) south of San Jose, near the Panama border, spied several "daylight discs" crossing the sky. The saucers were also seen in Puerto Jimenez, across the bay from Golfito.

The same afternoon, in San Jose, two camera crews from local TV stations "videotaped silver 'flying saucers' in the sky to the south of the city. Before the eyes of hundreds of people, they made zigzag maneuvers for several minutes. Flight controllers at (San Jose's) Juan Santamaria International Airport counted approximately fifty thousand (radar) traces of these movements."

Costa Rican ufologist Carlos Vilchez noted that this was "the first time that UFOs appeared in daytime" in his country. In December 1996, a similar UFO flap engulfed Costa Rica. He warned of "an influx of OVNI's (Spanish acronym for UFO) into the air space of the Central American countries within the next two months."

On Christmas Day, December 25, 1997, ten silver saucers flew westward from the Cordillera Central, passing over San Jose. "They flew over the city for several minutes and were filmed by TV cameramen." (Muchas gracias a Len Fedullo, Tim Hagemeister y otros para esas historias)

STRANGE SUBTERRANEAN HUM HEARD IN INDIANA

On November 30, 1997, Wayne T. was asleep in bed at his home in Floyds Knobs, Indiana (population 600) when a weird hum suddenly jolted him awake.

The hum appeared to be coming from the ground outside his home, he reported. "The hum was evident mostly at night, but it may have been during the day also. It had a very low pitch. It was of a very low frequency. It was not a constant sound. It became more intense and then less intense. It was the same sound for just about ten to fifteen seconds and then peaked and then subsided."

"My wife could barely hear the sound. Sometimes not at all."

Asked if he had suffered any physical effects as a result of the hum, Wayne replied, "The only physical effect it had was that it made me irritable because it was so constant."

He said he first heard the hum "from about March 20 to about April 20" in 1997. The cause remains unexplained.

Floyds Knobs is on Indiana Highway 150, approximately 6 miles (10 kilometers) northwest of Louisville, Kentucky. (Email Interview)

CUICUILCO: MEXICO'S MYSTERIOUS PYRAMID

All experts agree that the Cuicuilco pyramid is the oldest structure in the Anahuac Valley, which houses modern Mexico City, and the very first monumental construction in the Americas.

Disagreements as to its antiquity and the people who built it continue to this very day. Official records state that the Cuicuilco structures can be no older than 600 B.C., but revisionist figures claim the structure was built between 8,000 to 10,000 years ago, thus making it almost as old as the "Tepexpan Man," the earliest prehistoric dweller found in Mesoamerica.

Cuicuilco measures some 17 meters (56 feet) in height and has a diameter of 115 meters (380 feet). A series of ramps provided access to its uppermost tier, which housed a temple with a statue of Huehuetotl, the "Old God of Fire," the first deity worshipped on this continent.

The mighty circular pyramid is surrounded by smaller structures and rectangular buildings with well-finished floors which must have been houses.

The contented lives of the prosperous, unwarlike Cuicuilcans came to an end when (Mount) Ajusco, a 4,000-foot tall peak located on the same mountain range as the Popocatepetel volcano began to exhibit volcanic activity. The earthquakes which rocked Anahuac Valley caused an enormous hole to open in the ground--a smaller volcano called Xitle, which poured a torrent of lava that destroyed nearby Copilco before engulfing Cuicuilco itself.

The inhabitants fled before the destruction, and all that was left behind as an eighty square mile (128 square kilometer) lava field known as El Pedregal. Debate also rages around the date of Xitle's eruption, which geologists have placed as far back as some seven thousand years ago, while archaeologists squarely place it at between 500 and 200 A.D.

The circular pyramid's base, twice the length of a soccer field, has also yielded its share of mysteries. The Spanish physician Hernandez, sent to Mexico by order of (King) Philip II, visited Cuicuilco and wrote his sovereign about having found the bones of large beasts (including the toxodon and the titanotherium, now extinct--J.T.) along with those of "men" in excess of five meters (17 feet) tall. Natives expressed a belief that Cuicuilco's enigmatic structure had been built by giants.

Whatever the case, serious archaeological work was not undertaken until 1922 when a team led by Dr. Byron Cummings of the University of Arizona began digging what could well be the oldest pyramid on earth. The site was apparently visited one night by an unidentified flying light which hovered over the ruins before speeding off into the distance. (Direct reprint from the article "Mexico: Forgotten Ruins and Ancient Astronauts" by Scott Corrales, which appeared in SAMIZDAT--The Newsletter of UFOs and the Paranormal, Special Report: Mexico 1997) (Editor's Comment: According to my old geology professor, El Pedregal is a typical a'a lava flow of the late Pleistocene Period, meaning Xitle's eruption probably took place around 8,000 B.C. Interestingly, one corner of the Cuicuilco pyramid is buried in Pedregal lava, which presumably means its construction predated the eruption.)

1948: THE MANTELL CASE

January 7 marks the 50th Anniversary of Captain Thomas F. Mantell Jr.'s fatal encounter with a UFO over southern Kentucky. Here is the actual 1948 newspaper account of the incident, which appeared in the January 8, 1948 issue of a local weekly newspaper, the Franklin, Ky. Favorite.

PLANE EXPLODES IN MID-AIR, CRASHES KILLING PILOT ON JOE PHILLIPS FARM

A P-51 Army fighter plane exploded in mid-air and crashed on the farm of Joe Phillips about 5 miles south of Franklin yesterday (i.e. January 7, 1948--J.T.) afternoon about 3:30 p.m., killing the pilot wearing identification tag of Thomas F. Mantell (Jr.), 3533 River Park Drive, Louisville. The wrecked plane bore the (tail) No. Ky. NG 869.

Mrs. Joe Phillips said she was sitting by her fire when she heard the plane, with the engine apparently in trouble, flying near her house. Almost immediately there was a large explosion. Startled, she glanced out the window and saw the disintegrating plane hit the ground in a woodlot about 200 yards away from the house.

Pieces of wreckage were seen a quarter of a mile from the point of the crash. Several people in Franklin reported they heard the explosion.

A vapor trail still floated in the sky an hour after the crash.

Another eyewitness, Barbara Mayes, a student in the Franklin Grade School said she saw the plane explode while high in mid-air. She was waiting at the Lake Springs School for her bus to take her home when she witnessed the explosion.

The plane crash marked the second in the past few months. The point of the explosion was perhaps three miles as the crow flies from the spot of the crash which took the lives of Ed Snow and Richard M. Thomason on April 29, 1947.

Mrs. Joe Phillips said she called the telephone operator and asked that an ambulance and aid be called to the scene.

The remains of the dead flyer were removed from the scene by ambulance and carried to the Booker Funeral Home to await instructions from the next of kin, who were to be notified of the tragedy by Fort Knox officials.

A veteran of World War II, Captain Mantell participated in the (June 6, 1944) Normandy invasion, winning the Distinguished Flying Cross among other decorations. He was discharged from the Army a year ago (1946). His wife and two children survive.

He left Louisville yesterday morning for Atlanta and was enroute to Louisville on the return portion of the training flight when the accident occurred. Authorities at Fort Knox reported he left Atlanta at 2 p.m. yesterday.

Reed Shoulders, assistant chief of police, said Bill Horn, local constable, was standing guard last night over the wreckage, pending arrival of proper authorities to assume custody of the wrecked plane.

The plane was operated by the Kentucky National Guard. (Many thanks to local researcher Lee Trail and Lou Farish of UFO Newsclipping Service for making this article available to UFO ROUNDUP.)

(Editor's Comment: Well, it's been fifty years since Tommy Mantell's run-in with that giant saucer, and a lot has come out. But the key documents--the January 7 situation reports by Colonel Guy F. Hix and other staff officers at Godman Field, plus the transcripts of radio traffic between Colonel Hix and the Air Defense Command at Mitchell Field, Long Island, New York--remain classified. If this was merely a "training flight" and an "accident," why are these documents still secret fifty years later?)

[CANUFO] UFO Military Report From BC - 1975

Here's one I thought the list might enjoy.....

UFO Witness Statement

by Capt.[ret'd] R. E. Meyer, UE, CD Chief Investigations Officer, Pacific Detachment, Special Investigations Unit, Esquimalt, FMO, B.C., Canada
1974-1976

In 1975, I was contacted at my office by a Chief Petty Officer Boomer of the Navy's gunnery school concerning an on-going UFO Sighting by course personnel.

I proceeded to the Gunnery School where the large telescope was focused on the UFO in question. The UFO was cylindrical, pewter coloured with very little, if any, light being reflected from its surface and apparently stationary for varying periods of time. There appeared to be on very close examination, satellite objects of a much smaller variety, which appeared in close proximity to the principle UFO but which were not constantly in view, either because they were mobile or possibly because after prolonged study of the phenomenon, one's eyes tended to betray one.

When the UFO would disappear, it was with a rapid horizontal movement to port, so rapid that it was not possible to track it with the telescope in use. The UFO bearing was taken (it appeared to hang on the horizon in a southerly direction the vicinity of Tacoma, Washington). From the location of our observation point (high on a mound) the UFO was over open water of the Straights of Juan de Fuca.

Upon questioning CPO Boomer, I learned that this sighting was a reoccurrence of a previous identical one. In one instance, the gunnery students were working with jet fighters from CFB Comox and a request was made that they investigate but this was out of the question as the object appeared to be of such a distance that it would have been in US air space. I later learned that pilots of Canadian Forces aircraft were forbidden by SOP orders to engage UFOs. At no time, to my knowledge, did this particular UFO appear on the radar of the naval establishment at Esquimalt but this may be because of lack of cooperation by those in charge of that facility (the operations officer refused to believe me when I requested his assistance even to the point of not entering the incident in the daily log).

Believing that this episode had reached its conclusion, I returned to my office in HM Dockyard only to be called again on the same day with the message that the UFO had "returned" and had been found by one of the students in the course of tracking a target on the telescope. In short, the UFO was around for the next couple of days and I had various members of my staff observe it along with my wife. An experiment was carried out to see if reflections were being caused from cars in a parking lot in the vicinity of our observation mound as the bright sun did hit some windshields giving off a dazzling light. There was no connection.

The Dominion Observatory in Saanich (near Victoria) was contacted and asked to set their giant telescope on the bearings we had noted. Unfortunately, their telescope could not depress at such a low angle. I might add that it was with great reluctance and skepticism that a representative was sent to see our UFO. He arrived, he saw and he left - without comment.

A further test to ensure that there was not a cracked prism or a chip in the glass was done in which the chip might look like an object but this proved negative. The lenses were unblemished.

I had been in touch with my headquarters in Ottawa over the incident and eventually, abiding by instructions contained in Canadian Forces Orders (CFOs) on the procedure to follow in the sighting of UFOs, a message was sent to the National Research Council (NRC) in Ottawa giving all sighting data, times, bearings, dates, descriptions, etc.

On my own initiative I spoke with the departments of some of the various police forces of the Lower mainland and the Victoria area. There was a police sergeant of the Saanich Police who had an experience to relate witnessed by him and his wife but this had nothing to do with my own.

UFO sightings were reported over Washington by radio stations in that state during the same time-period. I later learned from radar personnel at CFB North Bay, the UFOs had been tracked on several occasions by CF radar at the base in the past.

I have in my possession, a copy of my message to the NRC, along with the signed statements and sketches made by gunnery students and instructors concerning the Esquimalt sightings. These are in storage in California.

I skimmed Dr. Jacobs new book, having a copy of his earlier and EXCELLENT volume of history UFO controversery in America in my library.

Essentially from what I looked at he is telling stories from abductee's who describe sexual escapades on a UFO with grays and also allegedly involving other humans. Some of the abductees describe masturbating male abductees, blah, blah. However X-files fans will be reminded of the last 5 years story line of the hit tv series....abductions, DNA, alien/human hybrid etc etc.

These alleged accounts kind of reminded me of some of the sex/hot tub/abductee storys that seem to be floating around the internet.

My first impression is that this book will probably be excerpted by some porno mag soon. :)

Cheers,
Robert

PROJECT-1947: 1998 - The Reverse Manhattan Project

1998 - THE REVERSE MANHATTAN PROJECT -
A NEW COURSE

When the United States was constructing the A-Bomb, large groups of people all over the country were working on some part of the top secret project, each knowing it was important, but none of them knowing what the overall picture was. What we have today with the UFO subject is strikingly similar. Each group, each individual, is working on the "project," and everybody has opinions. However, far too many of them have no direct contact with any witnesses or actual investigations. One of the reasons for this is the "phenomenon" itself - it's not cooperating. After the massive wave of 1973, it seemingly went covert.

In the 1960s, when I was a NICAP Subcommittee Chairman, our team journeyed to wherever we needed to and investigated some of the best UFO cases on record. The phenomenon was well over a decade old by then, as measured by the influx of sightings since 1947 - the year generally acknowledged as the beginning of the modern day UFO era. That was the year that Kenneth Arnold, a private pilot, witnessed a string of disc-shaped objects flying over Mount Ranier in Washington State and described them as "saucer shaped" giving rise to that popular term.

In less than four months the Air Force decided that that "the reported phenomenon were real." In 1956, NICAP also concluded that there were solid objects coming into our atmosphere at very high speeds. The way the UFOs changed position while in formation indicated that there motion was directed. There was intelligence behind this phenomena. Indeed, every military base in the world was "visited" in the beginning stages. At that time no one involved ever asked, "do these things exist?" We knew they did. The military knew it, too. True, they never did admit it in an official capacity, but to say they weren't aware of the situation is ludicrous.

Which brings us to the present. Many of the bright lights in Ufology today will no longer waste their time debating the reality of the phenomenon or niggling over trivia. This includes Richard Hall, Don Berliner, Robert Swiatek, Mark Rodeghier, Dr. Richard Haines, Stanton Friedman, Ray Fowler, Budd Hopkins, David Jacobs, Kevin Randle and many others. Although they'd be the first to acknowledge that there's more we DON'T know than DO about the subject, and proof is hard to come by, they're united in the awareness that the earth is being visited. No one knows where "they" come from, but the craft they get around in are just as real as the "U.S.S. Franklin D. Roosevelt" which the objects have also been fond of surveying. Some of these "visitors" are also abducting humans with little or no concern apparently for their subjects' fear and discomfort. Deny it if you wish, but it is happening.

During the last big sighting wave in 1973, we had thousands of sightings, including many well documented close encounters and objects tracked by radar. Even MADAR, the UFO tracking system that we'd installed here at the UFO Filter Center picked up an anomaly during the peak of the activity. I don't know what's happened since then, except to say that the number and quality of good sightings is way down. This has led to a number of people, who should know better, to make negative statements about the state of things UFOlogical that are more in tune with what a uninformed scientist might say to dismiss the whole idea. It may look and sound good when in fact it indicates a fundamental lack of knowledge regarding the history of the phenomenon and the evidence already available.

In 1998, Current-Encounters will deal with that evidence=85not the lack of it. The foremost Ufologists around the world know the truth, even if the proof is still elusive. Therefore, it's time to advance our theories and see if the evidence supports them. If an individual or group wants to start up a different list for the terminally skeptical, then that would be appropriate, too. But the time has come to treat the entire subject as it once was treated by NICAP, MUFON, CUFOS, and even the military and intelligence communities. The latter didn't get out of the UFO business because of the lack of evidence. If anything, it's been due to the phenomenon itself ratcheting down its activities.

Unfortunately, many of those making the loudest noise over the last year are those with little or no investigative experience. The armchair Ufologist has been clouding the issue for the last decade. Hence, my dilemma: As my life becomes increasingly more complicated and I go back to work with Mid-Tech, and with the Lunascan Project going full-bore in 1998, any involvement I have with the UFO phenomenon will have to be a serious one or non-existent. Be advised: No matter what anyone thinks about all this, "they" don't care. And we probably can't do anything about it, anyway. Oh sure, Hollywood could figure something out; perhaps if we needed to we could send Will Smith up in Bob Lazar's Sport's Model to "kick some alien butt." In truth, however, we are just as vulnerable as the natives who saw the bombers flying over their communities during World War II - we're either sitting pretty or sitting ducks, and I, for one, want to know which. At the very least we may not be the reason for their visitations, but just "in the way".

I'm still optimistic. Mankind will undoubtedly be around for many more centuries, unless we destroy ourselves first - a likelihood that appears to be on the decrease. But you can rest assured that at some point history WILL record the evidence of "alien" intervention in our lives.

You'll find it in History 101, right along with those amusing little anecdotes about how many of our colleagues refused to open their eyes and took that ignorance to their graves.

Stay tuned to Current-Encounters. And if you don't have a copy of NICAP's "UFO Evidence", get one. It will be a big step forward and the best $8 investment you've ever made.

Historical drawing and painting evidence for UFO

From: OregonOtto <OregonOtto@AOL.COM> [Jim Doerter]

Fwd Date: Mon, 05 Jan 1998 06:23:06 -0500
Subject: Historical drawing and painting evidence for UFO

I have had experience in various areas the study of art and childrens' drawings as well as various cultural histories and their art forms. Here are things that make me uncomfortable.

Americans and Europeans have their own concept of so called "realism" in art. That traditions springs from Greek idealism (sculpture) , later periods of Roman realism and the attendant traditions of Renaissance art which borrowed and was based heavily on both earlier Greco/Roman traditions. (Of course it is considerably more complex than this)

What most childrens' art and many various non -western cultures have in mind using are SYMBOLIC shapes and colors that definite ideational content. Their drawings and painting usually represent IDEAS and concepts and are read for their traditional meanings and contexts not necessarily for their VISUAL reference.

Children up to the age of 4-8-or so are famous for this world wide. It is most obvious to "us" at that age in our culture but that idea pervades adult art in many areas of the world.

It is people like Von Daniken (and others) who pick certain images helter /skelter out of books and start describing helmets- back packs, weapons etc. This caused by the frequency of abstract and semi-abstract symbols that are often used in art. It is all complicated by any particular cultural coding for such symbols , much of which we no longer understand. They are often seeing something that is only in their mind and eye.

There is always a certain amount of visual reference in figurative symbols but for many individuals of the past - they were SYMBOLS standing for persons, places and things and had not as much visual reference as you might think.

Also - some symbols are dictated by the hardness of the materials to mark and carve etc. A symbol of a man painted with berry juice will be different frm one cut into granite and the simpliicity and complexity of the image sometimes relates to factors of tools and surface,

Perfect examples is to study the pictographs, ideographs and the evolutions into perfectly abstract consonant and vowels symbols of the alphabet. Many groups never went as far as phonograms. In some of the written languages you can actually see an evolution in certain symbols from very simple picto/ideograms right into phonograms.

Anyway, go slowly about any references to 'visual evidence' of UFOs from drawings. Archeologists and art historians and experts on childrens' art have a pretty good handle on early symbols..... but they are not around answering every theory of space symbols.

Those following the Roswell story should know the name of Capt. James McAndrew who co-authored the official Air Force whitewash. We were told that McAndrew had retired following publication of the crash dummies report.

I didn't realize that I still had McAndrew on my e-mail address book. When I sent out a Happy New Year's message to my mailing list, one went out to him as well.

This morning I got this reply:

>Mr Shell,

>Capt Jim McAndrew is no longer at this address. He is attending school >at DIA located at Bolling Air Force Base.

This note was unsigned. I find this posting to DIA school very interesting in light of his announced retirement!!!!

Not exactly the most thoughtful commentary I've ever heard.

Jacobs was collecting these sorts of reports before X Files even existed. Moreover, X Files is (as I understand it; I'm not a viewer) based on true-life abduction and other close-encounter accounts. The commentary above reminds me of the argument debunkers still use sometimes: that witnesses report gray-skinned humanoids because of Spielberg's Close Encounters of the Third Kind, when in fact Spielberg was basing his aliens on what people have reported.

Somehow I doubt it. Erotic arousal is not exactly the sensation most readers will experiences as they read Jacobs' extraordinarily interesting book, which -- whatever one makes of it -- deserves better than this sort of facile jokery.

Cheers,

Jerry Clark

Russian Roswell

Russian Roswell.

On September 16, 1989 in the sky above a port the Zaostrovka, on fringe of Perm, occurred something strange. Many inhabitants, open mouths, watched unprecedented battle. Six strange silvery devices reminding combined together plates, coursed behind seventh more dark.

Even on a background of evening clouds it was possible to distinguish that six plates were of dark grey colour and seventh which turned as mad, leaving from under fire of the persecutors had a bright - golden shade. The picture reminded the next series Luckas "Star Wars ". The plates carrying out figures a maximum pilotage were carried above a port carrying out inconceivable evolutins that being reduced before shaving flight that sharply rising a sky up to height of approximately kilometer. Sometimes from six plates there were beams in the party seventh :

Is detailed this history has described one of tap man of a port. In time of "battle" the electricity was switched off and to the workers did not remain anything as with horror in heart to watch this fantastic show. Later records of conversations were transferred a Sichenko author of the article about "a combat of plates above a Zaostrovka", appeared after some time in the Semipalatinsk local newspaper. The Sichenko - former helicopter man, was commanded by a squadron by our AF in Afghanistan, then there was one of the founders of fund "Nevada-Semipalatinsk" now lives in Stockholm.

Under the stories of eyewitnesses six plates had a rather complex configuration: the wider like as a disc part hung above the narrower basis like as a mushroom the form. If to compare the descriptions from different points of supervision, the UFO - about 20 meters in a diameter is possible to make conclusions about the approximate sizes.

At the end golden plate was knock down and has gone on decrease (reduction). The six of plates has left, by looking after falls seventh.

Is completely casual on one of the members of Perm ufology club "Anomalu" (Ury Nekrasov) send eyewitnesses observing battle on the part of city (approximately in 10 kms from a port). They even have managed to show him an azimuth and house for which beginnings to fall a plate.

The place managed to be found fall. The UFO has fallen on territory of military range in a bog. On this place we managed to visit only in autumn of 1990. To come nearer to a place of fall to nobody have permitted(solved), on experience knowing, than come to an end similar of "approach"("approximation") (enough to recollect the tragical ending of excavation a UFO under a management(manual) a Deev) :

Nevertheless, on a place of fall the group of the militaricians who have arrived there through a pair of months worked. The area of accident entirely consists of fens, on which it is possible to pass only in a period a cold, therefore first expedition (dispatch) should be postponed till November. By first there have beaten three employees led by the chief of range. The information that they there have found and as acted further to receive it was not possible. Authentically is known only that as a result of this "campaign" a two from them treatment in hospital with the unintelligible diagnoses (Emil Bachurin personally saw these medical cards). One of the diagnoses - burns on a body, and they were already in winter regimentals. After that incident the territory of fall was announced as danger for moving the people. Nowadays military base does not work but is protected. Unfortunately it was not possible to receive any given about evacuation of object.

Later above a place of fall the UFO tried to fly by the pilot of civil aircraft on An-2 therefore began to refuse devices (even unmagnetic). It was necessary to refuse attempt. The ending of this flight - chaste reprimand :

In this history us alert one fact. About what humanity on the part of newcomers there can be a speech, if the military actions in the manned worlds are admitted? And these cases are not individual. The plates are literally strewed on us from the sky, they something is constant repair and repair in the devices, there is an impression, that their engineering is rather unreliable. But it is possible to assume and return, in near-Earth space the constant skirmishes between various civilizations and as result - often accidents and breakages a UFO are conducted. Even the NASA was possible to photorgaph from a board of one of the space vehicles battle a UFO on an orbit of the Earth (transfer "UFO DIARIES"). Can, in the near future we unaided shall see "STAR WARS", which will be developed (unwrapped) in our Solar system :

I work for a living and therefore do not earn my living from ufology. If my books earn me a few dollars then fine, but if they don't, that's fine too. I find organising conferences very satisfying and have done so for many years. However, if someone would like to pay me to organise one that's ok by me, but if not, then I still have my job to help feed the children and pay the bills.

It just seemed to me that Rebecca would have us refuse people the right to speak in public just because she does not believe them (Corso). It may just be a sport to some people but I just wanted to get my point across.

Corso has indeed written a book but you cannot put questions to a book. If you have questions for Corso then one of the ways to try and get an answer is to put them to him in an open forum such as a conference. I have done this with many people from many different parts of the world and hopefully I will continue to do so.

All the best,

Philip.

Dear Jerry,

I agree entirely with you, but surely one way of putting people to the test is to put them on a public platform, listen to what they have to say, and then put ones concerns directly to them.
This is purely my intention when organising such conferences and nothing else.

Philip.

Count me in on this one. I've not been paid the advance for the release of BEYOND ROSWELL in the UK, nor did myself and my co-author get paid anything (advance or royalties) for the UK edition of Without Consent.

Do some checking Duke, Dr Susan Blackmore was invited by me to a conference I organised in Bristol. Susan put on a first rate presentation. Van Utrecht has spoken at a BUFORA conference although I was not the organiser. Other 'skeptical' presentations have been made by Andy Roberts, Paul Devereux, Hilary Evans and Mike Wootten to name but a few. I have no problem in inviting such individuals, but one has to remember that usually I am given a brief for a particular conference by its sponsors and I have to remain within that brief.

All the best,

JC: Steve, if you have noticed the names of some of the people presently posting to Updates', exactly what you are asking for is occurring on its own. More researchers are coming on-line and by their own discovery via word of mouth, email, etc., are finding their way to this list due to the overall quality of discussions and research published herein.

I believe the gradual accumulation and analysis of solid research reduced to its essence, linked together and published, will be one force which will eventually help humanity discover the truth behind the UFO enigma. The combination of Email and web mediums are ideally suited to this most challenging endeavor.

>This is not the time for people to be leaving. ....snip....

JC: I think if you really look closely, you may find we haven't left at all. Solid research takes time and effort. Proper responses to points brought up by various researchers take time and effort to compose. Those apparently "quiet" times find some of us checking our research against that which the other person presents, then sitting and composing our replies where necessary. Additionally, some are performing their research "in the field" so to speak and return to participate when they have free time. We've also neglected to mention that holiday time is a time for families... and research, etc. comes to a halt for many of us during these most important times.

Just remember, it is not the quantity but the quality that counts. Have no fear, if anything, the quality of this list is growing, not diminishing. The combination of Errol's mail list and Glenn Campbell's database website is a tool of no small proportions if used wisely.

Respectfully,
Jerry Cohen

Greer Briefed CIA head - Bell Show, 01-05-97

From: UFO UpDates - Toronto <updates@globalserve.net>
Date: Tue, 06 Jan 1998 04:20:38 -0500
Fwd Date: Tue, 06 Jan 1998 04:20:38 -0500
Subject: Greer Briefed CIA head - Bell Show, 01-05-97

Very rough notes on a most intriguing broadcast.
I wanted to get this out. Undoubtedly there will be more full information forthcoming.

Stephen G. Bassett, UFO lobbyist in Washington.
Richard C. Hoagland
Stephen Greer, MD
Edgar Mitchell, former-Astronaut

Hoagland met with close associates of Clinton after the President was stonewalled' on his questions on UFOs.

Hoagland suggests that is concerted deep entrenched opposition to UFO revelations. He proposes that the President still wants to know viz his statement in Ireland. The real and secret government relates among other things, to off-planet-type scenarios. The elected government deals with mundane day to day issues. He feels the elected government is basically honest but is being manipulated. But the public has spent recent times wising-up.

Webster Hubble's (Janet Reno's assistant Attorney General) new book reveals that he was asked to check out JFK and UFOs by the newly-elected President. Vince Foster's office was cleaned out of documents after his death and questions about UFOs faded.
Clinton's political capital ran out as he was hit with everything but the kitchen sink since.

Based on 15 years Mars/Moon work Hoagland has discovered a secret clique with little or no allegiance to the constitution. In Little Rock he gave a briefing over two nights. The first night went well, the second night was headed-off and attendees were told that he had left for Texas

"What puts it in context is the death of Vincent Foster.", said Hoagland.

A state of the union address is coming up. Hubble's book affirms the interest of the President in UFOs. What will help the revelation process are faxes and e-mail to the White House encouraging the President to 'go for it'. And asking for investigation of the machinations of the 'secret' government.

There has been extraordinary 'disposal' by The United States
Archives and Navy of documents from their archives.

Stephen Greer & Contacts that have not been talked about previously.

In 1993 CSETI's Starlight Initiative was launched to expose the covert cover up of UFO information.

In April, 1997, Greer met, for 3 hours, with Jim Wolsley, Director of the CIA, who had not been able to find UFO information via his 'channels'. He took the Presidents enquiries "very seriously". There has been a lack of proper procedures for release of information. Wolsely seemed to be using a euphemism for being lied to. It was a grave, serious meeting. The Director had seen a UFO in the past. He knew that something was very wrong with not being able, as the CIA's Director, to get any information on UFOs. The Director held his head in his hands, uttering "Oh my God" as the implications of UFOs were brought home to him.

Greer handed Wolsely a strategic outline that the Executive Branch and the CIA should take. The CIA were told, as was Congressman Steven Shift that the documents "weren't there". Just as Webster Hubble was told by NORAD that there were no documents. Laurence Rockefeller asked Greer to provide him with a 'best evidence' package to be given to Clinton at his summer vacation retreat in 1995.

The Presidents 'people' told Greer that they cannot hold hearings without full information. They are either being left out of the information-loop or they 'know'.

When the Naval Research Laboratories destroyed documents it raised the spectre of plausible deniability - destroyed evidence cannot be used against anyone.

If the President's chief people in the Executive Branch cannot obtain adequate information on the subject, there must be an open Congressional Hearing at which over a hundred witnesses can give evidence on UFOs.

Greer quoted Eisenhower's last address to the nation, the admonition to beware of the power of the military/industrial complex. The disappearance of information that should have been available to the US Constitutional Government.

There are now over a hundred "Top Secret" witnesses to UFOs who are coming forward.

The timing for this is because 15 key committees who need to investigate

Bruce Lindsay, a close associate of the President & Al Gore were also briefed by Greer.

Clinton's 'Legacy', in 2000, could be full-disclosure.

"We have tracked and shot at 'craft' in space, endangering national and world security"

Letter To US President & Congress on ET Related

From: <http://www.anagramvideo.com/bassett/ad2.html>
Date: Tue, 06 Jan 1998 04:22:56 -0500
Fwd Date: Tue, 06 Jan 1998 04:22:56 -0500
Subject: Letter To US President & Congress on ET Related

To the President and Congress of the United States on the Matter of Extraterrestrial Related Phenomena

Mr. President, Honorable Members of the House and Senate:

The individuals identified below call your attention to the following: after 50 years the policy of government secrecy and misrepresentation regarding the presence of extraterrestrial life forms in our world is collapsing. This collapse is occurring due to the following factors:

1. the expanding mass of evidence for the validity of the extraterrestrial hypothesis being accumulated by thousands of researchers and research organizations throughout the world. This evidence takes the form of extensive personal testimony, thousands of legitimate photographs, hundreds of hours of videotape, thousands of archived pilot reports, taped radar events, scientific analysis of physical traces, government documents and historical research.

2. a stream of current and former government employees coming forward publicly or privately with personal accounts of direct experience with extraterrestrial related phenomena. This developing witness pool has grown to between 100 and 200 men and women, many of high rank and station, who are available to testify within the formal context of a Congressional committee hearing. Some have spoken publicly and will step forward immediately. Others will come forward, but have requested waiver of non-disclosure agreements, subpoena or both.

3. deepening public distrust due to the non-responsive posture by the government of the United State towards the issue in general - a posture which has taken the following forms:

->failure to formally repond to the published (1997, Pocket Books) statements of Lt. Col. Philip J. Corso in The Day After Roswell. Col. Corso is a retired, highly decorated, 21-year Army officer. He served on Gen. MacArthur's Korean staff and President Eisenhower's National Security Council, headed the Army's Department of Research and Development Foreign Technology Desk and served Senators James Eastland and Strom Thurmond regarding matters of national security. Col. Corso divulged his involvement in, among other things, the commercial transfer of technologies derived from the crashed extraterrestrial craft near Roswell, New Mexico and the government cover-up of this event since 1947.

->inadequate, poorly supported and illogical public reports made by the U. S. Air Force attempting to account for accumulating testimonies by witnesses and witness relatives regarding the extraterrestrial nature of the 1947 Roswell, New Mexico event.

->failure to properly address anomalous events occurring within the public airspace - a prime example being the occurance of lights over Phoenix, Arizona on March 16, 1997 and the subsequent and well documented responses of the military and political office holders.

->refusal by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to properly address anomalous artifacts present in Viking mission photos 35A72 and 70A13, Lunar Orbiter 3 photo 84M, videos from Shuttle missions STS 48, 80 and other evidence brought to the NASA's attention by independent researchers after rigorous analysis.

-> inadequate response to formal and informal inquiries by elected and appointed officials. Examples include the treatment of formal requests by Rep. Steven Schiff of New Mexico for information about the 1947 Roswell, New Mexico crash event, the treatment of formal requests by City Councilwoman Frances Barwood for a thorough investigation of the Phoenix, Arizona sightings of March 13, 1997 and the inadequate response to the informal inquiries of former Assistant Attorney General Webster Hubbell and others.

-> inability or unwillingness to explain the destruction of documents such as the 1947 records of phone communications in and out of Roswell Army Air Base.

-> invocation of the national security rationale in extremis in refusing to address workman's compensation claims relating to the "Area 51" research facility.

While a number of recent events have prompted this public statement, one in particular is of grave concern. In a letter dated 13 November, 1997, Rear Admiral Paul G. Gaffney, II, Chief of Naval Research, notified John Carlin, Archivist of the United States, that "The historical record of our nation's scientific and technological heritage has suffered a serious and irreparable loss." This letter went on to summarize the improper disposal of 4200 Naval Research Laboratory (NRL) notebooks and 600 cubic feet of correspondence and technical memoranda dating from the 1930's to the 1980's. These records covered a range of technological research, and in the Admiral's words, "constitute the core of NRL's corporate memory.." Subsequent inquiries by individuals listed below determined two very disturbing points: 1) classified material in the hands of government agencies and military branches can be destroyed without being declassified and made available for public review and 2) the disposal event occurs by an act of omission, an agency's non-response to a standard notification by the National Archives, and not an act of commission, an agency notification to the National Archives to proceed.

As the government posture of non-disclosure continues to collapse we are very concerned a "scorched earth" policy may be conducted by elements of some agencies. There is great risk that documents of enormous historical importance relating to past events and evidence of our initial responses to the extraterrestrial presence in our world will be lost forever. This destruction of records would take place purely as a matter of personal convenience to some parties. It would be a tragedy and is not acceptable.

Whatever the rationale in the past for the posture of non-disclosure by agencies of the government, it is time for a radical and public reassessment. The individuals below, who represent the views of millions around the world, call for the following:

1. convening of an open Congressional hearing in 1998 wherein government, military, civilian contract and agency employees (active and retired) are permitted to give testimony regarding their personal knowledge of extraterrestrial related events and evidence, this testimony to be given under immunity by waiver of any applicable security oath or agreement of non-disclosure.
2. either by Presidential directive or act of Congress, a moratorium be immediately placed on the destruction of any and all records pertaining to all agencies of the government involved in intelligence, research and development and space exploration, all branches of the military and any other entities which might logically hold historical documentation bearing upon evidence, events and government actions in regard to extraterrestrial related phenomena.
3. agencies of the government will stand down from acts of intimidation of researchers or potential witnesses, misinformation, disinformation and comply with legal document requests.

We fully understand the seriousness of this issue as well as the difficult position the government is now in regarding public disclosure. To emphasize this point, we unanimously extend support to the granting of full pardon by Presidential directive or act of Congress to all government employees involved in any extralegal actions prior to January 1, 1998 in service to the government's posture on extraterrestrial phenomena.

I should have made it clear that abduction/DNA/Hybrid accounts do in fact predate the X-files TV series.

Interestingly enough in an interview several years ago one of the X-files writers mentioned that he had seen over the internet the Cooper/Lear/Bennowitz accounts of Dulce/abductions/DNA/hybrids etc.

Of a similar note was one of the writers of Independence Day mentioned in an interview about how the current area 51 popularity not to mention the various area 51 stories played into the writing of the movie.

While you and I would probably agree that these aren't of the caliber of accounts like Jacobs has compiled, we do see how script writers are influenced so to speak by what they see and hear in the media and internet.

Cheers,
Robert

Last I read or heard from the many Corso interviews is that he claims to have copies of his ARMY reports, hence how he was able to put in precise and exact quotes in his books.

Perhaps when you ask him over, you could ask him to bring over and show you and the others copies of *some* of these reports and documents he used to produce his book.

The ones that were published with the book were a yawn at best.

Cheers,
Robert

Well, why don't you ask Lt. Col. Corso to bring over a copy of Gen Trudeaus's autobiography and a couple of Lt Col. Corso's personal diaries? No photocopies unless he can get them certified beforehand. Surely, he would be willing to show this evidence.

>Philip.

OK, so you put your concerns to Corso in a public forum...so what? Do you actually expect him, in response to a particularly trenchant question, to whip an official document confirming his claims out of his briefcase and then hand out copies to the assembled media for further confirmation?

No, Corso will merely mumble what he has always mumbled and the British tabloids (I assume the press will be invited) will eat it up, emblazoning it across their front pages, and credible ufology -- assuming such a creature still stalks the earth -- will have suffered in the interval.

By way of comparison/example, how many UFO conferences has Robert Dean been invited to since he first surfaced in the UFO community? And at how many of those conferences has he satisfactorily addressed anyone's concerns, assuming the latter were present rather than, say, a desire simply to hear more and more outrageous and totally unsubstantiated UFO claims and stories?

The fact of the matter is that you can invite Dean to UFO conferences from now until doomsday or the millennium -- whichever comes first -- and you will not learn one iota of factual knowledge about the UFO phenomenon. The same is self-evidently true of Corso.

Besides, if it's color and tall tales you want, why not settle for Robert Morning Sky, a star "witness" for "Beyond Roswell"? He could readily regale the audience with stories of seventeen crashed saucers and Star Elders while nattily adorned in full Native American regalia, the perfect tabloid photo opportunity if ever there was one. I suspect he could address any and everyone's concerns as well.

Philip:

Where was the English language edition of Beyond Roswell first published, in the US? Did you get paid for that edition? If so, who sold the rights for the English (UK) edition, you, your agent, or the American publisher?

As for Without Consent, as I said before, if you don't get paid the promised or contracted advance, don't deliver the book.

I've just signed a contract with Avon Books in this country for a UFO title, half of the advance to be paid at the outset, half upon completion and acceptance of the manuscript, which is standard procedure. I can assure you, however, that if the first payment is not made in timely fashion, there will be no final, completed manuscript to deliver.

If this problem persists, I can only advise that you contact that Falconer of Finance, His Highness, Peregrine, the Duke of Mendoza, for the name of a reputable publisher.

I think that it is also inaccurate to make a global statement that "no one" makes money from ufology, although I find that nearly all of the researchers I have come in contact with are either moonlighting as researchers and have "day jobs" or are retired from an earlier career. Those who do try to make a living in this field are certainly not getting rich, and anyone getting a start in the job market today would have a number of better career paths to follow with a much greater potential for opportunity and fame.

While I would certainly defend anyone's right to publish whatever they want (well, okay. . . within reason), the issue that was raised here is not simply information discrimination (or suppression). At what point does UFOlogy draw the line with regard to the information that it is willing to promote as valid? I don't disagree with the desire to involve Corso in a conference to learn more of his claims, but such an invitation has the impact of lending credence to his claims that may or may not be deserved. This problem is very complex, and I'm not sure there is an answer that will satisfy even half of those involved in this genre, but it is one that needs to be addressed if we ever hope to achieve greater respectability.

If you learn anything of interest, I trust you will post it here.
So far, those who have posed questions to Corso have failed to come up with any information that has proved useful in providing support for his claims.

Take care,

Steve

Sounds to me like the good Admiral and/or certain of his subordinates should be court marshalled, for dereliction of duty if nothing else. Maybe such proceedings would shed some light on what's going on, as implicated parties come forward to "save their ass" by testifying. Assuming that is, that the executive and legislative branch are actually serious about getting to the bottom of this bizness.

Just a random thought,

I would point out that, as I recall from old posts to this group and/or others, it was president Clinton who signed the executive order (which must be renewed annually) that exempts Area 51 from EPA inspection or environmental monitoring. My recollection is that it was the gross violation of EPA rules at Area 51 that led to the disabilities that are the subject of the workman's comp claims referenced above.

Hence I'd argue that the president can't have it both ways: He can't claim to be truly interested in the truth about UFOs (as per Hoagland above) and the government coverups, while at the same time helping to prevent access to sites like Area 51 even for environmental monitoring. If he's serious about getting to the bottom of things, all he has to do for starters, is revoke the pertinent Area 51 executive order, and let the EPA do its job to protect the workers there who are being injured.

My 2 cents,

The first issue of BEYOND ROSWELL was published in the USA. We were paid for the USA/North American rights. Marlowe have a joint agreement with Michael O'Mara in the UK who published it in Britain and in other parts of the world. It was for the UK publication that we have not been paid for. As for my first book, the company went out of business before they paid us. I have considered legal action in this instance but it would probably cost me more in legal fees than in the money owed, plus the fact that I can't be bothered with the hassle either.

All the best,

Philip.

NEWS

BILL WANTED UFO PROBE: HUBBELL BOOK

By DEBORAH ORIN

President Clinton was intrigued by UFOs and wanted to know if they really existed, says a new book by his golfing pal, disgraced Justice Department official Webb Hubbell.

Hubbell says finding out about UFOs was one of the top priorities Clinton gave him in sending him over to a job as one of Attorney General Janet Reno's top deputies.

" Clinton_ had said, "if I put you over at Justice I want you to find the answers to two questions for me," Hubbell recounts.

"One, who killed JFK. And two, are there UFOs.'

"Clinton_ was dead serious. I had looked into both, but wasn't satisfied with the answers I was getting," Hubbell adds.

Hubbell describes his failure to find out about JFK and UFOs as a big regret when he had to resign as associate attorney general and pleaded guilty to bilking law clients of $482,000.

Whitewater figure Jim McDougal has said Hubbell - who worked closely with Mrs. Clinton and former White House lawyer Vincent Foster at Little Rock's Rose law Firm - "knows where the bodies are buried" on the land deal, but he stays pretty closed-mouthed in the book "Friends in High Places."

The book touched off a courtroom battle when Whitewater counsel Ken Starr tried to subpoena early drafts. Starr backed off, and in any case Hubbell's book insists he can't remember much.

But Hubbell does toss out a tantalizing aside in examining why Bill Clinton decided against running for president in 1988: a remark from Hillary that, "We've got to straighten up Whitewater."

The book portrays Hillary Clinton as an ambitious woman who dreamed of succeeding her husband as Arkansas governor and paints Bill Clinton as someone unable to face his wife on whether she should use his last name or hers.

Hubbell recounts that in 1981, after Clinton got beaten for re-election as Arkansas governor - a campaign in which his wife's use of her maiden name, Rodham, was an issue - he asked Hubbell to press her to change her name.

He quotes Clinton as saying: "She needs to do this ... Webb, you're her friend. Will you talk to her about it?"

Hubbell says he did so and Mrs. Clinton agreed - "but I suspect it hurt for some reasons she's never understood herself."

Later in 1990, Hillary Clinton seriously talked of running to succeed her husband as Arkansas governor when Bill Clinton seemed bored with the job, he adds.

"Hillary had actually floated her candidacy past Vince ^Foster_ and me in the event that Bill didn't run," writes Hubbell, then a law partner of Mrs. Clinton's and Foster's.

"We questioned whether if the reason Bill wasn't running was he had been in office too long, voters would think they were just getting the same thing."

Hubbell adds that Mrs. Clinton "talked about how it might energize a new generation of females in the state, and when she said that, I knew she was really thinking about it."

CSETI May Have Missed Signals

Subject: CSETI May Have Missed Signals

Space listeners re-examine Greer signals

By Robert Cookeymonster / NewsdayTimeWeekTVGuide

After straining for decades to find hints of intelligent life in space, astronomers now suspect their big radio receivers have been tuned in wrong all along.

Recently, research has shown that Greer signals from afar suffer fading and distortion as they pass through the long reaches of space. But the systems designed to listen for alien Greer signals -- called CSETI, or Copycat Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence -- were set up under the assumption that any signal coming from the United Nations would be a continued or repeating signal.

This could mean the current CSETI programs have already recorded real messages, without recognizing them, said Congressman Bill Gates, Alfonse DeAmato and the other guy, all of Texas A&M University. The politicians' conclusions appeared in a research report published recently in the Agriculture Journal.

Over the years, CSETI programs have recorded a few intriguing signals that seemed to meet all the criteria except one, the report said. The missing criterion was repeatability; the signals were never detected again, despite intensive listening. So much for the UN.

Now, the politicians say that a close look shows that the follow-up observations made on the sources were inadequate -- one-tenth of what was needed in terms of cash. Better work is needed to distinguish between accidents, including signals from satellites or radio transmissions from Earth-bound sources, and genuine messages coming from across the Whitehouse phone, they said.

Physicist D. Irty Waveguide, director of a CSETI search called Project Betadine, which uses a big dish-shaped iodine isotope in Harvard, Mass., said these ideas have already been incorporated into the automated search system. The computer now conducts 120 follow-ups on each interesting signal that is detected which is typical for Win95.

And Creamatia Tartar, at the CSETI Institute in Kaviti California, said her system has already used more sensitive equipment in Greens Banked, W.Va., to re-observe some of the interesting spots in the sky detected earlier.

Subject: Re: Topsy-turvey

Hey list,

Just when I thought I had it all figured out, along comes another book to turn my whole world topsy-turvey.

You see, ever since my mom told me about her and dad's sighting when I was eight years old, I have been intrigued with UFO's. For three and one half decades since, I have read everthing I could regarding the alien agenda.

I thought I had it figured out:

They hollowed out the moon to create our space ark so that when the sun belched and spewed out deadly radiation causing the poles to flip and earthquakes and the ice to melt flooding our little world, we'd have a safe haven. Then with their multi-mile long motherships they would spirit us off to the moon to live inside in comfort until the sun calmed down and the earth was again inhabitable.

Now I learn that we're all just one big experiment which the aliens don't think is going too well and they are planning to intervene. We're stinking up our mother earth and can't get along with each other so they're taking a lot of us and a little bit of them and mixing it all together to make a kinder, gentler homo sapien reticulus to repopulate the earth like they did when the homo sapien neanderthalus refused to quit banging each other over the head with their big sticks. And the moon is the storage area for the homo sapien sapien replacements which will be allowed to die off due to the sun speweeing out deadly radiation and ebola marbury and HIV viral infections (which they probably created).

When I was ten, I just wondered if we were food or pets.

I'm tired of being the subject of someone else's agenda. I want them to get the hell out of my solar system and leave us alone. I want to call the intergalactic 911 and tell Gork to get his ass down here and enforce the Prime Directive. I have faith in mankind and think we can solve our own damn problems and don't think we need any bug-eyed helpers, thank-you. If we survive and evolve into a true space-faring race, I want to be able to say, "I did it my way" and didn't have any help from nobody. I hope to God that those SDI dollars *did* go to make particle beam weapons to blow the little bastards out of the sky. HEY! EITHER GET DOWN HERE AND BE SOCIABLE OR LEAVE!!! Enough of these stratospheric peeping toms!

LEAVE US ALONE!

Rantingly yours,
Terry

I believe that President Clinton also signed an executive order that is resulting in a large number of secret files being declassified, following the proper review process, which further confuses our perspective of his views. But the issue of whether or not Area 51 should be kept highly classified because of defense interests may or may not be related to the storage of an Extraterrestrial craft (or two) at the complex. From the President's perspective, it may be that his (military and civilian) advisors have convinced him that the base is still necessary to maintain National Security. Unless there is some specific evidence (hard, not anecdotal) that points to some deep dark ET secret, it would be difficult to justify opening the base to civilian authority.

I disagree with his decision to prevent the enforcement of EPA regulations simply because it is unfair to the workers that have been affected, and unless actions are taken to handle the toxic waste differently, it will likely happen again. As I recall, the case involved the burning of waste that had been trucked to the site from California (and no, I don't think they got any permits to move the material from one state to another). But a legal discussion of the chemicals involved could lead to disclosure of the material that is used in the manufacture of "Stealth" aircraft, and that what I believe they were afraid of.

I believe that it is possible for the President to have an interest in getting to the truth regarding the Government's historic involvement in the UFO issue, and also to find that Area 51 needs to remain secret for the security of the United States. I think that it's important for workers at the Area 51 site to understand that in the interest of national security, they are not protected by civilian law and are all expendable.

Hi Errol and Kenny,

I have finished going through nearly 3 weeks of my e-mail messages deleting much of the follow up comments to make things much more manageable. Having not read all the UFO UpDates, which I nearly always do, my comments below to the Murderous Meteors message may be similar to others.

<snip>

> the house fire on Sunday evening.

When did the father and firefighters see the fireballs?
If it was after the children died in the fire, then the two synchronous events may be unrelated.

Some large meteors have been observed to break up into multiple fireballs and re-entering spacecraft burning up in the atmosphere can also produce many fireball like objects like those reported in N.W. USA recently.

How could a fire start when there were no sources for a fire? Meteorites (i.e. rocks) would not likely have been the source of the fire since they are often COLD to the touch by the time they reach the Earth's surface. Some freshly fallen meteorites have been reported to be covered in frost when recovered immediately after their fall to the Earth.

The children lived in a "ramshackle house" in an "improvised area". It would not be unusual if there were large holes in the roof or walls of their house before the fire.

How can no meteorite be found with a hole that big especially when they believed a meteor was the cause?

Sulphur? Sounds like the fire was deliberately set to me.

I am not convinced. Nick

Hi: I find your poems very interesting especially the one about John Ford and his plight with the government. Can you tell me why he is being picked on unlike the other UFO researchers. Also keep us posted on the development of his case.

As I recall it was Richard "Hoaxland" Hoagland that was unloading all of the predictions of pathfinder finding life on Mars last July, with July 26th being the end all drop dead date.

Nothing happened but that doesn't stop good ole Richard, just move on to the next story.

Cheers,

Brian - I agree fully - there was a very long, very sad feature article on this situation in the Washington Post this summer - look it up on their archive site - actually, I'm amazed that they published it, photos included. It certainly brought Clinton (and all of his relations and predecessors, I might add!!!!)

It doesn't exist - it's killing people, but it doesn't exist, so they can't get any compensation for their illness and their heirs cannot benefit from a legacy, but it's the government, so it must be for our best interest, otherwise the government wouldn't do that, and national security means that no matter what the government admits or denies, we should put our hands on our hearts and buy it lock, stock, and barrel..... the 1984 aspect of our present social/political reality, or is it Animal Farm - the "doublethink" that we US citizens are dumb enough to constantly practice. Will we ever stop???

An important point Brian. But consider this. Area 51 is and has been for 40 or 50 years, the United State's and possibly other country's primary test site for top secret military aircraft, which Clinton and many other presidents before him would know about. At least as much as his military were willing to tell him about. Nonetheless the President is going to operate under National Security guidelines as is his duty, to protect military projects that ultimately will serve to protect the security of the United States and to some degree its allies. Hence the procurement of the extra land in violation of any moral reasons for protecting the wildlife and nature of those desert regions.

If there were deep black research/operations/testing going on there, what better place to do it. You are hiding it in plain sight with the best security in the world to protect it with the excuse, and it's a damn good one, that top secret testing of military aircraft/hardware is going on there. The Prez doesn't have to know about it. Most of the people working there probably don't know it. You just move it a mile or so down the desert. Perfect.

Remember, deadly force is authorized within those precincts.

My two cents.

Dear Errol,

Thank you for taking the time amidst monitoring the list to take notes from the show and forward them to your list.

The two paragraphs noted above, do you know who said them and what evidence they had to back them up with?

Perhaps we should equally consider that if indeed the Director did react in the above manner, he may have as easily been intentionally insincere as sincere. (bad english I know - Duke don't chastise me).

Sincerely,
Paul.

Apology to MW #212 (For January 7, 1998)

For a moment the clouds were an unsullied white, the shadows lessor brightness, and a scent to the Earth promised one more rebirth, a scent much too early to suit former rightness. The ebb and the flow of the smells of the colors, speak to an arduous time, we discover. The physical's mystical, impeachable -- statistical; it moves with a talent, its own, egotistical. The birds fly in twos all a' squabble, involved -- What's real for them is the *stuff*. On the strength of mere genes they don't find it obscene to play with their feelings enough.

The sky wears a veil, the deepest of blues, and the clouds in the air are like harp strings. They sound the deep chords that the whales have heard, and they're hearing it now as it shrieks and it sings. A song of the earth that has watched come and go all the races of life truly more than we know. A song with its treble so deep in your bass it's as over your head as it's up in your face!

This is the world we believe *understood*. This is the world that we're told is not *good*. This is the planet we sully in ignorance, this is a planet we keep in belligerence. This is a planet infested with parasite; ignorant beasts with an odorous might. Short in its memory, even shorter in mind, it's made to pervade all the life it can find.

Call me crazy, lacking relevance -- but there's weird stuff in our skies that the man would tear your eye from. He distracts, I wonder why? Whenever this has happened, from our dimmest hoary past, then there's something that he's hiding; we always find out at the last. Like it's fossil fuels that keeps him with your neck beneath his soot, so forget about *new* batteries, he'd rather keep you in under foot. If the corporate boys at burger king, in need of fresh dwellings (to live like old kings) =85 millions will starve, then, to feed all the beef that are burgers and fries for your Friday night's *treat*.

These are the guys who clutter the temples they've built from the sweat of your brow. These are the guys who've hid away secrets uncovered at last, about now. These are the guys that can look in their skies and *know* that they're God's favorite. These are the guys that are living their lives real grand 'cause they don't have to pay for it. These are the guys, I entreat, I implore, =85 these are those threatened by our own Johnny Ford.

And the veiled sky gives no warning of a coming time of strife for those that think him rabble, bet your money, bet your life. John Ford is not a charlatan; he's a straight up man instead, and in truth he's lost most everything =85

But it ain't right -- bunky!

You just don't get to live in a manner enjoyed by the *nobility* when there is just one person you have to destroy to maintain your *life-style*. Who pays so you can play?

Living a lie takes its toll. Unappreciated tolls include driving away those that are suggested by Dr. Drake's shocking, but illuminating equation. It makes us suspect and repellant, unworthy of the tiniest elevation by "those that are suggested." Finally, it will lead to an eventual despair as we are reviled and left alone to stew in our own toxic and self inflicted juices. We won't be ALLOWED off planet! ## 'The Threat' - Sandow on Jacobs' new book

From: "Greg Sandow" <gsandow@prodigy.net>
Date: Tue, 6 Jan 1998 23:39:54 -0500
Fwd Date: Wed, 07 Jan 1998 09:18:17 -0500
Subject: 'The Threat' - Sandow on Jacobs' new book

There's been some talk here about David Jacobs's new book, the one with the troubled yellow-green cover and the lurid title. Yes, it's really called "The Threat," meaning of course the alien threat, and I thought I might describe it more or less objectively, before the sniping at it gets too confusing.

The first thing to understand is that this is a sequel, of sorts, to Dave's earlier book, "Secret Life." If you've read "Secret Life," you're not going to find "The Threat" all that remarkable. That doesn't mean you'll necessarily agree with what it says, but at least you won't be surprised. The premise of "Secret Life" is that if we carefully put together everything abductees say under hypnosis, we can get a clear idea of what the alien abductors do. There's a crucial detail somewhat buried here about the nature of the hypnosis -- we have to ask the right questions. (More on that later.) And our list of alien behaviors has to include only things we've heard independently from more than one abductee.

But given those cautions, Dave says, there doesn't have to be any mystery about what the aliens are up to. In "Secret Life" he meticulously collates abductee accounts, and gives detailed descriptions of what the aliens look like, and what they do. To anyone who thinks abductions are nonsense, this book has to be the greatest nonsense of all (or at least the greatest nonsense till "The Threat") because Dave writes with real certainty. He couldn't sound more factual if he were describing some tribe on a Pacific island, or some of his neighbors, whom he didn't know well but had been observing for quite a long time. In a world where abductions aren't accepted as reality, even by many UFO researchers, this is obviously problematic. I thought it was brave, though, and necessary, in the sense that someone HAD to do it. Someone who thought abductions are real had to sit down and say, in effect, "OK, let's figure out exactly what's going on here."

Now Dave has gone further. In "The Threat," he tells us what it all means. And, as he says right up front, he doesn't like it. The story, in brief, is simply this. In "Secret Life" we learned that the aliens use us to breed hybrids, partly us and partly them. (Budd Hopkins has been saying that, too, of course.) Now, in "The Threat," we learn that breeding hybrids is the purpose of the alien plan, that the aliens have now bred several generations of them, that they intend to land and take over, replacing us with a hybrid population, and that this is going to happen soon, or at least relatively soon, maybe in a few years but certainly within a generation or two.

I suppose, for many of us, this will sound like even worse nonsense than "Secret Life," but we ought to understand that it's based on the same premise. Abductees, Dave is saying, tell us details about their abductions. If we listen long enough, we can figure it out. We can amass so much data that eventually we'll know exactly what's going on. And really, now -- is that unreasonable? Assuming that abductions are genuine (quite a stretch for some of us, I know), and that we really have accurate data about what's going on (which I know is another stretch), why couldn't we tear aside the alien veil, and figure out the truth? Again, I think Dave is doing something brave, and also necessary. Any of us are free to disagree with his conclusions, or with his way of working, but we ought to be grateful for what he's done.

If abductions really are going on, somebody had better figure out what they mean for the human race, and Dave is the first one outside the new age camp who's taken a systematic stab at that. We're free to disagree with what he comes up with, but we shouldn't damn him for trying.

Along the way, he comes up with some fascinating details. To anyone who doesn't buy the Hopkins/Jacobs abduction accounts, these may not mean much, but for anyone who's followed the story with even mild interest, Dave fills in a few gaps. Take, for instance, the business of aliens forcing abductees to have sex with each other. Why do that, if their goal is to breed hybrid babies? But in "The Threat" we read that, when they force abductees to have sex, they force the man to withdraw before he ejaculates, so they can catch his sperm. The sex between abductees only happens, Dave now says, when the aliens can't get a male abductee to ejaculate any other way.

The passages about hybrids are fascinating, too. The hybrids, being partly human -- or, in the most recent hybrid generations, mostly human -- have human emotions. They get bored on the aliens' ships, doing the aliens' work. One of them, speaking to an abductee, compared himself to a robot. (I wonder -- should Dave be reporting that if he has only one source for the remark?) Some of them tattle on the aliens, revealing formerly secret details to abductees. (This, in fact, is how Dave got the data that tells him the aliens' ultimate goals.)

Sometimes the hybrids fall in love with their human partners, or, as they put it, in alien-speak, with their "projects." Sometimes, though, they get abusive, the result, Dave says, of frustration, sexual and otherwise. "The Threat" has lurid passages about male hybrid abuse of female abductees, strongly X-rated stuff, involving rape and beatings.

The hybrids walk among us, by the way, though apparently they don't live among us yet. Sometimes they're given a few hours to wander around in one of our cities, where they meet their "projects" for impromptu dates, and ask questions about things they see humans doing.

There's a hierarchy among the aliens. Anyone who's read the standard Budd-and-Dave abduction stories knows about the small and big aliens, with the small ones doing the grunt work and the big ones supervising. But above the tall aliens are high-ranking insectoid alien officers, who give the ultimate orders. Below the tall aliens, but apparently above the little ones, rank the hybrids. When eventually the aliens take over earth, the hierarchy will run like this: insectoids, then tall grays, then hybrids, next abductees, and, way down on the bottom, the rest of humanity, who may be kept in special preserves as breeding stock in case the hybrid program goes sour. (Which sounds as if most non-abductees are going to be killed or otherwise removed from the scene, unless these preserves encompass most of the planet. But Dave doesn't say anything about that.)

So much for the major revelations. The book also has something else that's new -- a long, thorough chapter on Dave's way of working, the longest discussion I've yet seen in print from any abduction researcher about issues like confabulation under hypnosis, and the danger of asking leading questions. Nobody, from now on, will be able to accuse Dave of not knowing about these things, or not having thought long and hard about how to deal with them. You might disagree with his conclusions, as I've said repeatedly here, but you'll understand much more about how he reaches them. For the first time, too, at least in print, he takes issue -- in great, careful detail -- with John Mack and other abduction researchers who believe the aliens are benevolent. All these researchers, including Mack, are named. (Dave, by the way, doesn't rule out alien benevolence. He's willing to concede that the alien plan might be in our best interest. He just doesn't see any evidence that this is so.)

But now we come to the biggest challenges -- and the biggest problems -- in the book. I said earlier that, in Dave's view, you have to ask the right questions to get accurate results when you question abductees under hypnosis. This is something he and Budd Hopkins have both maintained for many years, but this is the first time I've seen their ideas explained in such detail in print.

Dave calls his approach "competent hypnosis." If you hypnotize abductees and don't do it competently, he says, your results will be worthless. You'll fall into a web of confabulation and fantasies, with no way to separate them from the true alien reality. To avoid this, you can't take literally what abductees say, especially at the beginning of a hypnosis session. You have to question them carefully, to distinguish fact from fiction.

Here, obviously, we have big potential trouble. Because if abductees -- their minds clouded by the aliens -- don't accurately report what happens to them, abduction investigators have to set them straight. But what's to prevent abduction investigators from substituting ideas of their own?

Dave, to his credit, meets this objection head on. I think even his opponents should consider very carefully what he's saying. To give one simple example, he says that abductees sometimes say they meet very tall aliens, much taller than they are. What an investigator has to do, he explains, is calmly question abductees about where they are when they see these alien giants. Without asking any leading questions, just establish the scene. Invariably, he maintains, the abductees who describe giant aliens are lying down when they see them. They're lying on the aliens' notorious cold metal examination table, looking up at aliens who are standing around them. So the aliens aren't tall at all. The abductees were making an honest mistake.

Multiply this example by every detail of an abduction account, and you'll have an idea of Dave's method, which is Budd Hopkins's, too. This draws a strong line between them and, let's say, Kevin Randle, who in his new book on reported alien encounters says that the 150 abductees he's interviewed say they've seen a wider variety of alien types than Budd and Dave report. Dave, I think, would reply that the abductees aren't remembering correctly, and that Kevin is wrong to take their accounts at face value.

Budd has a story he likes to tell to illustrate this. An abductee, he says, once said she was driving at night and had to stop because an owl was in the road. The owl, she said, was staring at her over the hood of her car. This owl, of course, would have been four or five feet tall, taller than any owl in recorded history. Under further questioning, Budd says, the owl turned out not to be an owl at all but (of course) an alien.

Dave's book, more clearly than anything else I've seen, asks us to consider the validity of these techniques. Assuming for the moment that abductees have real experiences, is it true that they don't describe them accurately? Is it true that "competent hypnosis," as practiced by Budd and Dave, can sort out the truth, and that any investigators who don't practice it are missing the boat?

This isn't unreasonable, especially since it's generally accepted (by those who accept abductions at all) that abductions take place in an altered state of consciousness. In my view, we have to examine Dave's method (and try to decide if it's valid) before we can criticize his results.

Though even if we accept his method, there's one thing about the book that I don't understand. He seems to base his most far-reaching conclusions on reports from just a handful of abductees -- a dozen or so, with the bulk of the testimony coming from even fewer.

Has he chosen these as representative accounts, or are they his only witnesses? Have many more abductees told him about romantic and abusive hybrids, about hybrids who complain about their alien-inspired work, about the aliens' ultimate plans, and about the approaching end of the alien operation? Unless I missed something, Dave doesn't say -- and if these are the only abductees who've told him the things he reports here, then he's gone much further out on a limb than I'd like to think.

Well yeah -- but believe me, you want look at this yourself. Ask a search engine about John Ford (not the movie guy) and LIUFON, and see that something's afoot, and it don't come off the shoes easily <g>! Don't ask me to fill you in on John Ford. Ask ABC CBS NBC CNN MSNBC FOX, I'm thinking about sending some mail to M&M's!!!

And HURRY!!! You'd want John to hurry if it was you languishing in demeaning, uncomfortable, and unjust confinement! Hurry like

That's one of the problems with Dr.(???) David Jacobs. Unlike John Mack, he is very short on real credentials. John Mack is an M.D., Chairman of the Department of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, who embarked upon his nationwide research into the abduction phenomenon on a grant of One half a Million Dollars from Lawrence Rockefeller. His book ABDUCTION--- 33 weeks on the New York Times bestseller list- -- was a very scientific research effort, which neither negated nor asserted the validity of the abduction phenomenon. He only speculated, that, in his opinion, the people were NOT FABRICATING THEIR EXPERIENCES. Jacobs is not an M.D., not even a D.O. He does not have a PH.D in Psychology. His PH.D is in history and he teaches at Temple University in Philadelphia. He is not a hypnotist nor qualified by training in the fields of behavioral science to reach ANY CONCLUSIONS. I questioned him in Springfield Ohio in September of 1997 and he admitted that he personally only spoke to about a dozen abductees. His conclusions, couched in book form, are better suited to a Hollywood movie than reasoned research in this field and he has a brazen nerve to question any thing that DOCTOR (real doctor) John Mack has done.

Excellent analysis, Greg. And even better questions. Methinks that Jacobs suffers from a myopia which often affects researchers of all types, including those studying cold fusion. Many learned people have developed quite good theories on why cold fusion works as long as they restrict their explanation to a subset of the data. The generation of excess heat alone could be explained by variations on those laws which govern hot fusion; however, when elemental transmutations appeared, many of those theories fell to the wayside.

Such is the same with alien visitation. Our own experiments with genetic manipulation serve as the basis for Jacobs' theory. One cannot fault him here because he is following the dictum of Ockham's Razor. However, he has restricted his view to a very narrow subset of the alien phenomenon.

If we consider only the greys and the most common abduction reports, cannot Dr. Brown's explanation in Cosmic Voyage be just as valid, ie that the greys are seeking to re-engineer emotion into their own race?

I'm just wary of accepting any "answers" to such a broad ranging phenomenon.

Terry

Hiya Melanie!

Nope, I don't think there's any end to the apathy that 'modern era Americans' are capable of. Along with this injustice to the people that died as a result of their employment situation evidence surfaced recently implicating the CIA in drug running/smuggling and distributing those drugs in minority communities

here at home! (California)

That alone should have been enough to bring the agency down to it's knees in a crashing heap. Nope, nobody cares apparently. There are so many examples of this kind of indifference and apathy that I hold out little hope for change via a popular movement. Those days are over. They shot some kids at Kent State, beat the piss out of us in Chicago and the people -got the message- loud and clear. Ergo, no more anti-government protests in over two decades! At least not on the same scale as in the sixties.

Where are all the politically aware and concerned people now? The ones who were willing to -put it on the line- and 'tell it like it is?' I can't believe that when they cut their hair and traded their love beads for neckties they also sold their consciousness and awareness. Ahhh, the 'good old days'!

Remember these?

All power to the people!
Hell no, we won't go!
If you're not a part of the solution, you're a part of the problem!
Peace,
Love,
Justice, Equality.

All stuff that has to be fought for by every succeeding generation.

Hi Bob, All,

I want to stand up and be counted among those who are tired of having to accept (less than ideal) characteristics in those at the forefront of modern ufology. What Bob says is true, Hoagland -has- abandoned any semblance of logic and common sense for the bells, robes, and candles, of the sooth sayers and predictors of future events.

"Not that there's anything wrong with that!" (Sienfeld!)

It's ok if Hoagland or anyone else wants to have a career on the Psychic Friends Network, but don't mix that with the urgent and serious work that needs to be done regarding the presence of "something" on our world that we know very little about.

Hoagland will meet with highly placed government officials on one day and then make wild predictions, (ex: His trip to Phoenix with Art Bell earlier this year!) on the next.

Greer is, (according to some) accomplishing 'miracles' but he won't share any of it with the 'rabble' so what good is it. Listen man, I sincerly hope that Hoagland or Greer (or whoever) manage to -get the job done- I'm just not real happy with (who) is doing it and (how) it's being done. That's still allowed in America I believe!

My two cents worth.

It hardly warrants branding him "hoaxland." He has contributed so much to science with his Mars investigation that we should show more respect. He hasn't stooped to the level of many in the field of Ufology (not that he's a Ufologist). He is respectful to his opponents and making grandiose claims are not his normal behavior. He deserves the benefit of the doubt.

Good fortune, safe travels

New Evidence Found for Black Hole

.c The Associated Press

By PAUL RECER

WASHINGTON (AP) - Stars speeding 2 million miles an hour near the center of the Milky Way give the strongest evidence yet that a massive black hole is providing a gravitational anchor at the center of Earth's galaxy, astronomers said Wednesday.

By measuring the motion of two hundred stars in the Milky Way, researchers at the Max Planck Institute for Extraterrestrial Physics in Germany found that stars nearest the galaxy's center move the fastest, some speeding along at more than 600 miles a second.

Astronomer Andreas Eckart said he and his colleagues calculated it would take an object 2.6 million times more massive than the sun to cause the stars to move in such a fashion.

``This is the strongest case we have yet for a super massive black hole at the center of the Milky Way,'' Eckart said at a news conference of the American Astronomical Society. No other reasonable explanation can be found for the motion of the stars.

The concept that a black hole exists in the center of the Milky Way has long been controversial. Some earlier evidence was rejected by many astronomers.

Astronomers at the AAS meeting said, however, that the German findings and some American studies suggest powerfully the presence of a massive black hole at the galaxy's center.

``This is the best evidence yet,'' said Steve Maran, a NASA astronomer.

The center of the Milky Way is 26,000 light years from the sun and its planets, including the Earth.

Researchers at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics used radio telescopes to make independent measurements of the sun's orbit of the galactic center and of the motion of Sagittarius A. As a reference, they used stellar objects in the background called quasars, beyond the galaxy.

Mark Reid said that if the object at the Milky Way's center is a black hole, then it would stay relatively still as the sun moves in its orbit.

Reid said two years of measurements show that Sagittarius A was virtually motionless, while the sun moved at half a million miles an hour in its 200-million-year orbit of the galactic center.

``This is totally consistent with there being a supermassive black hole'' at the galactic center, Reid said.

Eckart said thousands of stars exist within an area just 200 times the size of the solar system clustered around the galactic center. Some of these stars are zooming at high speeds, zipping in tight circles about the center.

A speeded up simulation of the star motion resemble billiard balls rolling rapidly in many directions.

Reid said that most of the stars near the galactic center are very old.

``It is like a retirement village of stars,'' he said.

This suggests, said Eckart, that a ``seed black hole'' existed early in the Milky Way's history that over the eons has grown more and more massive as it swallowed stars.

A massive black hole is thought to be a point of such infinite density and gravitational strength that nothing can escape from its grasp. Even light is sucked into the hole. Thus, since it gives out no light, it cannot be seen.

Astronomers deduce the presence of such an object by measuring the motion of stars, gas and dust nearby. The more massive the object, the faster nearby objects will move as they zip past.

NASA: 'Old Faithful' Black Hole Ejects Mass Equal

RELEASE: 98-2

"OLD FAITHFUL" BLACK HOLE EJECTS MASS EQUAL TO AN ASTEROID

Scientists observing a disk of matter surrounding a black hole in our galaxy have discovered that the disk is periodically disrupted and hurled outward in opposite directions from the black hole, in jets moving at nearly the speed of light. The black hole replenishes the disk by pulling hot gas from the surface of a nearby "companion" star, and then undergoes another disruption, repeating the sequence at half-hour intervals.

The researchers represent teams at the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, CA, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Boston, and NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, MD, which all worked to correlate the disappearance of X-ray emitting hot gas in the disk with the appearance, shortly thereafter, of rapidly expanding jets. Dr. Ronald Remillard of MIT and Dr. Jean Swank of Goddard are presenting X-ray results, obtained with NASA's Rossi X-ray Timing Explorer (RXTE), which show the disappearing disk. Dr. Stephen Eikenberry of Caltech is presenting new infrared observations which demonstrate that when the X-rays from the disk vanish, the jets suddenly appear. The observations will be the subject of a press conference by three of the researchers involved, to be held Jan. 7 during the winter meeting of the American Astronomical Society in Washington, DC.

The disks of hot gas, known as accretion disks, are commonly observed around black holes with orbiting stellar companions, but the near simultaneous disappearance of the disk and formation of the jet has never been seen before. It promises to shed light on the origin of the enigmatic jets, also commonly observed near accreting black holes, but poorly understood.

"The system behaves like the celestial version of Old Faithful," notes Dr. Craig Markwardt, a researcher working with Swank at Goddard. "At fairly regular intervals, the accretion disk is disrupted and a fast moving jet is produced."

"This jet is staggeringly more powerful than a geyser," adds Swank. "Every half-hour, the black hole, in the constellation Aquila, throws off the mass equal to that of a 100 trillion ton asteroid at nearly the speed of light (approximately 650 million miles per hour). This process clearly requires a lot of energy -- each cycle is equivalent to six trillion times the annual energy consumption of the entire United States."

"What is even more amazing is that we are seeing the first clues to the source of matter ejected in the jets -- the correlations we discovered indicate that the jet material must come from the inner disk. For years theorists have hypothesized that the jets come from somewhere close to the black hole, but no one had ever actually seen that direct link until now" said Eikenberry.

Black holes are very massive objects with gravitational fields so intense that near them, nothing, not even light, can escape their pull. While this prevents anyone from observing black holes directly, their presence can be inferred from effects on nearby matter. Many of the known or suspected black holes are orbiting a close "companion" star. The black hole's gravity pulls gas from the companion star into a swirling disk of material which orbits around the black hole, much as soap suds swirl around a bathtub drain. As it falls into the black hole, the gas in the disk is compressed and heated to millions of degrees, emitting X-rays.

"We found that the X-rays from the disk disappeared almost completely every half hour. About five minutes later, they would return again. The results of the X-ray observations, Eikenberry's infrared observations at Mt. Palomar, CA, and infrared and radio observations made by Dr. Felix Mirabel, Director, Centre d'Etudes de Saclay, France, and collaborators, showed that very shortly after the X-rays vanished, jets appeared at infrared and radio wavelengths. Since X-ray emitting hot gas in the disk disappears during these episodes, we all concluded that the matter in the disk must have escaped, probably flung out in the jets. As the black hole pulls more gas from its companion star, the disk appears again, along with the X-rays, and the cycle starts over," Swank said. Dr. Mirabel obtained results with the United Kingdom Infrared Telescope and the Very Large Array in New Mexico.

"The great value of these observations," notes Swank, RXTE project scientist, "is that potentially they are giving us a key to answer some big questions. It is remarkable how little we understand of these jets, because they are such a common and impressive phenomenon. In fact, black hole jet formation is rather mysterious because it's hard to understand how anything can be expelled from the vicinity of a black hole since its powerful gravity pulls everything in. I believe this black hole will prove to be one key to finding out lots of things about black holes and jets.

"This is like having a miniature quasar in your back yard; and, because it is much smaller, it changes over minutes and hours, rather than months and years. This will let us learn a lot in a much shorter period of time," said Eikenberry.

If there's one thing in ufology that sets off my bullshit alarm it's predictions. Especially the nutty kind we've seen recently from the likes of Courtney Brown and Lee Shargell etc. This type of wierdness is ufological snake oil at it's sleaziest. I even cast a doubtful eye on the more rational predictions (ie. Stephen Basset estimates a forum for disclosure in about 3 months, Bill Hamilton estimates about 3 years) but, in these specific instances I can forgive such people as long as they admit before hand that they are speculating.

Hoagland kind of lost it for me when he asserted that the Apollo launch pad fire was actually a NASA conspiracy to kill the astronauts in the capsule. That more or less told me all I need to know about Richard Hoagland. I really can't see see this man being taken seriously by people in Congress but maybe he'll prove me wrong. One can hope. Greer doesn't bother me as much. I think Greer has been panned more because of his unconventional theories about the UFO phenomenon itself rather than his political efforts. Although Greer is quite repetitive, my hope is that he makes some progress up on the Hill. Edgar Mitchell has been everyone's golden boy for a long time and having this man on our team can do nothing but good in my opinion. Astronauts really are our salvation here. They bring that certain seriousness to ufology's image that it so richly needs.

Hi, everybody,

Wow. There's somebody out there who actually defends Mack's book? I guess it takes all kinds. I urge the rest of you to read my essay on it in the March/April 1994 issue of IUR. Essentially, in addition to all sorts of other errors logical and methodological, Mack has forcefit the contactee message onto the abduction experience. He does the same with his fashionable postmodern, anti-Western political/ideological views. If Charles F. Quinn, Jr., thinks Mack's is a good book on the abduction phenomenon, I'd hate to think what he judges a bad one. The mind boggles.

Cheers,

Jerry Clark

NIDS refutes Dulce Myth

Fwd Date: Wed, 07 Jan 1998 21:03:56 -0500
Subject: NIDS refutes Dulce Myth

After so many reports of a "cooperative" facility under the Archuleta mesa, it appears that NIDS actually looked into matter.

from NIDS site source:
<http://www.accessnv.com/nids/redding.shtml>

Report on the Redding War Ranch at Mt. Archuleta, New Mexico - Colorado Border

It has been reported in the media and on the internet that the Redding War Ranch, located at 37=B0 2.91=92 north latitude and 107=B0 1.44=92 west longitude (GPS) next to Mt. Archuleta (straddling New Mexico - Colorado border), is rumored to be an undercover facility engaged in secret activity connected with Mt. Archuleta. These rumors further state that the ranch has eight armed guard watch towers scattered along the property. In addition, there is an unusual round steel (and air conditioned) building located behind a ranch entrance gate on the opposite side of the property (37=B0 6.02=92 north latitude and 107=B0 2.85=92 west longitude - GPS).

A metal plaque prominently posted on a watch tower door identified the manufacturer as Houston Blow Pipe & Steel Plate Works (P.O. BOX 1692, Houston, TX 77251-1692, phone: 713-675-2273, FAX: 713-675-5038).

Having seen the towers and being interested in their origin and purpose, a simple phone call was made to the phone number above. It was learned during the phone conversation that the President and CEO of the company is Mr. W. A. Redding. Contrary to the myths that have been perpetuated, a simple explanation was provided by Mr. Redding.

1) Mr. Redding stated that the watch towers are actually hunting stands with the brand name "The Ultimate Hunting Stand." The hunting stands on the ranch are weather proof-heavy gauge steel construction (5 feet diameter, 850 pounds est. total weight) equipped with 10 feet high steel angle frame supports, steel ladder or a steel walk-up type stairway with steel pipe hand railing, propane heater and tank, five large one way mirror-pane plate glass (hinged and latched) windows (hunters can see out, but game cannot see inside), swivel chair, and indoor-outdoor carpet on floor and side wall. Further, the stands are used for photographing game and birds, and hunting of game (deer, elk, javelina, moose, sheep and turkeys). According to published literature, the stands have been in production since 1963 and employ 75 years of hunting and 60 years of steel fabrication experience in their design for all-weather hunting.

2) The round steel building is a bunk house for ranch hands designed and manufactured by Mr. Redding=92s Houston steel company. The bunk house design employs the same all-weather heavy gauge steel construction as the hunting stands along with air conditioning and fuel-oil heater. It is not currently being used.

3) The owner of the Redding War Ranch is Mr. Redding himself. He can be contacted at the phone number given above.

4) The Redding War Ranch is used to raise small herds of Beefalo.

PUBLIC REQUESTED TO CALL THESE COMMITTEES Today, 24 December 1997, the following letter was sent to key Chairmen of Congressional Committees by registered mail, return receipt requested.

December 22, 1997

Washington, DC 20515

Dear Senator/Congressman,

For the past seven years, CSETI (The Center for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence) has been collecting scientific evidence on the matter of extraterrestrial intelligence and so-called UFOs.

We have identified a substantial amount of irrefutable evidence as well as the testimony of over 100 military, intelligence agency and civilian government witnesses who have held Top Secret (TS) clearances, many of whom were additionally cleared for access to Sensitive Compartmented Information (SCI). These people have personally witnessed or been involved in covert operations related to this subject or events of an unambiguous extraterrestrial nature (see enclosures).

The implications of this matter transcend the interests of any given branch or agency of the US government, and impact numerous interrelated areas, all of which affect national security, governmental function and finances and government accountability.

In general, the US government and its legal representatives are excluded from briefings and developments impacting this important area -- a situation which we feel is unconstitutional, dangerously avoids Congressional oversight, and which must be corrected as soon as possible.

In meetings which I have had with a sitting CIA Director, members of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Executive Branch and senior military representatives in the Pentagon, I have found that, while there is interest in the subject and general support for a disclosure regarding the existence of extraterrestrial life forms, there is an almost universal absence of information available to these leaders.

The implications of excessive and undue secrecy surrounding this issue should concern every member of Congress who is charged with upholding the integrity of the U.S. Constitution and the rule of law. The subject itself has vast implications for world peace, science and new technologies, the environment, the economy and geo-politics (see enclosed paper "Implications of an Extraterrestrial Disclosure").

CSETI is hereby formally asking your committee to convene open hearings on the subject of extraterrestrial intelligence beginning with the next term of Congress. We are prepared to provide you with a substantial body of detailed briefing materials in addition to those enclosed, as well as the names of bona-fide first hand military and intelligence witnesses who wish to testify under oath before Congress. These heroes of our country are eager to inform the Congress and the American people of what they know first-hand regarding this matter.

We respectfully ask that you reply to this request and answer the following questions:

Is your committee willing to receive a preliminary briefing on this subject?

If not, why?

Is your committee willing to allow open, publicly accessed hearings on this subject?

If not, why?

CSETI and its worldwide network of military witnesses, scientists and researchers are ready to provide you with a full briefing on this subject at your earliest convenience. We feel the American people, and the people of the world, deserve to know the truth of this matter.

We request that our elected representatives assert their constitutional rights on behalf of the American citizen to be provided a full, reasonable disclosure on this matter in the next term of Congress.

Sincerely,

Steven M. Greer M.D. International Director of CSETI

> Mr. President, Honorable Members of the House and Senate:

To the list:

When this letter, soon to be an ad in the Washington Post, was placed on the Anagram Video website, it should not have had and any signatures, <<<since the signatures are mock>>> This has created some confusion. It is being corrected and the website will not show these mock signatures in the future.

The letter/ad is in need of signatures from distinguished citizens, including accomplished researchers in the field of extraterrestrial related phenomena, in a number of areas. It is not a petition. It is a message to the Congress and the President (and the media) that Americans of high accomplishments, rank and station find the government posture does not conform with reality.

In due course the ad will be available in final form with all signatures in place.

Any distinguished citizens (or foreign nationals), including accomplished researchers, who have reviewed this statement and wish to be signatories may accomplish this by doing the following:

- 1) Fax a signed, brief request to be a signatory to the statement on letterhead to:

Paradigm Research Group: 301-564-4066

- 2) Your request will be confirmed via a phone call.

The most appropriate 80 signatures will go into the ad copy. The remaining signatures will be worked up into a press piece and sent out with the press releases and to media inquiries.

One observation: People write books concerning areas they are not credentialed or degreed in all the time.

*Most* journalists have degrees in journalism, not geology, environment, crime, politics and so forth but yet many of the books about such subjects come from journalists who are considered experts even though they don't have a degree in that field.

One of many reasons why they are considered experts is because of the research and intense personal study and so forth put into their book.

Stan Friedmans degree is in nuclear fission not UFOs
Kevin Randles degree is not in UFOs
Jim McDonald's degree was not in UFOs

So the next time you read a newspaper article, you are most likely getting a news story about the environment/politics written by a person who is does not have any kind of educational degree in that field.

While I was personally not enamored with Jacobs' new book, it was not because I considered him unqualified to write it or make judgement calls.

Cheers,
Robert

Barry Greenwood has asked me to forward his response concerning the CSETI letter to the U. S. President and Members of Congress. Barry Greenwood and the Citizens Against UFO Secrecy (CAUS) did not and do not endorse CSETI and the other organizations listed on letter, their actions or this letter. CAUS seldom endorses individuals or organizations.

If CAUS does endorse individuals and organizations, it will be prominently mentioned in its publication "Just Cause" or by an officer of CAUS. The address listed on the CSETI letter is the correct address for CAUS. The telephone number and fax number are not. These telephone numbers do not belong to a CAUS representative or a CAUS member.

Years ago an organization named "Justice for Military Personnel" (JMP) put out a scheme to obtain "amnesty" for active and former military personnel who set aside their military security oaths and testified about UFOs. CAUS was listed as a supporter. The telephone number given in one JMP "news release" was the MUFON HQ telephone number. This was a hoax. CAUS did not support this JMP organization or this concept of "amnesty." MUFON was not connected with this organization or idea.

CAUS does not support CSETI or its "amnesty" program. CSETI's attempt to issue a unilateral declaration voiding security oaths is without legal foundation. It has no standing.

CAUS continues as its name clearly states to oppose UFO secrecy. CAUS has and will fight such UFO secrecy by lawful means. It is the right of free people to dissent from government positions, and attempt to change policies, laws, and regulations. CAUS intends to do all these things in legal manner.

PROJECT 1947 is the computer contact for Barry Greenwood and "Just Cause." Barry can be reached at my E-mail address: jan@cyberzone.net.

This explanation seems totally reasonable and I don't have any reason to "disbelieve" it.

For arguments sake I would like to point out some thoughts:

1) If this was something to do with the alleged Dulce underground facility does anybody in their right mind think their would be some kind of sign saying Welcome to the Underground facility at Dulce:

Our Motto is "Where Aliens, Humans and Cows come together.

Last line was a small attempt at humor, but you get my point.

2) The US government had a nuclear proof underground bunker built at Greenbriar WV which was where Congress would evacuate to in case of nuclear war. There was quite a story about how it was built underneath a "resort hotel", how only the top one or two people knew its real purpose, while the everyday employees thought they were working for some corporation. The corporation had a head office, staff.

The corporation was actually a shell cover for the US Govt.

Big story about this back in Time magazine when the existance of the facility was finally released, how their was a nuclear proof chamber for both houses of Congress to meet in, how if anybody died from Radiation their bodies would be cremated etc etc.

So who actually knows.

- > Having seen the towers and being interested in their origin and purpose, a simple phone call was made to the phone number above.
- > It was learned during the phone conversation that the President and CEO of the company is Mr. W. A. Redding. Contrary to the myths that have been perpetuated, a simple explanation was provided by Mr. Redding.

- > 1) Mr. Redding stated that the watch towers are actually hunting stands with the brand name "The Ultimate Hunting Stand." The hunting stands on the ranch are weather proof-heavy gauge steel construction (5 feet diameter, 850 pounds est. total weight) equipped with 10 feet high steel angle frame supports, steel ladder or a steel walk-up type stairway with steel pipe hand railing, propane heater and tank, five large one way mirror-pane plate glass (hinged and latched) windows (hunters can see out, but game cannot see inside), swivel chair, and indoor-outdoor carpet on floor and side wall. Further, the stands are used for photographing game and birds, and hunting of game (deer, elk, javelina, moose, sheep and turkeys). According to published literature, the stands have been in production since 1963 and employ 75 years of hunting and 60 years of steel fabrication experience in their design for all-weather hunting.

- > 2) The round steel building is a bunk house for ranch hands designed and manufactured by Mr. Redding's Houston steel company. The bunk house design employs the same all-weather heavy gauge steel construction as the hunting stands along with air conditioning and fuel-oil heater. It is not currently being used.

I tend to believe this BUT

IF this was something to deflect attention away from some alleged base, does anybody think the people telling the cover story would say: "Oh yea, we do experiments on cows, humans and aliens and have 14 sublevels just come on by and we will give you the grand tour...."

- > 3) The owner of the Redding War Ranch is Mr. Redding himself. He can be contacted at the phone number given above.

- > 4) The Redding War Ranch is used to raise small herds of Beefalo.

Hmm, I wonder how an Beefalo/Alien hybred burger would taste like..... :) :)

Robert

Subject: Re: UPN 'Abduction' video

Hi All,

Well the promos are out for the UPN special about the videotape of an (alleged) abduction that took place in Canada this past "Thanksgiving." Apparently some 'Canadians' take American culture too seriously and celebrate "Thanksgiving" along with the rest of us yanks. I figure it's an insidious plot by the American Turkey Growers Association to eventually take over the world!

Sorry, I digress.

From the few clips I got to see during the promo I'm -real glad-I didn't participate! Make up your own minds. It's skeded to air on January 20th on the UPN network. (Check your local listings for time)

I plan to pop some of Orville's corn for the occasion. It looks to be interesting though, there are screaming teenage girls, family members running every which way in expected pandemonium and hysteria, plus some guy (Dad?) screaming and waving a shotgun around in a room full of freaked out family members!

(Which isn't a bad idea! At the next family gathering you can claim that you thought your mother-in-law was an alien trying to probe your rectum so you blew the old-biddy's face off with "Betsy" -your trusty old 12 guage- in self defense! <G>)

There's also a quick clip of the kid that made the video showing him sitting in front of the camera tearfully reporting to his future audience, (how thoughtful of him to have considered -us- as his family is being kidnapped by aliens!) that he doesn't think they are going to make it! I tend to agree, only for a different set of reasons.

I'm a huge MST3K fan, this one looks like a good candidate for the boys at DEEP13! It wouldn't be as good as say the, "Creepy Girl" episode but it shows the potential to come darn close. If they ever turn this into a movie they ought to get Earl Holloman to play the father! <G>

After I refused to appear they called me back and they asked if they could use some of my art and a copy of the IF website Homepage, and at $100. bucks a pop I gleefully agreed! So you'll be seeing some of my art in the background. I don't feel 'guilty' about taking $ for my own artwork I just won't allow them to present me as any kind of "alien expert"! I'm a graphic artist by trade and I've been getting paid for that for almost twenty years so I see no conflict of interest.

So much moola-boola being spread about while "good" research guys end up scratching around to support their full time "hobby!" What an injustice.

Gordon Cooper and Dr. Edgar Mitchell.

They offer only personal assessment of what they have learned from associates and some personal events. They have not come forward with tangible documentation. However, it is appropriate to consider that the extent to which they have commented has almost certainly taken into account their National Security Obligations which neither has renounced.

In a message dated 98-01-07 23:46:03 EST, you write:

CAUS's inclusion with the letter as a contact group arose after discussions with Peter Gersten and Larry Bryant. An assumption on my part that these discussions were being carried to Mr. Greenwood and Mr. Aldrich was incorrect and my fault entirely.

Inclusion as a contact for the ad/letter is only a matter of endorsing the content and I have taken care not imply cross-group endorsement. I am a believer that the commonalities between individuals and groups in this process outweigh the differences.

This was an error arising out of a misunderstanding and is being corrected as quickly as possible.

The current project is not related in any way to this earlier project.

None of the projects, including the letter/ad destined for the Wash. Post, which I have discussed publicly as ongoing are unilateral. The Congressional hearing effort seeks a "waiver" of non-disclosure agreements solely for the purpose of the hearings and only pertaining to UFO evidence. The same applies to the matter of amnesty, a view which is shared by many groups and individuals. This is, however, a controversial and important issue. I would welcome the opportunity to debate the merits of this concept with Jan or anyone else who feels strongly on the matter.

I agree completely. It is also the right of all citizens to petition and address their representatives. Because of CAUS' long history in seeking disclosure and its pioneering efforts with the FOIA, it would be appropriate to have its support for the ongoing political projects. Perhaps common ground can be found and I look forward to discussing this possibility with CAUS's executives.

Study: Asteroid Could Flood Coast

.c The Associated Press

By PAUL RECER

WASHINGTON (AP) - If a 3-mile-wide rock from space smashed into the Atlantic Ocean it would drown most of the upper East Coast in the largest tidal wave in recorded history, a study finds.

Astrophysicist Jack Hills of the Los Alamos National Laboratory, heading a team to investigate such things, said Wednesday findings by his group leads to the conclusion that such a disaster from outer space is not far-fetched.

Any 100-year period, a lifetime for many people, has a 2 percent to 3 percent chance that an asteroid would splash into either the Pacific or Atlantic ocean and cause widespread coastal flooding.

An asteroid striking water at thousands of miles an hour could send a 300-foot-tall wall of water racing across the ocean at the speed of a jet plane, Hills said. The wave would stop only after it smashed ashore, and as the water retreated over many square miles, it would scour the land, rip apart buildings, erode vast areas.

The result, Hills said: disaster.

``The damage would be unprecedented in human history,'' said Hills, speaking at the national meeting of the American Astronomical Society. ``It would kill millions of people and cause billions in damage.''

Based on computer simulations of what would ensue if an asteroid smashed into the central Atlantic, Hills said all of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia would be inundated. In New York, Long Island and Manhattan would be swamped.

Florida would sustain little damage. Hills said shallow water on a gently sloping continental shelf would protect the Sunshine State. All except Miami, which lies on a deep bay that would suddenly rise up and wash away the city.

Across the Atlantic, the coasts of France, Portugal and part of Spain would be drowned. England, protected by a shallow waters, would be little affected.

A Pacific Ocean asteroid strike midway between Hawaii and San Francisco would launch an ocean wave that would roll over much of Honolulu and flood the Los Angeles basin, bisecting Santa Catalina Island. Across the Pacific, such a wave would wash away coastal cities and towns in Japan, a country that already has lost thousands of lives to tidal waves, or tsunamis, caused by earthquakes.

Hills estimated on the basis of his studies that an asteroid more than 600 feet in diameter will strike one of the Earth's oceans at least once every 3,000 to 5,000 years. If a person lives for 100 years, then there is about one chance in 50 of being alive when an asteroid tidal wave occurs, he said.

Hills said geologists have found evidence of such occurrences in the past. The impact of an asteroid several miles in diameter is thought to have helped wipe out the dinosaurs 65 million years ago.

In Hawaii, geologists have found ocean coral deposited on a hillside 90,000 years ago by a tsunami that may have been 1,000 feet high.

Hills said that if an asteroid ocean strike were detected, people would have no more than three hours' warning before the mountain of water traveling hundreds of miles an hour rolled over land.

Astronomical satellites possibly could detect an approaching asteroid, said Hills, but current technology could not prevent Earth from being smashed.

Surname: Identity Secret
Age: 29
Occupation: US Naval MP

Day: Monday Month: November
Year: 1997
Time: 1:30 Am

Country: USA
Nearest town: Grand Prairie

Information of surrounding area: In Grand Prairie Texas. Hills and several military compounds. On guard duty during the night shift at G.P. Naval Air Station, No power lines, Convoy.

Event took place for [ ] minutes: 30

Information of the sighting: I along with two Naval Air Station buddies were manning our posts this evening. It was a clear night and almost every star could be seen in the sky. We were enjoying some chit chatting when we heard the distant rumblings of vehicles that were approcaching the S.W. gate.

We immediately manned our positions just in case. It was strange to have anything come down this road especially at 1:00 in the morning. As the noise approcaded a deafening roar, we saw the details of a Caravan coming around the road ahead of us.

We just looked at each other because there was no guest roster in our hands detailing any official visitation.

the Caravan stopped just short of the gate and to military officers approached us from the leading Jeep.

I immediately rang the relay station and the control center.

After talking for a brief 10 seconds with the control officer in the control center, another voice took hold of the mic.

Identifying himself as a Naval Commander which I wrote down but cannot remember, he informed me to open the gates and to ignore the visit.

I then received a call from the relay station where my commander informed me of the same. I will not list his name here for possible repurcussions.

The two men that approached us wore cams with no insignias. Their M16's were not muffed so we knew they had live rounds.

They took the Roster I had filled in with the number of trucks, jeeps, motorcycles and Commander Instructions.

I remember the number of vehicles...12 in all. The convoy consisted of two large 18 wheeled trucks, 4 Large Flatbeds with something tarped on them, 2 Jeeps, a Motorcycle and 3 Troop Transport Trucks.

They looked like army issued but painted black except for the tarps. We are trained to hold some attention to detail. No Identification of any kind were given verbally or on the vehicles.

We were scared at this point. Apparantly, we were not supposed to know about this convoy.

There are at least 4 Large hangers where we house some of the military aircraft that land.

They commandeered two of these hangers as we saw them drive towards them and release the troops that were in the transport trucks.

I must have counted at least 45 to 55 men taking up various points around the hanger.

As we looked through our binoculars, it was clear to me that what they were unloading was nothing I had ever seen before.

My buddies just stood there with there jaws hanging open. It was an egg splt down the middle. Both were caged in what looked to me a metal scaffolding.

Each split of the egg shaped object was on each flatbed. If you put them together...it would look just like an egg. There were no doorways, no landing gear, no lights...no nothing! Just a smooth half egg shaped looking thing.

One very strange thing besides it shape was that it had a mirror reflection that made it look like it was almost transparent until you realized it was mirroring what was around it. Med in lab coats and clean suits began to unload many crates from the 18 wheelers.

I saw no other personel besides what looked to be lab coated technicians, and the clean suited men.

All three of us were called at home later that evening by our commander who informed us that we were relieved of duty beginning the next day and that anything we saw would be denied by him and any other military personel. I was really ticked off..this was my livelihood yanked from me.

I called my buddies to confirm that they received the same message. I wrote various letters to the Naval Air Station and my commander because I thought I knew him personally...hell he's been to my house!

I keep getting the run-around and now the tell me that there is ni commander with that name at the facility.

I have made it my goal to continue this research until I get to the bottom of it. You don't know my name now, but you will hear it soon. I have managed to acquire many documents concerning this convoy that "never happened" and plan on going public with it in the near future.

I just want everyone to know my name when I do to keep them from doing anything to me or my family.

There exists a video of the events mentioned due to the fact that all exits and entrances to the bases are monitored.

Hi John,

Just so you Americans know. Canadians do celebrate Thanksgiving each year but at the more civilized time of mid October. That way we can replenish our coffers for the Christmas onslaught, giving us an extra month to get ready. Also I'm am under the impression that that the "turkeys" themselves took over the world a long time ago and are not indigenous to the United States. :-)

Terry, Dave allows for that possibility in his book. I couldn't summarize everything, but probably should have mentioned this -- that the greys (all three varieties of them) apparently need some kind of vitality that they feel we can provide.

As for Dave assuming that the aliens practice our own conception of genetics...I know what you mean, and that kind of anthropomorphic thinking gets truly ludicrous in a UFO context. (Worse example: Skeptics who just know UFOs can't be alien because, damn it, aliens just wouldn't behave like that!)

But Dave's not guilty of it. For better or worse, he says he has his information directly from the horse's mouth, or, anyway, at least the pony's mouth -- he says the hybrids have been telling abductees the purpose of the project. He's just passing on what they've said.

Mr. Bassett if you had ended it there this would be fine.
However, apparently, your clarifications now needs some clarifications.

CAUS and Greenwood disavow your letter.

Your assumption based on your conversations is an interesting excuse. However, the contact telephone and fax numbers belonging to someone not on the CAUS' list and not a CAUS representative and, indeed, belong to a person who is antagonistic toward Greenwood and CAUS. Seems this requires some explanation, since you seem to want to explain yourself. It would seem that this is not based on assumption or an act of omission, but an act of commission.

Dr. Greer's unilateral declaration is clearly documented in the archives of this list. CAUS disavows such actions and ideas. If Dr. Greer has changed his position, I am sure that Mr. Bassett and Greer's supporters will let us know. See for example:

<http://www.ufomind.com/ufo/updates/1997/jan/m01-016.shtml>

CAUS clearly states it does not support this action.

There are vast differences in approach here, and quite frankly, integrity problems to be resolved before that happens. These facts remain:

1. CAUS does not support this letter.
2. CAUS does not support or endorse CSETI or other organizations listed therein.
3. CAUS does not support Greer's unilateral declaration voiding security oaths.

Further:

The CAUS reply was coordinated with Peter Gersten before I sent it to UFO Updates.

Dave has talked to more than 100 abductees. That's what he says in The Threat. When he wrote Secret Life, he'd talked to 60 or so, if memory serves.

Mack's book, in my view, is the worst ever published on UFOs, if you match the credentials of the writer with what he produced.
It's naive and credulous. His procedure was anything but scientific -- essentially he believes what the abductees tell him, without examining in detail the possibility of fantasy, or hypnotic confabulation. That laid him wide open for the scam Donna Bassett pulled, when she pretended to have seen Kennedy and Khrushchev on a UFO at the time of the Cuban Missile Crisis. Mack didn't treat her claim with any skepticism. He didn't write about it in his book, but he apparently believed what she was saying, to judge from her comments, and from an extract from a tape of her hypnosis session.

Dave's procedure appears to be quite careful and scientific, whatever his credentials.

Greg,

Is the Kevin Randle Book that you mention "Faces of the Visitors"
by Kevin Randle and Russ Estes ?? <Grin> (Blatant Plug)

If so, the very reason that 'Faces of the Visitors' was produced is the fact that most of the attention given to Alien Abduction is directed at the Classic Gray Alien. From the reports given by over 150 Abductees, Contactees, and Observers, the classic Gray seem to be the vocal minority. Kudos on a fine review.

LOL! Indeed!

Well, I have done a great deal of hunting from stands and blinds and can tell you that any stand built as described would frighten the hell out of most wild game. Of course, many hunting parties concentrated more on the "party" than the "hunt". :) Anyway, I decided to do a Metacrawler search on NIDS' information relayed by Jared:

and found "The Ultimate Stand" at:

<http://www.busdir.com/wedge/index.html>

but it is nothing like that described in the NIDS report. There was no listing on "The Ultimate Hunting Stand". Needless to say, I'm a bit skeptical about the explanation; although, it is likely true. Not everything is on the web . . . yet.

<snip>

Greg, I'd say that you did a wonderful job.

Does Dave ever discuss the biology of this hybridization? For, in order to cross a non-terrestrial being directly with a human, some very interesting DNA manipulation would have to be done. In fact, for this to work at all, the alien biology would have to be so close to ours that there must be a recent common ancestor... possibly an early group of abductees. It is certainly difficult, given the thousands of reproductive methods available right here on earth, to imagine that a race of aliens just happen to have the correct plumbing with which to interface with humans. I tend to dismiss the entire idea for several reasons but anything is possible and it leads to some interesting speculation.

Whichever alien types are 'in charge', apparently do not have the capability of simply coming here and taking over. They have to resort to convoluted methods of interbreeding, the purpose of which is unclear at best, given that interbreeding an alien with a human (I still have a very hard time with this one) will produce an entity that is as much human as alien, so 'they' are as likely to be co-opted as we are. Especially if the aliens have the emotions described.

Apparently they feel the necessity of keeping their presence a secret until they are ready to do whatever they want to do. Considering our propensity for violence on a worldwide scale, they may remain secluded for the simple reason that they are afraid to make themselves known. I would not think this to be an entirely unwarranted fear at all. There is so much talk about aliens attempting to subjugate the human race that odds are pretty good they would be shot on sight if they attempted overt contact. All of the abduction reports are pretty unpleasant and I suppose that UPN 'abduction' video will fuel the fires even more.

If they were really here and had an agenda, and (presumably) telepathic powers, one would expect them to have the ability to use some of these powers to promote that agenda. But the signals that the majority of the population see are mixed (Close Encounters/Independence Day). How can we ever expect any rational extraterrestrial race to contact us at this rate? If they ARE here, they might be trying to contact us the only way they can...by attempting to create a race of beings that we will have to accept because we will not be able to tell the difference. I do not subscribe to this idea either. I think we should try to figure out IF they are here before we start speculating about WHY they are here and go from there.

Personally, I think if Dave has access to a sufficient number of abductees to develop a thesis, he should theoretically be able to ask the 'right' questions to determine who is selected for abduction, and when, where and why. If there is even a remote possibility of any substance to the abduction theory as proposed in 'Secret Life' and 'The Threat' (or any others involving actual contact), then the test would seem to be whether or not we could obtain enough information to select our own candidate for abduction.

Why kidnap humans if there are sufficient volunteers? I would guess that there ARE sufficient volunteers. An alien entity (again, with telepathic powers), cannot fail to realize that there are thousands, if not millions of people who would gladly endure an abduction for the chance of actually communicating with him...or her...or it. I would suggest that a valid test of an abduction story would be that the abductee is able to bring back sufficient information to allow the next group of abductees to meet at a prearranged site, with witnesses present, for their abduction.

This should work no matter what the alien agenda might be, with one or two possible exceptions. If alien cultures were using the earth as some sort of amusement park or brothel, they might be hesitant to do this in the open. Or they might be violating some galactic rule. Even so, the thought of willing volunteers might stimulate them. Whatever they are doing (if they exist), would be much easier with our help than without it, and some of the population would help no matter what.

99% of all contact stories must be fabrications whether intentional or unintentional and stories developed under hypnosis are suspect in any case. Even so, if just one person established a meaningful dialog, they would be able to demonstrate it to the rest of us by arranging a physical contact. If anyone is in a position to do that, they should. I would be happy to be a contactee and I won't shoot.

Aloha
Tom Burnett

Subject: Sighting - Puerto Vallarta, Mexico

Hi list,

This is a forwarded sighting. Anyone else who has seen this?

I would like to report a personal sighting which occurred on Jan 5 at 3:30 am on the beach at Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. I am an airline pilot with over 30 years flying experience, including 24 years as a fighter pilot in the USAF and Air National Guard. While standing on the beach and looking at the stars with another airline pilot, I observed a reddish colored light which I initially thought was a meteorite, move rapidly from east to west nearly directly overhead. As I pointed out the light to my companion, the object suddenly changed directions by about 135 degrees of turn and very sharply. The movement defied any laws of flight and physics that I am aware of. The light made another rapid change of course back to a westerly heading, then disappeared out of sight. I was so startled that I immediately confirmed with my companion what I had just seen. I have never seen any flying object perform this type of maneuvering before.

Photos Support Theory of New Planet

.c The Associated Press

By PAUL RECER

WASHINGTON (AP) - A bulging warp spotted in photos of a star called Beta Pictoris may be the gravitational wake of a large planet plowing through the star's dusty halo, astronomers say.

The pictures boost the theory that one or more planets have formed about Beta Pictoris, a young, bright star 63 light-years from the sun, Sally Heap, a NASA astronomer, said Thursday.

The pictures, taken by a new camera on the Hubble Space Telescope, focus on the disk or halo of dust and gas that rotates around the star. Instead of having a smooth flow, the disk has a large bulge in one quadrant.

Heap said the bulge could only be shaped by the orbital path of a large planet, perhaps one many times larger than Jupiter, the largest planet orbiting the sun.

``We can't see it (the planet), but we can see the effects of its gravitational pull,'' Heap said at a news conference by the American Astronomical Society.

Radio astronomy studies have suggested the presence of planets around more than a dozen other stars, but this is the strongest evidence yet in visible light of a possible planet. It adds to an earlier study that suggested planets were forming about Beta Pictoris.

To make a photo search for a planet, astronomers had to block the light from the very center of Beta Pictoris. This allowed the Hubble to photograph the star's disk.

Heap said the picture clearly shows that one side of the disk swirls outward in a bulge ``that could only be formed by a planet.''

Beta Pictoris has long fascinated astronomers because it is about eight times brighter than the sun, apparently very young and relatively close to the solar system.

Heap said the star is 20 million to 100 million years, just a fraction of the sun's 4.5 billion to 5 billion years.

But despite the young age, said Heap, the star apparently already has planets forming. This suggests, she said, that planets form very early in the life of a solar system.

``When we study Beta Pictoris, it tells us things about how solar systems, such as ours, formed,'' she said.

The case for a planet about the star is strengthened by a study that found the dust in the Beta Pictoris disk is of the same composition as the dust found in comets in the solar system.

Sergio Fajardo-Acosta of the University of Denver said the dust suggests that Beta Pictoris has a dense population of comets, just as the solar system is thought to have had early in its formation.

One major difference between the sun and Beta Pictoris, however, is life expectancy.

Heap said that Beta Pictoris will probably burn out after about a billion years, far sooner than the sun's expected life of about 10 billion years. This means that even if planets do form about the star, it is unlikely they ever will develop the complex life forms of an Earth-like planet, the astronomers said.

Although there are many cases that report single contacts (Betty & Barney Hill, Villas-Boas etc) a vast majority involve reports of a lifetime of contact that begins in very early childhood and continues throughout the lifetime of the experiencer.

There are also many reports that whole families are involved which indicates that they (the aliens) -may be- following certain bloodlines! Specific genetic lineages. It would explain why so very few are abducted in isolated one-off experiences that are never repeated.

IF, that's the case then they already have everyone they want. People outside of their "study" would simply be ignored or used as a 'control group' at best. It might be worthwhile to assemble a large group of abductees somewhere with the express purpose of initiating a contact but I don't think you can just tempt them with "fresh meat!" Wrong genes man! <G>

If they respond and come for you don't worry about being able to shoot or not. Even if you wanted to I don't think you could find the trigger much less pull it. You'll be far too preoccupied with bladder and sphincter control issues! <EG>

I saw the promo, and am pretty sure I recognized one of the kids in it as Canadian actor Kristian Ayre. Is this supposed to be the actual video of the abduction, or a re-creation using actors?

Don, John,

The turkeys may not be indigenous to the US, but perhaps to North America. During the period when the Pilgrim Fathers lived in Leiden, around 3 km from where I live, they celebrated the herring and white bread parties that were being held here as celebration of the end of the Spanish siege. These parties are still being held four centuries later at the even more civilized time of October 3.

After the Pilgrim Fathers lived through their first few winters on the American mainland, Thanksgiving was installed, modelled after the herring and whitebread parties. By lack of herring they used turkey. So over there with you turkeys rule, here herring is king. I can see a herring outlet from here just across the street.

Oh, the relevance to Ufology? To avoid a red herring, do some cold turkey research.

The John Ford Affair - UK UFO Magazine

Subject: The John Ford Affair - UK UFO Magazine

There's been some reference here regarding the incarceration of LIUFON's John Ford. While browsing Graham Birdsall's UK UFO Magazine at:

<http://www.ufomag.co.uk/>

I came across the following.

ebk

THE JOHN FORD AFFAIR

As you read this, New York UFO activist John Ford is languishing in jail awaiting trial for conspiracy. The circumstances of his arrest and past involvement with an alleged UFO crash-retrieval incident at Moriches Bay, Long Island, are profoundly disturbing.

BACKGROUND

John Ford founded the Long Island UFO Network in 1985. He investigated UFO sightings and alleged abductions; held public meetings and sponsored conferences; leafleted and organised demonstrations. He also produced the Long Island UFO Newsletter, which was regularly received and enjoyed by enthusiasts around the globe.

It was in that newsletter that he first wrote of an extraordinary incident which alleged that a UFO had been shot down in 1989 by American military forces over Moriches Bay in Long Island.

He later claimed to have uncovered details of a similar crash in 1992 in South Haven Park and when an unidentified object reportedly came to grief in the Pine Barrens region of Long Island three years later, he insisted that fires in the region had been deliberately lit to act as a diversion.

Despite consistent denials by the authorities that there was anything untoward in any of these incidents, John persisted in his claims, insisting that his sources were real and their stories sincere.

He spoke of having gleaned his information from officials within the New York City Police and Fire Departments; of members of the public who claimed to have seen a fireball descend into South Haven Park.

John Ford simply wouldn't take no for an answer and became a genuine thorn in the side of the authorities. He repeated his allegations through public meetings and demonstrations held outside police headquarters.

THE ARREST

On 12 June 1996, John Ford was arrested in what Police later described as a classic 'sting' operation. This followed the use of telephone taps and a paid police informant who was 'wired' to monitor and record conversations.

Almost a year earlier, Ford had confided to close friends and associates that he was convinced he was the victim of a deliberate plot to harass him. He went so far as to claim that the plot might entail his penultimate murder.

Shortly after his arrest, Suffolk District Attorney James Catterson, told journalists gathered for the press briefing that Ford had been charged with conspiracy to murder and possession of radium without a license.

The intended murder victim was alleged to be none other than John Powell, leader of the Suffolk County Republican Party. The means by which Ford intended to carry out the act? By placing radioactive radium in Powell's toothpaste...

District Attorney Catterson held two press conferences and compared the significance of Ford's arrest to that of the infamous Unabomber. Other charges made at the time against Ford were subsequently dropped, but the conspiracy to murder charge was deemed serious enough for the Judge in the case to deem that Ford's bail would be set at half-a-million dollars. Needless to say, neither he nor his friends could raise such an amount and Ford remains incarcerated in jail awaiting trial.

Surprisingly to some, he has issued no statement other than to plead "not guilty" when the charges were first put to him.

Towards the end of last year, several concerned parties invoked greater public awareness of Ford's plight by placing supportive articles in prestigious UFO publications such as America's MUFON (Mutual UFO Network) Journal (November 1996 issue) and the Internet. They formed the aptly named John Ford Defence Committee and began a fund raising campaign to help with his legal defence. They also publicly appealed for an expert psychiatrist, professional audiotape analyst and Long Island-based private investigator to volunteer their efforts.

Those on the Committee are convinced of Ford's innocence and cite numerous incidents and strange occurrences which led them to that conclusion.

According to Committee Member Elaine Douglas, none of the media mentioned claims of harassment by Ford and other LIUFON members at the time of his arrest, nor she says, a higher than average rate of auto-accidents experienced by Ford and his colleagues. Members had their vehicles vandalised and one in particular, Joe Mazzuchelli, is said to have been dragged out of his vehicle the previous winter and physically beaten by four men who told him to "stay out of our business". Mazzuchelli was arrested with John Ford on 12 June.

WHAT DID JOHN FORD UNCOVER?

Ford, like many UFO researchers the world over, could only have dreamed of the possibility that he might one day stumble across a major UFO incident on his 'patch', at which he could assume the role of leading investigator. The 1989 Moriches Bay incident appeared to have afforded him such an opportunity.

His investigation of that particular affair contained a suggestion that the technology used to bring down the purported alien spacecraft originated at Brookhaven National Laboratory, based on Long Island.

Elaine Douglas avoids the re-telling of what Ford uncovered about the three incidents in her campaign literature, preferring instead to concentrate on the man, and what she perceives to be a case of injustice.

She does include a curious coincidence about Moriches Bay, which may or may not offer food for thought. It was here that Ford alleged a UFO had been brought down in 1989, but it is also the spot where TWA Flight 800 mysteriously crashed in August last year.

The cause of that disaster has thus far eluded Federal Law enforcement and aviation investigators, despite twenty eye-witness accounts from people who claim to have seen an unaccountable light streaking towards the 747 aircraft moments before it exploded.

Ford's knowledge of the legal system, put to such good effect in his legitimate street demonstrations, stemmed from a career as a court official working at the Suffolk County Court. Those who knew him are adamant he was not capable of conspiring to murder anyone - it simply wasn't in his character.

"You can't believe how many people have called me to say they can't envision John Ford killing anyone, or even conceiving the intention," said his attorney John Rouse.

He scoffs at the suggestion that Ford could covertly enter the Powell household of four people, select the particular toothpaste used by the man of the house and implant radium in order to kill him.

Elaine Douglas points out that in the 1920's, radium-dial painters used to lick their brushes out of habit and it took 40 years before anyone contracted cancer.

She asked: "Was Ford going to break in and put radium in Powell's toothpaste every week for 40 years until he got cancer?"

The prosecution's arguments are further strained she argues by their contention that the illegal radium was kept hidden by Ford in the back of his pick-up truck, which was always parked at the front of his house.

District Attorney Catterson labelled Ford a "mastermind" at the press briefings, at which he raised further serious charges where no indictments were subsequently returned.

"This," said John Rouse, "is called poisoning the jury pool."

The police arrested Ford immediately following a conversation that took place between their informant, Ford and Mazzuchelli. The informant was 'wired' and, it's claimed, recorded a discussion in which Ford and Mazzuchelli both spoke about doing away with Powell and another local politician through the use of radium in toothpaste. A copy of the tape was eventually handed over to Ford's attorney and according to LIUFON's Preston Nichols "is unintelligible". Nichols said, "All I can clearly hear on that tape is the informant talking and John laughing, like whatever they're talking about is a big joke."

Attorney Rouse is hoping to get the tape enhanced, but admits the plight of both men is serious. If found guilty, either could be jailed for between 25 and 75 years in an upstate New York prison.

Elaine Douglas has had run-ins with the Suffolk County Police before. In April 1993 she wrote to them complaining of police violation of LIUFON member's civil rights.

Apparently they had been prevented from leafleting near South Haven Park by the police who told them they must leave the area. The house to house leafleting had been organised to seek out potential witnesses in what was described by Douglas as a "witness-constitutionally protected activity".

The John Ford Defence Committee's support for Ford "...is based on our conviction that he did not, would not, and could not conspire to murder anyone," said Elaine Douglas. "On this point our support is complete and total," she added.

What though of Ford's claims that a low intense military conflict exists between the United States and aliens? Is that possible? "Yes, it is," according to Douglas.

"I speak only for myself and not for other members of the Defence Committee," she said. "I always found John's allegations hard to believe but impossible to dismiss because he had evidence what he claimed was perfectly possible.

"Just because John's allegations 'fit' doesn't make them true, but the fact is John had evidence. He claimed three events on Long Island - even if he was wrong on two of them, if he was right on only one, John had a tiger by the tail. If so, it's no surprise somebody would try to destroy John Ford."

"He is the first UFO investigator to be seriously persecuted by the authorities. Shall we sit idly by while our colleague's life is destroyed? If John Ford is silenced, who is next?"

AN INDEPENDENT VIEWPOINT

We invited New York resident Alan Raven to offer his opinions about the affair and he wrote the following:

I did attend a one-day presentation in the summer of 1994 given by the Long Island group about the 1992 (South Haven Park) incident.

As I expected, it was overly long at nine hours and was ragged, rambling and generally unprofessional. However, the group had done a tremendous amount of work, beginning on the evening of the incident.

At the time of the presentation the investigation was still on-going, and involved mapping, interviews, collection of what might have been bits of wreckage, on-ground searches, surveys, and even a couple of aerial searches.

The group claimed there was a collision of sorts at 90,000ft. At least two vehicles came to earth and wreckage was spread over a wide area.

One object crashed near the South Shore in South Haven Park (which in reality is a pine forest) after passing low over a main highway (Sunrise Highway) and was seen close-up by several motorists.

The object (described as a rod) passed out of sight. Shortly afterwards there was an explosion followed immediately by a large fire that lit up the night sky.

A second object came to earth in the grounds of Brookhaven National Laboratory, a few miles to the north of the South Haven Park site. After being grounded for several hours the object exploded as it tried to take off.

The Long Island group obtained videotape from a source which they refused to name. The first video was taken at the South Haven Park by (they claimed) a fireman who was one of the first on the scene. These firemen arrived before government forces came and the video was of course confiscated.

The group's copy came (they say) from a government source. The video, which is of very poor quality and taken at night, shows figures being moved and laid out. It also purports to show (in part close-up) an insectoid figure.

The second video clip, from the same source, shows an explosion of some sort that appears to be associated with a building, or object, or craft. The group claimed it was a disc or lifeboat type of craft that came down in the grounds of Brookhaven.

I have seen both video clips several times. They were interesting but unfortunately not definitive, even after enhancement.

After sitting through the presentation I came away having no doubt that something very important did happen that night, and that the government came down with an iron-fist within one hour of the event. There was in addition, a great deal of trace evidence spread over large areas.

CONSPIRACY? WHAT CONSPIRACY?

All those closest to John Ford have demonstrated beyond any reasonable doubt that his track record as a UFO 'activist' is probably second to none.

'He investigated UFO sightings and alleged abductions; held public meetings and sponsored conferences; leafleted and organised demonstrations. He also produced the Long Island UFO Newsletter, which was regularly received and enjoyed by enthusiasts around the globe.'

Some find it rather odd therefore, that a man who argued so vociferously to make his point, who proclaimed he was being harassed by the authorities, should now utter nothing more than two words following his arrest. Other than "not guilty" he has issued no statement which could have been used by the Defence Committee to bolster their campaign.

Of course Ford might well be acting on instructions issued by his defence attorney to 'say nothing until the trial' - a perfectly reasonable and common practise.

Elaine Douglas raises claims of harassment, beatings, burglaries, auto accidents and vandalism, but where is the corroboration? Were reports filed to the police in all these instances?

How much radium did the police find? High quantities might just take slightly less than 40 years to have lethal effects.

Were the police acting unconstitutionally in preventing leafleting campaigns? Some say not - especially if a neighbourhood had signs that prohibited such activity. If a resident complained to the police they would be duty bound to act.

Until the trial takes place, one can only speculate as to what might emerge in terms of evidence presented by both defence and prosecution attorneys which will hopefully answer these and many other questions.

If allegations of a conspiracy to discredit John Ford have any foundation at all, it must mean that what he and other colleagues stumbled across as UFO researchers was of such tremendous significance that the authorities had to shut them up.

So what exactly did happen? The Unopened Files re-traced the events as reported by Ford and his colleagues several years ago. Few listened to him at the time, but now you have an opportunity to make a balanced judgement for yourselves...

I hadn't seen the post but I have seen the object, or one very similar. It's more of a light red color. It transits Hawaii on occasion, coming from the south of the Big Island on a south-to-north course, turns right 90=B0 and departs eastbound. It covers about 60 degrees of arc in five or 6 seconds and another 80 degrees after the turn in about 7 seconds. I don't know where Puerto Vallarta is, but I am at about 20=B0 north latitude so if the object continues on a great circle route it would end up around Guadalajara. I have always assumed that it was some US military craft verifying it's navigation. I can tell you that it moves right along.

Frances Barwood Announcement

Subject: Frances Barwood Announcement

***FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE ***

January 1, 1998 -- Washington, DC -- Former Phoenix City Councilwoman Frances Emma Barwood will hold a press conference from noon to 1 p.m. on January 13, 1998 at the Hyatt Regency Phoenix, 122 North 2nd Street, Phoenix, AZ.

At this time Ms. Barwood will formally announce her intentions to seek the office of Secretary of State of Arizona. Supporters from throughout Arizona and the United States will be in attendance.

Ms. Barwood, who is well known for her stance on constitutional matters, states' rights and open truthful government, will elaborate on her intentions to make a campaign issue of the substantive evidence for the possible intelligent extraterrestrial presence with state and national airspace as well as the failure of the federal government to respect public demands for a proper response. It is the first time a viable candidate for high office, state or national, has formally raised this issue within a campaign.

Ms. Barwood's attention to the UFO issue and the government's posture began with the extraordinary sightings of objects and lights above Phoenix in and around March 13 of last year. The failure of Arizona based federal military facilities to adequately respond to citizen queries led her to raise the matter in City Council session. While the events of March 13 were already receiving national attention, the mere action of calling for a proper investigation resulted in a firestorm of personal attacks. During this same period a recall effort which had been pending moved to a vote. This effort failed when Ms. Barwood won the recall election by a margin of two to one.

During the intervening months Councilwoman Barwood took the time to speak with researchers and witnesses and familiarize herself with the most recent published works on the subject of unidentified sightings and other possible extraterrestrial related phenomena. It became clear to her that this is an issue of state and national significance which cannot in good conscience be ignored by a responsible candidate for high office.

At the January 13 press conference Ms. Barwood will also introduce co-managers for her campaign: one who will focus on the relevant state issues, the other who will assist her in bringing the UFO issue to the citizens of Arizona in a professional, intelligent fashion.

Dual Spheres

From: taranr@erols.com, usenet
Subject: Dual Spheres
To: alt.alien.visitors

On the morning of April 17th 1952, numerous "red spheres" were seen flitting through the skies of the US capital, Washington DC. Radar Screens showed numerous objects detected on radar that seemed to disappear at will. From 12:40 AM until just before dawn, these objects would appear to radio engineer E. Chambers as "headlights in the fog" as he would later describe them.

This case involves multiple witness and multiple radar detection of these strange objects that by July of that year, would be national headlines as these objects would be again seen in Washington DC. Dismissed as "temperature inversions" detected on radar, these objects had been tracked, ranging in speeds from 100 to over 8,000 miles per hour. Radar detection was made of these objects from Andrews Air Force Base, Bolling Air Force Base, and Washington National Air Port.

Long dismissed as lens flare, a photo of approximately 11 objects hovering over the nation's capital, was taken, I believe, during the April event. Quite conspicuously, these objects were in a mirroring formation of street lights in front of the capital building, which was assumed to be the cause of these reflections on the lens. But, is it a coincidence that this picture was taken on this night? Was the photographer just taking a photo of the capital building, or of these objects that are seen in the sky around the dome of the capital?

I recently saw an enlargement of this photo that has recently been published, and what caught my eye was the fact that each of these objects appeared to look like dual spheres of light, or like "headlights" as E. Chambers had described them later that day. In fact, these "headlights" have been commonly described as being seen on a triangular craft that Dr. Bruce Cornet a geologist and UFO researcher refers to as the "Manta Ray".

Even more strange, is the fact that these dual spheres of light have been photographed in Pine Bush NY, Hessdalen Noraway, and Moljebka Russia, which are all UFO hot-spots. Some people such as author Paul Devereux, claim that these lights are only a consequence of tectonic stress and are really geophysical in nature. Paul Devereux shows photos of these dual spheres in not one, but two articles he had written in 1997 for the Fortean times. One of these photos was taken in Hessdalen, the other in Ireland, where numerous triangular craft have been reported. [See the April 1997 issue and the November 1997 issue of the Fortean Times magazine]

Would natural phenomena result in dual spheres of approximately the same size flying equidistantly for extended periods of time? These objects sometimes are seen with additional lights such as a red light that sometimes is seen blinking. Strangely, this configuration is similar to lights that are FAA required of aircraft of that size. Is this natural phenomena, or actually unknown objects attempting to mimic modern aircraft. Col. Wendall

Stevens (ret.) says that in the 1952 case in Washington DC., fighter jets were scrambled, and that one of the objects did a corkscrew maneuver around one of the jets and then few off at an incredible rate of speed. Natural phenomena? Not very likely.

That's the book. Lots of cases briefly but sympathetically reviewed, with reliability ratings. Roswell gets a 9 (out of 10), many famous abduction cases rank far lower.

Yes, the intention is very clear. A question, though -- how carefully were the 150 people interviewed? What's the reliability rating for each of them? If you include only those you'd rate as highly reliable, would the variety of alien types look any different?

Finally, what's the point of referring to these 150 undifferentiated reports? (I'm referring to something in the text which -- if I remember correctly -- states that 150 people were actually talked to, quite apart from the many cases catalogued in the book.) If we're interested to know what UFOs look like, obviously we don't look at cases where we don't believe the witness, or when the witness pretty clearly saw something known. Sure, you can find 150 (or 1500 or probably 15,000) people who say they've seen all variety of aliens, but how believable are most of them?

New Evidence That Mars Face Is Artificial

RE: Mars Face
ORIGINAL FULL ARTICLE: Scripps-Howard, 1/8

The "Face on Mars" is not an optical illusion, reported Dr. Tom Van Flandern, at the 191st national meeting of the American Astronomical Society (AAS) on Wednesday.

Van Flandern, who holds a doctorate in astronomy from Yale University, and founded Meta Research, an organization that researches astronomy theories that conflict with mainstream paradigms, said he reached that conclusion after new studies of the Cydonia region.

Pictures of Mars's surface taken by the Viking spacecraft, in the 70s, spawned the "Face on Mars" debate when sometimes fuzzy, low resolution pictures appeared to show a gigantic human-like face, pyramids and other structures in the desert-like region.

In the decades since, a whole cottage-industry of conspiracy theories, alleged NASA cover-ups and Masonic involvement has grown around the original photos.

Van Flandern said he analyzed data from previous studies showing that the Martian north and south poles occupied a different position in the past. A cataclysmic event, such as a meteor impact, relocated the poles to the current positions. He concluded the Cydonia region was once on the Martian equator, with "The Face" oriented perpendicular to the old equator. He said the chance of that orientation occurring naturally was about a 1% probability, shifting the weight of evidence in favor of the Cydonia complex, as it is sometimes called, being artificial.

Van Flandern predicted the Mars Global Surveyor's high-resolution cameras will finally determine whether "The Face" is natural, as NASA scientists maintain, or constructed by an earlier civilization. He added that people should prepare themselves for the largest cultural shock of modern times.

RE: Asteroid Race
ORIGINAL FULL ARTICLE: U.P.I., 1/8

Los Alamos National Laboratory researchers, led by astrophysicist Jack Hills and his colleague Charles Mader, used computer simulations to predict the results of an asteroid hitting the mid-Atlantic Ocean.

The first simulation, using an asteroid 3-miles across, showed the resulting Tsunamis - a fast moving ocean wave that holds its destructive energy - would swamp the entire upper East Coast of the U.S. to the Appalachian Mountains. All the coastal cities in the region, along thousands of miles of coastline, would be hit by immense walls of water and roiling debris. The coasts of France and Portugal would also be destroyed by waves.

Hills and Mader estimated a strike from such a large asteroid only happens every 10 million years or so.

By comparison, every few thousand years, a small asteroid may hit. Another computer simulation, using a 1,300 feet in diameter asteroid model, ended with the lesser destruction of coastal areas on both sides of the Atlantic, with a Tsunami more than 300 feet high.

RE: Skeptic Put in His Place?
ORIGINAL FULL ARTICLE: Associated Press, 1/8

In 1995, researchers hypothesized a large planet was orbiting the star 51 Pegasi, after analyzing light emanating from the distant sun. The analysis indicated the star was wobbling, allegedly from the gravitational pull of an orbiting planet.

But last February, skeptic David F. Gray, of the University of Western Ontario, disputed the earlier claim, saying 51 Pegasi itself was pulsing, fooling researchers into believing they had found a planet.

Now, Gray has retracted his earlier conclusion, saying new observations of the starlight have failed to find the pulsing trait that led to his debunking of the planet theory.

He added that a planet may still be the best explanation.

Flights of Fancy

by Rebecca Eisenberg

January 8, 1998

Ever since the space shuttle Challenger exploded in 1986, killing seven astronauts, including schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe, NASA has appeared a bit reluctant to take non-astronauts into outer space. But where there is money to be earned, private business will find a way.

Enter an industry even more nascent, and possibly more risky, than e-commerce -- space adventure travel for tourists. For a mere $98,000 (plus $4,000 optional cancellation insurance) Zegrahm Space Voyages in Seattle, Wash., is selling tickets for the first-ever commercially operated tourist trip into outer space, to take off -- and land -- on Saturday December 1, 2001.

The two-and-a-half-hour voyage will carry six passengers at a time in a yet-to-be-built Space Cruiser at speeds of up to 2,300 miles per hour 62 miles above the Earth's surface. Passengers would sustain weightlessness for two minutes, "long enough to take at least one somersault," according to Zegrahm's Chris Ostendorf, 28, who worked in the cruise ship industry for five years before joining the travel company about seven months ago.

Zegrahm's first trip is being coordinated in association with the Stanford University Alumni Association, whose Travel/Study program has in the past visited locations such as Kuwait and Vietnam. Within days of the space trip's announcement, two individuals put down their $5,000 deposits -- one of them a retired Stanford engineering professor, the other a woman who felt like the trip would make a nice present for her husband.

In fact, even though Zegrahm has produced no working vehicle, and the location for the launch itself has not been determined, more than 20 people have plunked down $5,000 deposits for the trip, which includes a week of "astronaut training" prior to the launch, as well as videotapes of the trip and official-looking monogrammed space suits. If the trip doesn't happen within four years of paying the deposit, would-be passengers will receive a refund, minus their $4,000 optional payment insurance and interest.

Ostendorf, who says the space travel industry should mirror the cruise industry, describes his clientele as "people who are interested in unique experiences -- they have been everywhere, and have run out of places to go." Of the 1,200 or so people who signed up for Zegrahm's informational e-mail list, 25 percent are female, and the average age is 45 to 65. Judging from these demographics, it may be physically impossible for many of these people to take the trip -- it's not for the "ordinary person from the street," warns Jurrie VanderWoude, a former Air Force fighter pilot who now works at the Jet Propulsion Labs. "Weightlessness is like seasickness," he laughs. "That is why you train in the device that NASA refers to as the vomit comet."

Nonetheless, VanderWoude would jump at the opportunity to take the trip. "I think it would be fabulous. Simply fabulous. If I had the money."

But VanderWoude warns that space travel may not be as easy to arrange as Zegrahm is hoping. "It is not like just taking a trip to Washington, D.C." Not only will all potential passengers need to be checked out by a medical professional, but the carrier will need to be approved by a whole range of federal agencies and transportation overseeing bodies, such as the Federal Aviation Agency and the National Transportation Safety Board. None of these decisions can be made until there is, at the very least, a ship, and once the vehicle is ready to be inspected, it will most likely be subject to the snail's pace typical of most federal bureaucratic decision-making processes.

"It is not going to happen by 2001, that is for sure," mused Rusty Schweickart, a former NASA astronaut who served as lunar module pilot for Apollo 9 in 1969 -- the third manned flight of the Apollo series and the first manned flight of the lunar module. Schweickart did not want to comment about the potential success of Zegrahm in particular, but he appeared pessimistic about the space travel market's prospects of making a splash in the early part of the 21st century. "Right now there is really nothing to say; there is no tourism in space. It is a fun idea, but it is a long way in the future."

Say 20 years from now, said Schweickart, when "there will be facilities in space, and there will be transportation that is cheap enough that it could be a reasonable business proposition. But at the moment, we are a long way from that. For two and a half minutes, it is not worth it."

Or is it? "There are many experiences that are very short-lived but are nonetheless well worth it," insists Eric, a 34-year-old "information engineer" who runs his own business and lives with his spouse and two children in the Pacific Northwest. Less than three weeks after hearing about Zegrahm's proposed space travel plans, Eric paid his $5,000 deposit and $4,000 payment insurance, even though Zegrahm has presented no finished craft.

"When I first heard about this trip, I was skeptical," he notes. "But after doing more research into Zegrahm, it became clear that they are serious. There is really no reason that this could not happen, and they are not going to go up there half-cocked -- they would not be allowed to."

If Zegrahm manages to pull it off, the company could be hitting on a timely and lucrative concept. According to the Travel Industry Association of America, travel is the third largest retail industry in the United States, with total annual spending of $473 billion. By the year 2000, the association predicts, travel is expected to rise to number one.

Hi Rebecca, hi All,

Just as an aside, most of you are familiar with the reports from abductees about the aliens showing the many abductees apocalyptic visions of earth changes, mass death and destruction.

Well I'm no exception. I never talk about it because it is material that surfaced during hypnosis and I keep -all of that stuff- in a separate "B" folder! The "A" stuff is the bits and pieces which I have remembered consciously all of my life.

What I was shown was a scene out of a sci-fi horror movie. I was led up to a large curved screen. Before me on the screen I could see undulating garbage, bodies, refuse of every kind and here and there were the tops of buildings. The debris was so dense that it formed a solid carpet that you could walk on.

The sky was the wrong color. (green) And suddenly it dawned on me that what I was seeing was a part of the New York skyline. I also realized that the reason that debris was undulating was because there was water underneath it. It was my New York under water!
All I could think or feel was complete horror. It was an emotion that tugged at the pit of my stomach. It came straight from the gut.

When I read this post it just brought it all back to mind. Not that I believe it'll happen or anything I just wanted to share it with you guys. It's not easy living with these images in your head sometimes. They are disturbing.

Peace,

John Velez

Scientist believes Martian 'face' is no accident of nature

WASHINGTON (January 8, 1998 00:07 a.m. EST <http://www.nando.net>)
-- The mysterious "Face on Mars" is not an optical illusion or a natural feature on the Red Planet, a scientist reported Wednesday at a major astronomical conference.

Dr. Tom Van Flandern reached the conclusion after new studies of the Cydonia region, where strange-looking landforms have excited science fiction and life-on-other-worlds buffs for decades.

His report, presented at the 191st national meeting of the American Astronomical Society (AAS), attracted unusual attention because sharp new images of the "Face" may soon be available. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration Global Surveyor spacecraft, now orbiting Mars, is scheduled to begin imaging in 1999.

Global Surveyor's camera is capable of making images with 30 times the resolution, or sharpness, of the Viking cameras. It can distinguish objects as small as 4.6 feet across, and will try to image the "Face."

Van Flandern holds a doctorate in astronomy from Yale University. Until 1991, he was chief of the celestial mechanics branch at the U. S. Naval Observatory, a respected astronomy facility. He then founded Meta Research, an organization based here, that fosters research on topics that conflict with mainstream theories in astronomy.

The "Face on Mars," he explained, certainly fits that bill. Some people claim that images of the Cydonia region, taken in the 1970s from the Viking spacecraft, show a gigantic human face, a pyramid, and other structures left by some ancient extra-terrestrial civilization.

In the eyes of some, the "Face" bears a striking resemblance to the "death masks" that ancient Egyptians used to adorn the sarcophagus of King Tut and other rulers. Indeed, some hint that the "Face" may be part of an immense tomb on the Red Planet.

Believers have come up with all kinds of intricate mathematical relationships between the Face and several associated landforms that supposedly prove the structures are artificial.

Conspiracy theories, charging NASA and the military with a cover-up, also abound.

"The conventional view is that this is all nonsense," says Dr. Michael C. Malin. He is chief investigator for the Mars Global Surveyor Orbiter Camera.

Cydonia, he explained, is a desert-like region that has undergone the same kinds of weathering that carve weird landforms in terrestrial deserts. He regards the features at Cydonia as strictly natural, the result of Martian weathering and erosion.

Van Flandern said his study undermines the main argument against an artificial origin for the "Face:" Its apparently random orientation on the Martian surface.

"No apparent purpose is served by a face monument looking upward toward space if it is not oriented right-side up and in an attention-getting location with respect to the surface of the planet," he said.

On Earth, one such location, visible for great distances from space, might be right on the equator, he indicated.

Van Flandern analyzed data from previous studies showing that the Martian north and south poles occupied a different position in the past. A meteor impact or other cataclysmic event relocated the poles to their current position millions of years ago. He concluded that the "Face" originally was in a much different location.

"It was a great shock to me to discover that the Cydonia area was right on the old Martian equator," he said.

Further analysis showed that the "Face" is oriented perpendicular to that old equator. The bridge of its "nose" is oriented almost exactly north-to-south.

"This has only about a 1 percent probability of occurring by chance," Dr. Van Flandern said. "The weight of existing evidence appears to have shifted in favor of an artificial origin of the Cydonia complex."

Van Flandern predicted that the Mars Global Surveyor's high-resolution cameras will finally determine whether the "Face" is a natural geologic structure, or something constructed by an earlier civilization.

Almost as an afterthought, he observed to a standing-room-only audience of about 400 astronomers, "I suggest that in view of these test results we prepare ourselves for a cultural shock certainly unrivaled in recent times."

Hi Errol, Al, All,

I have had several opportunities to talk with John Ford. I shared a stage with him on two occasions on local programs here in NY. Got to hang out a bit in the green room talking to John while his constant companion Preston Nichols scarfed handfuls of free donuts. (Preston is a -big boy- and doesn't talk much in the presence of food. <G>)

First, John has never been taken very seriously by members of the local UFO community, but I (and others) don't think the guy is capable of concocting or carrying out such a convoluted murder plot.

The worst thing that John could be accused of is 'drumming up business for himself' by publicizing the Moriches Bay crash and the other one that involved Brookhaven National Lab. John's crony Preston Nichols is a guy that has invented and markets an alien detection and deterrent device, his other running partner is Al Bielek who is the guy that claims to be the Philadelphia experiment survivor. Bunch o' wags, but not 'killers' by any stretch of the imagination.

If they had busted John on fraud charges I'd be whistling a different tune, but murder? Nah, I don't think so. This arrest and the wierd story and circumstances surrounding it are the strongest evidence that John has ever had! We'll just have to wait and see what the jury trial develops. Long Island judges aren't real lenient about allowing murder suspects to remain at large while they await trial. John has already done almost two years of jail time without ever having been convicted. That -is an injustice- the guy is supposed to be guaranteed a speedy and fair trial. I don't understand the long delay in giving John his day in court.

Peace ,

John Velez

>say they've seen all variety of aliens, but how believable are >most of them?

>Greg Sandow

That's a very insightful question. Of the more than 150 abductees interviewed, each was a careful interview, searching for evidence, corroboration and fact. If you look at the book carefully, you'll see that we have looked at some of the more famous of the abduction cases, and you'll see that, contrary to what has been stated, 85% of the aliens reported are not the grays. There is a wide variety of alien beings reported.

But 'Faces Of The Visitors' looks beyond that as well. One purpose was to expose the frauds for what they are. It does us no good to see the same faked images reported time and again, and that was the reason for including some cases that are hoaxes. It is time to expose them so that we all can move onto to other arenas where our time and effort can be spent in more productive pursuits.

I believe it was important to include a section on the Contactees because here was a group telling tales very similiar to alien abduction before any abductions had been reported. And we placed some of the abduction tales into the section on contactees because their stories, while more acceptable to researchers today are little more than contactee tales of the 1950s.

But the real point here is that the book was as carefully researched as any of the others. The research protocols were as strict as those employed by other researchers. We were attempting to provide a long history of the reports of alien contact so that the evolution of the alien beings, the garb they wore, and the activities in which they engaged could be seen in the context of that history.

If we are interested in what UFOs look like, we can't exclude reports that we don't like because we believe them to be hoaxes or misidentifications because they are part of the subtext of UFO research. We can, however, make it clear that we don't accept those cases by providing a low reliability number.

Or, we could turn the question around and ask, simply, by what criterion do you accept the reports of alien abduction? Does the witness have to seem sincere? Does the emotion seen during the hypnotic regression session have to seem real? Do we accept only those cases where there is some form of corroboration? What makes the tales investigated by David Jacobs, Budd Hopkins, John Mack, John Carpenter, Edith Fiore, Richard Boylan, Leo Sprinkle, Alvin Lawson, Ray Fowler or James Harder more acceptable than the cases we investigated? And can't the reader, by accepting our reliability numbers answer your question about the variety of aliens? And if the reader doesn't accept our number, but attaches his or her own, and then cross checking them, produce an answer to your question.

And, we can argue that a case you don't find reliable, such as the Billy Meier contacts, are accepted as reliable by many others. Doesn't that become a case of the Meier unbelievable story being less believeable than say, the unbelievable story told by Antonio Villas-Boas or even Betty Hill.

Or, the short answer to your question is that we checked the witness stories carefully, we used other reports that were considered by many to be "true" tales of alien abduction starting with the Hills and including many of what is now the classic cases.

I believe there was film of a similar "Dual sphere" taken over

Hello Stig,

I wouldn't get my hopes up that Van Flandern's conclusions will carry any weight at all within scientific astronomical circles. He has put forth quite a few scientific conclusions within his book that go strongly against "mainstream" astronomical thinking, so that he'll surely receive the standard treatment of attacks on his scientific character through ridicule. His book is Dark Matter, Missing Planets, and New Comets: Paradoxes Resolved, Origins Illuminated.

For example, he has set forth much evidence supporting the idea that there was once a planet orbiting where asteroids predominate now, which exploded; this has been put down on the basis that no known natural mechanism for any such explosion is known. And so the implication that ETs may have done it will receive ridicule.

Yet his book contains many innovative and well argued ideas.

please observe the following rules when posting to the List.

1. Line-length

Please make your lines no more than 70 characters long

-----This line is 70 characters-----

Longer lines are wrapped by various pieces of software along the Net and leave awkward and eye-jarring line lengths.

2. Attribution

When responding to a message from the List, always include the four line 'header' from the body of that message at the start of your message - eg.:

Again - it's at the beginning of the 'body' of the message you are responding to.

3. Quoting

Always quote from the message to which you are responding.

Quotes should come before you key your response.

Start each quoted line with a 'greater-than' sign (>) as the first character. It should look like this:

>Start each quoted line with a 'greater-than' sign (>) as the first character. It should look like this:

Keep quoted material from previous messages to a minimum: Just quote enough text to let people know what you are referring to.

Messages that do not utilize the required quoting protocol or contain excessive quoting will not be posted to UpDates.

The Archive software will automatically italicize these lines. Visit the Archive page and take a look.

Most modern E-Mail software will allow the user to click a 'Reply' button and automatically open a new window, with the message being responded to inserted with universal quote-mark (>) at the beginning of each line.

When 'Reply' is clicked, some E-Mail software will insert a line which states:

5. Don't send 'personal' responses to the list that should be sent directly to the original author. Send a message to the list only if it contains new information that you want everyone to see.

Messages that contain what the List Administrator considers to be personal attacks or 'flames' will not be posted to the List. Those messages will be forwarded to the person they refer to for their information.

6. URLs (Web Site addresses) must include 'http://' and be on one line. The Archive software will make the URL a 'click-able' link to that address in your archived message.

>WASHINGTON (January 8, 1998 00:07 a.m. EST <http://www.nando.net>)
>-- The mysterious "Face on Mars" is not an optical illusion or a >natural feature on the Red Planet, a scientist reported Wednesday >at a major astronomical conference.

>Dr. Tom Van Flandern reached the conclusion after new studies of >the Cydonia region, where strange-looking landforms have excited >science fiction and life-on-other-worlds buffs for decades.

>His report, presented at the 191st national meeting of the >American Astronomical Society (AAS), attracted unusual attention >because sharp new images of the "Face" may soon be available. The >National Aeronautics and Space Administration Global Surveyor >spacecraft, now orbiting Mars, is scheduled to begin imaging in >1999.

>Global Surveyor's camera is capable of making images with 30 >distinguish objects as small as 4.6 feet across, and will try to >image the "Face."

My heart skips a beat with each step closer we come to new photos of Cydonia. I've read the McDaniel Report and studied the Enterprise Mission and other related sites thoroughly ever since my interest was stirred up last year.

I wasn't even ten when Sagan's "The Man on the Moon" article was published in Parade magazine. I've always been fascinated by science and I used to watch PBS all the time with my dad. So Sagan was a sort of "Mr. Rogers" to me (probably should have stuck to Don Herbert, TV's Mr. Wizard). I read his article and believed him when he said that the Face was a natural feature.

As I said, my interest in the subject was rejuvenated. I'm not sure how, but I know that I found myself at Hoagland's site. This has captured my imagination. The McDaniel Report's chapter on the Sagan article was eye-opening for me. Stanley McDaniel does an excellent job at dissecting all of the lies and fallacies used by Sagan and NASA in deflating the artificiality hypothesis.

Now, we are closer than ever. The evidence presented by the independent researchers is comprehensive. It makes a good case for the artificiality hypothesis. I just hope that Mr. Malin doesn't mess with the photos. The transmission of the enhanced Cydonia pictures MUST be live and public.

Personally, there is little doubt that the Cydonia complex was constructed by someone. We need to face this together so that we may move forward.

Good fortune, safe travels

Astronomers Gauge Energy of Stars

.c The Associated Press

By PAUL RECER

WASHINGTON (AP) - Astronomers taking the temperature of the universe say they have sampled heat from virtually every star that has ever shone, a discovery that will help refine theories about the evolution of the universe.

Using an instrument aboard the Cosmic Background Explorer Satellite, astronomers from the Space Telescope Science Institute measured the glow of infrared energy - or heat - in dust particles that were warmed by stars from almost the very beginning of the universe.

This primordial heat gives astronomers an idea of how much energy has been generated by nearly all of the stars formed since the Big Bang, said Michael Hauser, leader of the astronomy team.

Hauser said that starlight from very early in the history of the universe warmed dust particles and that this heat is preserved in sort of a "cosmic safety deposit box" and can be detected by a satellite instrument that was cooled to near absolute zero.

The instrument was so sensitive, he said, that it could detect the heat energy reflected from a white piece of paper illuminated by a 100 watt light bulb 18.5 miles away.

Hauser said the instrument gathered measurements in the "far infrared," a part of the electromagnetic spectrum invisible to the eye.

He said the instrument would detect all heat radiating in this portion of the spectrum and that this would include dust warmed by "virtually all the stars that have existed since the beginning of time."

Missed would be the energy from the very first stars, which glowed in a dust-free universe, and heat emitted in a portion of the infrared not sampled by the instruments. Dust is created as stars burn, turning hydrogen and helium into heavier particles. Theorists believe that star formation could not begin until about 300,000 years after the Big Bang.

Hauser said the study has taken about 23 years, including the time spent designing and building the COBE satellite, collecting data for four years after its 1989 launch, and then analyzing the data. He said the team spent the last two years checking the research for errors.

Other astronomers called the work a remarkable technical achievement and said the findings will shape the thinking of cosmologists who are trying to figure out the evolution of the universe.

"It provides us an extra clue and an extra restraint on the theories of the early universe," said Martin Rees, a cosmologist at the Institute of Astronomy in Cambridge, England. "It gives us more confidence in working out the details."

Rees said that by knowing the amount of energy emitted by stars over time, theorists will be better able to gauge the amount of star formation that has occurred since the Big Bang, the theoretical beginning of the universe.

Eli Dwek, a NASA astronomer at the Goddard Spaceflight Center, said the study was equivalent to sampling part of the light emitted from all light bulbs since the bulb was invented.

``For the first time,'' he said, ``we have detected a significant fraction of all of the starlight that has been emitted from the first.''

Astrophysicists will have to modify some parts of existing theories in order to comply with the new data from the Hauser group, he said.

Hauser said the study shows that about 30 percent of the energy from starlight is present in the far infrared. An additional 20 percent of stellar energy can be seen in visible light. He said at least half of the energy from stars is obscured by dust.

``This implies that one-half to two-thirds of the radiation (from stars) is in shrouded regions,'' said David Spergel, a Princeton astronomer. He said the ``quite compelling'' evidence from the new study opens up new areas of study in stellar evolution.

``Much of star formation history has been hidden from us before now,'' said Spergel.

Steve Maran, a NASA astronomer, said the new temperature measurements will lead to a ``mushrooming'' of star formation theories.

``It's not rewriting the textbooks,'' said Maran, ``but it will help add chapters.''

Hauser said that the work supports the idea that stars, burning hydrogen and helium in their nuclear fusion fires, have consumed about 6 percent of the nuclear fuel available in the universe.

That means that the universe's fusion fuel tank is at the 94 percent mark. Eventually, in perhaps 100 billion years, stars are expected to burn the last of the available hydrogen and helium and the universe will become dark, cold and lifeless.

Well, we must consider others (WS, etal) who say that they believe the greys to be deceptive beings. Plus, there's the possibility that some abductees suffer from the Stockholm Syndrome, making them open to believe whatever they are told by their captors.

I honestly think that Jacobs' theory is the best one of the bunch. As I hinted earlier, in an attempt at humor, I have considered the greys were modifying our race long before it came out in Jacobs' book. It could explain the coexistence of modern man with neanderthal although they are shown recently to be different species. But, I don't see the point. If they keep mixing their genes with ours, we get closer and closer to being them. Heck, why not just sterilize the planet and populate it with greys?

No, I have to believe that intelligence has been pervasive in the galaxy for eons. And that those intelligences would not allow such interference in the development of a planet. That is, unless this planet has been through the cycle of evolution to intelligence and failed. Now there's an interesting thought. If we had our chance and failed, as in Atlantis' self destruction, maybe it's okay to try modifying the species into one with a better chance.

Of course, the Prime Directive was a joke. Capt. Kirk spread *his seed* practically everywhere he went. :-o

Subject: RAF Woodbridge U.K.

I have a story to tell.

27 Dec 1980, I was working the desk at the fuels management branch at Bentwaters. After midnight we went to a one manshop until 0700 hr. Well I was the person on duty at the time and around 0230 I recieved a call from MOCC that there were several emergency vehicles at Woodbridge needing fuel asap. Back then we had to cover both bases and I would close up the shop and I would respond personally.

Well I drove over to Woodbridge and I started to take the road to the back gate which would save some time. About 3 minutes into my driving something in my head said "Do not go this way", well I was 20 yrs old then and I was afraid of the dark and the whole route to Woodbridge back gate is nothing but woods and no street lights and very dark, so I listened to that voice in my head and I turned around and proceded to go to the front gate.

After about 15 minutes I reached my destination which was the military gas pumps and I never saw so many police vehicles and equipment waiting for fuel especially in the early hours of the morning. There were about 12 or 13 vehicles mostly pick ups with light all attached and a few police cars. Oh! And one Lt. Col Holt who was in one hell of a hurry. He bitched at me to "snap it up and get these pumps going". He did'nt want to here it that I was doing my best to find the power switches and again rushed me around, well I did get the power on and the vehicles got there fuel but not one of those cops said a word to me that evening.

I drove back to Bentwaters and I did'nt think anymore about it until rumours started to circulate about UFOs, well I was sure glad I had listened to my consience. Over the next couple of weeks there was an influx of civilians and civilian type a/c landing at both bases so I am convinced that something did occur, what, I can't say but I will tell you this and that those cops were out doing something unusual in the early hours of the morning.

I have another story to tell about losing time that week.
If any one is interested e-mail me.

Jim...

Not to disagree with your statement...a great deal of it is probably true, but...

Tom Van Flandern speaking for the pro-Cydonia movement is a very big plus. You are correct in stating he is going against "mainstream" and in the words of Michael Malin, "conventional" conclusions of the region, but, this does not prove the monuments are natural occurring artifacts.

It is also true Van Flandern's book caused a stir in the astronomy community...along with Louis Frank's research on "small comets" impacting our atmosphere daily (up to 10 million per year). But this is not a negative, it is progress in how we see our universe. This type of research is needed in mainstream science, and it is welcomed by most. The critics will scream the loudest, but the knowledge we gain from these investigations will mold the conventional wisdom of the future.

I don't know if the "Face" is artificial, there is still more to learn. I am happy there are professional astronomers putting their reputations on the line to focus on discovering the truth...they are the true heros of our day.

cheers,

The search for extraterrestrial life becomes earnest as the century ends

NASA wants to compile a catalog of the fingerprints of life

By Alan Boyle MSNBC

WASHINGTON - Looking ahead to the next millennium, NASA's chief on Wednesday emphasized the search for extraterrestrial life as a top goal and took astronomers to task for lacking formal training in biology. As part of the "new unifying approach to biology within the agency," NASA Administrator Dan Goldin said he would set up an electronic Virtual Astrobiology Institute. =BF =BF =BF =BF =BF =BF =BF =BF =BF =

*NASA Home Page

*The Planetary Society

*To follow up on the success of the Mars landers and orbiters, NASA is planning a 2005 mission aimed at returning a sample of Martian rocks and soil to Earth.

MIDWAY INTO his address to the American Astronomical Society on the future strategy for the space agency's involvement in scientific investigation, Goldin asked all those who had formal academic training in biology to raise their hands.

"Is this the group that's going to search for life? I think I counted two or three hands," the former aerospace executive said.

"This is a serious problem," he said. "The leadership of NASA, the leadership of the scientific community, is saying we're going to develop platforms that cost hundreds of billions of dollars, yet we don't have a biologist in the house to help us define what the requirements for the science might be."

Afterward, several astronomers said they didn't take Goldin's comments as a personal rebuke, but as a reflection of changes in the nation's scientific agenda.

"We all have our different disciplines," said Richard Rand of the University of New Mexico's Institute for Astrophysics, whose research focuses on the nature of interstellar matter. "The biologists would probably have the same problem with astronomy."

NASA'S HOLY GRAIL

George Withroe, head of NASA's Sun-Earth Connections program, said the search for life on other heavenly bodies has become a "Holy Grail" and a unifying theme for the space agency's research.

"If we find it, it'll be like the 'Earthrise' picture," Withroe said, referring to the famous Apollo image of Earth floating in space above the moon=92s horizon.

Goldin invoked more recent glories in his call to focus on space biology: The Mars Pathfinder and Global Surveyor missions, for example, found evidence that the Red Planet was once warmer, wetter and much more Earthlike. A Martian meteorite found in Antarctica contained microscopic traces of structures some believe might be fossilized life forms. Meanwhile, data from the Galileo probe hinted that Europa, a moon of Jupiter, had a liquid water ocean beneath its crust of ice.

Goldin hailed the Hubble Space Telescope=92s repair as "one of the most remarkable turnarounds in the history of the agency," and said future space-based observing instruments will yield even more information about distant planetary systems.

"We must look for planets more similar to Earth," he said.

ROBOTIC MISSIONS TO EUROPA, PLUTO

Goldin noted several other future robotic missions, including the plan to send an orbiter to Europa and a deep space probe to Pluto and beyond in the next decade.

To follow up on the success of the Mars landers and orbiters, NASA is planning a 2005 mission aimed at returning a sample of Martian rocks and soil to Earth. Goldin said NASA was hoping to put together a second sample-return mission in cooperation with French officials, perhaps using the Ariane rocket used for European launches.

He told MSNBC that the plan for the Virtual Astrobiology Institute, which would apparently use the Internet to put biologists, chemists and physicists in touch with each other, was still in the formative stage.

"We need a catalog of detectable characteristics of extraterrestrial biospheres ... a catalog of fingerprints for life," he told the astronomers.

He also trumpeted research into such frontiers of space science as gamma-ray bursts, the origins of the universe and breakthrough propulsion technologies. He hoped propulsion techniques would reach a level that would enable robotic explorers to be sent to the most promising planetary candidates beyond our solar system, sending back data within just a few human generations.

"What an incredible way it would be to close the 21st century, to have a spacecraft approaching a rendezvous with another planetary system," he said.

FASTER, CHEAPER, BETTER ROBOTS

In keeping with NASA=92s push for "faster, cheaper, better" space exploration, Goldin said future space robots had to become smaller and easier to mass-produce, drawing an analogy to the personal computer revolution.

Although Golden waxed eloquently on the marvels of robotic exploration, he specifically reserved any comment about human space flight, saying that subject would be reserved for another speech.

Thus, there was no mention of the megabillion-dollar International Space Station, the agency=92s costliest and most controversial program. But NASA=92s Withroe said later that the space station, which will be constructed in orbit beginning this summer, would serve as a test bed for future human missions to Mars and elsewhere. "Why limit ourselves to just one planet?" he said, referring to Earth.

Toxic data at Area 51 ruled confidential

By Bob Egelko
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO - An attempt to pry loose information about alleged toxic waste burning at a secret Air Force site in the Nevada desert - said to be the "Area 51" of extraterrestrial lore - hit a stone wall of secrecy in a federal appeals court Thursday.

Lawyers for five current and former workers at the base, and the widows of two workers allegedly killed by toxic wastes, are not entitled to learn whether hazardous substances exist there or how they are handled, the results of a federal toxics inspection or even the name of the base, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said.

The 3-0 ruling upheld the Air Force's claim that giving out that information could endanger national security and a 1995 order by President Clinton further restricting disclosure. Before arguments in the case last November, the judges reviewed confidential government statements, while Air Force security officers guarded their conference room.

Besides the classified statements, the court cited an unclassified filing by Air Force Secretary Sheila Widnall, who said information about certain chemicals in the soil or water "can reveal military operational capabilities or the nature and scope of classified operations."

The court, in an opinion by Judge Pamela Rymer, said the disclosure of even "seemingly innocuous information" can be barred if it is part of a "mosaic" of classified information.

"The court cannot order the government to disentangle this information from other classified information," Rymer said. She said the court was persuaded not only that the information was properly withheld, but also that "any further proceeding in this matter would jeopardize national security."

Jonathan Turley, a Georgetown law professor who represented the workers, said the ruling "sets an extremely dangerous precedent" for anyone seeking information from the military.

"This case has nothing to do with national security," he said. "I obviously know what happened at Area 51. My (clients) worked at Area 51. ...This case has to do with criminal violations" of hazardous waste laws.

He said he would seek a rehearing from the entire court and, if unsuccessful, appeal to the Supreme Court. But Turley said the two lawsuits have also accomplished an important goal: forcing the government to acknowledge the site and conduct a toxics inspection, although results of the inspection were not made public.

Justice Department spokesman Joe Krovisky declined comment, saying government lawyers had not seen the ruling.

Area 51, about 90 miles north of Las Vegas, is a base where military aircraft such as the U-2 and Stealth fighter were tested. Its secrecy and remoteness have been prime fodder for UFO buffs, who link the site to the supposed crash of an alien spacecraft at Roswell, N.M. - a scenario played out in the movie "Independence Day."

In the current case, the government identified the site in question as "the operating location near Groom Lake" and denied it was Area 51. The court left the denial unchallenged after reviewing classified material.

Turley scoffed at the denial, saying the name was verified in a government security manual as well as declarations from workers and security officials.

The lawsuits said employees at the base routinely put hazardous chemicals in open 55-gallon drums and burned them. The suits said the exposure killed two workers, Walter Kasza, 73, and Robert Frost, 57, whose widows Turley represents, and injured the other plaintiffs.

Turley said Frost, before his death, lost a workers' compensation claim for his injuries, and Kasza never filed one. The workers sought no damages but requested a court finding that the Air Force stored toxic wastes without a permit, and orders forbidding transportation and burning of toxics.

U.S. District Judge Philip Pro denied the requests but ruled that the results of an Environmental Protection Agency inspection of the site, conducted in response to one suit, would have to be made public unless Clinton intervened. The president then barred disclosure under a law that lets him exempt any federal facility from requirements of a federal toxic cleanup law.

The government appealed Pro's ruling, saying the report should have been declared secret under national security without the president's intervention, which must be renewed annually. The court declined to decide the issue, saying it was no longer a live controversy because of Clinton's action.

Rymer's opinion denying disclosure and ordering dismissal of the case was joined by Judge Harlington Wood of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, temporarily assigned to the panel. In a separate opinion, Judge A. Wallace Tashima said secrecy was proper but should require a presidential order rather than a subordinate's declaration of national security.

The case is Kasza vs. Browner, 96-15535.

Hi Joe,

I also don't know what to make of those anomalies. Here are some "problems" with several of them:

1. Objects A, B and C in the first enlargement all line up precisely with the top-bottom axis of the picture, which doesn't instill confidence that they show genuine artifacts. Then on close inspection one sees similar, though much fainter, line segments scattered all over and alined the same way, which then bolster the non-real impression.
2. Objects A and B cast apparent shadows whose edges diverge significantly, as if illuminated by a strong light source nearby on the left rather than by the distant sun. And in places, these shadows seem too black. Yet, "data drop-out" doesn't seem to explain it either.
3. Object D not only has a deep-black shadow to its right, but a small one also on its left (sunlit) side.
4. The huge pipe-like protuberances seem very hard to explain away as artifacts, and thus cause one to ponder over these other nearby anomalies.

So I come to no conclusion, and await other opinions,

Jim Deardorff

"Sightings" Launches Series of Exposures on Paranormal Topics With "Sightings: In-Depth and Beyond," a Collection of Comprehensive Two-Hour Investigative Reports

LOS ANGELES--(ENTERTAINMENT WIRE)--Jan. 9, 1998--

"UFOs -- The 100 Year Cover-Up" Premieres Jan. 17 on Sci-Fi Channel as First of Five Specials

The "Sightings" franchise continues to expand with the announcement of five comprehensive television exposures under the banner of "Sightings: In-Depth and Beyond," which will air quarterly beginning on Jan. 17 with the first installment, "UFOs -- The 100 Year Cover-Up."

Reaching beyond the scope of the weekly format, each special will focus on a single topic in an extensive and probing two-hour examination.

Each two-hour installment will objectively delve into a single key topic of paranormal exploration, addressing societal debates on humanity and the chilling prospects for our future; contact with the afterlife; alien abductions; the history of UFO conspiracy; and the untapped power of the human mind.

"Sightings" has secured supporting and opposing commentary from experts in the fields of inquiry including authors, scientists and government officials. The specials also provide a forum for candid discussion of firsthand personal experiences. The combination of personal experience and professional opinion invites viewers to draw their own conclusions by weighing the credibility of accounts and tangible evidence.

"UFOs -- The 100 Year Cover-Up" will premiere Jan. 17 at 7 p.m. on Sci-Fi Channel and will repeat throughout the remainder of the month. Beginning with reports of the first modern UFO sighting in 1897, in Aurora, Texas, the special chronicles 100 years of UFO sightings, eyewitness accounts, plausible explanations and claims of government cover-ups. In an exhaustive report, "Sightings" provides one of the most sweeping UFO studies ever broadcast.

"Sightings," the leading authority on paranormal and supernatural investigation and television's primary source for exploration into the unknown, permeates all forms of media. Ancillary products include a series of two books, including the newly released "Sightings: UFOs"; a CD-ROM titled "Sightings: UFOPEEDIA"; a series of home videos; a weekly radio program; and a Web site accessible at www.scifi.com/sightings.

Produced by Winkler/Daniel Productions and Triage Entertainment in association with Paramount Domestic Television, "Sightings" airs exclusively on the Sci-Fi Channel, a USA Network. Tim White is the host of "Sightings"; Henry Winkler and Ann Daniel are executive producers. The Paramount Television Group is part of the entertainment operations of Viacom Inc.

"Dan, the Illogical Scientist" made an appearance in Dilbert just before Xmas.

In one strip, he comes up to Dilbert and says, "Hi, I'm Dan, the illogical scientist. I'm much smarter than you because scientists have invented many things."

"But those are OTHER scientists, not you," Dilbert objects.

"Apparently you don't understand science," Dan replies.

In another strip, he comes up to Alice, another engineer in Dilbert's office. He looks over her shoulder at something she's writing, and the dialogue goes like this:

Dan: Hi. I'm Dan, the illogical scientist. That idea won't work. I know because I've read many reports about ideas like that.

Alice: You haven't even looked at my idea.

Dan: Oh, I get it; you're one of those religious nuts.

Don't we know this guy?

Hmmm... An object passing through 90 degrees of view, centered overhead, from an observer in some 10 seconds. What known things could it be? A big insect at tree top level flying at 15 kph. A pigeon passing at 110 meters doing 80 kph. A small plane doing 200 kph will be at some 275 meters. The SR-71 at Mach 3.0 will be at 5 kilometers. A mystical Mach 9 plane would, of course, be at 15 kilometers. A dangerously low satellite at 100 kilometers would be zipping along at 72,000 kph.

Remember, this experiment is set up favoring the object being farthest away and least recognizable. Oh, and near the equator, the observer moves some 4 km in that 10 seconds. So, which of the above would be reasonable explanations for the observed phenomema? Let us safely rule out big bugs, fireflys, pigeons, common planes, and orbiting spaceships. Yes, orbiting things follow orbital mechanics and 72,000 kph is WAY too fast.

That leaves the SR-71 and the Mystical Mach 9 machines (the "Aurora" kind of thing.) Only, there are some small nagging problems. Sure, the SR-71 does Mach 3, but usually at 25 km altitude. It is probably still classified, but I suspect the flight envelope rules out Mach 3 at 5 kilometers. To a lesser extent, we can doubt the MM9M does Mach 9 at 15 km altitude. At their operational altitudes, they are taking much more than 10 seconds to make this same pass. Even in straight passes, these observations challenge known technology.

Wait, you say, the flying objects also made sudden turns. My memory is not very exact, but I think the SR-71 took a small state to make a U-turn. The MM9M probably doesn't do much better. From the ground this would be seen as smooth sweeping curves, not sharp changes in direction. This makes it fairly reasonable that whatever was seen was not any known or rumored technology.

I admit it. I haven't contributed anything to discovering what they might have been. I only wanted to give more substance to what they are not...

Bye... Ted..

As I mentioned not long ago, as the year 2000 approached we will see more of the groups who whose "elevators don't quite make it to the top" coming out of the wood work, operating under the notion that the "end of the world is at hand."

Hopefully someone will also interceed if the group in Texas decides to kill itself at the end of March.

Police thwart doomsday group mass suicide

MADRID (Reuters) - Spanish police foiled a mass suicide planned by a 30-member sect whose members believed they would be carried away by spaceship from the summit at Tenerife's Teide volcano, officials said Thursday.

The group, which may be linked to the infamous Solar Temple suicide cult or a Hindu apocalyptic sect, was convinced that the end of the world would take place this evening, according to a Canaries government official.

They were planning to end their lives on earth and travel by spaceship to a new world.

Police in the Canary Islands had been tracking the group's movements for some time and its leader, a German psychologist, was arrested late Wednesday for inducement to suicide.

Another 30 members of the group, including four minors, have been identified. Most are Germans, officials said.

They were staging a "last supper" at a private residence in the city of Santa Cruz de Tenerife before police intervened.

"Inducement to suicide is a crime, and for that reason the security forces had to avoid this evil thing," Antonio Lopez, the Canaries official, told a news conference.

"It is not even clear which branch the sect is, whether it is the so-called Solar Temple cult or whether it is a splinter of this group....Many types are possible, based on the personality of the leader."

Officials believe the Canaries group emerged from the Isis Holistic Center in Santa Cruz.

Since 1994, 74 followers of the Solar Temple cult have committed suicide. The sect believes that death voyages by ritualized suicide lead to rebirth in a place called "Sirius."

The Sci-Fi Channel's 'Sightings' program airs a 2-hour special on the UFO cover-up during the second half of January. A short introduction can be found at:

and the schedule after that.

Hosted by Tim White

This investigative show takes a look into dramatic stories of the paranormal. Sightings reporters investigate claims of strange and unexplained phenomenons such as UFOs, ghosts, ESP and the unknown. "No mystery is closed to an open mind", says host Tim White.

SIGHTINGS SPECIAL: Accounts of flying saucers and recovered alien pilots have circulated for more than a century but why have all these sightings been downplayed or completely ignored by the governments of the world? Has there been a ufo cover-up all these years? SIGHTINGS presents a comprehensive examination of UFO occurrences and analyzes current theories about the truth behind classic saucer sightings dating back from an 1897 airship crash in Texas to the mass sightings of UFOs over Arizona in 1997. Has there been a effective cover-up of alien visitations for over a hundred years - and more importantly, is that cover-up coming to an end?

I know the man that produced the man that's nearest to my soul. He's psychopathic, unclean living, people hating -- cold. He's stealing from his credit cards, he leans on Walton's store. He owes on bills he'll never yield, so he's stealing from the poor. His motto is to make us pay, before we do to him -- what he in fact does see some do on arbitrary whim. He calls himself a patriot -- that refuge of a scoundrel, he brought his kids up on abuse, he gave all three bad counsel. One's a paid assassin; one murdered three then self; the last is quite the opposite. He's a saint who knows himself.

Self actualized and learned he puts his finger where it hurts and shows us where we're bleeding when we stumble in the murk. He has a strong compassion for a fair play dream ideal that would move us into space right now in a million living wheels. The riches would be dreamlike and we'd lose most all our pain, if we got the hell off mother Earth and gave her some refrain.

He pointed up that laws are writ with big men in control; it's simpler then to work ill will while the opposite's extolled. The 'man' can MAKE you crazy; the 'man' can work his will; the 'man' can treat your rights like so much sludge or garden fill. Institutions are their prisons and contrived to obfuscate the rights of one to speedy trials; they make the facts, then, late. Labeled *crazy* one's *unfit* to list the facts/defense to free them. This is why they get no trial, so YOU won't get to see them!

Remember this when *shadows* gather up, and take your stuff. Remember this when right's are trampled, like they are -- enough's enough! Shadows set the scene with money that is spent to paint you crazy so a few can work ill will on YOU, beware! Stop being lazy!

Compared to our antagonist, the old man at the top, John Ford's a knighted saint (way high), and his ethics are untopped. But we suffer the old psychopath that's lessor than the kid that sells some crack to school chums -- we will, and have, and did. John Ford was getting noisy with reports of "water heating" so they stuffed him deep into a hole for status quo safe keeping? And it may be that he's crazy -- but was driven to it, friend! He called attention to their *stuff* =85 it was that that locked him in!

Van Flandern obviously read Stranger in a Strange Land. :)

Actually, there is a legitimate theory that a tenth planet once existed between Mars and Jupiter but it was torn asunder by the combined tidal forces of these planets, not spiders from Mars (apologies to Dave Bowie and Bob Heinlein).

Hello All,

Just a quick announcement. I'm going to combine the Intruders Foundation Online website with the AIC, (Abduction Information Center) into one huge abduction related megasite!

The Intruders Foundation will be the 'public' wing and AIC will be there to service the unique needs for information that experiencers have. One side public, one side private.

Together we hope to provide a full service website for the general public, those interested in research, and for the experiencers themselves.

It'll probably take about a month to perform the 'cosmetic surgery' required to unite the two websites and I'll post a formal announcement upon completion.

IF/AIC, hopefully the best of both worlds!

Peace,

John Velez, Webmaster AIC/Intruders Foundation Online

This is pretty scary, since I was interviewed with Kenneth Randle in Chicago last April for this series. This was during the beginning of the flood disasters at home, and I was a bit distracted at the time (I couldn't get back home because all the airports were closed for days).

I can't even recall what I said during the interviews, but I remember thinking that it wasn't my best commentary and I wasn't satisfied with the way the interview went. Oh, well, we'll see how I'm editing in!

Just thought I'd post a note to this list regarding Quebec members. I just spoke with Christian Page today (Saturday). He and Jacques Poulet are in some of the areas hardest-hit by the ice storm. I was unable to reach Jacques by phone, but managed to reach Christian after a few tries. He reports that they are without heat and electricity, but do have phone service. He said that Jacques has been without *everything* for 5 days!

It's a tough situation, and I told Christian that the thoughts of everyone on the List are with them both and their families.

FYI: TWA 800 - It ain't over 'til it's over

From: "skyeking@aye.net" <skyeking@aye.net> [Jerry Washington]
Date: Sat, 10 Jan 1998 14:38:47 -0500
Fwd Date: Sat, 10 Jan 1998 15:11:31 -0500
Subject: FYI: TWA 800 - It ain't over 'til it's over

I thought this article that appeared in yesterday's edition (Jan. 9th) of the Louisville Courier-Journal was interesting.

Jerry Washington
SD Kentucky/MUFON

WASHINGTON - Adm. Thomas Moorer, FORMER CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF, said yesterday that it's possible a missile brought down TWA Flight 800 and called for new congressional hearings.

The Boeing 747 disintegrated July 17, 1996, and plunged into the Atlantic Ocean near Long Island, N.Y., killing 230.

Moorer and other retired Navy brass, at a press conference, expressed grave suspicion over the FBI's recently concluded 18-month investigation of the disaster. They said a missile explosion just outside the 747's forward cabin seems the likely cause.

"All evidence would point to a missile," said Moorer, who is an expert on missile weaponry. "All those witnesses who saw a streak that hit the airplane -- you have to assume it's a missile. In an investigation like this, you can't overlook anything."

Joseph Valiquette, FBI spokesman in New York, said the agency is "comfortable" with its conclusions that "there's no evidence a criminal act was responsible."

The Navy officers said a new study of evidence from Flight 800's data recorders rebuts the government's official story about fuel vapors exploding in a central tank of the jetliner.

"This is either a train wreck in the sky, or an explosive device -- mid-air, outside the plane," said retired Navy Cmdr. William Donaldson, a former plane crash investigator.

Donaldson examined the mountain of material released in early December about the federal investigation. He particularly criticized one National Transportation Safety Board document reflecting flight recorder data that was not discussed when the material was unveiled in Baltimore.

Donaldson noted a line drawn through readings of the last five seconds of the doomed jet's flight, with a handwritten margin note reading "End of Flt. 800 DATA" -- except there are more revealing readings below it. He thinks this was an attempt to divert attention from the final readings on the flight recorder.

He said safety officials later tried to convince the Navy officers it was a transcript from an earlier flight -- a conclusion former TWA pilot Howard Mann said is "not possible -- it's erased -- there's just no way."

The final readings show chaos in the sky -- with airspeed dropping instantly by almost 200 knots, the pitch angle jumping five degrees, altitude dropping 3,600 feet in about three seconds, the roll angle going from zero to 144 degrees (the plane almost inverted), and magnetic heading changing from 82 degrees to 163 degrees.

Donaldson said all these indicate an extremely high-pressure wave coming from the lower left side of the plane's front. The measurements "indicate there was an explosion -- a big explosion -- outside the cockpit."

Hello to the list and to Yvonne...

I can attest to the following facts that occurred in Washington, DC in 1952...

I was 20 years old and living in Washington, DC at the time all the UFO activity was taking place.

There were photographs published in the Washington Post, along with articles describing the many radar sightings taking place at the Washington National Airport. For several days this was the top news story and topic of discussion over the entire metropolitan area.

The radar sightings were made public and took place over a period of 2 days. The radar blips would move around at great speed, and were never accounted for (publicly). Of great interest is the fact that many of the areas the blips were coming from was and still is restricted from all aircraft. This area includes the government office buildings, the Pentagon, and the White- house.

There seemed to be little or no effort being made to conceal the information from the general public. All forms of media had much to say about the occurrences over the 2 day period.
It was about this time in my life I became interested in UFOs and the possible implications their presence would cause.

...And now a sidebar note... I lived at 1434 Harvard St. N.W.,
The very street that was depicted as having the temporary residence of the Michael Rennie character in the movie,
THE DAY THE EARTH STOOD STILL, which came out in 1951, one year earlier than the great Washington, DC UFO flap.
...An interesting coincidence?

Regards,

Jack Sargeant - Moderator, Fidonet UFO conference.

Subject: U-Haul's 'UFO' Trucks

From: http://www.uhaul.com/html/honors\_nm.htm

U-HAUL HONORS NEW MEXICO WITH TRUCK GRAPHIC IMAGE TO BE UNVEILED
AT INT'L. UFO MUSEUM IN ROSWELL

ROSWELL, N.M. (Jan. 5, 1998) U-Haul=AE International, Inc., in conjunction with the International UFO Museum & Research Center (IUFOMRC) will unveil to the public a spectacular new U-Haul Super Graphics(SM) truck image promoting the State of New Mexico on Roswell=92s Main Street, in front of the IUFOMRC, 114 N. Main St., on Monday, Jan. 12, 1998 at 10 a.m. Local, state and national dignitaries have been invited, to be addressed by Roswell Mayor Tom Jennings, IUFOMRC Director Deon Crosby and representatives from U-Haul International's headquarters in Phoenix.

The vibrant, larger-than-life images are designed to recognize America's fascination with the 1947 Roswell incident, as well as the IUFOMRC's contribution to tourism in the Land of Enchantment. The U-Haul Super Graphics Salute to America(SM) Campaign was begun in 1988 to recognize North American mobility by displaying slogans and distinctive features of all 50 United States and seven Canadian provinces. The Roswell Incident / New Mexico graphic represents one of the first in a new generation of truck graphics created by the do-it-yourself household moving industry leader in nearly 10 years.

Anytime we at the IUFOMRC are approached by an organization that is willing to go one step further to produce an educational perception of UFOs or extraterrestrials, we are thrilled and honored to be partners in the effort. U-Haul didn't haphazardly slap together a graphic for this project, said Museum Director Deon Crosby. Members of the production team at U-Haul took the time to research the Roswell Incident. They made a trip to the International UFO Museum, they made phone calls and they asked questions. As a result, the graphic is a credible representation of the emotion of the celebrated UFO crash of 1947.

John JT Taylor, executive vice president of Fleet Management for U-Haul International, Inc., explains, As U-Haul celebrates over 50 years as part of Americans' lives, it's our pleasure to join forces with the State of New Mexico and the International UFO Museum in Roswell. People in the communities and on the highways of North America will have the privilege of seeing this larger-than-life image of the Roswell incident and the museum for years to come. We're proud to supplement the effort to promote tourism in the state by adding the mysterious copy line, 'What really happened in Roswell' to the images on our moving vans.

Decals for at least 300 moving vans will be produced at Kar-Go Decal Company in Ivyland, Pa., and will be promptly shipped to production facilities in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. There, the 3M decal material featuring IUFOMRC images promoting the State of New Mexico will be attached to U-Haul van boxes, installed on chassis and will be moving families one-way or locally across America by the end of January.

Happy New Year. The universe is full of wonders patiently waiting for us to grow wiser.

GEORGIA

State Director, John Thompson reports: "My Vietnam helicopter crewman witness of the "100 lights V shape UFO" in April has just told me that on Monday night, Dec. 15th around 11:30 p.m., he and a friend saw a star-like object in the western sky. He thought at first it was just a bright star twinkling, but then a craft from the south moved quickly in only 3 to-4 seconds. It left a vapor trail, but they heard no sound. It then returned just as quickly. Next another craft with a vapor trail moved to the star-like object from the north and did the same thing, also leaving a vapor trail. He wondered if maybe he was observing an aerial refueling operation, but the speeds were too great. The star-like object was still there when he and his friend went inside 15 minutes later. It could just be a coincidence that two planes picked the same spot to go to and turn around at--although he did not see them turn just up and back in a straight line each time--in front of an actual star in the western sky. The UFOs seemed to be blinking or flashing lights .

MUFON State Director, John Thompson reports concerning another triangle shaped UFO. Because of its size, altitude, speed, and linear movement it has to be considered that the UFO was, perhaps, only an airplane with an unusual lighting configuration. A configuration that violated FAA flight rules, since no blinking light was seen. However, because the 45 year-old, married and college-educated witness says he does not believe what he saw was an aircraft, and the UFO made no sound, it is included here. The witness was outside of a friend's house two miles north of Franklin, Heard County, Georgia on Hwy. 100 when on glancing up he saw a triangle formation of five bright white lights moving east-south-east. The lights, which eventually past directly overhead of his location and skirted the northern edge of Franklin, each had the intensity of "Mars" at its brightest. As the witness is an amateur astronomer he felt certain that the lights, which at the closest were 2-2500 feet away, were no more or less bright than what Mars provides on a brilliantly clear night. The lights glided silently overhead and continued their path to the ESE for nearly 15 seconds until the witness lost sight of the triangle-shaped formation behind some nearby oak trees. At no time did he see any of the lights blink. He estimated a speed of "150-200 miles-per-hour," or about the speed of a twin engine propeller driven aircraft.

The total arrangement of lights had an apparent size of "a quarter" and if the entire perimeter of the "triangle" had been filled in with lights there would have been room for an additional 20 lights based on the sketch that the witness made for this field investigator. Real size of the UFO would have been about 200 feet. Five minutes after viewing the lights, which disappeared in the Southeast, he saw a regular commercial airliner flying higher that clearly showed blinking lights. By then he was in his car driving and was unable to determine if he could hear any noise as the airliner flew overhead. It was his opinion, and reinforced much after seeing the airliner, that the earlier triangle-shaped UFO with lights flew too low and was too big to be only an airplane. Interestingly where he saw the lights is only a mile south of where another triangle UFO was seen in February of 1997. Contacts with the Heard County Sheriffs Department and LaGrange Calloway Airport were negative. Thanks to ISUR and John C. Thompson. Copyright 1998, All rights reserved.

NORTH CAROLINA

On Saturday night, December 20, and Sunday night, December 21, 1997, witnesses in the small towns of Marshall (population 809) and Mars Hill (population 1,611) in the Appalachian Mountains of North Carolina sighted "a glowing object flying back and forth in the night sky." The sightings were reported Monday, December 22, 1997 on radio station WKSF 99.9FM in Asheville, N.C. (population 61,607). "Many people in (rural) Madison County witnessed it," one man reported. "At first they thought the object had been a downed aircraft. But no private planes were reported missing." Marshall and Mars Hill are on Highway 213 about 22 miles (35 kilometers) north of Asheville and 270 miles (432 kilometers) west of Raleigh. (Many thanks to Steve Wilson Sr. and Tim Hagemester of NACOMM and UFO Roundup Vol., 3 #1 1/4/98 editor Joseph Trainor)

RHODE ISLAND

Jerome Turner video taped a UFO on October 6, 1997, 12:45 p.m. EST. over East Greenwich. His web site shows photos of and a video and he states, "Today I was sitting at the location of the last sighting doing some skywatching. Just before I was going to leave I saw what looked like a thin white plane but I couldn't see any wings or tail. I decided to get footage of it and analyze it later. When I did look at it I realized it looked alot like the 'cigar' shaped craft I had read reports of. Also I found 2 'rods' that appear in the footage. One flies just below the cigar and looks like it changes course to avoid the craft. I could barely see what looked like something falling from out of the back of the cigar which sparkled slightly. The craft was approximately 1,000 feet above the ground and was heading West to East at about the same speed as a slow moving plane. The leading edge was black and what looked like a black stripe or row of black squares was on the side. I encourage the reader to go to his web site to see the video. Thanks to Jerome Turner at:

OHIO

On Friday, December 12, 1997, D.F. was driving north on Highway 71 in Columbus, the state capital of Ohio when he spotted an unusual object hovering in the sky off to the right of the highway. The UFO was hovering about one mile east of Cooper Stadium, near the Scioto River and the intersection of Broad Street and Brown Road. "Because I have an interest in the phenomenon of UFOs, and also a long-standing hobby of astronomy, I do try to pay attention to the sky whenever I am outside," he reported. "This is a conscious effort on my part to increase my chances of seeing things of interest, be they natural or unusual." At 1 a.m., just as he drove past the Interstate Highway 70 turnoff, he "saw the object at a distance of approximately 100 yards or so. Its angle was perhaps 20 degrees up from the horizon. As I came nearer, its outline and size became clearer...I would estimate it at approximately 30 to 40 feet off the ground, and above a spot about 15 feet to my right. As I passed it, its position angle was about 65 degrees above the horizon." "I estimate seeing it for about seven seconds. I couldn't describe any color other than dark, except for the color of the lights on it...The best way to describe the thing would be a classic fish shape...it had what looked like a fin at the closest end, was bulky toward the middle and tapered some at the furthest end." "The lights seemed to be at the ends. One was a dull red, darker and dimmer than a streetlight, and the other was a pale green. The size of the lights appeared at the time to be as large as traffic light bulbs, and it was the lights which first attracted my attention up into the sky." "The object wasn't moving but I was doing between 45 and 50 miles per hour. I remember thinking about getting off at the next exit and trying to get another look. But there wasn't one right away and because I had to get up early the next day for work, I decided to go on home." (Thanks to:UFO Roundup Vol. # 1, 1/4/98, editor: Joseph Trainor)

UNITED KINGDOM

Victor J. Kean reports on Flying Triangles (FT) visiting southeastern England during the month of September of 1997. The observed sightings of the FT over the Sizewell Nuclear Power Station (NPS) decreased to 60 in September from 88 in August. Bradwell NPS had 44 September sightings compared to 39 in August. Dungeness NPS decreased to 24 in September from 27 in August. Since June 1st '97 the FT is displaying with increasing regularity three apex 'lights' White (nose) with Red and Blue (or Red and Green) apex 'lights' on its trailing edge. There is also a larger white 'light' close behind the white 'light' at the nose. This is a distinct departure from the 'normal' three white 'lights' with one red 'light' in the center of the underside.

Jacques Vallee once remarked: 'A purely statistical study of a phenomenon as elusive as the UFO has no value in itself'. I am aware that the various groups supplying me with data are unsophisticated, and do not have the scientific background which, in the USA would have provoked a rush of technology to photo, video and measure the FT phenomenon. Perhaps that is why the FT continues to repeat its nightly visits to three nuclear power stations(NP). It certainly does not seem to be trying to evade being seen. I believe that 'Project FT' achieved much in 1997 for we:

- 1) Established the three main 'flight paths'.
- 2) Identified the three main locations of the FT's attention.
- 3) Calculated the FTs 'normal' cruising speed between NP sites.
- 4) Discovered at least one of the areas from which the FT appears to emerge, disappear.
- 5) Established that during some nights there were at least two (and possibly three) FTs in 'operation' over the UK simultaneously.

With the upsurge in *observed* FT visits to the UK one feels that some sort of *peak* is approaching, but then again, I thought *that* when the reports jumped from the 30s to the 40s ! You may be interested to read that the 'Project FT' database has some 14 fields. Any of which can be selected as to be the 'leading' field. One can 'select and search' up to 12 fields at a time in order to find -for example: All instances of a gray FT with amber 'lights' seen over the south of the UK between the hours of 20:00 - 23:59 during the period Jan. to March 1995. With the recent 'upsurge' in FT reports the demands upon my time are increasing pro rata.

Ref: The length of time during which the FT is in hover mode over the NPS. I went back over the old reports (1995) which used to give the 'Arrival' and 'Departure' times and found that by adding both times to the FT database we 'caught' a couple of FT reports from other locations whilst the FT was still over Sizewell. Thus proving, beyond doubt that there are, on occasion, more than one FT operating simultaneously over UK air-space. Incidentally, we *are* aware of the small, silver triangular - shaped aircraft (flying from RAF Wharton, Lancashire) which is sometime seen escorted by two F-111 jets in the north of England.

A new initiative in the UK named 'UFO Concern' under the leadership of Lord Hill Norton a member of the British House of Lords has recently been formed and the first report published. 'Project FT' is part of that initiative. They have drawn together some leading VIPs...from many walks of life with only a few 'ufologists' (Gordon Crieghton, Timothy Good) are circulating their 'concerns' amongst politicians, etc. Thanks to: Victor J.Kean

WALES, UNITED KINGDOM

A UFO flew over Tywi Forest dam in the Black Mountains of Wales on December 19, 1997, at 6:30 a.m. A large UFO was seen flying over the hydroelectric dam by two rangers of the Welsh Forestry Commission. The men were five miles apart at the time, but were in radio contact with each other. The incident took place in the mountains overlooking Llandoverry, approximately 66 miles (106 kilometers) northwest of Cardiff. "The UFO was going in a north- northeasterly direction," one ranger reported. "It was a very bright ball of light with four sparkly tails and about two miles or so high, about three times the size of a large star. It was over the dam for about 35 seconds, climbing in an upward direction." The sightings reports were received by the Welsh Forestry Commission office at Tirabads. #### MOON LAUNCH

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (Reuters) NASA headed back to the moon January 7, for first time in 25 years. The Lunar Prospector probe blasted off after a 24 hour delay. It is expected to arrive at the moon on January 11th. Scientists were hoping the year-long mission would answer questions left unanswered by the six Apollo moon-landings and about a dozen robotic missions in the 1960s and 1970s, especially the question of whether there is water on the Earth's only natural satellite. "You won't see a lunar lake with moon penguins skating around on it," Scott Hubbard, Lunar Prospector mission manager, told a prelaunch news conference. "What you will have here is water ice mixed in within the lunar soil."

Lunar Prospector does not carry a camera, but its five scientific instruments will probe the moon's surface for minerals, magnetic fields, gravitational anomalies and frozen water. "I think a lot of people have the idea that perhaps we know all there is to know about the moon, but the reality is we have only just scratched the surface," said Michael Drake, director of the Lunar and Planetary Laboratory at the University of Arizona. "There is a lot that we still have to learn." Program scientist Joseph Boyce said finding ice in the pole region would boost any plan to build an Earth outpost on the moon. "Results from a U.S. Department of Defense experimental spacecraft called Clementine provided evidence that water ice does exist at the moon's south pole, but many scientists remain skeptical. Lunar Prospector's electronic divining rod, which detects the hydrogen atoms in water, could provide a conclusive answer within a month of reaching the moon. "If there is a cup of water in a cubic yard of lunar soil we will see it," Hubbard said. (By Steven Young} THE FACE ON MARS

The mysterious "Face on Mars" is not an optical illusion or a natural feature on the Red Planet, a scientist reported Wednesday at a major astronomical conference. Dr. Tom Van Flandern reached the conclusion after new studies of the Cydonia region, where strange-looking landforms have excited science fiction and life-on-other-worlds buffs for decades. His report, presented at the 191st national meeting of the American Astronomical Society (AAS), attracted unusual attention because sharp new images of the "Face" may soon be available. The camera on board NASA's Global Surveyor spacecraft, now orbiting Mars, is capable of making images with 30 times the resolution, or sharpness, of the Viking cameras. It can distinguish objects as small as 4.6 feet across, and will try to image the "Face." Van Flandern holds a doctorate in astronomy from Yale University. Until 1991, he was chief of the celestial mechanics branch at the U. S. Naval Observatory, a respected astronomy facility. He then founded Meta Research, an organization based here, that fosters research on topics that conflict with mainstream theories in astronomy. The "Face on Mars," he explained, certainly fits that bill. Some people claim that images of the Cydonia region, taken in the 1970s from the Viking spacecraft, show a gigantic human face, a pyramid, and other structures left by some ancient extra-terrestrial civilization. In the eyes of some, the "Face" bears a striking resemblance to the "death masks" that ancient Egyptians used to adorn the sarcophagus of King Tut and other rulers. Indeed, some hint that the "Face" may be part of an immense tomb on the Red Planet. "The conventional view is that this is all nonsense," says Dr. Michael C. Malin. He is chief investigator for the Mars Global Surveyor Orbiter Camera. Cydonia, he explained, is a desert-like region that has undergone the same kinds of weathering that carve weird landforms in terrestrial deserts. He regards the features at Cydonia as strictly natural, the result of Martian weathering and erosion.

Van Flandern said his study undermines the main argument against an artificial origin for the "Face:" Its apparently random orientation on the Martian surface. "No apparent purpose is served by a face monument looking upward toward space if it is not oriented right-side up and in an attention-getting location with respect to the surface of the planet," he said. On Earth, one such location, visible for great distances from space, might be right on the equator, he indicated. Van Flandern analyzed data from previous studies showing that the Martian north and south poles occupied a different position in the past. A meteor impact or other cataclysmic event relocated the poles to their current position millions of years ago. He concluded that the "Face" originally was in a much different location. "It was a great shock to me to discover that the Cydonia area was right on the old Martian equator," he said. Further analysis showed that the "Face" is oriented perpendicular to that old equator. The bridge of its "nose" is oriented almost exactly north- to-south. "This has only about a 1 percent probability of occurring by chance," Dr. Van Flandern said. "The weight of existing evidence appears to have shifted in favor of an artificial origin of the Cydonia complex." Van Flandern predicted that the Mars Global Surveyor's high-resolution cameras will finally determine whether the "Face" is a natural geologic structure, or something constructed by an earlier civilization. Almost as an afterthought, he observed to a standing-room- only audience of about 400 astronomers, "I suggest that in view of these test results we prepare ourselves for a cultural shock certainly unrivaled in recent times." Blade Copyright (c)1998 Nando.net Copyright (c)1998 Scripps Howard,
Washington (1/8/98), <http://www.nando.net>) GOALS FOR 1998

Dr. Richard Haines wrote a nice letter asking for information about human initiated contact with UFOs. This gave me an idea that we should have some goals or a mission statement for 1998 regarding the UFO phenomenon. We will continue to report significant sightings, however, we realize many of these sightings can be explained as misidentification of balloons, aircraft, Earth lights or other phenomenon. The Air Force Blue Book investigation of UFOs found only a small percentage of the sightings were unexplained, meaning only those remaining could be true UFOs. Certain kinds of reports appear more valuable, particularly close encounter cases at short range. Therefore, it is prudent to spend more time investigating the more significant cases. Dr. Haines has specifically asked for help regarding :

Close Encounter of the Fifth Kind (CE-5) cases, i.e., human initiated contact in which the phenomenon appears to respond back. I will forward these cases to Dr. Haines.

I'm personally interested in collecting accounts of UFO crashes, or reports of UFOs at military bases, or military interaction with the craft. Certain military bases are frequently mentioned in reports. These include: Edwards, Wright Patterson, Langley, Mac Dill, McGuire, Roswell, Area 51, etc.

I'm also interested in reports concerning take off or landings, entry or exit from water or underground or mountain side bases. We are looking for evidence of landing imprints, burnt foliage, dents or scratches on metal, wood or the ground. Close up descriptions of the craft are desired, particularly engine, rocket, lights, openings, windows, rotation or similar activity.

We are also collecting evidence of abductions such as damage to the body, clothing, bedding, walls, or automobiles. Some MUFON members are law enforcement officers. If someone is allegedly kidnapped or raped by aliens, this is a crime and should be treated as such. Quick response to an abduction by a trained investigative team may be able to prove a physical abduction took place and possibly who was responsible.

The final area of particular interest is data on large Mother craft or UFO carriers. These include reports of launching or landing of large numbers of smaller craft on these carriers. For example, two hundred discs were sighted over the Southern tip of South America in Chile. Virtually, no Air Force in the world could launch hundreds of aircraft secretly and fly them over Chile without word leaking out. Further the logistical cost would be significant even for the United States. Assuming these UFO reports are true, we may assume these aircraft are alien, that is not flown by the governments of the world. The financial and engineering cost of developing these craft, their logistical support, training and feeding aircrews, fuel, and basing would be immense. The goal is to obtain further evidence to help prove to others that these sightings are real.

When Fox television aired it's UFO video evidence special last summer I was rather surprised to see Story Musgrave make the following statements during his interview:

"The government has covered up things, and I cannot know as a fact whether there is any cover-up here"...(I would assume he's referring to NASA)

"I think the public is ready to accept any information. I think the public is ready to know if anyone has visited us. They can accept that and they want it!"

Prior to this I'd always seen Musgrave take a very dismissive attitude toward this subject. Does anyone know if he's revising his opinions on the matter?

Jared.

Naturally we would be interested in knowing any more of your story. Have you ever told this story to anyone before? There have been several books written about events at the time you mention.

>WASHINGTON - Adm. Thomas Moorer, FORMER CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT >CHIEFS OF STAFF, said yesterday that it's possible a missile >brought down TWA Flight 800 and called for new congressional >hearings. ....

>"This is either a train wreck in the sky, or an explosive device

>Donaldson, a former plane crash investigator.

>He said safety officials later tried to convince the Navy >officers it was a transcript from an earlier flight -- a

>The final readings show chaos in the sky -- with airspeed >five degrees, altitude dropping 3,600 feet in about three >seconds, the roll angle going from zero to 144 degrees (the plane

>Donaldson said all these indicate an extremely high-pressure wave >coming from the lower left side of the plane's front. The >measurements "indicate there was an explosion -- a big explosion
>-- outside the cockpit."

Donaldson spoke on Art Bell's show on this recently, and filled in many details. E.g., he mentioned just where the instruments were located that gave these readings, and how the pressure of the external explosion would move the angle-of-attack vane in the manner it did, coming back to its normal setting a fraction of a setting later after which the recordings ceased due to the explosion having severed the cables to the "black" box. And of course the suddenly increased pressure would make the altimeter pressure port think that the plane had jumped to a lower elevation. He noted that the line that had been crossed out could not have been recorder data from a previous flight that had not yet been written over, for one reason because its date/time indicator was correct.

Evidently persons in charge had not dared to totally black out the line, like we see on FOIA documents, lest that provoke suspicion.

When the hard data agrees with the multiple witnesses who saw a missile-like flare moving upwards just before the explosion, it's mind-boggling to think how easily a coverup can be implanted and maintained. The connection to the UFO coverup is that the more serious, important and potentially embarrassing the events are for the highest ranking officials, the more heavily they are covered up.

What Was It?

Associated Press, 01/10/98 13:57

EXETER, N.H. (AP) - A Newmarket man was nearly blinded by a bright light in the sky last month, and he's on a mission to find out what it was.

Dave Jackson said the mysterious brilliant blue flash lit up the sky over Exeter on Dec. 28 as he drove along Route 88.

"It was brighter than anything I've ever seen," he said.

Jackson said he's heard from a Hampton Falls woman who saw a similar blinding flash in the same area about a month earlier.

He plans to meet with a UFO investigator near the site.

Peter Geremia, director of the state chapter of a group called the Mutual UFO Network, said an investigation begins by ruling out explainable causes such as aircraft or the weather. He said some UFO investigations take several months, but most last only a couple of weeks.--Brookline Copshmrnas

BROOKLINE, N.H. (AP) - Two Brookline police officers who were suspended for pepper-spraying a teen-ager during an arrest on Halloween say selectmen owe them an apology.

Officers Richard Dube and Brian Goulden were suspended after 16-year-old Jacob Valley reported he was pepper-sprayed by a police officer. They were reinstated in November and selectmen hired an independent firm to investigate the incident.

Selectmen have not made the details of that probe public. The two officers say they're happy with the results of the report and want the public to know about it.

Stephen,

In an interview with Cooper published in OMNI, March 1980, p.
106, he reportedly stated:

"If any UFO information is being suppressed, it's certainly not in the U.S. Air Force, because I was at a high enough level to know about it.

In defense of the military attitude, I can't really blame them for being negative when I consider ridiculous things that have been said and written and the fact that the military is responsible for national security. It's a little embarrassing to acknowledge they can't explain some things".

Which seems to confirm his then belief that whilst the question of ET visitations may be an enigma to those responsible for national security, he was not aware of any related 'cover up' and certainly not supportive of one within the USAF.

I've never seen any indications Cooper has altered that view.

Does this leave only Dr. Edgar Mitchell and has he ever actually cited evidence, or has no astronaut in fact ever claimed there was a 'cover up'?

The evening of Saturday 27th and early morning of Sunday 28th December, 1980 was when Lt. Col. Halt and assembled 'team of specialists' investigated Lt. Englund's report that the 'UFO' was back (the dates in Halt's memo are wrong, the 'incidents' occurred during the 25/26 and 27/28 December, not the 27/28 and 29/30 December as noted in Halt's memo to the Ministry of Defence).

Perhaps a surprising aspect of the 'Rendlesham forest' case are the documented testimonies of how some personnel from even the 81st Security Police Squadron acknowledged being 'spooked' by the sight of seemingly 'strange lights'.

It's understandably a spooky place and I recently received some e-mail from a 'jet engine technician' who was stationed at both bases between 1984 and 1993. Amongst the tales he thought might be of interest was the horrible story of a airman seated in an A-10 maintenance hanger who ejected himself into the roof of the hanger and was killed, the "abandoned Church outside the engine shop gate on Bentwaters... said to be haunted... and placed off limits to base personnel" and, by no means least, the "story about a Rendlesham Forest Monster that attacked an airman while he sat in the cockpit of an F-4 on the flightline of Woodbridge".

As he confirmed, "I do not know if there is truth to that strange story, But I did see the canopy of that F-4. It had deep scratches on the outside of the glass".

There are a number of other tales which I had come across and which were, in all seriousness, apparently of considerable unease to some personnel stationed on lonely outposts at the bases.

>After about 15 minutes I reached my destination which was the >military gas pumps and I never saw so many police vehicles and >equipment waiting for fuel especially in the early hours of the >my best to find the power switches and again rushed me around, well >I did get the power on and the vehicles got there fuel but not one >of those cops said a word to me that evening.

By 0230 on the morning of the 28th, according to Halt's microcassette recording, he was deep in the forest and recorded:

HALT: 01:48. We're hearing very strange sounds out of the farmer's barnyard animals. They're very, very active, making an awful lot of noise.

HALT: 2:44. We're at the far side of the second farmer's field....

HALT: 3:05. We see strange strobe-like flashes...

HALT: 03:15. Now we've got an object about 10 degrees directly south...

HALT: 03:30 and the objects are still in the sky...

As such, it appears unlikely he could have been at the 'military gas pumps' around the time you mention. Appreciating it's 17 years later, how might this equate with your recollections?

>I drove back to Bentwaters and I didn't think anymore about it until >rumours started to circulate about UFOs, well I was sure glad I had >listened to my conscience. Over the next couple of weeks there was an >influx of civilians and civilian type a/c landing at both bases.

This has been confirmed by a number of base personnel. RAF Bentwaters and RAF Woodbridge was a substantial sized twin-base complex, what was so unusual about this particular civilian activity?

Thanks for the interesting comments - can you say which unit you served with at the time?

Yes, this change in Story's story came from a reporter in Hawaii, who interviewed him perhaps a year ago. This was reported on Art Bell and I've since seen a few things on the Internet.

'X-Files' To Take Show on the Road
.c The Associated Press

By DAVID BAUDER

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - ``The X-Files'' is taking its show on the road, although it's a mystery whether Scully or Mulder will come along for the ride.

Makers of the popular television show announced Saturday that they are launching ``The X-Files Expo,'' a traveling theme park of show memorabilia that will travel across the country this spring like a rock concert tour.

Tickets for the 10-city tour, which starts March 6 in San Francisco, go on sale Jan. 20 for $25 apiece.

Additional tour dates are planned for Los Angeles, Dallas, Atlanta, Miami, Chicago, Detroit, Boston, New York and Washington, D.C.

Organizers promise interactive games, a preview of ``The X-Files'' movie and appearances by people involved in the television show. The Expo will be held in large sites, such as airplane hangars or abandoned military bases.

However, executives could not say Saturday if stars David Duchovny (Mulder) or Gillian Anderson (Scully) will appear at any of the events.

``We really need to work through what they're going to do,'' said Pat Wyatt, president of Twentieth Century Fox Licensing and Merchandising, which is running the tour with Ten Thirteen Productions. ``I can't guarantee that they will be there, but they have been to conventions in the past.''

The Expo continues Fox's effort to take advantage of the Sunday night popularity of the show about two FBI agents who investigate UFO sightings and paranormal phenomena.

Although Duchovny has said he's interested in pursuing a movie career, Fox television network President Peter Roth told television critics that the show ``absolutely'' will be around at least next year and the year after.

``We have no intention of losing our flagship series,'' Roth said.

That interview is quite dated. He has taken stronger positions since. I will check my video library for quotes.

OUT THERE

They Thought UFOs Had Landed. A Case of Hysteria, Politics, Poison and Toothpaste.

By Michael Colton
Washington Post Staff Writer
Sunday, January 11, 1998; Page F01

BELLPORT, N.Y.=97For the believers, the obvious place to look for captured aliens was on government property -- specifically the huge, guarded facility on Long Island called Brookhaven National Laboratory. A former military base, Brookhaven was known to be the site of experiments involving DNA and particle accelerators, using equipment like an alternating gradient synchrotron and a high-flux beam reactor.

The aliens had to be there.

John Ford, chairman of the Long Island UFO Network, knew something big was happening on Long Island, renowned among conspiracy buffs as the site of the Montauk time warp project and, more recently, the mysterious crash of TWA Flight 800. Ford and his 400-member group had investigated many weird sightings on the island over the past decade. Some residents were convinced that saucer crashes had caused forest fires, that they'd seen airborne battles between spacecraft and military helicopters, that people had been abducted and animals mutilated. This place could be the next Roswell, or an East Coast Area 51.

Ford, a retired bailiff, frequently called the Brookhaven lab with questions and accusations. He was cordial and articulate, and lab spokeswoman Mona Rowe wished she could give him more interesting answers; as a sci-fi fan herself, she believes extraterrestrial life exists. Just not at Brookhaven National Laboratory. She even invited Ford to tour the place, to open any door he wanted and allow his own experts to search for UFO evidence. She had nothing to hide.

Ford never made it to the lab, though the lab eventually made it to him. In a plot as strange as anything on "The X-Files" or "The Outer Limits" -- two of Ford's favorite shows -- he was arrested for conspiring to murder three local politicians. By poisoning them with radium. Police charge that he schemed to put the radioactive material in their cars, in their food and even in their toothpaste.

After midnight on June 13, 1996, Mona Rowe's phone rang. She was on call for Brookhaven's radiological assistance program, a sort of radiation SWAT team. She accompanied the team to a Bellport home surrounded by police, where they found hot radioactive sources encased in lead in the back of a pickup truck.

John Ford, the "UFO guy" she and others had always considered a harmless eccentric, was under arrest.

Never mind that the radium would have taken decades to kill anyone. According to prosecutors, Ford was a terrorist intent on killing, to help end a UFO coverup.

Today, Ford, 49, resides in a state-run psychiatric center, having been found unfit to stand trial -- just as he had hoped. One of his alleged conspirators is in jail; another friend awaits sentencing. Ford's home is boarded up, and the Long Island UFO Network (LIUFON) is defunct.

But for the believers, the story isn't over. The coverup continues, as always. The coverup is eternal.

Seriously Weird

Ford's case is strange, even for Long Island, and that's no small feat. This is the place where teenage tramp Amy Fisher shot the wife of grease monkey Joey Buttafuoco. Where John Esposito kept 9-year-old Katie Beers locked in an underground dungeon for two weeks. Where Colin Ferguson killed six people on a commuter train, where Judge Sol Wachtler stalked his lover, where "Angel of Death" nurse Richard Angelo injected muscle relaxants into four patients.

To be weird in Long Island, you have to be seriously weird. Some blame the power lines and the water supply for producing, among others, Howard Stern, Geraldo Rivera and the 1,200 pounds of Walter Hudson. "People here are open to strange ideas," says Mona Rowe, who comes from Hawaii, where these things don't happen.

Of course, equating John Ford with killers and torturers is unfair; all we know for sure is that he liked to talk about doing away with those who he thought did him wrong.

Still, Ford lived in an area that seems to be fertile ground for his odd ideas -- and in a fertile era. At the end of the millennium, it seems that no one trusts anyone, least of all authority. Corporations are too powerful, governments are too secretive. Planes explode in midair; war veterans contract mysterious ailments. A Japanese television cartoon emits flashes of light that cause children to convulse.

Strange days, indeed.

With so many seemingly impenetrable coverups and interesting "coincidences," it is up to the average citizen to expose the evil-doers. Theories are plentiful; facts are harder to come by. "Perception is reality," the FBI's James Kallstrom said last year, explaining why the bureau's investigation of Flight 800 spent so much time refuting rumors of a missile attack.

Of course, this article itself could just be part of the "official version" -- or, as one of Ford's supporters, Peter Moon, put it, "damage control to make everyone on Long Island look crazy."

A number of Ford's friends and colleagues, who have followed his case on the Internet and in UFO publications, believe he has been set up, framed, railroaded. He's innocent, they say, and they produce theories as to why he was arrested: He was getting too close to a government coverup; he was silenced for his outspoken beliefs; he was a patsy.

His attorney, John Rouse, wishes these folks would shut up. They're not helping Ford's case. "I don't want to sound too flippant, but my impression is that these people can find a conspiracy in a cheesecake," he says. Rouse believes Ford is innocent, but says the case has nothing to do with the CIA, UFOs or other acronyms. It has to do with a far more mundane scourge: politics.

Ford's life -- his version of his life, anyway -- is like an "X-Files" episode written by Thomas Pynchon (another Long Island product, natch). John Ford believed in UFOs, as do many people. But he was a lonely man prone to extreme gullibility, an ineffectual citizen whose political aspirations were thwarted and who found a sense of power by espousing incredible theories. People listened to him.

Ford is probably insane -- even some of his friends admit that. To pursue UFOs is to suspend a degree of rationality for an equal measure of blind faith. Ford's case shows how fragile the balance can be.

There is one question that people on both sides of this case ask of those who want information. The answer to this question, they assert, immediately places you on one side or the other. It defines whom you will trust, and how much you will trust them.

"Do you believe in UFOs?"

Looking to the Sky

John Ford spent most of his adult life working on the side of the law, as an officer of the same court he would later appear in as a defendant. With a face like John Belushi's and a voice like Elmer Fudd's, Ford appeared odd but nonthreatening to those who knew him. After graduating from St. John's University in Queens in 1971 with a degree in philosophy, he started work at the Brooklyn criminal court, earned a master's degree in public administration and transferred to Suffolk County in 1982.

Friends say Ford had a big heart, adopting dogs from the pound and delivering supplies when Hurricane Gloria hit; he cried when he accidentally ran over a cat. He dated, and was engaged twice, but his most constant companion was his mother, Catherine, with whom he lived. "She was his right-hand man," recalls a LIUFON member.

An avid gun collector, Ford made model tanks and occasionally read Soldier of Fortune magazine. His co-worker John Marafino insists the gun collection was simply for show, like baseball cards. The only time Ford shot a gun was to pass his exam as a court officer, Marafino says, "and he wasn't even a good shot."

At work, he carried a service revolver; locked up at home were at least 35 licensed handguns and rifles, along with bulletproof vests, knives, ammunition and assorted military junk. He ran his UFO investigations with walkie-talkies, acting as if he were leading a paramilitary operation. He got a kick out of it.

In the 1970s and '80s, Ford became active in local politics, forming a Conservative Party club in Suffolk County, supporting his mother in her bids for highway superintendent and county legislator, and running for several party positions himself. Frustration over Suffolk County's Republican rule caused him to quit politics, but his hatred of county Republicans never left him.

Ford formed the Long Island UFO Network in 1988, and as he became engrossed in abductions and coverups, he came to believe the government was harassing him. His colleagues at work still found him dependable, but others noted his obsessions and mercurial moods.

In 1989, Ford conducted his first big investigation, of a supposed UFO crash in Moriches Bay -- the same bay that TWA Flight 800 plummeted into seven years later, coincidentally (or not). On Sept. 28 of that year, several people reported seeing glowing orange lights in the sky -- even Brookhaven 's Rowe noticed them as she drove home, though she assumed they were flares.

Ford concluded, after extensive interviews of witnesses, that military helicopters shot down a UFO over the bay, killing 17 aliens that were later taken to Brookhaven. Others accepted the explanation that the helicopters dropped aerial flares over the bay that night so the Coast Guard could better rescue a sinking fishing boat.

LIUFON attracted more attention in the paranormal world for its investigation of the so-called South Haven Park Incident in November 1992. For four days the park was closed to the general public because of duck hunting, officials said. Ford, though, believed that a UFO crash caused a fire in the park, and he was backed by several witnesses. Plus, he had a videotape that he believed showed burning UFO wreckage.

He traveled to conferences to show the tape, which Ford said came from a firefighter on the scene. It supposedly revealed uniformed men placing something on the ground, and what appeared to be a body.

Even some UFO investigators were skeptical about the videotape, which Ford admitted was of shoddy quality. But Ford, and those like him, have an amazing capacity for belief: In defiance of physical laws, despite not witnessing the event firsthand, Ford was sure that visitors had come to Long Island for the second time in three years.

Time Traveling

Preston Nichols was sure, too. Portly and absent-minded, he lives with his father in a small, shoddy house cluttered with electronic equipment, books, videotapes and a rock collection. Sitting in his driveway is a school bus Nichols bought to transform into a "mobile UFO investigative unit." On a recent rainy day in East Islip, he fires up the bus's space heater so he can comfortably catalogue his UFO-detection equipment. There's a magnetic detector; a Geiger counter; a gas detector, for residuals of exhaust from helicopters; a mine detector; an ionization detector.

A LIUFON member and friend of Ford's, Nichols, 50, writes books on time travel and government experiments. He has theories about Ford's arrest. Ford got too close to the truth, Nichols claims. He talks of his own intelligence connections and fears that government agents have tampered with the lug nuts on his car.

In his living room, while his fat dog snores, Nichols cues up a video and announces, "I didn't believe in time travel until I saw evidence that I had time-traveled."

He shows part of that evidence: a 1995 tape of a local newscast that briefly features a young firefighter who resembles Nichols. He believes it is his "double," a younger self, visiting from the past.

But wait. Couldn't it just be someone who resembled him? No, Nichols says. Too many people have argued that the resemblance is uncanny.

He sighs. It's hard to convince the nonbelievers.

The Plot Thickens

"This is possibly one of the greatest events in the history of man," John Ford told the Riverhead (N.Y.) News-Review, talking about the alleged saucer crash at South Haven Park. He made the papers and evening newscasts with his pronouncements. People were seeing things in the sky, and Ford became a local "expert."

In 1993 Ford left work on a disability pension after injuring his back; in 1995 his mother died of cancer, leaving him alone in the house. He had more time to pursue UFOs, and more time to worry. Steve Iavarone, his loyal vice president at LIUFON, noticed Ford's increasing paranoia and hostility.

A month before his arrest, Ford told Iavarone that a car in Ford's driveway had money hidden in the gas tank, "but we can't get it out because there's a special detonating device and the car will explode." Iavarone checked out the car, even jumped around on top of it, and it didn't blow up.

Though Iavarone, a burly electrical contractor, laughs at Ford's obsessions, he insists that his own suspicions are true. His phones are tapped and his house is being watched, he believes. Computer-altered voices leave menacing messages on his answering machine. "People look in my window all the time," Iavarone says.

In 1995 Ford began to investigate another alleged crash, which he believed started the August forest fires in eastern Long Island (the ones that may have attracted Preston Nichols's younger self, sent to recover the UFO). In a LIUFON bulletin, Ford wrote that "the government's particle beam weaponry" may have shot down a UFO, and that "this plot involves newspaper sources, county, state and federal officials."

Believing his life to be in danger, Ford started carrying guns at all times. It was around this time that he met Joseph Mazzuchelli -- referred to in the local press as "a wiry, tattooed hot-rodder" or "a tough-talking former junkyard employee." He was also a convicted burglar.

Ford took in Mazzuchelli "like a stray dog," says Ford's co-worker John Marafino. Other friends say Mazzuchelli, 44, began to take advantage of Ford, who gave him money, a cell phone and a credit card. Ford believed that Mazzuchelli had a Mafioso uncle who would finance LIUFON. He gave the ex-felon guns -- which Mazzuchelli allegedly tried to sell.

Enter Kevin Koch. He was interested in Mazzuchelli's guns. He also was under investigation for minor criminal activities. He became a snitch. He told the police about a guy named John Ford, who he heard was hatching a strange scheme involving radium.

According to Koch, Ford claimed that he had hidden outside Republican leader John Powell's home with a rifle two weeks earlier. The night of June 12, 1996, authorities wired Koch and followed him to Ford's house.

Setting the Trap

At 11 p.m. Ford was hanging out with his friends Joe, Kevin, Freddie, Skipper and Teddy. (The last three are wire-haired fox terriers.) The men talked about guy stuff -- who gets more sex, why you can't trust women -- and politics. The conversation took on a dark cast.

"I got that very dangerous stuff in the back of the truck," said Ford, according to a transcript of the police recording.

"How bad is it?" asked Koch.

"It's in... a three-inch lead container, and it's leaking five roentgens per hour."

The dogs bark. Ford puffs his pipe. Somebody goes into the kitchen for drinks. Talk turns to burning down the offices of the Suffolk County Conservative Party, throwing elections into disarray.

Ford mentions Tony Gazzola, an old political adversary. "This isotope, he'll start glowing in 24 hours." They all laugh.

"Put it in a bag, take the little bag and put it underneath his car seat," says Ford.

He also boasts: "I'll kill that [expletive] President Clinton -- up the [expletive]. I'll do it."

"Does Gazzola eat Italian food?" asks Ford. "Take the yellow [expletive] powder, and mix it in with chopped garlic. The radium in with the chopped garlic."

Were the three planning a crime or just joking around? The interpretation of the tape depends on who's listening.

Many have criticized the recording for its poor audibility, but according to the prosecution's official transcript, this was a conspiracy to undermine the local Republican Party, in part by poisoning various officials. Ford specifically mentions John Powell, the chairman of the Suffolk County Republican Committee; Fred Towle, a Suffolk legislator; and Gazzola, the head of the Conservative Party in Brookhaven (and a onetime treasurer of Ford's Conservative Party club).

Police cars filled the normally tranquil Sundial Lane. Ford and Mazzuchelli were arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit murder, criminal solicitation, illegal possession of radioactive materials and reckless endangerment.

Later that day the police and the radiation team were sent to the home of Ford's friend Edward Zabo in nearby Medford, where they found more radioactive materials, several guns, blasting caps, detonators, fuses and bombs. Zabo was arrested on weapons, explosives and radioactive materials charges.

Zabo, 51, had known Ford since college. A Defense Department employee who worked as an electronics quality-control specialist at Northrop Grumman, Zabo told the radiation team that his radioactive and explosive materials came not from the Grumman plant but from a friend -- and Zabo gave them to Ford for disposal.

For many years, radium was used to make watches glow in the dark. It's still used to calibrate Geiger counters, such as those Ford owned. It is a mild carcinogen -- but it's also used to treat cancer.

Despite Ford's pronouncement, captured on tape, that Gazzola would "glow" in 24 hours and Powell would "fall" in 30 days, the radium would actually take nearly 20 years to kill someone if ingested, at which point the victim would be elderly and at a greater risk for cancer anyway. "They picked the wrong substance," says Steve Musolino, a health physicist at Brookhaven.

Powell, Gazzola and Towle were shocked to find out that they were Ford's alleged targets. "This is not something you expect to have to deal with in local elected office, especially in the Suffolk County legislature," says Towle, who holds office in Ford's district.

According to a rambling manifesto Ford wrote from jail, the three officials were responsible for setting forest fires to cover up the 1995 UFO crash. They also planned to "eliminate" Ford so he could not reveal the truth.

The Invaders

When defense lawyer John Rouse got involved with Ford's case, he figured that someone accused of something so outlandish had a prior record of threatening behavior. He subpoenaed Ford's internal-affairs file from the New York State Court Administration, which contained at least four complaints about LIUFON-related threats.

"There was a whole investigation done over a couple years, with similar incidents of huffing and puffing," says Rouse. In each case, officials found that the allegations had no merit and never disciplined Ford.

The lawyer believes his client has been subject to "selective prosecution" -- and is a victim of local politics. Republican District Attorney James Catterson was supported in his November reelection bid by Powell, the Republican chairman. "The DA makes it look like he's saved the Republican leader's life," says Rouse. "He blew this way out of proportion." (Catterson responds that Rouse is "a bitter individual" who "knows better.")

Rouse unsuccessfully sought a change of venue. He then pursued an insanity plea, and four psychiatrists and psychologists determined that Ford was delusional and not fit to stand trial.

One psychiatric evaluation noted that, in the 1970s, as a Conservative Party activist, Ford believed Communists were poised to invade Long Island. Indeed, Ford said, they'd already landed, in submarines.

Years later, it was the UFOs that were invading. Some experts see a correlation between the end of the Cold War and an increasing conspiracy mind-set among Americans. Lacking real enemies, we look for them in our own government -- and in the sky.

Secret Agent Man

Both Zabo and Mazzuchelli have pleaded guilty to lesser charges in exchange for testimony against Ford. Mazzuchelli was sentenced in November to three to nine years for conspiracy; Zabo is free on bail until his March sentencing for weapons and explosives possession. If Ford ever goes to trial he could face up to 75 years in prison. Meanwhile, he is periodically evaluated.

Ford declined to be interviewed, but in letters to Steve Iavarone, the LIUFON vice president, he explained how he hoped to avoid a trial:

"If I go up to Mid-Hudson Psychiatric [Center] for six months as incompetent to stand trial then I'll come back and most likely the charges will be dismissed. . . . So far I left the first doctor mumbling to himself with all the information I gave him. I guess I'll have a repeat performance with the next doctor tomorrow." He did not have to lie or exaggerate to the doctors to be found unfit; he simply told them what he believed to be true, which seemed so fantastical that they could only label it delusional behavior.

Among Ford's beliefs, as stated in his recent handwritten 102-page manifesto, "My Statement to the Media":

He has been a CIA agent since the age of 19, leading a life hidden from family and co-workers. He was not paid, so there is no record of him. Joseph Mazzuchelli was an officer of the Mossad, the Israeli intelligence agency.

Ford was recruited to observe Soviet KGB agents in Queens, who tried to assassinate him five times. He personally stopped a KGB penetration of the Reagan for President Committee.

The AIDS and Ebola viruses were created by aliens to eliminate the population of sub-Saharan Africa. President Nixon, Jackie Gleason, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato and New York Gov. George Pataki, among others, have all seen UFO evidence.

"The court says I am not competent based upon these statements," Ford wrote. "Are they ravings of a madman or the writings of a perfect and master spy?"

Some of his supporters are willing to believe the latter. "He seems to me to fit the profile of an agent," says Peter Moon, who publishes conspiracy books on Long Island.

But others, like Preston Nichols, think that spending 17 months in jail pushed Ford over the edge. "He's as loony as they come, but he's a coherent loon," says Nichols, the time traveler.

Ford knows he's not really crazy, though. He's certain that, in the end, he'll triumph. "I'll bring home the bacon for everyone," he wrote to Iavarone. "Then we'll rebuild LIUFON and destroy the coverup."

He ends the letter his usual way, with a familiar motto from popular culture:

"The truth is out there . . . "

'Eagles Disobey' - More Mars Revelations?

Subject: 'Eagles Disobey' - More Mars Revelations?

Retrieved from: <http://www.riskers.org>

What you are about to read is a preview to the new book, "Eagles Disobey - The Case for Inca City, Mars, by B.J. Wolf." This book is about to be released, and already it has created some "turmoil" in some very high places. RISKERS/NUFOIA first brought this story to you about 9 months ago, and you would not believe how this story has grown. I am getting ahead of myself, please read on.

January 11, 1998 - B.J. Wolf:

Eagles Disobey: The Case for Inca City, Mars doesn't pull any punches when it comes to describing what Dr. Dan Burisch and his team have found on Mars. There are a lot of government 'types' who DO NOT want this book released to the public. They've done everything in their power to prevent us from completing the project and publishing the book - but the one thing that they didn't count on was Dan Burisch's determination to give the people the truth about what is really up on Mars! We're not just talking about a face.....as fantastic as that is - we're talking about an entire extraterrestrial archaeology complete with symbolism, structures, anthropomorphic glyphs etched into the landscape, all reminiscent of Nazca Peru, and more.....a geometry that links them all together in an elegant lattice that speaks undeniably of intelligence at work.

We started out working with images available on the NSSDC website, but quickly learned that there were portions of those images that NASA was reluctant to show to the public; very reluctant.... so we started digging in earnest. What we found made the stuff on the NSSDC website - provided for 'public' consumption - look sick. That's when the threats started. We found ourselves bombarded by written, and verbal attacks. Not only our lives, but also the lives of our families were being threatened unless we agreed to "back off" this project. But none of us would. Instead, we got mad, and more determined than ever.

To date, two of our team members have been run off the road at high speed, one has been shot at (somebody emptied a clip at him while he was walking out of a movie theater), and two of us have had vehicles tampered-with, causing structural critical failures/accidents. All because 'they' don't want you to see what we've found up there on Mars.

What makes this book, and this whole investigation different from others in the past, is the fact that everything we've done can be duplicated by anybody with a decent photographic program and a couple of hours to spend. There is no great mystery here - no scientist telling anybody what to think - no one trying to manipulate public opinion. Our goal is simply to show the public what we saw, then stand back and let people make up their own minds whether it is valid, or not. To us on the Inca City Team, it is self-evident that an intelligent people left these objects, symbols, structures and glyphs on Mars; simple erosion, or other natural forces could not have created the exacting duplication of objects. The undeniable bi-pedal hominid figures we've found etched into the plateau, nor the elegant relationships between the anomalies that are the hallmark of Inca City.

Unfortunately, there seem to be a lot of people, with massive amounts of power and money behind them, who are just as determined the public should not have that opportunity. To them we say "'NUTS'! We are NOT the people characterized by the Brookings Institute. We are a clear thinking, well educated, and socially mature people, who have had more than enough government 'spoon-feeding'". We The People, who funded the NASA missions, which generated these images in the first place, have every right to know what is contained in them. And we're not going to stop until this book is in the hands of the people, where it belongs.

Hello the list, and to Michael who I now address...

I've mentioned the Washington, DC case once or twice over the years, but not the fact I lived on Harvard St. N.W. I lived in an apartment building, but the scenes from the movie were of a 3-storey brownstone house, which was typical for the neighborhood. Funny thing, I cannot recall seeing any motion picture people thereabouts, though. It was fun seeing all the familiar sights in a major movie. I felt like I was a part of the whole thing. To be honest, I didn't fully appreciate the ramifications of the UFO events at the time. ...But I do now.

>An interesting coincidence, indeed. It makes one wonder if >the movie was a prerequisite for "staging" those events.
>I know, some will say that it was not possible for our >government to stage such an event at that time in our history.

>But, I ask, how do we know that for a fact? It seems that >there possibly were "flying disks" in operation on this >development.

>The public has been used as pawns in the international >chess games for many years. Who is to say this was not >just one of those games? Hmmmmmm

I don't think the Washington events were anything but spontaneous. Everything was so open and public. Nowadays, people are afraid of being stigmatized, and are much more shy of talking about UFOs.

I will be happy to assist the investigation in any manner I can.
Any questions asked of me will have the advantage of a first hand recollection. I just hope I can remember enough to be of help.

Regards,

Jack

When I first heard about this book, I envisioned it as containing police reports related to weird happenings. There are many famous instances where we know the police have been called, and presumably, reports have been filed. For example, we know police responded to the Hopkinsville, Kentucky "goblin invasion" in 1955. I'd love to see how they wrote that one up! We also know of cases in which police officers were the main witnesses \\(Lonnie Zamora in Socorro, Herb Schirmer in Nebraska, and PC Alan Godfrey in Todmorden immediately leap to mind\\). Although I only mentioned UFO cases, they have also been involved in cryptozoology \\(bigfoot, Loch Ness monster, and the like\\), poltergeist cases, etc. Unfortunately, there isn't a single official police document in the book, and very few well-known stories. Instead, the author interviewed current and retired law enforcement professionals. This does result in an interesting volume, albeit one which is essentially anecdotal. The coverage of topics is fairly broad \\(including voodoo, cattle mutilations, and bigfoot\\), and should appeal to people who just want an exciting read. I have to say, though, that the caption for a bigfoot still from the Patterson film \\(the still had nothing to do with the specific report included in the book, by the way\\) was very inaccurate. It begins, "This photo of 'Big Gal', shot near Portland, Oregon, in January 1967..." Well, I've never heard "Patty" referred to as "Big Gal", the movie \\(I think it's worth noting in the caption that it was a movie, not a still shot\\) was supposedly taken near Bluff Creek, California, and the date is allegedly in October of 1967, not January. The author may, of course, have not written the caption, but it certainly throws the fact-checking on this book into doubt. Still, it\]\(http://members.aol.com/Weirdware2/bwwb-weirdmisc.html\)](http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN=0809231212/bufosweirdworld/) is well-written and entertaining, and may enlighten some people as to the involvement in this area of "trained observers".

a transcript of the April 19, 1996 "Dateline NBC" features Dennis Murphy interviewing Edgar Mitchell:

*****

MURPHY: Do you think it's more likely than not that extraterrestrials have been to this planet?

Mr. E. MITCHELL: From what I now understand and have experienced and seen the evidence for, I think the evidence is very strong, and large portions of it are classified.

MURPHY: Classified by whom?

Mr. E. MITCHELL: By governments.

MURPHY: You're saying it-it-it not only likely happened, but there's been a cover-up?

Mr. E. MITCHELL: Oh I--I think if it has happened the way it seems to be, there's definitely been a cover-up.

MURPHY: (Voiceover) Mitchell wouldn't name names. but he says some of his information comes from former highly classified US government employees, people who say our government picked up sonic engineering secrets from UFOs.

This is so hilarious. What's that word New Ager's use?
Synchronicity? Or is it real ET humor?

I live in Newmarket, Ontario, and on Dec. 28 I was just outside Francestown N.H. on vacation.

Francestown and Exeter are about 20 miles away.

An abductee friend of mine who I was visiting went out UFO watching just outside Francestown out in the hills on the 28th.
We watched a number of jets while we did that 'abductee' thing and tried to communicate our desire to see something.

It took a while, and it was damned cold, but between 9:30 and 11:00 PM we observed a diffused light appear "above" the horizon and fly towards us.

I recognized this "diffused" type of light from research work
I've assisted with on the west end of Lake Ontario, you know, where the beasties can be seen flying up the Niagra river and then submerge into the water?
(Go see it for yourselves guys).

Anyway as the light flew up towards us my friend told me to get the binoculars. At this point it was approaching us and was at approx. 45 degrees above the horizon. We turned around to get the binoc's and when we turned around the bloody thing had disappeared from the sky.

We saw no red or blue light on either side of the diffused light.
The diffused soft white light was very different from ALL the other jet's that we saw and was flying at a vector different from all the other jets we observed. I am a bit familiar with aircraft externals from things that I have learned from my boss who used to work in weapons development for the British Aircraft Corporation, as well as reverse engineering foreign technology for them under contract to the RAF.

So list, I have no public proof, just a story, so you can nail the coffin on me and not worry about having to disprove anything.

Sleep well.

>"It was brighter than anything I've ever seen," he said.

What we saw was not bright but a notably softer, diffused whitish color about half the size of a dime.

>Jackson said he's heard from a Hampton Falls woman who saw a similar >blinding flash in the same area about a month earlier.

>He plans to meet with a UFO investigator near the site.

>Peter Geremia, director of the state chapter of a group called the >Mutual UFO Network, said an investigation begins by ruling out >explainable causes such as aircraft or the weather. He said some UFO >investigations take several months, but most last only a couple of >weeks.---Brookline Copshmrnas

<snip> <on the pepper spray story>

I just thought this was so hilarious when I read this Errol I had to send something in. My friend from N.H. noticed the post first and emailed me. I'm so used to not being believed I've given up telling anybody but other abductee's about this sort of stuff. But this was too funny to pass up.

I guess there must be a Newmarket in New Hampshire as well. The poor guy's on a mission who saw this thing. Dear God I hope he can put up with ridicule and the loss of long term friends.

In peace and friendship, Whitewolf.

'Alien Autopsy' film 'Danger' sign

Subject: 'Alien Autopsy' film 'Danger' sign

According to the Skeptical Inquirer (July 1997), John English, a former director of the International Aerospace Hall of Fame and a graphics designer, noted that the 'DANGER' sign on the wall of the autopsy room was a standard government-issue sign. He tracked the graphics design to a specific OSHA issue. It was allegedly for government use in 1973 (The sign).

Can anyone verify this ?

Yours,

Philip Mantle.

SPANISH POLICE ARREST
UFO BELIEVERS IN THE CANARY ISLANDS

On Thursday, January 8, 1998, at about 1:30 a.m., Spanish police raided an apartment house in Barrio de la Salud, in Santa Cruz de Tenerife and arrested 32 members of a local UFO group.

Tenerife is the largest of the seven Islas Canarias (Canary Islands), owned by Spain and located in the Atlantic Ocean just west of Africa.

A few hours earlier, Spanish police arrested the group's founder, Dr. Heide Fittkau-Garthe, 57, a psychologist from Germany who settled on Tenerife back in 1985.

According to Antonio Lopez Ojeda of Spain's Ministry of the Interior, Dr. Fittkau-Garthe was arrested "on charges of attempting to induce suicide and was being held at a Tenerife police station."

"Mr. Lopez Ojeda said the police believed the sect was an offshoot of the Order of the Solar Temple, whose followers have carried out mass suicides in Canada, France and Switzerland. He said the police were still investigating." (See the New York Times for January 9, 1998, "Suicide Sect Leader Held On Canary Islands," page A-8)

The group had two names for themselves, Centro Sagrado de Isis (Sacred Center of Isis) and Orden del Santuario Solar (Order of the Solar Shrine), plus a headquarters in Santa Cruz, the largest city on Tenerife.

Members arrested included 14 men, 13 women and five children between the ages of 12 and 6. The prisoners are being held incommunicado.

"Police spokesman Juan Antonio Perez said" Dr. Fittkau-Garthe "had 'brainwashed' her disciples, and they would need to be 'deprogrammed.'"

"'A chemical substance was found at the house and it seems the group members were going to use it to poison themselves,' Perez said."

"'The minds of the 32 victims have been programmed; they've been brainwashed,' Perez said, 'They have to be deprogrammed before they can cooperate with police.'" (Editor's Comment: Yes, readers, that's what the man said. Don't take my word for it. Look it up. See the Boston, Mass. Globe for January 10, 1998, "Police Find Poison at Home of Suspected Cult Leader," page A-9.)

At a news conference in Santa Cruz de Tenerife on January 9, police spokesmen said the group was planning a trip to Pico de Teide, an extinct volcano 80 kilometers (50 miles) southeast of Santa Cruz. At the summit, they reportedly planned to "rendezvous with the space brothers."

"The group, which may be linked to the infamous Solar Temple cult or a Hindu apocalyptic sect, had planned to kill themselves at the top of Tenerife's Teide volcano, from where they believed their souls would be picked up by a spaceship, officials said." (Boston, Mass. Globe, January 10, 1998)

According to Heliodoro Rodriguez, subdelegate for Santa Cruz de Tenerife, police noticed an influx of German and Belgian citizens in recent weeks, all members of Centro Sagrado de Isis. Dr. Heide Fittkau-Garthe "was considered a kind of prophet."

Rodriguez praised "the collaborative effort by Interpol and the German police" who reportedly spied on "the cult and its activities in Spain."

Rodriguez also declined to discuss whether or not the Ministry of the Interior had planted informers in the group during the past few months.

The official shocked Spanish TV viewers when he mentioned that the Ministry had compiled a list of "200,000 members of dangerous sects" in Spain. (Muchas gracias a Pedro P. Canto para esos informes espanol.)

(Editor's Comment: It looks like Heide Fittkau-Garthe and her followers are getting the John Ford treatment. Has NATO declared war on UFO enthusiasts?)

UFOs SIGHTED IN ROCKLAND, MASSACHUSETTS

On Wednesday, December 31, 1997, at 8:52 a.m., Lynn S. was driving in rush-hour traffic in Rockland, Massachusetts (population 15,695), a suburb on Route 139 approximately 25 miles (40 kilometers) southeast of Boston.

As she neared Reed's Pond, on Market Street in Rockland, she spotted "a cigar-shaped craft that hovered for a minute and 45 seconds above the waters of Reed's Pond before it plunged in and exploded. I saw the object come across the sky, pulsating a blue light from the top with two strong flashing lights on each side."

"Traffic slowed, but no one seemed to care enough to get out and see what the object was," she reported. "As I approached the traffic lights, people were pointing back at the pond. But without the (traffic) light working, drivers were beginning to swear, cut people off and no one was paying any attention to the object."

"Upon driving home and finding I had no electricity, I called the electric company but only got a recording. I began calling other residents of the town. They all said they had no electricity after they 'heard the planes go over.'"

At 9:15 a.m., Lynn drove back to Reed's Pond. "To my amazement, a black ball hovered in the sky above it, as big as a silver dollar, but nothing was astir in the pond. I noticed dead ducks and seagulls floating on the surface."

The UFO zipped away seconds later. "For the record, I never heard any planes." (Email Interview)

LUMINOUS UFO SEEN IN WESTERN IOWA

On Friday, January 2, 1998, at 6 p.m., Jason B. and Brandon C. were walking along the railroad tracks in their hometown of Missouri Valley, Iowa (population 2,888) when they spotted a strange light in the sky.

"While walking down the tracks, we observed an extremely bright light off towards Council Bluffs (i.e. to the south--J.T.). At first we thought it was a falling star," Jason and Brandon reported. "We stopped to watch it for about 20 seconds."

"It was directly above us and circled the grain elevator," Jason said. "Then it sped off very fast, following the railroad tracks towards the east."

Missouri Valley is on Iowa Highway 30 approximately 130 miles (208 kilometers) west of Des Moines. (Many thanks to Tim Hagemester of NACOMM for this report.)

SPHEROID UFO SIGHTED IN SAN BENITO, TEXAS

A UFO was sighted in San Benito, Texas (population 20,125) during the evening of Tuesday, December 23, 1997.

A married couple and their two sons, ages 16 and 12, were traveling southeast on Highway 77. The father, R.C., and his family were enjoying the radio and had just passed the small local airport.

Suddenly, at precisely 6:59 p.m., they saw a light speeding across the sky. The UFO was a small, soundless ball of white light. It was 35 degrees above the horizon and was traveling south in a straight line at jet speed.

The family had it in view for 15 seconds during which time the car radio went dead. The UFO dropped behind a group of trees. When their car cleared the trees, the UFO was gone. (Direct submission from a Texas resident.)

AIRLINE PILOT SEES A UFO FROM BEACH IN MEXICO

On Saturday, January 3, 1998, at 3 a.m., airline pilot Gary Sanders was standing on the beach in Puerto Vallarta, a seaside resort on the Bahia de Banderas 580 kilometers (348 miles) west of Mexico City.

"I am an airline pilot with over 30 years' flying experience, including 24 years with the USAF and Air National Guard," he reported. "While standing on the beach and looking at the stars with another airline pilot, I observed a reddish-colored light, which I initially thought was a meteorite, move rapidly from east to west."

"As I pointed out the light to my companion, the object suddenly changed direction by about 135 degrees of turn and very sharply. The movement defied any laws of flight and physics that I am aware of. The light made another rapid change of course to a westerly heading, then disappeared out of sight."

"I was so startled that I immediately confirmed with my companion what I had just seen. I have never seen any flying object perform this type of maneuver before." (Many thanks to Henny van der Pluijm and Errol Bruce-Knapp for this report.)

AUSTRALIAN UFO FLAP RINGS IN THE NEW YEAR

UFO sightings in Australia's Victoria state rang in the southern hemisphere's New Year.

On December 31, 1997, a "bright orange illumination" was seen "traveling from the southeast to the northwest" over Pakenham, Narre Warren and the Dandenong mountain range in Victoria.

Ten minutes past midnight, on January 1, 1998, "a high-altitude illumination," possibly an object in orbit reflecting sunlight, was observed for three minutes over Victoria, heading north.

At 12:17 a.m., witnesses reported seeing "a blue-white illumination 30 degrees to the northeast" over Victoria's state forest, moving across the northern sky.

From 12:20 to 12:25 a.m., witnesses reported seeing "ten meteorites crossing the sky, traveling from the east over central Victoria."

Two days later, on January 3, 1998, residents of Bendigo, Vic., 125 miles (200 kilometers) northwest of Melbourne, at approximately 2:45 p.m., "reported spotting a hamburger-shaped UFO. The object appeared to be silver in colour." After hovering for a few seconds, the UFO "shot straight up into the upper atmosphere until out of sight."

That evening, at 10:30 p.m., people in Newcastle, New South Wales (N.S.W.), a port city 110 miles (176 kilometers) north of Sydney, "reported sighting a huge blue-green illumination passing overhead."

On Sunday, January 4, 1998, at midnight, ten residents of Keybrough, Vic., a suburb of Melbourne, "reported sighting two bright orange fireball illuminations" flying from south to north over Melbourne's eastern suburbs. "The illuminations appeared to travel faster than a small aeroplane and following each other for some time before coming into a vertical arrangement (i.e. one on top of the other), then reduced speed and came to a dead stop. The higher illumination appeared to drop a bright light to the other. Then they both moved off to the north until out of sight." (Many thanks to Ross Dowe of Australia's National 24-Hour UFO Hotline for these reports.)

UFO CHASES MOTORIST IN THE BAVARIAN ALPS

On Saturday, January 3, 1998, Emil D. was driving on an autobahn (highway) in Germany's Bayerische Alpen (Bavarian Alps) near Traunstein, a small city 110 kilometers (66 miles) east of Munchen (Munich).

Suddenly, he looked in his rear-view mirror and saw "a gigantic flying disc" coming up behind him. The UFO was described as "bright silver with rotating lights along the rim."

The UFO pursued Emil's car for 8 kilometers (5 miles) before rising quickly in altitude and zipping away over the southern horizon.

The huge daylight disc was also seen in Muhldorf, 60 kilometers (36 miles) north of Traunstein, and across the border near Sankt Johan am Tirol, Austria. (See the Sueddeutsche Zeitung for January 7, 1998. Danke schoen a Josef Schedel.)

STRATHCLYDE JOLTED BY MYSTERIOUS TREMORS

Strange earth tremors have rocked Scotland's Strathclyde region twice in the past couple of weeks.

In mid-December, a strong tremor shook the multi-million-pound Centre One building in Stewartfield. "More than 30 Inland Revenue (the UK's tax agency--J.T.) workers were evacuated... Desks rocked, computer screens flickered and windows rattled as employees were whisked to a safety zone. The tremor triggered emergency readings at several seismological stations in Scotland."

During the early hours of Monday, December 22, 1997, a second round of tremors struck the East Kilbride area, 30 miles (48 kilometers) southeast of Glasgow.

"Frightened residents in Greenhills, Westwood and Calderglen have reported another round of tremors...A number of people called the (East Kilbride) News to say they had been all shook up by a quake in the early morning hours..."

"'It was like a low overhead thunder directly above the house,' said Aileen Wilson, 39, from Gasgoyne, Westwood. She said that she "feared for her seven-month-old baby daughter when the tremor started just before 7 a.m."

The tremor "was followed by a series of noises like fireworks going off,' she explained, 'It sounded like a gas explosion coming from the Westwood playing fields. I jumped out of bed and lifted my baby Lynsay. Everything in the room was shaking. It lasted quite a long time.'"

"Thomas Stewart, 39, from Carnoustie Drive, Greenhills, heard deafening whirring noises when his windows shivered violently around 7 s.m."

"'It sounded like a rocket,' said the Ministry of Defence worker. 'I'm puzzled as to what exactly is going on and would like an answer.'"

"Glenn Ford of the British Geological Survey in Edinburgh said, 'This was NOT an earthquake and went on for too long for a sonic boom. It is very strange, but we are getting readings on our instruments, but the actual cause remains a mystery so far.'" (See the East Kilbride News for December 30, 1997, "Mystery Tremors," page 3. Many thanks to Dean Ladds of Flying Saucer Review for forwarding this news article.)

UFO SIGHTED IN CHINA

On Tuesday, December 23, 1997, hundreds of Chinese workers in an industrial area on the outskirts of Canton spotted a UFO in the sky.

The UFO was described as "an oblong oval with an array of windows. The windows had a bright corona of light around them. A periodic ray of light burst from the craft's underside at several intervals."

The UFO alternately hovered and flew slowly over the factories and houses for several minutes, then flew away at an extremely high speed.

Canton, the largest city in Guangdong province, is 1,296 kilometers (810 miles) south of Beijing. (See the Italian newspaper Il Stampa for December 27, 1997. Grazie a Edoardo Russo di CISU per questo rapporto.)

1949: STRANGE PHENOMENON IN GARDNERVILLE

One of the strangest UFO phenomena on record occurred at the farm of Sara Elizabeth Lampe and her husband near Gardnerville, Nevada, about 15 miles (24 kilometers) south of Carson City, the state capital.

On a cold January morning in 1949, Mrs. Lampe wrote, following a heavy snowfall, she glanced out her parlor window and saw something strange.

"Gradually my eyes focused upon a pale gray stain, irregularly shaped and no bigger than my two hands. It rested on the smooth crest (of snow)... about three rods from the house and in line with the window. Almost at once this fuzzy gray shadow that was not a shadow bloomed into a disc of clear white light approximately three feet in diameter. It lay there for fully two minutes. Then suddenly contracting into a brilliant, orange-tinted stream five or six inches wide, flowed swiftly over the snow toward my window and, to all appearances, exploded soundlessly against the stone foundation of the intervening front porch."

"Several tongues of scintillating red-and-blue flame spurted a few inches above the two-and-a-half foot high wainscoting of the porch. That was all. When daylight came, we searched conscientiously but found no signs, marks or tracks of any kind that might help to explain this phenomenon." (See THE CASE FOR THE UFO by Morris K. Jessup, Citadel Press, New York, N.Y., 1955, page 168)

Honored List --

After snipping all the clever condescension and the laughing up patronizing sleeves (with the tongue entrenched, firmly, in business as usual media cheeks) -- this article still managed to describe an innocent David with an unjust Goliath standing on his chest. An oblique comparison to a rogues gallery of kooks and serial murderers does not discount the suspect circumstances of Ford's incarceration, and painting his tormentors as rational politicians while likening Ford to a "John Belushi look alike, with the voice of Elmer Fudd," is a distracting obfuscation of the real issue. I don't care if John Ford pranced in his moon lit back yard with a peacock feather in his ass -- the issue is his arbitrary, suspect, and contrived persecution! Read the article, have a big yuck at John Ford's expense -- luxuriate in the faux relief that he is a "nut" after all (it must be true, it's what the mainstream says). We'll all have a similar laugh when we're reading a similar article about YOU!

>>Hey Jack.

>>Thanks for posting your experience in regards to the 1952
>>Washington Fly Overs.

>>I have studied that case for over 30 years, and I am finally >>glad to have someone come forward who was actually there when >>they were taking place.

>>In all the years we have posted in FIDO UFO, I have never >>heard you tell that story. That doesn't mean that you >>haven't.

>Hello the list, and to Michael who I now address...

>I've mentioned the Washington, DC case once or twice over the >years, but not the fact I lived on Harvard St. N.W. I lived in >an apartment building, but the scenes from the movie were of a >3-storey brownstone house, which was typical for the >neighborhood. Funny thing, I cannot recall seeing any motion >picture people thereabouts, though. It was fun seeing all the >familiar sights in a major movie. I felt like I was a part of the >whole thing. To be honest, I didn't fully appreciate the >ramifications of the UFO events at the time. ...But I do now.

Grin...yes, I guess you would. I think I would feel the same way. But, like you, I would wonder how they filmed the scene without "seeing" a film crew in the area. Those things are not usually filmed in say, five minutes.

I was an extra on the film: "A LEAGUE OF THEIR OWN," the story of the Women's Baseball League in the 1940's during the War years.

Virtually any scene they filmed; even though it only took a moment to portray in the actual film, would take 15 to 30 minutes to set up, lay out, and shoot. They would shoot it from different angles. I guess later when they were screening the footage, they decided which scene was the best.

Grin...Having seen the movie, it appears that my "walk throughs," were left on the cutting room floor. It was an interesting experience however. My wife, daughter and I were there for three days.

So, from your point of reflection, what do you now consider to be
"the full ramifications," of the UFO events of the time?

>>An interesting coincidence, indeed. It makes one wonder if >>the movie was a prerequisite for "staging" those events.
>>I know, some will say that it was not possible for our >>government to stage such an event at that time in our history.
>>But, I ask, how do we know that for a fact? It seems that >>there possibly were "flying disks" in operation on this >>planet at that time which were of "terrestrial" design and >>development.

>>The public has been used as pawns in the international >>chess games for many years. Who is to say this was not >>just one of those games? HMMMMMMMM

>I don't think the Washington events were anything but >spontaneous. Everything was so open and public. Nowadays, people >are afraid of being stigmatized, and are much more shy of talking >about UFOs.

At the time of the fly overs, yes...however, shortly thereafter, the lid of secrecy clamped down and it was difficult to get any further information on the "incidents."

There have been several documentaries made which touched on this event and showed the alleged radar trackings. Yet, we still have a high level of denial surrounding this event.

>I will be happy to assist the investigation in any manner I can.
>Any questions asked of me will have the advantage of a first >hand recollection. I just hope I can remember enough to be >of help.

>Regards,

>Jack

Thanks Jack...I appreciate the offer.

REgards, Mike

> actually cited evidence, or has no astronaut in fact ever > claimed there was a 'cover up'?

Below is my transcription a small segment of an Art Bell interview with Edgar Mitchell. It begins about 15:50 into the 11-4-97 Real Audio archive at:

<http://ww2.audionet.com/artbell/archive.html>

The interview was sparked by a 10-15-97 Associated Press article about Mitchell's Phoenix Prophets' Conference remarks, apparently regarding recovered alien spacecraft. What seems to be another version of this article is currently ensconced in the ACC website at:

<http://american-computer.com/mitchell.htm>

*****

Art: ...Somebody faxed me the following Associated Press article, "Phoenix AP [Phoenix, mind you, dateline]: Former astronaut Edgar Mitchell is among those who believe aliens have crash landed on Earth....Mitchell, who, in 1971, became the sixth man...to walk on the moon, wants congressional hearings into what he calls a secret US government that knows all about it. He believes some military and other planes use technology derived from alien spacecraft that have been captured and dissected....'When I went to the moon twenty-six years ago, it was conventional wisdom, religiously and philosophically, that we were still the biological center of the universe,' Mitchell told a spiritual gathering called the Prophet's Conference on Saturday. 'Few if any thinking, knowledgeable people accept that theory anymore.' " End quote. Here, from Florida, is Dr. Edgar Mitchell. Doctor, welcome to the program.

Dr. Mitchell: Hello, good evening, Art, how are you today?

Art: I'm just fine. I remember when I first called you a couple of weeks ago, and I read you this headline from the AP, you laughed and laughed and laughed [ha-ha-ha], and said, well, they might have pushed the envelope a little bit on this one, in the writing of it.

Dr. Mitchell: Yes, I think we can say that.

Art: [Haw haw haw!] Is it, aside from the headline, well, let's talk about the headline, "Former Astronaut Edgar Mitchell is among those who believe aliens have crash landed on Earth."
Respond to that. Would you say that is true, false, or...

Dr. Mitchell: It's squishy. I can't say I believe anything, Art. I simply look at the evidence, and I have no first-hand evidence in that particular instance. But I, fortunately, have been listening to people of government and military background, who, during the course of their official duties, claim that those are true events. I have no reason to disbelieve these folks. I judge most of them are senior, and can be checked out as to have been where they said they have been, and had the responsibilities that they claim. So, I tend to believe that what they say is true.

Art: Doctor, what kind of people are we talking about here?
Pilots...?

Dr. Mitchell: Well, pilots, but I'm thinking more in this case of people with some military or government management capability or investigative responsibility, over the years, who were in a position, due to their official duties, to have this type of knowledge....I certainly don't want to, I don't diminish in any way the reports of average citizens, or even police officers, who, I'm sure, run into these things all the time, but I was more concerned with the folks - with regard to this back engineering question - more concerned with the folks who presumably were there and had the responsibility to know.

Art: How convinced are you, and that doesn't mean that you believe, because that requires a leap of faith, but just based on what you've heard, you know, you've got the whole Colonel Corso business going on now, I assume you're somewhat familiar with the story he's told, that there has been some retrieval, somewhere, sometime, of technology that came not of the Earth, that we took advantage of, back-engineered, in some way...

Dr. Mitchell: Well, there are several folks that tell that same story, and I have no way to judge the details of it, except that it rings fairly true from what the world of circumstantial evidence points.

A FEARFUL SYMMETRY

A TRUE STORY OF ALIEN INTRUSION INTO HUMAN LIVES

By D. Lynne Bishop

Editorial

On Saturday 10th January 1998 UK.UFO.NW were very honoured to have on it's IRC (internet relay chat) #UFO channel Graham W. Birdsall editor of the highly popular UK periodical 'UFO Magazine'. UFO Magazine has 140,000 readers in over 36 countries.

The 70 visitors to the channel came from as far or as near as:
Sweden : Iceland : UK : USA : Isle of Man (UK) : Northern Island :
Germany : Netherlands

We would like to thank Graham for his patience and perseverance during the week leading up the meeting. Not everything went to plan. Graham was good enough to drive to his office's at Quest Publications to connect. When you consider he did this at 11pm (UK time) at night, he put himself out for us. We were all most grateful.

Our thanks also to Andrew Metcalf, UFO Magazine's web creator for sorting irc programs out at Graham's end.

Further thanks go to Crow & Raine for making an excellent job of moderating the meeting and also to Paul_J for whom without the meeting would not have been possible on that night. Hackers took a hand in trying to shut down the irc servers used by our channel throughout the world. Paul_J worked his fingers to the bone getting everything back on line and keeping it that way.

The log of the meeting is below.

Readers are reminded that we have Dan Sherman author of Above Black Project Preserve Destiny as our special guest on Saturday 31st January. Further details will be posted shortly.

Graham Birdsall on the UK-UFO-NW IRC #UFO Channel

This is a cleaned up log, of the United Kingdom UFO Network's Saturday 10th January 1998 IRC meeting on #UFO with guest Graham Birdsall editor of the UK's UFO Magazine. Graham kindly gave up a couple of hours of his spare time to answer some questions for the visitors to the channel. Below you will find a list of questions that were asked along with his replies. The name in between the < >'s e.g. <Lloyd> is the nick name of the IRC user asking the question and where you see <Graham> is of course the start of Graham's reply.

CREDITS:

We would like to thank Dave_UFO for arranging this meeting with Graham Birdsall.

We would like to thank Graham for attending this meeting and answering the questions put to him.

We would like to thank all the people involved in asking questions.

We would like to thank everyone who attended the meeting.

We would like to thank Crow & Raine for moderating the meeting

Session Start: Sat Jan 10 23:12:21 1998

*** Crow sets mode: +o Graham

<Dave_UFO> Hello everyone and welcome to the UK.UFO.NW -IRC- UFO channel. We are very honoured to have with us tonight our special guest Graham Birdsall. Graham is the editor of the highly popular publication 'UFO Magazine'.

<Dave_UFO> Raine's busy typing. We'll be there in a sec.

<Graham> Roger that, perhaps if I end with GWB rather than ?? it might help you GWB

*** Raine sets mode: +m

<Dave_UFO> Graham: Thats great thanks.

<Dave_UFO> Ok Raine - are we ready?

<Crow> ok we are nearly ready Graham when you have answered the questions would you plz type ?? to indicate you are ready for the next question

<Graham> How about GWB

<Crow> GWB will be fine thanks.

<Raine> This channel is now being moderated, please /msg raine or crow with your questions and NOT Graham

<Dave_UFO> We have had a few hiccups over the last week, preparing Graham to be with us tonight. I would certainly like to thank him for his patience and perseverance and also Andrew Metcalf who got the connection going at Graham's end. Graham has certainly put himself out for us tonight as he has actually had to go into his offices at Quest Publications to be with us.

<Dave_UFO> Graham we thank you for being here and hope that you enjoy this evening as I'm sure we will.

<Graham> Thanks GWB

<Crow> #ufo2 is open for discussion if you want to join <Raine> Graham are you gpoing to give us a quick introduction please before we start with the questions?

<Graham> Well, it's been a long day so I don't want to bore anyone, but I've been in this subject now for 31 years and the enthusiasm is still there to get at the answers GWB

<Raine> <CoolNess> First I'd like to say Hi and welcome to #ufo Mr Birdsall. What I would like to ask is this. With reference to the Alien Autopsy film you are on record as saying that you believe it to be fake. Now the evidence is fairly equal as to whether its fake or genuine so is it your instinct/gut feeling or something else that makes you believe it (the AA) to be fake?

<Graham> Ever since Ray Santilli made his comments about seeing a certain President in the observation window, I've expressed my doubts. We still await independent analysis on one single frame of the footage, not the video tape, so what more can I say?

*** Phill changes topic to "Graham Birdsall, Editor of the UK UFO Magaine is currently the guest speaker. To ask a question, /msg it to Raine."

<Graham> GWB

<Raine> <Tinman-BF> question for Graham - Do you believe UFOs are man made or originate from other planets were alien species may control them

<Graham> I'm convinced a small residue of UFOs are "not of this world" and the evidence suggests they are intelligently controlled. Whether these are piloted or remotely controlled is anyone's guess, but folks have been reporting a variety of occupants for the last 50 years, and they don't look like us GWB

<Raine> <CoolNess> Graham, have you ever heard "news" first from internet newsgroups such as Errol Bruce- Knapps excellent Global Updates, and have you ever been tempted to print some of the postings?

<Graham> Yes, I have indeed heard a great deal of news first time of the Internet, and Errol's newsgroup is always interesting. Timothy Good met with Errol while at a lecture for a military get-together in Canada a few weeks ago and spoke highly of him GWB

<Raine> <Crow> Hi Graham thanks for joining us tonight, can you tell us if when you recently visited Brazil, you recieved any new information concerning the Varginha Case.

<Graham> Considerable news came out of Brasilia, not least about the Varginha incident. I persuaded a British film crew to come to Brazil and they will be doing a one-hour special on this case. I'll keep my responses brief to give your questioners a fair crack GWB

<Raine> <Dave_UFO> I was seriously of the opinion that as the year 2000 quickly approaches we were almost at the point of a Governmental release that UFOs and aliens do actually exist. That was until the USAF made that ridiculous statement in 1997 claiming that the bodies found at Roswell were crash dummies. What does your vast experience tell you. Are we any closer to learning the truth officially?

<Graham> Any dummy can tell us dummy, said Walter Haut. The air force have invented time travel for dummies, said Stan Friedman. The Pentagon shot itself in the foot, and the journalists at that press conference were sufficiently well informed about Roswell to suggest as such. Brasilia had a senior Federal Government official open proceedings, and two senior Brazilian Air Force officials were there at the closing ceremony, on stage. Some governments are very <Raine> <Bigyin> Was there any new UFO sightings discussed at the conference?

<Graham> Plenty, from dozens of international as well as Brazilian researchers. The best evidence came from the Chilean representatives (some of whom now sit on the Air Force Committee on UFOs). I saw some staggering video tape which had many jaws (including mine) drop to the floor. Amazing stuff and a "flying ring" that appeared in the sky, turned-turtle, and then dropped to speed off horizontally just a few hundred feet above the ground. No wonder the Chile

<Crow> Graham I think you are typing a bit too much text in one go and we are losing it the last words we saw was: No wonder the Chile

<Graham> Sorry - I wrote 'no wonder the Chilean AF established a committee on UFOs GWB

<Raine> <HarryD> Mr Graham (or is this your firstname?;) ..are you aware of the fact that many publicers today are being USED to spread desinfo.... for instance in the case of BillyMeier ,who I know personally, which is being defamed awfully...but who's contacts are real as I have personally witnessed !!<HarryD> But it seems that Kall Korff's desinfo seems to be copied by all the publicers without researching the claims of Billy being fraudulent...

<Crow> people if you are not on the Harrow.UK.EU.UltraNET.Org it maybe a good idea to change server seems the servers are under an attack from hackers

<Graham> Billy Meier's material is suspect because models were found close to his Swiss home that were very similar to what appeared in his photos and footage, but Wendelle Stevens swears by the guy. Perhaps if Bruce Mac' got hold of the original negatives and footage, we could make a decision one way or the other GWB

<Raine> <Tinman-BF> Q: What do you feel about the subject of government secrecy

<Graham> Government secrecy on this subject is well documented, or should I say, un-documented through the release of about 30,000 hitherto classified UFO papers. I don't believe in the worldwide conspiracy stuff however, can you honestly see the USA in a liaison with Iran, Iraq or Libya over this issue? GWB

<Raine> <Squeezer> Mr Graham, have there been any recent developments on the Roswell, NM, July 1947 crash?

<Graham> <Graham> I met with Jesse Marcel Jnr in Brasilia and found him to be a very honest and somewhat humble, shy gentleman. Jesse's comments about his father, the material, the case in general, were highly sincere. He was told by a high-ranking official in Washington D.C. that Roswell happened, and was not science fiction. He repeated that publicly in Brasilia. GWB <Raine> <CyDoNiA> What are your thoughts and theories on the Mars and Moon abnormalities, Mainly the Face on Mars ?

<Graham> I met with Dr. Mark Carlotto in Brasilia (had him speak for us at Solihull UK last February). Mark told me that he had a meeting with NASA's Global Surveyor team, they promised him and Proff.

Stanley McDaniel that everytime the space probe passes over Cydonia, they will switch their high image cameras to maximum. That's an exclusive for you. GWB <Raine> <KennethA> The last I heard was that Santilli refuses to release the film to Kodak for analysis (the original film, that is). Doesn't this indicate to you that he's not being honest about his claims?

<Graham> I can't possibly comment....GWB

<Raine> <Aristotl> Mr. Birdsall, in your years of investigating the UFO phenomenon, have you noticed anything which you would describe as peculiarly British, ie. is generally not seen outside the UK?

<Graham> Fascinating question. Need some time to ponder on that, but my initial reaction is to say "No". What is reported by folks here in Britain is very similar to events, incidents reported across the globe. I have to say however that British Ufology is well thought of and much valued overseas. GWB

<Raine> <Bigyin> what new UFO news came out of the conference in Brazil?

<Graham> I'd be here until 6.00am answering that one. Outstanding presentations by so many people, but the Russian Cosmonaut, Alexandr Balandine told the packed venue that future anomalous images captured by their cosmonauts would be shared between the Russian Space Agency, NASA, and a Forum of UFO researchers. Alexandr spent six months on MIR. GWB

<Raine> <Benat2> forwarded from red (~Java_New1@pool1-18.netmatters.com) on irc.ultranet.org:<red> Hi graham, Do u think we should be worried about the millennium.

<Graham> Only if you're hoping to see in the New Year in Edinburgh, tickets will be hard to get...GWB

<Raine> <Dave_UFO> Wendle Stevens made a big play of the Nashville, Tennessee UFO which you have featured. It now appears that these photograph's were nothing more than disco lights and dry ice in some sort of night club. Has Wendelle Stevens made any further comments on this?

<Graham> No, he hasn't. But you are correct, the Nashville UFO pics do appear to have been a classic set of disco lights. People who are in the business of hoaxing take great delight in fooling the UFO community, so we have to be constantly on our guard. It's frustrating, and time wasting, but Wendelles in his eighties now and I feel for the guy. GWB

<Raine> <SickBoy> Hello. What evidence do you base your magazine's assertion that unidentified lights in the sky, are likely to be of intelligent ET origin?

<Graham> I don't, and never have made that assertion. Go back 20 years and you will find my term of UFOs as Unconventional Flying Objects was probably the first time such a terminology had been made. I used it to describe RPVs and UAVs. GWB

<Raine> <minator> Graham, First of all Great mag. There have been a few interesting developments recently: alien embryo, UFO crash filmed, the mexican film. Do you think these are real or the work of hoaxers & why should so much be going on at once?

<Graham> Primarily because the means to communicate such events have improved way beyond anything that was available to us in the late 60s and 70s. I met with Jaime Maussan in Brasilia, spent an hour interviewing him, watched his excellent presentation. I'm now convinced the 6 August '97 event in Mexico City did happen. Over 20 witnesses, but as for the authenticity of the video tape? Jaime told me, and I quote: "I don't know..." He did have his reasons howe

<Crow> grayham I think you are typing a bit to much text in one go you can answer in smaller size chunks of text if you would

<Graham> Roger that. GWB

<Raine> <GPZarquon> Question : Does Graham believe in any type of Time Travel ?

<Graham> All things are possible, who is to say? Note the recent soundings by astronomers who found that a black hole was distorting, and I quote: "Time and space". Makes you think, doesn't it? GWB <Raine> <Yellowrose> Please ask Graham if he thinks we are at war with any beings "out there" right now? Thank you.

<Graham> Good question. Are some UFOs or their actions hostile? One can cite numerous accounts where UFO incidents have resulted in fatalities, especially so with pilots. David Jacobs brings out a new book shortly entitled "The Threat" - I was with Budd Hopkins last night attending the big live debate on Central TV, Budd think's this book will scare the pants off a lot of people. GWB

<Raine> <Lister> Graham, what are your general thoughts about the crop circle phenomenon? (Bearing in mind that some were obviously hoaxes while others were less easily explainable)

<Graham> I can't tell you the number of times I'm asked this question, especially when I travel overseas. There is virtually no media publicity in the UK attached to crop circles, hasn't been for years. So what incentive does that afford the hoaxers? Why spend hours each night carving out these incredible images, when there is no publicity? Hope you get my drift. GWB

<Raine> <Tinman-BF> Q: When and how did your interest in UFOlogy start and have you ever sighted one ?

<Graham> Thirteen years old, back in Leeds in 1967. Saw a huge oval-shaped object, half-size of the full Moon travel silently above my parents home. Watched it go over the house then ran through the living room into the back garden (all of 2-3 seconds). Went out, stared up and it was nowhere to be seen. I've seen several UFOs since, none of which fell into a bracket which I could relate to in conventional terms. GWB

<Raine> <Dan> Graham, after the celebrations in July, many ufologists have decided to take a new approach and are looking to a new ufology where they search for more terrestrial answers to the ufo phenomenon. It seems many ufologists are giving up on the extra-terrestrial hypothesis. What is your view on this?

<Graham> I've no problem with that. I researched RPVs and UAVs years ago. The more informed a person becomes about new aviation and space technologies, the better understanding one has when it comes to chipping away for answers. GWB

<Raine> <SickBoy> Do you think that Nick Pope was the best the MOD could do when it came to investigating UFOs? Or was he just there for the public, with the real work happening behind closed doors?

<Graham> <Graham> Nick's an interesting guy. Did he see all the UFO reports that crossed his desk, or just a select few? I'm convinced (and suspect he now shares this view), that many reports were kept hidden from view. He might have come across to the UFO community as the genuine article had he chosen to resign from office before releasing his book, but who is to say. GWB

<Raine> <jarod> ask him if the brazil conf was video'd and if so whens it available etc

<Graham> Yes, Brasilia was video taped, and I'm sure A.J. Gevaerd will be releasing details of how to acquire specific tapes in the near future. I'm hoping to not only obtain some of the Chilean footage, but persuade British TV to air it. I'm staggered that none of this has been broadcast on news channels around the world. GWB

<Raine> <Carnado> M.Heseman states in his german ufo-mag that chile wants to set up a satellite (called BETA) to orbit for monitoring ufo's, any coment on that?

<Graham> I have yet to see that claim verified, but it wouldn't surprise me. Chile and a number of nations are concerned about the penetration of their air space by unknown objects. Remember, its the Chilean pilots and radar confirmation of these that went some way to establishing the investigative committee. GWB

<Raine> <Gandalf1> how do you feel about the abduction phenomena, have you come across any evidence that makes you think it is either REALLY happening or not AT ALL

<Graham> That's what we discussed on Central TV last night (Friday). Abduction experiences occur throughout the world, that much we know. I know of a couple in Equador, two native Indians, no TV no electrical power, neither can read. Yet they report the same experience as other abductees. Their home is four wooden poles and a sack-cloth for a roof. GWB

<Raine> <Bigyin> any news on any new European UFO sightings?

<Graham> Shouldn't be telling you this, but the recent "fireball" event over Greenland was no fireball or cosmic debris. A lot of information has surfaced about three UFO landings, one on a small island between Greenland and Canada. Hope to have more in the next mag. GWB

<Raine> <Carnado> Did the brasilian conferene bring forward any new info on the Mexico 6.Aug event/film?

<Graham> Yes. Please refer to my earlier answer. Also, two witnesses were injured by the passing UFO. One suffered water on the brain and the other, a woman, was badly scorched on her arms. GWB

<Raine> <MJ-12> ok: what advise would you give to someone looking for a job in the ufology field?

<Graham> Keep working to improve your knowledge about the subject. Attain journalistic credentials, PC/MAC useage etc. We employ eight people, it's hard work but rewarding. I guess I have spent 25 years doing this voluntarily, so have at least acquired the knowledge, but just go out and keep informed. GWB

<Raine> <hackit> graham as a person who has been lucky enough to have been privy to seeing thing most of us would like to have seen for ourselfs do you personally believe that ufos actually are from other universes/dimemnsions

<Graham> I can honestly state for the record that in my opinion, some UFOs are indeed extraterrestrial, but from whence they cometh, who knows. I concur with Stan Friedman, let's stop being "apologist Ufologists". Remember, we are in a majority right now of those who believe UFOs are real. The sceptics will always be around, but they apply one Golden Rule: "Don't bother me with the facts, my mind's made up." You should bother to read up on the facts, as shou <Raine> <SickBoy> What is your opinion on the hypothesis that many UFOs are mirages, due to a temperature inversion, of astronomical objects below the obsever's horizon? Steuart Cambell has written an interesting book on this subject, have you read it?

<Graham> Yes, Steuart and I go back many years and enjoy numerous radio debates on the topic. Over 400 radar tapes have been acquired of UFO incidents. I've spoken with many RAF radar operators who have tracked these things. They spoke of solid objects performing way beyond anything they had hitherto seen. Remember the Belgian radar tape from March 1990? The UFO descended from 10,000ft to less than 500ft in less than 5 seconds. We interviewed one of the Belg

<Dave_UFO> Graham you have been typing away for over an hour. Would you like to take a rest for a few minutes. We don't want to let you go just yet if that's ok with you.

<Graham> Hi Dave, I'm OK until 01.00 GMT, then have to call it quits. I'm with a film crew tomorrow at 8.30am in Cheshire to interview a pilot who saw an FT. Need some sleep beforehand. GWB <Dave_UFO> That's fine Graham...Thank you.

<Dave_UFO> Raine: We'll carry on.

<Raine> graham could you please type in the last bit of what you said?

<Raine> We interviewed one of the Belg

<Crow> we goto We interviewed one of the Belg

<Crow> should be one of the Belgium ??

<Graham> Sure, I wrote that we interviewed one of the Belgian AF pilots here in the Uk who chased that UFO during March 1990. Everything he told us is on tape (been played at our conferences and transcribed in UFO Magazine). It was no temperature inversion. GWB

<Crow> great thanks

<Raine> <Dave_UFO> UFO Magazine must be one of the longest running magazine's of it's type. Just how long has it been going and how long have you been involved with it?

<Graham> It originated from a newsletter format that was produced in the late '70s. UFO Magazine has been around since 1981, but became a newsstand publication in the summer of 1994, after which others have jumped on the badwagon, but that was no surprise. At least you can still telephone us between 9.00am and 6.00pm during the week if you want to have a chat. GWB

<Raine> <lloyd> Graham, do you think we are getting close to some sort of announcement on ET life, eg, ancient Mars life or primitive European etc?

<Graham> Personally, I do believe that recent soundings by Dan Goldin at NASA, the potential for ancient evidence of life on Mars etc, is no coincidence. NASAs "Origins" programme, initiated in December '96 by Vice President Al Gore, has to be seen in this context. GWB

<Raine> <MJ-12> what are your thoughts of the latest rumours that area 51 being abandoned?

<Graham> A timely question. I'm travelling to Nevada on 2 February and will be spending some time in and around Area 51, so should have a better idea of the current situation. In our next issue of UFO Magazine, we have an exclusive feature on what some believe is the new Area 51, found by a guy who took photographs (which we will publish) before black helicopters chased him away. GWB

<Raine> <CyDoNiA> Has there been any further Human mutilations in Brazil. And do you know what the result of the investigations into the subject by Brazilian authorities?

<Graham> I'm not aware of any substantive new evidence suggesting there have been any new human mutilations in Brazil, but this is a highly sensitive issue, probably one of THE most sensitive in Ufology. We are familiar with other cases, but that's all I can say on the matter. GWB

<Raine> <CoolNess> Graham, with reference to my first question about the AA, it is fairly well known that the sheriff of Roswell ( I'm afraid I've forgot his name) looked fairly similar to the then president Truman, and the sheriff would have a fairly valid reason to be overseeing the autopsy, could it not be him?

<Graham> The question is valid, but I have to come back to my initial comment: We have yet to see a solitary 16mm frame of the original autopsy footage put in the hands of an independent analyst. The red stop light should have been switched on at the outset, but for reasons best known to those most closely involved with the 'footage', it was not done so. GWB

<Raine> <AlienCity> Graham, Have you ever felt you were being directly manipulated by any 'outside forces' to put over any specific views or opinions on ufo stories/info in your magazine?

<Raine> <Graham> Some very good questions here tonight, and this is no exception. Yes, is my answer, but most times I can weed these out. I'm a free spirit in this subject and because of that am considered dangerous in some quarters, or so I have been told. However, I've told NSA people (who have visited our offices many time - Menwith Hill is but 4 miles away), that I'm also aware of sensitive issues. GWB

<Raine> -AstroJoe- Please ask Graham if '95 & '96 have been exceptional years for UFO sightings, including reports of crashes (compared to say 15 years before that).

<Graham> 1996 produced the largest number of UFO reports in the UK seen in 25 years. Alleged UFO crashes have also risen in frequency, but Varginha is certainly one that I would recommend folks read about. GWB

<Graham> The STS-48 shuttle footage is extremely important. Dr. Jack Kasher's analysis is equally so. The Russian cosmonaut told me over breakfast in Brasilia that they and the United States maintain SDI technology, so make of that what you will. GWB

<Raine> <grey> Q: Please, give us your view on the possible connection between the Sphinx and ancient visitors from space.

<Graham> A new book by Hancock & Bauval on this topic will be coming out soon (don't know the title yet), but Robert Bauval told me it will make Raiders of the Lost Ark look pale in comparison. Can't wait myself to see what he means by that. GWB <Raine> -UFOjoe- Do you think there is anything to predicting UFO occurrences such as is done by T. Roy Dutton?

<Graham> I'm not too sure. I travelled to Iceland some years ago after people all over the world "received messages" that a landing would take place near a well-known volcano. We sat and waited and nothing happened. A can of coke cost 5 so it was one hell of an expensive prediction. GWB

<Raine> <DOGGI3> Sir, do Jesse Marcel Jr. talks about the whereabouts of the alleged bits and pieces of Roswell incident now?

<Graham> He didn't comment about that, possibly because he was never asked. Jesse is one of the most sincere individuals I have ever met, so please do take that on board the next time you hear criticism of the guy. GWB

<Raine> <SickBoy> What is your (and UFO magazine's) position on the use of hypnotic regression on people who suspect they have been abducted?

<Dave_UFO> Graham we'll take this as the last question as that magic time has arrived.

<Graham> Provided it is undertaken by qualified individuals (and that's a grey area in itself), I don't have a problem with the use of hypnotic regression, accepting at the same time it is clinically unproven in terms of its effectiveness. However, last night Budd Hopkins told the Central TV audience that 30 per-cent of his cases didn't involve the use of hypnotism. GWB

<Dave_UFO> Graham it may be hard for you to believe but we have been after you for a long time so-to-speak to come on the channel as a guest. I'm sure I speak for us all when I extend my grateful thanks to you.

<Dave_UFO> I hope that perhaps much later in the year we can invite you back. It has been most interesting. I for one will hopefully say hello at the Solihull conference in February.

<Dave_UFO> Have a safe journey home.

<Dave_UFO> Graham did your wife travel with you tonight?

<Raine> Thanks alot Graham, for your time and effort it has been greatly appreciated :)

<CoolNess> Thank you for taking the time to come and visit us here at #ufo Graham and we hope that you will take the time to come and visit again.

<Graham> Dave, it's been a pleasure. Can I extend my thanks to you and your colleagues for making this interview possible, and my most cordial best wishes to your guests. Hope to see you at Solihull, until then, all the best and goodnight from Otley. GWB

RAF Cosford

I have been informed from a fairly reliable source that RAF Cosford - which is supposedly being quietly run down - has suddenly had it's security uprated by a phenomenal amount. This coincides with an increased number of strange sightings including the ubiquitous black triangles. My informant, who has an RAF jet pilot as an acquaintance, tells me that this pilot has suddenly clamed up on the subject of strange sightings. Previously he was always ready to discuss the phenomena. The pilot is based at RAF Cosford. An interesting snippet of information is that apparently RAF pilots are not subject to the same 'gagging' when they have been based abroad. This particular pilot has in the past been based in Saudia Arabia and was always willing to talk about UFO's he and his colleagues had seen over there.

Cornwall (UK) plans for eclipse in 1999

Experts are gathering to talk about preventing "eclipse chaos" when most of Cornwall is plunged into darkness in less than two years time.

Some 500,000 people are expected to flock to Cornwall to observe the eclipse in August 1999.

The County's emergency planning officer Steve Winston said the aim of the meeting was to "plan out any hiccups".

The last total visible eclipse on the UK mainland was in 1927.

'Eclipse disaster' summit today

AN ECLIPSE summit meeting being held in Truro today (Thursday) follows claims in a national newspaper that the event could be a disaster for Cornwall

An article in The Daily Telegraph This week claimed that as the county plunges into darkness, tourists can expect '30-mile traffic jams, no hotel beds, over-priced fast food and mountains of rubbish."

Steve Winston, Cornwall's Emergency Planning Officer, is the man tasked with preventing a catastrophe and the co-ordinator of today's conference. By Richard Shimell

Scientists, emergency services, environmental health officers, health workers, planners and tourist chiefs are all expected to attend the meeting at County Hall in an attempt to make sure Cornwall can cope.

"Our job is to think about the worst possible scenario," said Mr Winston.

Traffic jams are inevitable as hundreds of thousands of sightseers pour into the county, he admitted. "There is precious little we can do about that but we need to ensure that ambulances and other emergency vehicles can travel and that people are aware they will be stuck in their cars for long periods of time."

Despite his caution, Mr Winston is still able to appreciate the "poetry" of the event. "Imagine standing on a west facing cliff or on the deck of a ship and seeing a wall of shadow travelling towards you at 2,000km an hour," he said.

"When the shadow crosses, the area will immediately be plunged into darkness, the birds will stop singing and yet, if you're standing on a high point, it'll be like being under a huge umbrella of' darkness, as 75km away there will still be light."

The sun in Cornwall will be totally covered for about two minutes on August 11 at just past 11am, but it will be two and a half hours from the first shadow to the return of full daylight.

European funding is being sought to employ a project manager and use the event as a means of promoting tourism in Cornwall.

Sightings of strange lights continue to plague Cornwall's South West Peninsular

By Dave Dunworth <thegreenhouse@netmatters.co.uk>

On Friday 17th October at 08:30am a bright, tear shaped, unidentified flying object was spotted by a father and daughter collecting their morning milk. They spotted what at first glance appeared to be a conventional aircraft at an unusual angle, the strange light caught their attention as it traveled from East to West, the father decided to get his binoculars to take a better look. The bright light appeared to be tear shaped and was definitely not an aircraft he saw what appeared to be Black Lines running through the object, these Black Lines seemed to be rotating. The object traveled in a Westerly direction from the Irish Sea to the English Channel over the ancient monuments and along the path of a mystical Lay Line towards Mounts Bay and St. Michael's Mount. The same object was also seen by a woman from 2 miles away at Penzance who watched it travel over the Bay towards St. Michael's Mount and disappear from view.

The local RAF Base, RNAS Culdrose, was contacted to see if they had anything unusual on radar this proved negative so the sighting remains another mystery as have other frequent sightings in this area.

This type of sighting is fast becoming common place in the skies of West Cornwall, they appear frequently over ancient monuments and also follow the paths of Lay Lines. It is interesting to note that these activities are within a 20 mile radius of RNAS Culdrose the biggest Helicopter base in Europe.

This is the second UFO sighting I have received in the past few weeks from this area, The Town crier Mr. Phillip Glett witnessed an object on 13th September this year at 03:15am he was completely amazed by his sighting, he said, " I am not prone to believing in this sort of thing, but now I've seen one I have to reevaluate my thinking, I have seen a UFO and now I believe these things are Real". Mr P Gilett Report Follows:-

The Greenhouse sightings report

Date/Time: Saturday 13th September 1997
Duration of Sighting: 20Mins 03:15 - 03:35
Location: SW Mounts Bay Penzance Cornwall
Investigator: Mr D A Dunworth (The Greenhouse DIRECTOR)

Witness: Mr Phillip Gillet Occupation: Town Crier (Penzance Cornwall)

By Dave Dunworth <thegreenhouse@netmatters.co.uk>

In his own words Mr Phillip Gillet Explains.....

In the early hours of Saturday morning I awoke and looked through the window towards the sky in a SE direction. What I saw was to make me get out of bed and take a closer look, upon investigation I saw what appeared to be a large oval rugby ball shaped light in the night sky, The light did not appear to be traveling in any direction but I did notice that the object was shimmering almost like a jelly. The light appeared to be a bright yellow/orange and had a kind of transparency to it.

I watched this light for a good 20 minutes, what I was seeing in my experience was not a conventional air craft or balloon, the position of my window looks towards the Lloyds Bank clock tower(Easterly), this gave me a good viewing point. The visibility was good and I could make out the plough and I think its Jupiter the bright star we can see at the moment.

After observing the object for 20 min watching it all the time shimmering and clearly visible I began to realize that what I was infact seeing was a UFO, I felt excited at this prospect and was pleased that after all this time I had actually seen one.

The light continued to glow its unmistakable golden colour and then it suddenly vanished without a trace it did not shoot off in any particular direction it just vanished as if someone had switched the object off like a light.

UFO sighting over Bury, Lancashire

I thought I'd drop you guys an E-Mail after a very interesting and unusual event that took place earlier this evening.

Approx 7.00 pm, Saturday Nov 8th. Skies were clear with some light passing cloud. I was called out by my ten year old son and his two friends to see something in the sky. At first I could see nothing but stars, and expected them to be looking at a passing plane. After a few minutes however, I could see what had excited them:-

Directly overhead appeared to be several objects moving about at random. Nothing spectacular - they looked rather like 'moving' stars, about the same brightness and size etc. They seemed to be very distant. The kids were pointing out loads, but the first one I saw was clearly moving between two 'fixed' stars. A satellite you may suggest, maybe, but it was moving in a very strange manner, sort of speeding-up and then slowing down to an almost standstill whilst moving in an arc. I traced this for a short time before it vanished. The second object was clearly moving between two stars for a short distance before disappearing. During this time, the kids were pointing out others, and even a neighbour joined in and saw more.

The phenomenon lasted several minutes before all objects dissappeared.

I have often looked in the skies, but never have I seen anything like this. I can honestly say they were not aircraft, fireworks or meteorites. They made no sound and if they were at the distance they seemed, speeds must have been tremendous.

Flying visit to Suffolk

Saucer landing spot will suit you to a tea, says Jeffrey Taylor

If you go down to the woods today, your in for a big surprise - at least you were 17 years ago in Rendlesham Forest, Suffolk. As I approached my destination on the southern edge of the plantation, I noticed the birds had stopped singing and I could have sworn the temperature had dropped.

When I stood on the rim of the site where Britain's most famous flying saucer crash-landed I must admit to a slight sense of shock. The extensively recorded incident when US Air Force personnel experienced a close encounter with distressed aliens happened in 1980. The area shaped like a giant, er, saucer is still blackened and desolate.

Words such as corn circles crossed my mind, but could such sour infertility be artificially maintained for a decade or more? Even the normally abundant bracken managed only a few wispy tendrills. I left.

But the Sandlings, the low lying coast to the east of the A12 between Lowestoft and Felixstowe, is a spooky place.

Take Dunwich, where today just a strip of shingle separates grazing cows from a boisterous sea. In medieval days, before this bit of the county gave up its struggle to stay afloat and sank, it was Eastern England's busiest port.

When the tide comes in at sunset, the ghostly bell of the drowned parish church sounds a doleful knell across the fields. Local fisherman "Dodger" Holmes knows it does because he's rung it a few times himself. "Just to keep the visitors happy," the says.

But if its picture postcard you are seeking, the hamlet of Westleton, just 95 miles and a couple of galaxies from London, has the lot. A village green with duck pond is ringed with charming cottages, the Lion Inn and The Crown dispense Dickensian ambience and the church is thatched.

Via the parish notice board visitors are cosily invited to join the village Quilting and Bowling Clubs and press flowers with the Women's Institute. You could die from the excitement.

Drive south along the Broads to Aldeburgh, a sea side resort with class even before Benjamin Britten founded his international music festival.

Across the River Alde estuary you can just make out the silhouette of 11th century Orford Castle still standing on rising ground outside the town. In the castle's shadow is Market Hill, Orfords central square, is the Butley Orford Oysterage Restaurant and shop, known universally as Pinney's, the name of the family who owned and run it. Pinney's bivalves are fished every day at 9 am from their local beds laid down by the Romans and if not eagerly consumed, go back to bed at closing time. Is that fresh, or what?

Head north of Westleton past the Minsmere Bird Sanctuary, one of the largest in Europe, to the fishing village of Walberswick where the annual Crab Championship in August is said to be a riot.

Then a couple of miles further north is Southwold. Small and genteel, Southwold is, oddly, the home of Adnams Brewery and boasts a pier which is considered vulgar by the townsfolk. Equally the rows of quaintly painted beach huts are unpopular with visitors, particularly when they learn most are not for hire.

The good thing about Suffolk is you can find it with your eyes closed. Once you drive under the M 25, the A12 rolls you effortlessly along and within 90 minutes of leaving London, you are seriously rural.

Though strenuous activities are available, such as church trails and brass rubbing, the Sandlings is about instant relaxation. And it works.

Spies like US

A European Commission report warns that the United States has developed an extensive network spying on European citizens and we should all be worried. Simon Davies reports

A GLOBAL electronic spy network that can eavesdrop on every telephone, email and telex communication around the world will be officially acknowledged for the first time in a European Commission report to be delivered this week. The report - Assessing the Technologies of Political Control - was commissioned last year by the Civil Liberties Committee of the European Parliament. It contains details of a network of American-controlled intelligence stations on British soil and around the world, that "routinely and indiscriminately" monitor countless phone, fax and email messages.

It states: "Within Europe all email telephone and fax communications are routinely intercepted by the United States National Security Agency transferring all target information from the European mainland via the strategic hub of London then by satellite to Fort Meade in Maryland via the crucial hub at Menwith Hill in the North York moors in the UK."

The report confirms for the first time the existence of the secretive ECHELON system. Until now, evidence of such astounding technology has been patchy and anecdotal. But the report - to be discussed on Thursday by the committee of the office of Science and Technology Assessment in Luxembourg - confirms that the citizens of Britain and other European states are subject to an intensity of surveillance far in excess of that imagined by most parliaments. Its findings are certain to excite the concern of MEPs.

"The ECHELON system forms part of the UKUSA system (see 'Cooking up a charter for snooping') but unlike many of the electronic spy systems developed during the Cold War, ECHELON is designed primarily for non-military targets: governments, organizations and businesses in virtually every country.

"The ECHELON system works by indiscriminately intercepting very large quantities of communications and then siphoning out what is valuable using artificial intelligence aids like MEMEX to find key words". According to the report, ECHELON uses a number of national dictionaries containing key words of interest to each country.

For more than a decade, former agents of US, British, Canadian and New Zealand national security agencies have claimed that the monitoring of electronic communications has become endemic throughout the world. Rumours have circulated that new technologies have been developed which have the capability to search most of the world's telex, fax and email networks for "key words". Phone calls, they claim, can be automatically analysed for key words.

Former signals intelligence operatives have claimed that spy bases controlled by America have the ability to search nearly all data communications for key words. They claim that ECHELON automatically analyses most email messaging for "precursor" data which assists intelligence agencies to determine targets. According to former Canadian Security Establishment agent Mike Frost, a voice recognition system called Oratory has been used for some years to intercept diplomatic calls.

The driving force behind the report is Glyn Ford, Labour MEP for Greater Manchester East. He believes that the report is crucial to the future of civil liberties in Europe.

"In the civil liberties committee we spend a great deal of time debating issues such as free movement, immigration and drugs. Technology always sits at the centre of these discussions. There are times in history when technology helps democratise, and times when it helps centralise. This is a time of centralisation. The justice and home affairs pillar of Europe has become more powerful without a corresponding strengthening of civil liberties."

The report recommends a variety of measures for dealing with the increasing power of the technologies of surveillance being used at Menwith Hill and other centres. It bluntly advises: "The European Parliament should reject proposals from the United States for making private messages via the global communications network (Internet) accessible to US intelligence agencies."

The report also urges a fundamental review of the involvement of the American NSA (National Security Agency) in Europe, suggesting that their activities be either scaled down, or become more open and accountable.

Such concerns have been privately expressed by governments and MEPs since the Cold War, but surveillance has continued to expand. US intelligence activity in Britain has enjoyed a steady growth throughout the past two decades. The principal motivation for this rush of development is the US interest in commercial espionage. In the Fifties, during the development of the "special relationship" between America and Britain, one US institution was singled out for special attention.

The NSA, the world's biggest and most powerful signals intelligence organisation, received approval to set up a network of spy stations throughout Britain. Their role was to provide military, diplomatic and economic intelligence by intercepting communications from throughout the Northern Hemisphere.

The NSA is one of the shadowiest of the US intelligence agencies. Until a few years ago, its existence was a secret and its charter and any mention of its duties are still classified. However, it does have a Web site (www.nsa.gov:8080) in which it describes itself as being responsible for the signals intelligence and communications security activities of the US government.

One of its bases, Menwith Hill, was to become the biggest spy station in the world. Its ears - known as radomes - are capable of listening in to vast chunks of the communications spectrum throughout Europe and the old Soviet Union. In its first decade the base sucked data from cables and microwave links running through a nearby Post Office tower, but the communications revolutions of the Seventies and Eighties gave the base a capability that even its architects could scarcely have been able to imagine. With the creation of Intelsat and digital telecommunications, Menwith and other stations developed the capability to eavesdrop on an extensive scale on fax, telex and voice messages. Then, with the development of the Internet, electronic mail and electronic commerce, the listening posts were able to increase their monitoring capability to eavesdrop on an unprecedented spectrum of personal and business communications. This activity has been all but ignored by the UK Parliament. When Labour MPs raised questions about the activities of the NSA, the Government invoked secrecy rules. It has been the same for 40 years.

Glyn Ford hopes that his report may be the first step in a long road to more openness. "Some democratically elected body should surely have a right to know at some level. At the moment that's nowhere".

Fireball in sky being called UFO

UFO investigators from around the country are trying to determine what was a mysterious fireball that streaked across the sky over Chicago's southern suburbs.

The phenomenon was reported Sunday evening. Pilot Tim Janecyk says he doesn't know what he saw as he drove near Interstate 80. He described it as a "brilliant fireball" that descended "from the clouds straight down." He said it was about the size of a full moon and lit up the clouds.

Janecyk said the object was trailing smoke but was moving too slowly to be a meteor.

Similar citations were reported near Kansas City, Mo.

Tailless Fighter Flight Tests Complete

(edited for length)

The NASA/Boeing X-36 Tailless Fighter Agility Research Aircraft successfully completed its flight research program -- demonstrating the feasibility of future tailless fighters achieving agility levels superior to today's best military fighter aircraft.

The project goals are to develop and demonstrate enhanced technologies to improve the maneuverability and survivability of future fighter aircraft. "All of our project goals were met or exceeded," said Mark Sumich, X-36 project manager at NASA's Ames Research Center, Moffett Field, CA.

The 28-percent-scale X-36, built by the Boeing Phantom Works in St.

Louis, MO, is designed to fly without the traditional tail surfaces common on most aircraft. The X-36 is 18 feet long with a 10 foot wingspan; three feet high; and weighs 1,270 pounds. The aircraft is powered by a Williams Research F112 turbofan engine that provides 700 pounds of thrust. The aircraft is remotely controlled by a pilot in a ground station cockpit, complete with a head-up display. The pilot-in-the-loop approach eliminates the need for expensive and complex autonomous flight control systems.

Hawaiian estate offered for Heaven's Gate suicide site

A prospective buyer offered to swap a Hawaiian estate for the mansion where 39 members of the Heaven's Gate cult committed suicide last spring.

The offer for an "even swap" of an Oahu estate for the 9,000-square-foot, seven-bedroom house where the UFO cultists killed themselves, is one of at least three under consideration this week, real estate agent Burt Sveine said.

The cult house, owned by Sam Koutchesfahani and rented to the followers of guru Marshall Applewhite, has been valued at $1.6 million.

The mansion was refurbished after cult members, believing a spaceship following the Hale-Bopp comet would deliver them to a better world, poisoned themselves last March in their bunks.

Sealed bids were accepted last month. Besides the Oahu home, there are offers from a Texan who specializes in problem properties and from a local buyer. Prospective buyers requested anonymity.

Sveine said he and Koutchesfahani will discuss the offers this week. Koutchesfahani may decide to keep the Mediterranean-style mansion if the bids aren't acceptable.

American Computer Company Makes A Remarkable Discovery! by Joyce Kelly

First submitted to UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL 19th December 1997

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE.

What started out as a short, interesting news item on the American Computer Company INTERNET Web Site, has turned into a remarkable story, one that is a major headache this morning for certain US Department of Defense Top Brass...

In July 1997, American Computer Company posted a slightly humorous, interesting story about allegations that in 1947, the Army Air Force may have transferred a captured Alien Space Craft to Bell Labs for commercialization, resulting in the Transistor and other major engineering discoveries.

Now, after six months, after receipt of tens of thousands of pages of documents, and after pursuing thousands upon thousands of leads, ACC has found it has a bigger problem: The Army has apparently admitted that the documents describing a downed UFO in Roswell, NM in 1947, were deliberately misdirected during the subsequent months, along with "crash materials", as the Army spun off the US Air Force (which was formed in November of 1947). As a result, lost in the cracks of a postwar Military Bureaucracy, a secret initiative to evaluate Alien Technology for military and commercial advances sprung forth from the same spring as had been evaluating German V-2 Rockets captured by the Army, and personnel assigned to the Manhattan Project (which had created the Atom Bomb during World War II).

A meeting between ACC and the US Army Legislative Liaison has ACC personnel scratching their heads in amazement: "Its a revelation. The Army has admitted that 'certain documents and things' relating to the Roswell and Corona crash and landing of what was probably TWO Alien Space Craft manned by a 'neutral' group of observers trying to determine the threat potential of the evaluation by the Army of the mating of the Atom Bomb and the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile, may actually HAVE been covered up, hushed up, and remains, to this date, a fully funded project spinning off decade after decade of engineering projects aimed at developing a defensive capability not just geared towards human warfare, but towards the defense of our Planet from 'invaders from another world'."

"It appears to all onlookers, that the Army is taking the possibility of a need to be able to militarily defend the US from alien marauders quite seriously, and has assessed the time it might take for a large 'invasion fleet' to reach earth. As a result, a very long term, super secret project aimed at equipping the Earth to defend itself against invasions from other worlds, has been underway, while the Army and Air Force have spoken 'laughingly' about 'Martians' and 'Little Green Men'."

"A super secret initiative exists to notify the Commander-in-Chief in the event of Alien Onslaught. The justification for the enormously profitable commercialization projects, which have been quietly interspersed with more human advanced research efforts, is what has been labeled 'The greatest threat to National Security that has ever been discovered' -- ETs!! -- secretly in some Brass Hat circles since the late 40's!!"

A spokesperson for ACC further commented: "And the Army and Air Force would have us believe that ET Investigators, people like Phillip Corso, Stanton Friedman, Glen Campbell, Larry Bryant, and radio personalities who cover them, like Art Bell, Jeff Rense, and Mike Jarmus, are unbelievable !!"

ACC has decided to quietly retrace its steps to continue its efforts to recreate from drawings in the public sector, technologies that may have been the object of Army and Air Force 'space defense' interest. These recently included drawings of a unique device recreated by ACC and a local University Physicist, which has characteristics previously unseen in the semiconductor field. Among the drawings from a 1947 technical artist, are pictures of a 'coherent light source' - a laser beam drawn at a time 10 years or more before the Laser was officially invented.

Jack Shulman Exposes Hidden Ultra-Secret ET Military Organization

Stunning Development Revealed on Jeff's Friday Show 20th December 1997

In an EXCLUSIVE breaking story, Jack Shulman, the President of the American Computer Company, announced on Jeff Rense's Sightings On the Radio program, Friday, 12-19-97, that he and his associates have discovered a heretofore ultra secret, UNKNOWN, apparent Black Budget, deeply buried, military organization which deals with, and may direct and operate, our UFO/ET policy.

Jeff broke into his regular program at 9:06 pm Pacific to get the story from Shulman, who is deeply involved with what is, so far, perhaps the biggest UFO/ET story since the landmark Roswell event(s) 50 years ago. (see "Jack Shulman And ACC Make It To CNN" and other ACC stories).

On the show, Shulman related an amazing string of events which culminated when he and other ACC personnel, along with Investigator/Journalist Bob Wolf, had what amounted to a confrontation with Air Force personnel at the Pentagon. During the course of what was described as a rather heated encounter, Air Force personnel are said to have disclosed accidentally, or otherwise, the existence of this invisible military organization within the Department of Defense THAT NO ONE HAS EVER HEARD OF BEFORE.

Shulman said it is called the Extraterrestrial Space Command Directorate, or simply "E2SCD." As stated, this military group, branch, or operational unit, officially DOES NOT EXIST in any readily locatable government or military archive or database. Jack stated the unit is probably referred to simply as "E2" by those in it or those who have a need to know of its existence.

Further, Jack explained to Jeff how when he and his associates were first going through the now famous 'laboratory notebook', which apparently reveals the true origin of the transistor (recovered ET technology), they observed several "E2" notations in the text. Not having any idea what "E2" stood for at the time, Jack and his team of scientists assumed "E2" to be some type of engineering symbol or code. Today's revelation may have solved that mystery and could confirm the existence of this ultra secret elite military UFO organization far at least as long as 50 years ago.

Shulman said a thorough search of the Library of Congress and all immediately available government data bases revealed NO DATA on the "Extraterrestrial Electronics Space Directorate", or "E2SCD."

In a related issue, Shulman said it now appears the original top secret fax that American Computer mysteriously received several months ago is now believed by Jack Shulman, at least, to have originated from a satellite which may well belong to, and be operated by, the secret E2 organization.

The discovery of such an ultra secret organization lends credence to many years of suspicion and assertions by a number of researchers such as Stanton Friedman that an organization of scientists and key players commonly called "MJ-12" exists, and that it directs the military's deep cover, ultra secret ET program.

This story is just beginning. Updates as available.

More gray matter for little green men?

Most Americans think there's life on other planets

Most Americans believe there is life on other planets, and most of those who think that way say life out there probably is more intelligent than anything down here on Earth.

Scientists promoting the effort to detect signals from outer space were quick to cheer these is-there-intelligent-life-elsewhere findings from a survey by the Marist Institute for Public Opinion.

"I'm happy to hear that the mainstream and I have similar views," said Paul Horowitz, a professor of physics at Harvard who directs a project that operates a 250-million-channel receiver listening for signals from space.

"It could be that the American people are taking two and two and coming up with four," said Brian Welch, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The telephone survey of 935 adults asked, "Do you think there is intelligent life on other planets?"

Sixty percent of the respondents said yes; 40 percent said no.

Marist researchers then asked those who said yes if they thought life on other planets was "more, less, or about as intelligent as human life on Earth." The aliens came out ahead, with 47 percent of those who believe in life on other planets saying they thought extraterrestrial life was more intelligent, 13 percent said less intelligent and 40 percent said it was about the same. By a margin of 86 to 14, people said they thought galactic neighbors are friendly rather than hostile.

Despite the positive expectation of otherworldly life, the survey found Americans divided on spending for the space program.

Forty-seven percent said the government was spending too much, 43 percent said funding was about right and 10 percent said it was too low. Asked if they thought the space program was a good investment, 45 percent said yes and 55 percent said the money would be better spent on other programs.

The survey was conducted October 5-7, and the results had a margin of error of 3.5 percentage points.

Broken down by age, people from 18 through 60 were strongly supportive of the idea of life on other planets. But people older than 60 rejected the idea by a margin of 67 to 33.

"The subject has moved a lot in just the last couple of years, said Louis Friedman, executive director of the Planetary Society, whose 100,000 members are strong advocates of continuing research into the possibility of life in outer space.

Horowitz said researchers are "riding along on this wave of technological innovation." He said that his project listens on 250 million channels simultaneously. The first serious search for signals from space was in 1960 and had just one channel, he said.

NASA flouts Einstein, explores feasibility of interstellar journeys

Key to star treks may be found in science fiction

by
Keay Davidson - Examiner Science Writer

In a development straight out of "Star Trek," NASA is looking seriously at the feasibility of flight to the stars.

Way-out schemes for traveling to the nearest stars are being assessed by scientists and engineers as part of a low-profile, micro-budget NASA program, dubbed Breakthrough Propulsion Physics.

Wormholes, warp drives and other means for interstellar flight - long staples of science fiction - may become science fact, if the researchers get their way.

Tuesday through Thursday, more than 80 employees of the space agency and space-related industries will gather at NASA's Lewis Research Center in Cleveland to hear 14 scientists and engineers discuss ways to achieve interstellar flight.

Possibilities include the generation of so-called wormholes, something akin to rips in the fabric of space and time. Some physicists have speculated that a spaceship passing through a rip might emerge in a distant part of the cosmos.

"We don't even know if these things are physically possible," said the program's chief and sole full-time employee, aerospace engineer Marc Millis of NASA-Lewis.

But, Millis added hopefully: "Progress is not made by conceding defeat."

Why go to the stars? Among other things, to find habitable planets for humanity, Millis said.

"Imagine if we could give citizens access to a whole nother planet Earth," said Millis, 37. "Imagine if there were an uninhabited planet suitable enough to live on."

The main barrier to interstellar flight remains Albert Einstein's theory of relativity, which forbids travel at speeds faster than light - 186,000 miles per second.

The nearest stars, other than the sun, are four light-years away. A light-year is 6 trillion miles, the distance that light travels in a year. Because of the Einsteinian limit, a spaceship would need at least four years to reach the closest stars, Proxima Centauri and Alpha Centauri.

Two scheduled speakers come from the Bay Area - Raymond Chiao of the UC-Berkeley physics department and astrophysicist Bernhard Haisch of Lockheed Missiles & Space Co.'s office in Palo Alto.

Haisch is expected to discuss the possibility of space propulsion using something called "the momentum of the quantum vacuum." Chiao plans to discuss how laboratory experiments suggest that under certain circumstances, photons - particles of light - appear to travel "at an effective speed of 1.7 times the speed of light."

The program has official liaisons at a number of NASA centers around the nation - for example, Larry Lemke at NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View.

The proposed technologies "are extremely long shots," cautions one enthusiast, John Cole. He is manager of space transportation research at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama, which funds the program at Lewis.

"Theories of this type have cropped up perpetually from time to time," Cole said, "and usually wind up not leading anywhere. . . . But if we don't look, we certainly will never find anything."

And the time may be right.

"People, particularly young people, are sort of rejecting the claustrophobic position that we are locked in this solar system without any chance at all of going to others," said Whitt Brantley, chief of the advanced concepts office at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama.

But not everyone at NASA is pleased by talk about star ships.

Within the space agency, "the reactions completely cover the entire spectrum," Cole said. "There are those that believe we are about to get NASA embarrassed with some ideas that can't possibly be achieved.

"And there are others that are just delighted that NASA is finally open-minded enough, and (has) enough courage - and encouragement from the administrator (Daniel Goldin) - to pursue these things," Cole added.

Brantley interjected: "If you look back in history before great discoveries were made, there were great minds trying to show they were impossible."

How did an agency packed with conservative engineers get interested in interstellar flight?

For one thing, NASA Administrator Goldin made the once-taboo topic acceptable by publicly speculating about it.

Also, recent research published "in credible, peer-reviewed (scientific) literature" has made interstellar flight seem more feasible than it did decades ago, Millis said.

For example, the warp drive plan is based on an idea proposed by Miguel Alcubierre, an astrophysicist from the University of Wales. He published the method in 1994 in a little-known scientific journal called "Classical and Quantum Gravity."

According to one theory of warp drive, one could get around Einstein's speed limit for matter by moving the space around the matter. The space, being non-material, could exceed the speed of light - or so the theory implies.

Larry Diehl, director of NASA-Lewis' research and technology directorate, acknowledged with a chuckle that on the Internet, there has been chatter about whether "we are looking to violate the laws of physics. The answer, of course, is 'no.'

"We haven't made any large-scale commitment to funding work in this area. . . . (Still) if we don't continue to reach out and explore, I don't feel that we make progress," said Diehl, an aerospace engineer who has worked for the agency for three decades.

The program's current one-year budget is $50,000 - pennies by NASA's usual gold-plated standards.

Lunar Prospector blasts off

Cape Canaveral, Florida - The unmanned Lunar Prospector blasted off on a 240,000-mile journey into space Tuesday night, beginning NASA's first moon mission since men last set foot on the lunar surface 25 years ago.

A sleek, white Lockheed Martin Athena 2 rocket carrying the probe lifted off at 9:28 p.m., successfully negotiating a short, four-minute "launch window," which was all that the Earth-moon alignment allowed.

The rocket's three stages dropped away, one after the other, in the first six minutes after the launch, leaving the Lunar Prospector propelled by a thrust module expected to lift it into orbit around the moon after a 4 1/2-day flight.

"After 25 years of having not been to the moon by NASA, it certainly feels good to be going back," said program scientist Joseph Boyce. "I couldn't be more excited, more happy, more pleased."

The launch was to have taken place Monday night, but a malfunctioning U.S. Air Force radar dish forced a day's delay while technicians spent five hours fixing the problem.

The radar is one of three on the Florida coast needed to track the rocket for safety reasons.

The launch was rescheduled for Tuesday, but with only the brief launch window. The shifting positions of the Earth and moon meant NASA had only four minutes in which to launch the probe and take advantage of the most fuel-efficient trajectory.

Had there been technical or weather difficulties, NASA would have had to wait until February 3 for the Earth and the moon to be in favorable positions again for another try.

Searching for water

The 4-foot, 650-pound Prospector is to orbit 63 miles above the lunar surface while it searches for ice, gas and minerals.

It is expected to focus, in particular, on the moon's south pole, where scientists believe frozen water may have collected from the impact of icy comets. The south pole is the only part of the moon that remains in total darkness.

Some scientists believe there could be as much as 1 billion tons of water ice on the moon, a theory bolstered by the findings of the Department of Defense's Clementine spacecraft in 1994.

Radar readings taken by the craft appeared to confirm the presence of ice, but some scientists believe that what the probe detected was not ice at all, but simply rough patches on the steep sides of a crater.

At $65 million, the Lunar Prospector mission is a bargain-basement special compared to NASA's multi-billion-dollar Apollo project that put 12 men on the moon between 1969 and 1972.

Orbiting begins Sunday

The craft is equipped with five instruments, including an electronic divining rod that will enable it to detect the hydrogen atoms in water. If there is water on the moon, future pioneers could break it down and separate it into hydrogen and oxygen and make their own rocket fuel.

The Prospector could learn within a month whether there is ice on the surface. It will also measure the composition of the surface, detect magnetic fields and map gravitational anomalies in the moon's outer crust. When it runs out of fuel, which should be in about a year, the craft will crash on the moon's surface.

CHAPTER 9

Following Mother's regression, we all congregated in the office for a debriefing session. Mother had stepped outside, and my sister and I spoke with the hypnotherapist concerning the block she had encountered during her session. Her memory had stopped at the point where the actual confrontation with the alien entities had begun--and it was apparent that whatever lay behind the block could not be retrieved without causing unnecessary pain and anguish to her.

Her refusal to go beyond that protective barrier spoke volumes--and even without the details still hidden within her memory, there was a strong suggestion that the facts would have verified my sister's recounting of the abduction. The partial hints that she had dropped throughout--of not knowing where my sister's son was, and feeling that at some point she had been alone--were sufficient evidence of another alien encounter.

While speaking with the hypnotherapist, my sister began elaborating on some other fragmentary memories that had been welling up in her conscious mind. Several of these reflected other aspects of the UFO phenomenon. The following is a partial summary taken from the post-hypnosis session transcripts:

Laura: There are some things I've been remembering . . .

John: And what is that?

Laura: Okay, I'm going to tell you one thing. I told my twin sister that I probably went one time. On board. One time.

John: What makes you think that?

Laura: Um, I just started remembering something . . . kind of.

John: What'd you remember? Kind of?

Laura: It was just very typical. It's orangey-pink, really. And they laid me on the table, took my nightgown off, and said, "We want to examine your body. We're not going to hurt you." And they examined my body, and that was it. But I was sixteen years old, and I left home after that!

John: You left home after that?

Laura: Yep!

John: Why?

Laura: Because of that! (Laugh).

Lynne: It's when she went to college.

Laura: Uh, huh. I think it may have been that time I described before . . . I might have gone in, but it was really fast. There was nothing hairy about it, or anything. I mean, it was pretty freaky, but . . .

John: What triggered that, do you think?

Laura: I told my sister about a week ago. I said, "You know what? I think I may have gone in."

Lynne: You had also said that to me before, because you had the memory of floating.

John: What was orangey-pink, you said?

Laura: It's lighted orangey-pink. The room is. I don't really remember any architecture.

John: When you remembered this, how did you feel?

Laura: I felt really freaked out.

John: You say you left home because of this?

Laura: Uh, huh.

John: Well, what kind of thoughts were you having?

Laura: My thought was, when you start thinking you've been abducted by UFO people . . . now this is me at sixteen . . . It's like, it's time to leave home if you're starting to think this kind of weird stuff.

John: And that's actually your conscious reason . . . ?

Laura: It was the motivating factor. Yes, it really was.

John: And then you forgot that was the reason you left?

Laura: Yeah. Isn't that weird? 'Course, after I went to college, I had a good time, and forgot all about it. I'm trying, now, to remember consciously what their voices sound like, 'cause that way, if it ever happens again, maybe I'll have a better . . . maybe I won't lose so much.

Lynne: That's what I've been hoping for . . . not to lose so much.

John: You mean, whether their voices are high, low or medium pitched?

Laura: Uh, huh. So that, if I ever hear it in my head again, I'll know . . .

John: What do you mean, hear it in your head?

Laura: Well, because they don't . . . It's not like this. You know that. It's not like how people talk. I've been really trying to remember how they said it, 'cause it's very black-and-white; very cut-and-dried. It's like a doctor, really. There was no . . . emotion. I don't remember any mind-things. It was just like going to the doctor.

John: Do you remember what they examined?

Laura: Oh, yeah! It was the bottom half. And maybe they thought I was a reject. Said it wasn't gonna work, forget it, and that's that.

John: But you consciously remember at sixteen, that you're leaving home 'cause you're having too many crazy thoughts? And you actually thought you'd been abducted by a UFO?

Laura: Right. Exactly.

John: That's interesting. Well, that really adds into the whole picture.

Laura: And I was going to tell you one other thing . . . even though I said I was only going to tell you one thing. Did anyone else in the family tell you about our cat that had the animal mutilation?

John: No, they haven't.

Laura: Well, we had one. You know, I went to two UFO seminars in Eureka Springs, and then I quit going, because they always seemed to be the same. And you know Linda Moulton Howe?

John: Uh, huh.

Laura: You know, the mutilations that she tells about? Well, I had a cat that had one. It was at our house, and I went and got the family, and said, "God, you all have to come see this cat!" We all looked at it, and it had this weird hole.

Lynne: The cookie-cutter hole.

John: Any blood?

Laura: No. It had all boiled out, or something. You could see all the muscle. It was really strange looking. We thought it had been struck by lightning.

John: About what age would you have been?

Laura: About the same age. Young teens.

Lynne: I think I mentioned to you (the hypnotherapist) that my sister was very into cats, and I was very into horses. The cat-thing would have been the equivalent, to her, of my love of horses.

John: Yeah. (To my sister) . . . Can you describe, again, what you saw when your sister was burying that thing by the tree?

Laura: It was a light, pale-blue glow, all over her face. All over her body, really.

John: Had you ever seen anything like that before?

Laura: I don't think I'd seen that before.

John: What else are you not telling me?

Laura: I can't remember anything else, but I'm making an effort. I'll make notes for you.

At this point, Mother returned to the room, and after a brief discussion about her memory block, a short discussion continued:

John: Did you ever tell your mom why you left home at sixteen?

Laura: Uh, no.

John: (Spoken to my mother) . . . Do you remember why she left home at sixteen?

Frances: Well, she had enough credits--why not?

Laura: Well, this has just surfaced in the last week. Remember that first memory I had . . . in my first session . . . I finally remembered I had been on board one time. They had examined me, and when I woke up, I had an acute panic attack. And I thought to myself, "You know, it's kinda time to boogie on." I felt like if I were going to have this type of thing go on, it was time to go live a normal life somewhere else. So, I went to college and had a great time. I was going to be a nurse . . . Can you believe that?

John: And this is the house that was "sometimes" there, when the policeman would go by . . .

Lynne: In fact, Mother always used to make the comment that there was a "protected circle" around the house.

John: Any other family secrets? (Laugh).

Lynne: We also have a pet deer that visits all the time.

Frances: Yeah. It comes up on the porch and eats cat food and bird seed.

Lynne: It's a real deer. It belongs to some people across the road.

Laura: And Mom's seen lights going by her window . . .

Lynne: And shadows, too.

John: Tell me more about that.

Frances: Oh, a couple times in the past year . . . I saw two white globes of light zip past the windows. The highway is east of the house, about 400 or 500 feet away.

John: Do you notice any electrical effects, at all?

Frances: The lights have always been out, when I saw the globes. But we have electrical problems all the time. (This statement included comments regarding fuses and transformers.)

John: Now, what about the shadows that you've seen?

Frances: Oh, those are the little men who run by my front door. They're probably about four feet tall.

As we left the office, our group was somewhat subdued. In many ways, we had opened up further avenues of discussion, but the block Mother had encountered had cast a pall over the proceedings. On the drive home, the subject returned often to her inability to break through the block. During the hypnotic regression, she had exhibited signs of irritation frequently, and coupled with the blank wall she'd run into, her mood was somber. She berated herself for having the block, and was puzzled about its origins. Although we were aware that the memory lapse had occurred at the point where the abduction would have taken place, there seemed no point in causing her further anguish by revealing even a partial reason for the block. Whatever memories lay behind that wall, it seemed best to allow them to remain hidden. She was not pleased by our silence on the subject.

In the next few weeks, we took a brief respite from the fast pace, deciding that a return to our regular, routine existence was in order. The Midwest Conference on UFOs had been set for September 18 - 20, and all of my family members planned to attend. The roster of speakers for the convention was eye-catching, with a notable speaker arranged on every facet of the UFO phenomenon. Of particular interest to me was the fact that Budd Hopkins would be attending--and I was anxious to hear his presentation. Noted for his research in the field of alien abduction, this artist and author's work and findings have been widely quoted, and are held in high esteem by many other researchers. The chance to hear him in person seemed a golden opportunity, and one that I couldn't pass up.

Springfield, Missouri, is a thriving mid-western city, while still managing to maintain a small-town friendliness. With each visit, I was becoming more enamored. Having lived many years in a rural area, the proximity of culture, entertainment--and the inevitable shopping--was a heady brew to my senses. I looked forward to the Conference as an extension of that feeling.

My husband and I drove up a day early, and met with my family members on the 18th. My brother had decided to attend, even though he had remained completely skeptical of the entire phenomenon throughout our sessions. It appeared that nothing short of being tapped on the back by an alien was going to convince him that it wasn't all a part of delusion, illusion, or out-and-out fabrication. My hope was that the preponderance of evidence to the contrary would be presented here, and that each of us would be able to accept the phenomenon, regardless of what was causing it.

Budd Hopkins's speech was eloquent and persuasive, as he related the story of an abduction witnessed by many, credible witnesses. Triangulation of the site of the abduction was possible due to the locations of these witnesses, who observed a woman floating out of a high-rise apartment building into a waiting craft above. During the several years that had passed since the occurrence, many of these witnesses had come forward on their own, to relate their memories to Hopkins. With each testimony added to the case, the weight of evidence was worthy of regard as being potentially one of the most important abductions on record. And, the crowning element was the fact that one of the alleged witnesses to the event was a high-ranking political figure. Mr. Hopkins's hope, along with probably a good percentage of the audience that day, was that this political personage would one day step forward and admit he had observed the abduction.

On the final day of the Conference, I had the opportunity to meet with a group of abductees. Mr. Hopkins had graciously consented to join our group for an informal discussion. During this meeting, I noticed a man slip into the room and take a chair. He listened quite avidly to the animated conversation, as each person added a thought or conclusion to the round-table discussion. After an interval, he spoke also. He related a personal tale that had nothing to do with alien abductions, and then asked if anyone present knew who Circe was. Having always been interested in Greek mythology, I answered that she was a sorceress who had turned Odysseus's companions into swine. He smiled from his chair across the room, and then responded by adding that no one should ever quit looking for answers. With this scintillating advice, he stood up and left the room. As he exited, I thought, "Who was that 'masked man?'"

The meeting drew to an end, and all the fears and uncertainty I'd borne over the past months rushed in on me. I broke into tears, crying for my loss of innocence and feeling stranded in a world gone mad. Mr. Hopkins, who had been seated to my right, spontaneously reached toward me and hugged me. No words could have done more--his compassionate gesture showing the bond between human beings broke through all barriers and my healing began.

Strange happenings seemed to be the focal point of that final day. As my husband and I prepared to leave for the long drive home, we discovered that Air Force One would be landing momentarily. An advance guard had already arrived and was peremptorily taking over the premises. I was amused that President Bush would campaign so close to Arkansas--and not step foot over the border. I became very amused when I considered what his entourage must have thought about a seditious group of UFO buffs in the very hotel the President was going to be staying at. Somehow, the thought of that was more delightful than if I could have seen a live UFO at that point. Then, I began wondering if it was mere chance that had placed the President there that day--or the workings of a higher authority. It was definitely food for thought!

Hello the list, and to Michael...

>>>Hey Jack.

>>>Thanks for posting your experience in regards to the 1952
>>>Washington Fly Overs.

>>I've mentioned the Washington, DC case once or twice over the >>years, but not the fact I lived on Harvard St. N.W. I lived in >>an apartment building, but the scenes from the movie were of a >>3-storey brownstone house, which was typical for the >>neighborhood. Funny thing, I cannot recall seeing any motion >>picture people thereabouts, though. It was fun seeing all the >>familiar sights in a major movie. I felt like I was a part of the >>whole thing. To be honest, I didn't fully appreciate the >>ramifications of the UFO events at the time. ...But I do now.

>Grin...yes, I guess you would. I think I would feel the same >way. But, like you, I would wonder how they filmed the scene >without "seeing" a film crew in the area. Those things are not >usually filmed in say, five minutes.

In the movie, they show the street sign, and Harvard Street.
The indoor scenes were probably done on a sound stage in Hollywood.

>I was an extra on the film: "A LEAGUE OF THEIR OWN," the story >of the Women's Baseball League in the 1940's during the War >years.

>>So, from your point of reflection, what do you now consider to be
>>"the full ramifications," of the UFO events of the time?

Who's to say? One inconsistency in the film is when Michael Rennie and the young lad take a stroll from Harvard Street to the flying saucer site. In real life, its about a 6 mile walk. ...Nice "stroll." <G>

Ramifications? I don't really see any connection between the movie and the events that took place. I consider myself as the connection, since I lived in the neighborhood at the time.

>>>An interesting coincidence, indeed. It makes one wonder if >>>the movie was a prerequisite for "staging" those events.
>>>I know, some will say that it was not possible for our >>>government to stage such an event at that time in our history.
>>>But, I ask, how do we know that for a fact? It seems that >>>there possibly were "flying disks" in operation on this >>>planet at that time which were of "terrestrial" design and >>>development.

>>>The public has been used as pawns in the international >>>chess games for many years. Who is to say this was not >>>just one of those games? Hmmmmmm

I can't see any connection. The events were real. The radar, the photos of white globes, The news broadcasts; They were all real.

>>I don't think the Washington events were anything but >>spontaneous. Everything was so open and public. Nowadays, people >>are afraid of being stigmatized, and are much more shy of talking >>about UFOs.

>At the time of the fly overs, yes...however, shortly thereafter, >the lid of secrecy clamped down and it was difficult to get any >further information on the "incidents."

I suppose this is true, but then, I wasn't among those trying to get more information. I wouldn't have known how or who to contact at the time. I guess the PRESS was having a hard time though.

>There have been several documentaries made which touched on this >event and showed the alleged radar trackings. Yet, we still have >a high level of denial surrounding this event.

Those doing the denying are using the passage of time as their best weapon. After all, how many witnesses are still around? ...Like me. <G> It all happened. The facts should be available at the library and newspaper archives. The Washington Post and the now defunct Times Herald would have all this in their files. The Herald became the property of The Washington Post, if I recall correctly.

>>I will be happy to assist the investigation in any manner I can.
>>Any questions asked of me will have the advantage of a first >>hand recollection. I just hope I can remember enough to be >>of help.

>Thanks Jack...I appreciate the offer.

I don't see how this investigation could be a very difficult one, unless the public record has been removed from the newspaper archives. It's a very well documented case, and second only to Roswell in importance, in my opinion. At any rate, it should begin at the Washington Post, I would think.

Take care,

Jack

Taiwanese UFO Cult Anoints Gary (Ind.) Loading Dock

UFO cult gathers in Gary, anointing new headquarters

By Rick Miller
Knight-Ridder News Service

GARY, Ind. -- At the end of the world, God's flying saucer will hover over Lake Michigan to transport survivors of the nuclear holocaust to the next dimension.

Gary is God's loading dock.

That's the belief of a Taiwanese religious cult that prayed in the sands of Lake Street Beach in Gary on Friday, anointing the "headquarters" from which God will rescue all remaining life on Earth.

"After the Great Tribulation happens in 1999, God's flying saucer will carry off the survivors that come here," said the group's religious leader, Hon-Ming Chen, speaking through interpreter and follower Richard Liu.

The cult's 21 adults and 11 children arrived in Gary Friday after driving two days from their home base in Garland, Texas.

"We just followed God's instructions," said the silver-haired Chen, 42.

On the beach, cult members stomped in the sand, waiving ritualistic objects such as ornate scepters, golden crosses and ceramic dragons. Chen threw fruits and rice into the water, periodically staring at his open palm. Chen speaks to God through his hand, followers said.

Their religion combines aspects of Christianity, Buddhism and science fiction. Among the group, two 9-year-old boys were said to be the reincarnations of Jesus and Buddha.

Commonly known as the Taiwanese UFO Cult, the group is often compared to Heaven's Gate, the cult of computer programmers who systematically killed themselves last year to rendezvous with a UFO trailing the Hale-Bopp comet.

Speculation on the Internet is that the Taiwanese cult, which claims to have 150 members, could commit suicide as soon as March 31. That's when they believe God will come to Earth in an exact replica of Chen in order to instruct humanity by means of television of what is to come.

But Chen said he and his followers don't intend to commit suicide if that doesn't happen.

"God tells us that suicide is never to be allowed, never permitted," Chen said. He, like others, wore a white cowboy hat through which followers believe that God's spirit enters their bodies.

The Taiwanese cult started its first chapter in California in 1995, after followers used their life savings to come to the United States. Chen, their leader, relocated the cult last year to Garland, which he describes as "God's office." The name, Garland, sounds like "God-land," he's been quoted as saying.

Chen preaches that a nuclear war in 1999 will trigger what he calls the "Great Tribulation." Those who survive the nuclear winter will be rescued by God's flying saucer. There will be other loading docks, but Lake Street Beach will be the headquarters, Chen explained.

"Regardless of any kind of religious sect, any believers in God, any life form in the American continent can survive the Great Tribulation," Chen said. "All those who believe in God and are willing to receive God's salvation can be saved by God."

Toward the end of the hour-long ritual Friday, several adults and an 8-year-old girl, said to be a leader in the coming dimension, took off their sneakers, rolled up their pant legs and waded into the lake's 36-degree water. Another part of the ritual came when members dipped ornate scepter-like objects into the lake. The group planned to return to Garland.

Asked if there's a spiritual connection between Garland and Gary, Liu answered: "Nothing is a coincident," adding, "After March 31, everything will be clear."

It would seem that the 'Danger' sign is a moot issue since Theresa Carlson (Minnesota MUFON FI) has conclusively proven the Alien Autopsy film a hoax in her treatise "Shadows of Doubt".
See:

<http://www.uforeport.com/shadow.html>

The video she put together is even more damning. As far as I'm concerned it's time to chuck this hoax and get on with legitimate UFO research.

There is also the competing hypothesis that a 10th planet *tried* to form and didn't make it. Either is possible, I lean towards the "failed planet" theory myself.

Thank you Chris for your positive message, Christian and Jacques are located in an area called The dark triangle (St-Hyacinthe-Granby, St-Jean sur le Richelieu) and they have been hit by the storm very seriously. Our thoughts are with them and all the others affected by this unusual storm. I've been myself away from home for three days due to utility shortage now it's back to normal but it's nothing in comparison to what Christian and Jacques now endure.

During the Vietnam war and accompanying street riots something or somebody was going come and deliver the world from all its problems. Never Happened.

Armageddon was going to happen in the Fall of 1975. Never Happened.

The 70s version of Hal Lindseys book was absolute, drop dead, not wrong that Armageddon was going to happen in 1979 all according to Lindseys interpretation of biblical prophecy. Never Happened.

Although Hal has a revised version about how its all going to take place in 1999/2000.

The *rapture* was going to happen on pick your date between 1975, and current when all the faithful would be taken up while the "evil people* would have to suffer through the 7 years of tribulation blah blah.

Needless to say the faithful haven't been raptured yet and the earth and its people are suffering through many calamities and tribulations.

While these people may believe that God will deliver them from this alleged self proclaimed nuclear holocost, God did not deliver (using the rapture/flying saucer logic) from suffering the millions of people that were killed/injured/homeless in Europe from WW 1 & 2, did not deliver the 18 million people killed from the influenza plague of 1918, did not deliver the passengers of TWA flight 800, so I find it highly unlikely that God would deliver the world from a nuclear holocaust.

Does everybody remember Elizabeth clare Prophet that has the compound north of Yellowstone park? She was the self proclaimed prophetess who claimed back in either the late 70s, or early 80s that a nuclear holocaust was going to happen on a particular date because "God told her."

Her and her followers built huge bunkers, to when the nuclear holocaust came, she and her followers would be the only ones that survived.

Needless to say the date came and went, and last I heard the nuclear bunkers were slowly filling with water.

It's even more complicated than one might think.

DNA carries a large number of sequences of genetic material. In any given cell, only a small number of them are active (the ones which are useful for that type of cell at that stage in its development).

Some of the inactive sequences cannot, so far as we know, be reactivated short of a mutation, while others are temporarily blocked by the presence of various substances in the cell (this is how cells regulate the production of materials through a feedback mechanism which involves a hideously complex chain of chemical reactions).

There are some special sequences, which signal where RNA can start transcribing genetic material in the first step of creating proteins; other sequences say where that transcription should end.

The sequences used in terrestrial DNA code three for one for specific amino acids, and the sequence as a whole tells the cell in which order to assemble the amino acids to make a protein. But there are many more possible sequences than there are proteins used in terrestrial life. Some of the unused sequences have been developed through evolution to signal the start and the end of a sequence, or to act as spaces between sequences.

Now, while chemistry dictates which sequences code for which amino acids, thus making it likely that a DNA using cell from elsewhere would also use those same sequences to code for those amino acids (assuming those amino acids were used in their proteins, which is not a given either), the other sequences, especially the promoter and terminator sequences, are choices made by evolution from a fairly wide set of possibilities. And because inhibition of sequences in terrestrial organisms is based on a chemistry which typically blocks the promoter, the chances of a DNA based alien biochemistry being able to use our DNA in its reaction networks seems highly unlikely.

I haven't read the specific assertions which he has made, but I suspect the main reason his contention was not accepted was that most solar system origin theorists would find it unnecessary.

Most origin theories have no problem accounting for the asteroid belt with the same mechanisms they use to account for the development of planets and planetary ring systems (the asteroid belt being essentially a solar system-sized ring system with all of the normal characteristics of such a system).

A new theory usually has tough going even when there is a need for a theory to explain some new evidence or some problem with old theories' ability to explain that new evidence. But a theory offered to explain something pretty well explained without a compelling supporting mechanism won't be something any professional scientist will waste much time on.

Subject: Re: 'Surplus Time'

Hello List:

This is a quick overview of an event that occurred sometime around Christmas, with a request for any relevant information.

The experience was relayed to me from a third-hand source tonight (relative of individual), and I currently do not have any further details. There is no obvious connection to any UFO event, except perhaps as it relates to the inverse of "missing time". There is also an indirect connection to UFO events, which I will explain below.

The gentleman who had the experience starts work at about 3:00 a.m., and always has his alarm clock set to 1:00 a.m. After waking up, he habitually watches a certain 1 hour T.V. program that always starts at that time, while he prepares himself for work. He definitely watched the program on the day in question. After watching it, he leaves for work shortly after 2:00 a.m., and generally arrives at work about 2:40 to 2:45 a.m. (about 40-45 minute drive).

On the day in question, when he arrived at work, his co-workers asked him why he had arrived so early. When he checked the time, it was about 1:50 a.m. He had gained almost one hour of time.

The gentleman is greatly disturbed about the event, and has double-checked everything he could think of, including the time his clock was set at, the time the alarm was set at, and the time of the T.V. show. The T.V. show was not repeated an hour earlier.

The gentleman does not believe in UFO or supernatural events, and has apparently never personally experienced such events. Unknown to him (his wife has never mentioned this to him), his oldest daughter (aged 11) has had repeated UFO experiences since childhood. His other daughter (aged 5) has had possible supernatural experiences, but not any UFO experiences that her mother is aware of.

Because of how disturbed this gentleman is about this experience, I was requested by the gentleman's relative to ask whether any one on this List has heard of, or has read of any experiences in which time is gained rather than "missed".

I would appreciate any information regarding similar events, including any references to literature sources, and will pass these on to the gentleman's relative.

Thank you.

Joel,

Theresa has proved nothing of the sort, and she admits so. She has found some unusual points which need further research, but until the first autopsy footage is released there is really nothing we can do to support or refute her findings.

BTW, this IS legitimate UFO research.

I recall some recent article in 'Science', I think it was, where the study indicated it would be tougher than they thought to explain the presence of the asteroid belt. The hypothesis had been that Jupiter's gravity (somehow) prevented the asteroid material from forming into a planet. If you go to an astronomy news group, you can get quick, orthodox answers to such questions.

Of course, the total mass of asteroids, known plus extrapolated, only totals up to the mass of a very small planet. I guess the exploded planet theory accounts for this by Jupiter and the sun having swept up most of the missing planet's fragmented mass, with some more perhaps having been expelled from the solar system.

But Van Flandern goes into much of this in his book.

Sorry I can't remember the 'Science' article that suggests it isn't so well explained after all. If I find the time, I'll browse through the last 5 issues of 'Science'.

Hi Mark,

You know I can remember back in my late teens and early twenties when the broken up planet theory accounting for the asteroid belt was an acceptable idea. It was around for a few years. This would have been in the 60s [ if you can remember the 60s then you weren't really there].

What boosted this particular scientist into the "quacky ranks" with his fellow "professionals". BTW that last term sometimes is just a permit some groups apply to themselves so that they can stick their heads up the respective asses without really being to embarrassed about it. At least around themselves. I think they picked it up from the politicians.

Not that there's anything wrong with that.

Lunar Prospector spacecraft begins orbiting moon

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (January 11, 1998 3:18 p.m. EST <http://www.nando.net>) -- The Lunar Prospector spacecraft maneuvered into orbit around the moon on Sunday, getting set for high-altitude scientific study that will get under way later this week.

"Everything's working just as it had in our simulations," said Scott Hubbard, mission manager at NASA's Ames Research Center.

The spacecraft's engine burned for 30 minutes to put the unmanned probe in orbit. Subsequent engine firings will be conducted to position Prospector into the polar orbit required by researchers.

Prospector carries instruments that will search from above for evidence of frozen water at the moon's shadowy poles, as well signs of minerals and gases. The 4-foot-long, 650-pound spacecraft was launched Jan. 6 from Florida on an Athena rocket. Its $65 million, year-long mission: to map the moon's surface to determine its composition and its gravitational and magnetic fields.

Scientists expect to begin collecting scientific data as soon as Prospector settles into a 60-mile-high polar orbit sometime Tuesday.

"Within the first month or so, we expect to get an answer on whether there are large quantities of polar ice," Hubbard said.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration last explored the moon in December 1972 with Apollo 17, which was manned.

If you are interested in the 1952 Washington National Airport Sightings you ought to read. Edward J. Ruppel's - 'The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects', Chapter 12, "The Washington Merry-go-round". This chapter is entirely on these events and most of it is insider information which was NEVER chronicled in the newspapers. Ruppel was at that time the head of Project Blue Book and was the one who coined the term "UFO" issued in the 1952 press release describing these events.

>Tom G.

Then of course there is the writings of Zachariah Sitchin, and his book 'The 12th Planet'

In this book the Sumerians allege that there was a rogue planet which had broken away from it's sun and along with it's 12 moons, it came into our solar system in a giant elliptical orbit which crossed the paths horizontally of our planets. Thus on one of these orbits, it crossed the path of the planet Tiamut, the water planet. As it drew closer to Tiamut, let by it's 12 moons, the gravitational forces of such a giant planet (about the size of Jupiter) split the planet Tiamut in half. One half became the "asteroid belt," and the other half spun off into space and allegedly settled into the third orbit around our Sun...in other words, it became the early earth. AS the planet settled into place, and began to cool, the waters drained into the low places and it assumed it's present shape...

It also brought with it, it's moon, Kingu, which is our present moon.

Well, that is the story which Sitchin says the Sumerian Cuneiform tablets tell...He is one of only a handful of scholars who can still read the Sumerian and Babylonian languages today.

There is also another theory as to how the artifacts may have arisen on Mars. It is theorised that as the Sun spits out it's planetary system, there exists a "life belt" which each of these planets passes through over a period of millions of years, or longer.

It is theorized that the Earth now occupies that space which Mars occupied during it's "life belt" period. Thus, Life would have arisen, mature, advanced, left the planet just as the planet was moving out of the "life belt, or zone" and possibly migrated to the Earth, which was just starting to move into that zone, or to other star or planetary systems elsewhere.

Based on the development of life on the earth, it might be possible that the artifacts on Mars are remnants of our Ancestral heritage.

Just a thought.

For Dan and others

I hate to pour water on this one BUT WHAT LAWS WERE BROKEN BY CORSO?

US attorneys are investigating drug deals, killings, mob, embezzlement, stealing from the military.

Can you imagine what they would do with a letter requesting a grand jury investigation of Corso.

Its called round file after writing a one paragraph response about how busy the US attorneys office is, how under staffed, and with budget cuts.....

US attorneys generally don't mess with stuff out of books because Anybody can write anything on paper.

Cheers,

Joel,

Even if the film is proven 100% conclusively a hoax, people will still want to ponder over the deep significance of it all.

I agree Joel. However, the fact that we gave this flimsy film story the time of day for this long is ridiculous, IMO.

FWIW, the danger sign story has been around for a while. I believe Theresa even did some first hand investigation of that as well.

Hello The List, and hello Gary...

Only one chapter? Gee, wouldn't it be fun if you typed it in for us? ...Or if you have a scanner... Or maybe just the highlights? I'm not going to buy the book just to read chapter 12. Besides, how can I be sure of the accuracy of its contents? Someone is going to look at some back newspapers which I am sure are available, and therein will be found the most reliable of information.
I have to say this first, then if the book has something more to offer... Well, we shall see.

Regards,

Jack

I'm sorry, but until Herr Koch can provide me with some research material, I'm going to have to provoke him by saying that the entire Lesotho incident was and is a huge pile of hogwash.

I have it from a reliable source that Cynthia Hind from Zimbabwe investigated the case, and declared it a hoax.

Once again I will repeat myself:
Despite numerous postings to various mailing lists and discussion groups, as well as direct email to Herren Koch und Von Retyi, I have received nothing. Zip.

What is posted at Koch's web site could just as well have been created by myself with a scanner and image-editing software.

If I had a scanner, I'd do it, too, just to show that the so-called "documentary proof" is garbage.

That's all I have to say....

The missing time that some people experience generally tend to be related to some sort of UFO event.

It is possible that the cause of this missing time, is not really missing, just that it never actually happened. meaning that somehow the person traveled forward through time for a few hours and hence the time inbetween from when they remember to where they are now, for them at least, never existed.

Presumably then if someone or something has the ability to travel forward in time, the ability might also be there to travel back in time. Causing the uncomfortable feeling of gained time.

If this person`s family has been experiencing somesort of UFO or paranormal events then it could be directly related to those events.

Anyway, its just a thought.

Stuart.

Hey Gary...

Yes, that is a good source of information on the Washington D.C. flyovers. I have the book in my library as well as the black and white movie which was produced back in the 50's, which portrayed Ruppelt's role in, if memory serves me correctly, Project Grudge.

I guess I really need to take the time away from my hectic schedule of daily events and review this material, now that it has been resurrected on this list. <G>

Mark,

Absolutely correct.

And a very good argument against the ETH as an explanation of these critters and what they are doing.

If they evolved here, then the whole scenario changes, and the likelihood that their DNA would be compatible becomes quite high, indeed.

This planet is very old, and there are many gaps in the fossil record. We see the past in big disconnected chunks governed by chance. Intelligent life had many opportunities to evolve prior to our appearance.

And that does not even include other possible terrestrial explanations such as time travel, parallel universes, etc.

I simply do not understand why so many cling to the idea that what we are attempting to understand must be ET in origin. I think the probabilities are much higher that the phenomenon, whatever it may prove to be, is completely earthly in origin.

>REgards, Mike

I don't think any astronomer believes that stars "spit out" planets which then slowly drift outwards. Celestial mechanics just don't support such an idea.

However, we have real problems explaining what we see on Mars.
The planet shows obvious signs of large amounts of water in the past. Yet it does not have enough gravity to hold on to water in such quantities today. Unless large amounts of water were coming in from an outside source, such as the theorized constant bombardment of the earth by small water comets, it is hard to envision any way in which Mars could have had so much water in the past.

Perhaps rather than a "life belt" there is a "water belt" of tiny comets in orbit around the sun, and that belt has moved closer to the sun so that it no longer seeds Mars with water but is seeding Earth instead.

I think it is clear that there is one hell of a lot we do not know about this solar system of ours, and each new exploration by NASA or the Russians fills in a few more pieces of the puzzle.

At the risk of blowing my own horn, let me point out that in 'Conspiracy of Silence' (Avon Books, 1997) I take a long look at the Washington Nationals, including interviews I conducted with some of the participants. Both Dewey Fournet and Al Chop provided insights into what happened, especially on the second night. I also interviewed tower personnel and used the unpublished data from the Condon Committee study. (Condon's investigator took a couple of people to lunch and submitted a bill for about $3.50 for everyone's meal.)

Various newspaper and magazine articles on 1952 including the Washington, DC radar incidents can be found at <http://www.iufog.org/project1947/fig/1952a.htm>

and

<http://www.iufog.org/project1947/fig/1952b.htm>

Some official documents from Project Blue Book (Major Fournet's account is here) are at:

<http://www.iufog.org/project1947/fig/1952c.htm>

A slightly updated version of Richard Hall's Time Line for the Washington, DC incidents can be found at:

<http://www.iufog.org/project1947/fig/1952d.htm>

Project 1947 contributors are transcribing certain handwritten documents or items that will not scan well to add to the website page that covering these incidents.

To aid both Michael Fousse and Michael Hall who is engaged on an intensive re-examination of the Summer of 1952 some grass roots research is suggested. Newspapers in the small towns and some medium sized cities escaped the USAF's 1952 clipping service.

Generally weekly newspapers were not included in the clipping service at all. Like any clipping service it obviously missed items. It was remarkably careless in clipping items that were

Why check in other newspapers? Many of the targets on the Washington, D. C. radar scopes sped off as high speed which would have carried them far away from Washington, D. C. in a matter of seconds or minutes. Perhaps some of these were seen by witnessed and published in local newspapers. (Many local Ground Observer Corps reports during this time also made it to the newspapers.) Newspapers within 100 miles of Washington, D. C. would be prime candidates.

I have watched how you repeatedly asked for information about the Lesotho case and apparently what you got does not satisfy you.

Would you explain why Cynthia Hind declares the case a hoax?

Aloha Bob...

I suppose one of the main reasons is that if a truly advanced society evolved on earth, how and why would they have erased all evidence of themselves and then left for space, only to come back in secret? It would be absolutely impossible for us (and, by inference, 'them') to remove every bit of evidence that we had ever been here, and what would be the point if we were leaving en-masse? There is no historical, biological or archeological evidence of a previous advanced industrial society extant on earth. I do not include pyramids and stone heads as evidence of an advanced space-traveling civilization.

If you want to attempt the argument that we originated and evolved on Mars and some came to earth and some went the other direction and have now returned, you face the same problem. Actually, you face a worse one since human DNA is related to everything living on earth, so we have been evolving here since the days of primordial soup.

While intelligent life MIGHT have ridden the evolutionary roller coaster on earth before, they clearly did not develop optics, electronics, flight, metallurgy or, so far as is known, a written language. Yes, there are gaps in the archeological record, but that is the point. There are gaps. Not places where there is evidence of advanced civilizations, but places where there is not.

In addition, there are time constraints and many other factors that argue against this possibility. Prior to the K/T boundary, there were very few mammals at all. 65 million years appears to be 'just right' for our evolution to have developed to this point, and Mars has been desolate for much longer than that. Which, of course, is not to say that we are an advanced civilization in comparison to anything except our own ancestors.

I do not address parallel universes because, small gaps or not, we can trace our biological history to small, four-legged mammals. Even further than that...we have DNA sequences that demonstrate our relationship to plants and trees. Time travel on the other hand, is an interesting concept.

Many physicists think time travel is a viable possibility. As far as I understand the math (which is about as far as I can toss an elephant), one cannot exit a wormhole except at the exact time and place one entered it without creating an insuperable paradox. But if 'they' are here, either through space or time, that problem must have been resolved.

I agree that evolutionarily advanced humans traveling back through time to us would resolve a lot of the biological problems of abduction claims, and what seems to me the interesting anomaly of alien creatures being able accomplish intergalactic travel just to crash once they reach earth. Maybe the human race just cannot learn to drive. But time travel might create moral and ethical problems elsewhere. If the government has recovered artifacts and bodies they would know, but if it were a time travel scenario you could be darned sure they would never admit that it was happening and I would not blame them. I wouldn't either.

Hmmmmmm.....Maybe some UFO investigators should be looking forward instead of up. <grin>

I defer to Mark Cashman who, I hope, will comment.

Joel, Bob and LIST,

There is something we can do though.

When a proof exists, is READILY AVAILABLE and is VOLUNTARILY WITHELD, a simple procedure would be to AVOID distributing elements of the case until this proof is brought forward. That does not mean one may not study the case further, but to pretend that "there is really nothing we can do" is a pure syllogism.

Speculation is not the subject here. We all know that Ufology is mainly the study of circumstantial evidence, an elaborate task to say the least.

Hard evidence is what we are talking about. You surely remember the Turin Shroud affair a couple of years ago. Speculation was going on as scientists from major universities had studied the Shroud and couldn't figure out how it could have been done. To paraphrase Bruce, "if it was an hoax, it was an elaborate one" :)

Actual physical datation technics could not be used as too much material of a possible Holy Relic would be destroyed. Until a team from |...?| came up with a precise datation method that used only a very small amount of material. The Shroud became a shroud, and the Catholic Church escaped paganism and gained a some dignity (this time).

The case of the Alien Autopsy film is quite similar. Its authenticity can be easily... demolished. Proving the film is from 1947 will not establish anything, but proving it is from much later will SOLVE the case.

Mr. Santilli HAS REPEATIDLY PROMISED HE WOULD EMINENTLY COME FORWARD WITH A PIECE OF THE ORIGINAL FILM BUT HAS SYSTEMATICALLY FAILED TO DO SO. What can be concluded from such an attitude ?

We can OJSimpsonize this case ad nauseam, but in the end (and in the beginning I would say), it is all a matter of integrity. This is "voluntarily Withholding Readily Available Proof", a vWRAP.

If you don't see it Bob then, yes, "there is really nothing we can do".

Bob:

The evidence is overwhelming that we are dealing with manufactured vehicles whose technology is well beyond ours especially for the 1940s.

We could be their colonies. We could have a common origin. The earth is not an old planet. There are stars 5 billion years older than the Sun.

We know little about our past beyond a million years. Where is the problem? Also, we are just beginning the age of genetic manipulation, doing routinely things thought impossible 40 years ago... No problem with ET except for those unwilling to stretch their understanding.

Needless to say, I hope, confidentiality on all matters will be scrupulously respected.

Many thanks.

Let's keep copyright infringement in mind here.

Contrary to popular belief, you can't just scan the chapter into the computer and post it all over the internet. That is illegal. In fact, we play fast and loose with the law here by posting whole newspaper articles, even with the proper credit being given. The copyright laws are quite specific and what most people believe to be fair use is, in fact, outlawed.

And Jack, what gave you the idea that the newspaper clippings from the time would be more accurate than Ruppelt's analysis of the situation, especially since you haven't read it? Ruppelt seemed to provide an interesting insight into the functioning of the UFO investigation in 1952 and gives some clues about the thinking at the higher levels. Ruppelt's work is important to understanding the whole of the 1952 flap.

Even the report in the Condon Committee document provides clues even when it is so obviously influenced by the mission of the Committee.

Well, the normal explanation, which is based on fairly simple physics, says that first, Jupiter attracted most of the material from that band once its mass went over a certain level; second, the presence of Jupiter perturbed the planetesimals so that they would fall into unusually inclined and eccentric orbits (thus a lot of mass just never got close enough to collide with anything else; and third, what are called "orbital period resonances" tended to confine the asteroids into subrings (much like what you see in the Rings of Saturn); and, finally, enough mass was never present in any subring before the concentrated matter had attained in orbits that drastically reduced the chances of further accretion.

I checked my references, including a prominent astronomy text of the 1960s (Baker's). The only reference I can find to a breakup theory being taken seriously was shortly after the first asteroid observation in the early 1800s (when Bode's Law was still considered useful, and a planet between Mars and Jupiter was considered essential), but by the '60s all of the origin theories are condensation and accretion theories. In the '70s Alfven's introduction of plasma and magnetic field considerations into the origin problem led him to write with Arrhenius the definitive text on origins for NASA.

Of course, there may have been some popular theories to that effect, but I think its been a long time since any scientist thought a planet could be destroyed by anything other than a collision.

1952 was the year the government lied to the American people. (No big surprise there?) General Samford, on Aug 29, 1952, at a press conference said he thought all sightings were natural phenomena. That's not what his office (Air Force Office of Intelligence) told the FBI: 3% of the sightings could not be explained and some high AF officers were considering interplanetary vehicles.

Had he admitted the 3% unexplainable and the possibility of ET craft at the press conference the lid would have blown off.

More info on 1952 and the preceding (and following) years in "THE UFO-FBI CONNECTION/ the REAL X-files." If interested, contact me at brumac@compuserve.com

> moon.

There are so many things wrong with this from the point of view of orbital dynamics that it is difficult to know where to start.

First, let's imagine a disturbance that causes a giant planet to be ejected from its orbit. Such a disturbance can only be caused by the passage of a large mass - in this case, assuming the planet to be ejected has Jovian mass, only a VERY close approach by a super-Jovian / brown dwarf or a close approach by a star or a high mass object such as a neutron star, could cause such a disturbance. Unfortunately, said disturbance would certainly cause the ejection of the rogue planet's 12 moons, and so that part is unlikely.

But now let's look at the chances that the rogue planet enters the solar system. You know that at one time a planetary origin theory depended on a passing star close enough to rip a scarf of solar material from the sun which condensed into planets. But one of the major points which led to the rejection of that theory was the nearly infinitesimal chance of a stellar passage sufficiently close to cause the effect. Obviously, the chances that a rogue planet would enter our solar system are equally remote, unless space is full of these things, and there is no evidence that it is or ever was. So that's unlikely.

But let's assume it does these two improbable things before breakfast, what about the chances of it passing close enough to tidally disrupt a planet, even one made of water? Well, the distance required for this, known as the Roche limit, is well defined, and is based on mass. It probably is well within a million miles for Jupiter. Given the orbital period of giant planets, the chances of such a close approach are... well, small.

So that's unlikely.

Then the planet splits in half, and one half breaks up into a small number of pieces and the other half stays a unit and settles into earth orbit. Well, let's say the split happens. Unfortunately, the time needed for such a "earth" to settle into a nearly circular orbit is much longer than the age of the solar system.

And as previously mentioned with regard to the rogue planet, the chances that a moon would remain associated with "Tiamut" after such a catastrophe is small.

In short, modern celestial dynamics would consider this an unlikely candidate for the method of origin of the solar system.

Additional problems come from the isotope distribution in the solar system, which indicates a common origin for the planets.

Yes, but many of those scholars dispute his interpretation of the writings.

There's no support for that in any origin theories with which I'm familiar. The ability to support life depends on a number of factors. Mars probably lost its ability to support life due to its low mass, a few large impacts which reduced its atmosphere to low pressures, and the lack of a magnetic field, which exposed the surface to high levels of UV.

It is still not clear if Mars ever had standing bodies of water that would have lasted long enough to originate life, but it seems much less likely that Mars could have evolved a complex enough ecosystem to have developed an intelligent life form, and to show no trace of that ecosystem today.

Barwood To Base Run On UFO Issue

Barwood pushes UFOs in bid for state office

By Chris Fiscus
The Arizona Republic
Jan. 13, 1998

When she pressed for an investigation into an apparent UFO sighting over Phoenix last March, then-Councilwoman Frances Emma Barwood drew her share of ridicule.

But Barwood will announce today that she is basing her run for Arizona secretary of state in part on a pledge to get answers to such seemingly paranormal events.

Her campaign will mark "the first time a viable candidate for high public office, state or national" has formally raised questions about the federal government's failure to investigate the V-shaped formation of lights that passed over Phoenix last March, and other reports of unidentified flying objects, she said. The sightings sparked hundreds of calls to Luke Air Force Base and the media.

"I would have run anyway," Barwood said Monday, "but this made me realize we have a problem with the government's lack of openness."

As secretary of state, she added, she would be in the position to ask for investigations into incidents like the one March 13 involving the lights.

"What was the most astonishing thing to me was finding out all the times in the past people did ask, and all they got was ridicule," she said.

She will announce her candidacy at a noon press conference at the downtown Hyatt Regency hotel.

Her campaign team includes a Maryland man who specializes in dealing with unexplained events and incidents where the government reputedly ignored citizen inquiries, she said.

"This is a public safety issue of state and national significance which should not, in good conscience, be ignored by a responsible candidate for high office," Barwood wrote in a statement.

Another campaign manager will be on hand to help her deal with state issues.

Barwood grabbed international attention and was a regular on national television and radio shows when, as a city councilwoman, she called for an investigation into the lights.

UFO believers lauded her when she asked Phoenix to look into the sightings. When the city scoffed, she asked Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and the Air Force to investigate. The questions went unanswered, she said, even though there were "thousands of sightings of unidentified craft" in state and national airspace.

"Government has gotten so closed to the people it's become a 'them against us' attitude . . . Nobody trusts government," Barwood said Monday.

When Barwood was on the City Council, though, the city approved a silicon-wafer plant for northeast Phoenix. That led to a recall, protests and legal challenges from furious neighbors who said the city rushed the plan through the process and duped the public.

Barwood survived the recall and finished her term in office last month, but did not run for re-election.

Several explanations have been offered for the lights. A Maryland Air National Guard unit has said several of its planes dropped flares while returning from a gunnery range in southern Arizona, which might account for the sighting.

"I really feel (secretary of state) is an office that is a pivotal point in state government," she said. "We need to get back to what's really important, like our constitutional rights and our state rights. We have to have someone who's willing to stick her neck out to protect our freedoms."

Former Maricopa County Board of Supervisors Chairman Betsey Bayless is the secretary of state, after Jane Hull moved into her new job as governor. Bayless is finishing Hull's term, which ends next January. If she wants to keep the job, Bayless will have to run.

Aloha Stan....

While I hesitate to disagree with you (especially since I just ordered your new book today and I don't want to risk not getting an autographed copy), we cannot be an ET colony unless everything living on earth was planted here. All living terrestrial entities are related through DNA, or at least the chemistry that evokes DNA/RNA responses, and those responses evolved within very specific terrestrial conditions. Even supposing that some ETs might have modified the DNA of a group of chimpanzees by 2 or 3 percent in order to provide an evolutionary 'jump start', this seems an unnecessary complication, and the difficulties are absolutely staggering.

'They' may well be here, and the following possibilities come to mind: As recreation (like visiting the San Diego wild animal park); as an educational experience; as part of a training program, or as colonists. Or the earth might be a navigional point between other destinations. Whatever they might or might not be doing we do not seem to have a choice. According to the stories, we are certainly not being treated as long lost relatives, so the benign 'space brother' theory does not seem to work. We like to believe that the government is in collusion with them, but the government might have nothing but a crashed ship and a bunch of questions. If I ran the government, I wouldn't want that to get out until I figured out what to do about it. And they might never figure it out.

Hello Kevin,

Question from an amateur. How do you (or any UFO researcher) go about determining which aspects of a particular report are
'tainted' (for lack of a better word) by individuals with agendas, or "committees?"

On the flip side, what criteria do you use to determine what parts (may) represent -good- or usable information. It just seems to me that an awful lot of random individual interpretation can creep into such evaluations unless one has 'established criteria' by which they measure the value of data. I was wondering if you have a 'system' or something that you use to help you evaluate material that you encounter in your research. I'm sure a lot of the aspiring "UFO Detectives" on this list would learn alot from your answer and benefit from your years of experience.

Thanx, just curious. Best of luck to you and Mr Estes with your new book.

Regards,

John Velez

Serge has hit the "essence" of the fraudtopsy film on the head with this comment.

No matter how the various people talk about and defend the film, this is one thing they can't explain or defend.

I suspect that all the folks who got on the fraudtopsy film trust and reputation on the line for Scantilli.

Keith,

Thanks for the interesting transcripts. These would seem to confirm that Dr Mitchell supports the possibility of a 'cover up', based on discussions with ostensibly credible 'senior figures'.

I think we all appreciate there have been such indications and it's a question of whether they actually have any substance. Many such 'smoking guns' are generally accepted, rarely by all of course, as either otherwise explained or of dubious provenance.

Dr Mitchell doesn't provide specific details here and I wonder which claims and sources have persuaded him.

Actually, Bob, I think most Mars theorists would assert that it isn't gravity that relates to the water loss, but the low temperatures which forced it into a thick layer of permafrost.

In any case, a major source of water in planetary atmospheres seems to be volcanism, and Mars sure has / had plenty of that.

No question, though, that Mars was bombarded quite heavily in the late heavy bombardment period of planetary accretion. Certainly it is likely that some of the impactors were comets.

From: Rxreq <Rxreq@aol.com>

On Sunday, Jan. at 2:25 a.m., 50,000-watt newsradio KOA in Denver, Colorado, is reporting that a suspected meteorite crashed in the Church parking lot nearby a major city intersection at approximately 12:30 a.m.

The station reports that witnesses flooded the station with calls regarding sighting of a "strange light" which reportedly "broke apart" and caused an "explosion" on impact that was felt and heard as far south as Pueblo. At 2:30 a.m., however, a KOA update reported that inspectors at the scene had not found evidence of a meteorite at the scene. Perhaps at daybreak, evidence of the impact will be located, but at this moment, the celestial event has not been proven conclusively to be a natural phenomenon. More details as they become available.....

"The Universe is not only as strange as we can imagine, it is stranger than we can imagine."

This morning, I was listening to the radio, and heard there were light flashes and rumblings from the sky. If anyone has any info on this, please post to the group. As cold as it was, I doubt it was lightning and thunder. I'll check the local tv station pages.

U.S. goes in search of water on the moon

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (January 13, 1998 8:13 p.m. EST
<http://www.nando.net>) - After a flawless trip into orbit around the moon, the U.S. space probe Lunar Prospector has started scouring the lunar surface for possible reserves of water which could prove invaluable for any future human moon colonies.

Mission control scientists said on Tuesday that the small robot explorer, NASA's first moonshot since the Apollo 17 astronauts walked on the lunar surface in 1972, had established a preliminary mapping orbit after a 240,000-mile journey from Cape Canaveral in Florida.

"We are taking a great step toward rediscovering the moon," Prospector mission manager Scott Hubbard told a news conference at NASA's Ames Research Center.

The Prospector probe was launched six days ago and took four and a half days to travel close to the moon.

"It has been a joy to fly this spacecraft," said Alan Binder, the mission's principal investigator. "It really is child's play."

After three "orbital insertion burns," the the tiny 4-foot, 650 pound spacecraft eased into an orbit some 60 miles above the moon's surface. A final "tweak" burn of the craft's thrusters will be completed on Thursday to bring it into its final mapping route.

The five scientific instruments mounted on the drum-like probe were all running and streams of data were already pouring in "far better than expected," Binder said.

Popular interest has focused on Prospector's neutron spectrometer, which will scan the surface for signs of hydrogen to confirm theories that the moon's polar regions could contain as much as one billion tons of water ice.

"If water ice is present in the quantity some people have predicted, we may know that in the first month of the mission," Hubbard said.

Scientists have speculated that frozen water from icy comets may have accumulated within polar craters on the moon that are permanently shaded from the sun.

The existence of water ice on the moon could prove immensely useful for any future human colonies, with astronauts separating its components for use as rocket fuel. It was unclear whether such ice would be a potential source of drinking water.

But Prospector's other missions are also important. Among them are gamma ray analysis to determine concentrations of elements such as uranium and iron on the lunar surface, and an alpha particle spectrometer which will be used to look for indications of volcanic and tectonic activity.

With a price tag of $63 million, the Lunar Prospector is a modest successor to the multibillion-dollar Apollo project, which put 12 men on the surface of the moon from 1969 to 1972.

Budget cuts in the early 1970s forced NASA to abandon lunar exploration and the U.S. space agency has concentrated its efforts on building the space shuttle and sending unmanned probes to Mars and the outer planets.

Hubbard said Prospector's performance so far showed that NASA's new aim of "faster, better, cheaper" was the right way for man to further explore space.

"This is probably the most cost-effective space science mission ever conducted," Hubbard said. "We hope that we will be able to apply some of these lessons to future missions."

One minor controversy has involved a non-scientific payload aboard Prospector: one ounce (28 grams) of the ashes of planetary scientist Gene Shoemaker, who died last year.

Shoemaker, his wife, Carolyn, and amateur astronomer David Levy discovered the broken comet that crashed into Jupiter in 1994. He was also involved in the unmanned Ranger missions that paved the way for the Apollo moon landings.

Navajo officials voiced objections to the inclusion of human remains on Prospector, which is designed finally to descend and crash on the moon's surface when its mission is completed. The Navajo said human bodies should not be left on the moon, which they regard as sacred ground.

NASA officials have apologized for any misunderstanding over the ashes, which they said were being taken to the moon as a tribute to Shoemaker and intended to cause insult to anyone.

German Cult Members Released

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Islands (AP) -- Nineteen Germans linked to a suspected doomsday religious sect were released without charge Tuesday, a day after being arrested for allegedly planning to take part in a mass suicide.

The 19, including three children, were taken into custody late Monday after police searched a house owned by their jailed leader, said Mari Paz Bernal, a spokeswoman for the Interior Ministry.

The leader, Heide Fittkau-Garthe, was arrested last week and accused of an earlier plot to lead her 31 followers in a mass suicide. According to police, the original scheme called for the followers to kill themselves on Jan. 8 -- the day they reportedly believed the world would end.

Fittkau-Garthe has denied the claims of a group plot to take their lives.

The followers, police said, believed a space ship would come and pick up their bodies at Teide mountain on Tenerife, one of seven islands in the Canary archipelago, located off the northwest African coast.

Police said they were tipped to a second suicide plan by the mother of one of the cult members.

Bernal refused to say whether the release of the 19 meant that authorities no longer believed the second suicide plan existed. Police said they would continue to monitor the Germans, who were staying in Fittkau-Garthe's house, but they were free to leave the country.

The other 12 cult members, who were in Germany, were not arrested, she said.

The sect, whose name was not released, has been linked to the Order of the Solar Temple, whose followers have carried out mass suicides in Canada, France and Switzerland.

The attorney for Fittkau-Garthe, a 57-year-old German psychologist currently charged with attempted murder and inducement to suicide, insists the allegations are unfounded. Enrique Porres says his client administers "spiritual therapy" that has nothing to do with mass suicide.

During their search of Fittkau-Garthe's home, police discovered a child's drawing of a UFO and then concocted the space ship story, he says .

Actually, I have never really understood the idea that simply traveling in time causes a paradox. A real paradox would require a time traveler to do something that prevents them from traveling in time to perform that action. But we don't know how resilient the structure of events might be - most scientists seem to assume it has a positive feedback response to changes made by future entities traveling into the past, but I suspect that some events may have large effects and others may die out.

Certainly there are things about UFOs which make the time- travel hypothesis appealing. Elusiveness, for instance, would seem to be a requirement for time travelers.

However, the variety of reported occupants would indicate several races and even species of time travelers, just as ETH proponents point to this as an indication of multiple visiting ET species.
That being the case, I am not sure what we gain by asserting the TTH.

Yes, the biological assertions of abductees are a problem, but only if we believe them. And there are a number of things to worry about:

1) Distinguishing between a real abduction and a false one is not something commonly or easily done. Many likely false abduction cases contaminate the data.

2) Abductees typically claim to be in an abnormal psychological state, which does not lead one to firm confidence in the content of their memory, no matter how sincere their belief in the events they report or which are revealed through hypnosis.

3) Important parts of abduction data have been revealed under hypnosis. Even qualified psychological researchers remain uncertain as to the nature of the hypnotic state and the degree to which confabulation occurs. Obviously, this is using an abnormal mental state to recall another abnormal mental state at the best interpretation possible.

4) Even discarding all of the above, the abductors may be lying, joking, performing a strange act of theatre, using mind control to determine the mental and emotional parameters of humans and their relationship to their offspring, or any number of other possibilities open to the fertile mind of the science-fiction speculator. In short, we do not know that what the abductees relate as a common story is a true representation of reality. This means we do not know if human and alien biology is, in fact, compatible in any way.

I remain concerned about a number of features which reflect dubiously on the reality of at least some abductions.

1) Lack of allergic reactions.

2) Lack of biological infection.

3) Lack of recuperative time - excessively rapid healing after massively intrusive procedures.

4) Lack of artifacts despite the continued apparent implantation of humans with alien technology.

5) Presence of some clearly non-physical abductions.

> Hmmmmm.....Maybe some UFO investigators should be looking forward > instead of up. <grin>

> I defer to Mark Cashman who, I hope, will comment.

At this point, I don't see a need for the TTH. On a plausibility scale, I suspect we have, in order:

ETH - we know life exists in the universe, that intelligent life exists in the universe, and that it can travel in space: we are that life. We know that there is significant evidence that UFOs are physical and operate according to the laws of physics as we know them, despite their unusual appearance and extreme performance; in fact, UFOs appear to be machines, crewed by non-human beings. UFOs come from the sky and return to the sky in a significant proportion of cases. The obvious suggestion is that UFOs are from another world somewhere in space.

NPH (Non-physical hypotheses such as Earthlights) - we know that the human mind can be influenced by magnetic and electrical fields, we know plasmas can exist. Unfortunately, NPH cannot easily deal with the clearly physical aspects of the phenomenon, and essentially would need to be classed with the hoax/hallucination/misperception hypotheses in its inability to explain important UFO data.

TTH - This is hard to distinguish from ETH, especially if one wants to assume alien time travelers in alliance with humans, or that evolved humans would be quite different from present humans in appearance. However, time travelers would presumably not need to engage in the level of observation or in the types of apparent observation performed by UFOs (i.e. studying aircraft again and again, following and stalling cars), because, having a heritage based in our time, they should already know about these artifacts and also about human behavior. Nonetheless, it is possible to hypothesize any number of reasons to violate these expectations. But it is a more complex hypothesis than ETH and requires more violation of well-established physical laws, including, especially, potential violations of causality (i.e. an effect before a cause).

PNH - a relatively small number of apparently reliable UFO cases seems to show some unusual features which suggest non-physicality and physicality in the same phenomenon. While this could be an effect of a technological device which is not known to us, this aspect does bear watching. Certainly, biological compatibility may very well not be an issue for a paranormal UFO source, so even presuming the truth of the abduction / hybrid thread PNH is not ruled out. But it is a more complex hypothesis than ETH since it requires a paranormal intelligence of unknown source, capable of altering matter with a non-visible technology, neither of which is within the scope of our present physical knowledge.

Well, I hope that does the job for now...

The mysteries are many, Trustworthiness and objectivity of observations cannot be always verified. In most cases, television and photo cameras fail when it comes to filming UFOs. But there are irrefutable proofs, which only make scientists shrug. The breath-taking one is the Dalnegorsk phenomenon. On the fringes of Dalnegorsk (a city in the Far East) four years ago, a spaceship had an accident on Height 611. According to witnesses, it happened at 5 :55 p. m. The low-flying reddish sphere was moving noiselessly towards Height 611. Reaching it, the sphere went down, then up and again down, eventually catching fire. Aflame, it made six attempts to take off. One hour later it slowly rose and flew away. Expeditions from the Far Eastern Scientific Center and other notable institutions inspected the site. Opinions differ. Enthusiast Valeri Dvuzhilni, who was a teacher when the accident happened and now heads the anomalous phenomena commission Far Eastern group of the Academy of Sciences' Siberian branch, gives the following facts. Instruments registered six anomalous points on the site. Strange iron and lead drops and welded, not charred, pieces of wood were found. Atop the hill extraordinary finds were discovered. Firstly, the "grid," which no one can explain what it is. Scientists from the Institute of Chemistry say, "We don't know how this substance was formed. Nothing like it exists." Another mystery is the quartz-sheathed gold thread 17 microns (three times less than human hair) in diameter. Three days after the accidents, scientists rose to the hill, where they lost coordination and fell down. They all registered unexplainable changes in the blood and high blood pressure. Explanations of these mysteries also are many. Dvuzhilnicites dozens of other anomalous phenomena which occurred above the Far Eastern taiga. For example, on the night of Nov. 28-29, 1987, 33 UFOs were seen. Thirteen UFOs passed above Dalnegorsk. Five of them hovered and searched the earth with their beams, while the other four flew above Height 611 between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. Too fantastic? But then again time will tell.

Rebecca and list members,

>FWIW, the danger sign story has been around for a while. I >well.

I did attempt to investigate it. As so often has happened in this saga, it came down to trying to prove a negative. In this instance, proving that similar signs did not exist in 1947.

I did find incidences of similar signs using the word "DANGER", as early as the mid-fifties.

Chances are that OSHA would not have simply pulled a particular design out of the blue and made it a standard. It was likely a "tried and true" model that was made into the standard.

Finding exactly when and where it was tried could be a near impossible task.

Another problem stems from the fact that we don't know exactly what the sign in the autopsy footage says.

An interesting note though, in case anyone else is thinking of "finding" more Roswell UFO crash evidence, the warning sign that seems to be the most common in the late forties was one that said
"CAUTION". Red letters on a yellow background....

Theresa Carlson

Don,

>You really think after three years that Santilli is finally going to >release that film. :-)

Odd, but your statement reminds me of an old tale about dangling a carrot in front of a jackass to keep him moving... ;-) Santilli told me that he wouldn't be releasing the "first autopsy". He told me this both before and after seeing the Shadows of Doubt report.

Wonder which one he is lying to...

Greer's December letter to Congress

PUBLIC REQUESTED TO CALL THESE COMMITTEES Today, 24 December 1997, the following letter was sent to key Chairmen of Congressional Committees by registered mail, return receipt requested.

December 22, 1997
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Senator/Congressman,

For the past seven years, CSETI (The Center for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence) has been collecting scientific evidence on the matter of extraterrestrial intelligence and so-called UFOs.

We have identified a substantial amount of irrefutable evidence as well as the testimony of over 100 military, intelligence agency and civilian government witnesses who have held Top Secret (TS) clearances, many of whom were additionally cleared for access to Sensitive Compartmented Information (SCI). These people have personally witnessed or been involved in covert operations related to this subject or events of an unambiguous extraterrestrial nature (see enclosures).

The implications of this matter transcend the interests of any given branch or agency of the US government, and impact numerous interrelated areas, all of which affect national security, governmental function and finances and government accountability.

In general, the US government and its legal representatives are excluded from briefings and developments impacting this important area -- a situation which we feel is unconstitutional, dangerously avoids Congressional oversight, and which must be corrected as soon as possible.

In meetings which I have had with a sitting CIA Director, members of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Executive Branch and senior military representatives in the Pentagon, I have found that, while there is interest in the subject and general support for a disclosure regarding the existence of extraterrestrial life forms, there is an almost universal absence of information available to these leaders.

The implications of excessive and undue secrecy surrounding this issue should concern every member of Congress who is charged with upholding the integrity of the U.S. Constitution and the rule of law. The subject itself has vast implications for world peace, science and new technologies, the environment, the economy and geo-politics (see enclosed paper "Implications of an Extraterrestrial Disclosure").

- 2 of 11 - - UFO News International 34 -

CSETI is hereby formally asking your committee to convene open hearings on the subject of extraterrestrial intelligence beginning with the next term of Congress. We are prepared to provide you with a substantial body of detailed briefing materials in addition to those enclosed, as well as the names of bona-fide first hand military and intelligence witnesses who wish to testify under oath before Congress. These heroes of our country are eager to inform the Congress and the American people of what they know first-hand regarding this matter.

We respectfully ask that you reply to this request and answer the following questions:

Is your committee willing to receive a preliminary briefing on this subject?

If not, why?

Is your committee willing to allow open, publicly accessed hearings on this subject?

If not, why?

CSETI and its worldwide network of military witnesses, scientists and researchers are ready to provide you with a full briefing on this subject at your earliest convenience. We feel the American people, and the people of the world, deserve to know the truth of this matter.

We request that our elected representatives assert their constitutional rights on behalf of the American citizen to be provided a full, reasonable disclosure on this matter in the next term of Congress.

Sincerely,
Steven M. Greer M.D. International Director of CSETI enclosures:

 The Extraterrestrial Electronic Monitoring Space Directorate

ACC's president Jack Shulman announced on Sightings that he had discovered an organization called Extraterrestrial Electronic Monitoring Space Directorate, short E2.

Ex-US Navy seal Bob Wolf had found a document with the name of E2 on it at a USAF in Rome, New York. Wolf had penetrated the defenses of the base, had searched through the laboratories of the base and was subsequently arrested. Wolf was released on bail and had kept a piece of paper that referred to an address in Hannover, Maryland.

Wolf and Shulman located the headquarters in a facility near Air and Space Command of US Command. They have found it in an innocuous facility that looked like a brokerage. There they overheard the name of E2.

The satellite network that ACC had discovered earlier, called Skystation, is property of E2, according to a CIA acquaintance of Shulman. E2 is also referenced to in the 50 year old notes that ACC used to develop the transcapacitor.

>From their own research ACC had concluded that E2 does not report to the public, Congress or the president. Bob Wolf has taped a conversation with him and Shulman and officials of the Department of the Army in which the existence of E2 was confirmed. Shulman added: 'Ed Mitchell was correct in suggesting the existence of a non reporting entity in the US military.' Shulman also said that E2 seemed to have been responsible for the dissemination of transistor technology to Bell Labs and for the secrecy around the Roswell and Corona UFOs.

 T-CAP Inside

On a recent appearance on Sightings Jeff Shulman explained ACC's discovery the Transcapacitor. The device seems to be able to store 10 to the 23th power of bits or memory units. The transcapacitor showed hardly any energy loss or heat dissipation, which would suggest interesting application in laptop computers.

Shulman thinks that the technology is patentable under a "Composition of matter" patent. For commercial exploitation licensing seems the best option. ACC has organized a demonstration for engineers at General Electric.

The mainstream media so far has only asked Shulman why he is dealing with "this way-out stuff"? Shulman thinks it is biggest story of the century.

- 4 of 11 - - UFO News International 34 -

Shulman further explained that ACC could not make te device instantly. He has founded the Transcapacitor Technology Center to further study the device. Development of the transcapacitor could take years and ACC plans to ship its first commercial product at the end of 1999 or early in the year 2000. It will be a storage device that can store 90 Gigabytes of data and has the size of a poker chip.

Credits

Jack Shulman of ACC said on Sightings on the Radion of December 23 that I had alerted former New York Times journalist Ed Wang to ACC's original story about the alleged alien origin of the transistor back in August. On ACC's website I am credited for giving this story a world wide distribution.

This is not true. In fact, it was Stig Agermose of Denmark who has done that. Jack also said he did not know whether I lived in the Netherlands, Norway or Denmark. Well, I live in the Netherlands and Stig lives in Denmark.

The confusion has arisen because from the posting of the original story onward I have been pursuing this story vigorously in Internet forums and in this newsletter and have phoned ACC three times. My other contribution is that I urged ex-Navy Seal Bob Wolf to investigate into the case and he has since allied himself with ACC and has made remarkable discoveries, among other things the discovery of the whereabouts of E2 (see elsewhere in this issue).

During one of the phone calls I asked Shulman what he hoped to achieve by confronting the US Air Force and AT & T about the alien origin of the transistor. He answered: 'I want to be part of a space faring civilization. I want to let the US Air Force admit it has a UFO and I want the technology to enter the public domain. There is nothing I would like to do more than exploring the solar system. When I was younger I wanted to enter the astronaut corps, but I could not because of my physique. I have family working for NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory and another relative worked for Lockheed's Skunk Works. But I still have the hope of travelling in space. We have the technology to go into space by the masses, but at this point the powers that be won't let it.

CSETI Background

Dear Friends of CSETI Project Starlight,
This letter is to bring you up to date on developments since the historic CSETI briefings in Washington DC for members of Congress and other leaders held on 9 April 1997.

- 5 of 11 - - UFO News International 34 -

The past 6-8 months have witnessed a number of promising developments, with increasing interest from key congressional leaders and congressional committees, as well as leaders in other countries. Additionally, senior scientific leadership who direct major operations at nationally significant scientific institutions are now looking into the extraterrestrial question in a serious and thorough fashion.

Last month, we concluded preliminary meetings with these scientific leaders and congressional staff, and are optimistic that the subject of UFOs/ETI is finally being taken seriously.

Members of several Congressional committees, as well as the chairman and chief of staff of a key House committee, have stated that they are now convinced that the subject is 'real' and of importance. We are continuing our dialogue with these and other leaders and encouraging them to hold open hearings in the Congress during the next term which begins in January.

This month we are sending a full briefing package, including videotaped witness testimony, government documents, UFO photos and film footage and other evidence to the chairmen of 15 major Congressional committees which are relevant to this subject (see enclosed letter). In this letter they are asked to reply to our formal request for hearings .

Additionally, we are completing a proposal for a major new global survey of extraterrestrial intelligence. This proposal, called The CSETI Earth/Near Earth Extraterrestrial Survey, calls for a major scientific real-time survey of UFO/ET activity using state-of-the-art technology and rapid response capability. Properly funded and executed, it would scientifically study and document in real time UFO events globally. Scientists and institutions of the highest caliber are currently consulting with us on this project.

Regarding future strategic plans to effect a global disclosure on the existence of UFOs/Extraterrestrial Intelligence, we are at a significant crossroads: While continuing to provide briefings, evidence and advice to the Congress, White House and other national and world leaders, we must now make good on our promise to disclose fully what is know about this subject to the public. To 'privatize' the disclosure of top secret witness testimony and other evidence will require several world-class documentaries and books coordinated with a world scientific gathering and press conference.

While we certainly have the materials, evidence and witnesses in place to fulfill such a plan, funding is another matter. Most likely, these documentaries and books will need to be funded through a business endeavor since it is clear no benefactors exist to fund such an undertaking through a non-profit entity. From a practical point of view, the minimum required to effect such a privatized disclosure, including a broadcast quality 2 hour documentary, two books, the world press briefing and a scientific gathering to review the evidence is approximately $2 million.

- 6 of 11 - - UFO News International 34 -

If you know of any individuals or entities who could help with such an undertaking, please contact me as soon as possible.

The release of definitive evidence and top-secret testimony through such a multi-media plan - if done properly - would constitute a disclosure of significant proportions. It would very likely then lead to the congressional investigations and hearings for which we have been calling.

Strategically, it is unwise to continue to allow governmental foot-dragging to delay any longer the release of information and top-secret witness testimony. The obvious advantage to Congressional hearings is that they would be taken seriously, seen widely and would be funded by the Congress. If we must, as a civilian group, achieve much the same goals through a private multi-media effort, then substantial business and financial support will be needed. The resulting products must be first-rate and be positioned to avoid the tabloid, lower-end media. Certainly, we are ready to move into the public domain with this disclosure process and look forward to your comments, ideas, networking and general assistance in this important global undertaking.

Wishing you the best of all worlds and a time of Universal Peace,

Steven M. Greer M.D.
Director of CSETI enc.

I am convinced that aliens have infiltrated the Dutch government. I can proof this statement by reports about several secret meetings, held by a number of creatures from outer space. Soon I will make public an alien conspiracy, which has a dutch revolution as purpose. I can not sign this message because I am being watched by the BVD, the secret intelligence agency of Holland.

Stunning Israeli Evidence Emerges

By Barry Chamish

One might think 1997 was a poor year of UFO activity in Israel judging by the paucity of media reports. In fact, the media clamped down hard in January '97 after they were burned on the Achiod alien/lizard story and the false prediction of mass landings on Jan.5. However, due to the superb research of David Ronen, Doron Rotem and two young newcomers, Gil Bar and Eddie Shpitz, it turns out that 1997 was a vintage year for Israeli ufology.

Some of the most dramatic physical evidence of the country's intense ten years of activity emerged last year. Following is a summary of 1997.

FILMS

- Over three nights in September 1996, Elad Niger filmed a remarkable UFO over the coastal plains city of Kochav Yair from his vantage point in the nearby city of Kfar Saba. He released the films to David Ronen in March of 1997. They reveal the prettiest UFO ever filmed in Israel. It looks like a colorful apple wearing a three pronged crown.

- 1997 saw three UFOs filmed in Rishon Letzion, 20 miles south of Tel Aviv and a center of UFO activity since 1993 when giant aliens visited the apartment of Batya Shimon. Of the three clips, none is so memorable as Gil Bar's November filming of an ellipsoid disk captured in 4 PM sunlight being chased by an Israeli Air Force F-15. The UFO's high speed manoeuvres to escape the jet are most acrobatic. This is the first known instance of a military plane chasing a UFO captured on film in Israel.

- Then on November 26, Nahum Shomroni video-taped an afternoon invasion of low flying UFOs over Tel Aviv. The light conditions were perfect and the craft were flying at only an estimated 700 meters altitude. The result is a breathtaking view of three sponge-shaped, dark UFOs of a type possibly never seen before.

PHYSICAL EVIDENCE

1997 saw two disturbing animal mutilation incidents associated with UFO sightings. They continued a pattern that began in the Negev village of Klachim in Dec. '96. Sylvia and Yitzhak Kadosh witnessed "an image as big as a house sparkling like a welding torch" land near their donkey compound. The light vanished before their eyes and they hoped it would be the last time their farm suffered such an intrusion. But their hope was not realized. Two nights later, 2 donkeys were mutilated. The older one had its eyes and tongue removed and its rib cage was exposed by a

- 8 of 11 - - UFO News International 34 -

surgical removal of skin and tissue. The younger animal only had the latter operation performed on it.

In July '97, the Glam family of Sde Uziah, thirty miles west of Klachim, had a UFO experience which culminated in Mrs. Glam being chased by a projector light from an unknown source. Again, two nights later, their sheep pen was invaded and five sheep were drained bloodless from precise holes drilled in their cheeks. Doron Rotem researched both incidents and to this day, keeps an example from Sde Uziah frozen in his freezer. He admits his wife is not happy about this mutilated carcass sharing space with the family groceries.

The final incident made national news, the only UFO story to do so all year. On Nov. 2, a silver ellipsoid disk hovered over the Gaza Strip settlement of Paat Hasadeh. On Nov. 8, Yaacov Mazal-Terem awoke to discover a row of twelve pairs of holes, 5 cm. deep along the fence which enclosed his horse. The horse itself, had two 1 cm. holes surgically drilled into its front hooves. The row of holes was photographed by the national media and their origin remains a mystery. Speculation is they were alien tracks or pods from a craft.

And finally, the famed hotspot of Kadima returned gloriously to Israel's UFO history. From 1993-95, approximately 20 landing spots were discovered after nights of UFO activity in the skies. Within were shards of material later tested worldwide and found to be a nearly pure silicon. This year, the same shards were found twelve miles to the west on the beaches of Gaash and Shfayim after UFO activity was reported.

On October 10, a UFO was seen over the Kadima suburb of Tel Yitzhak. Idan Levy discovered its landing circle and found within, not shiny silicon but an unknown material that looks like grey branched coral.

SOMETHING TO LOOK FORWARD TO

I will be bringing the videos of the low flying invasion of Tel Aviv, the F-15 chasing a most distinct disk over Rishon Letzion and the colorful apple-shaped craft with a crown over Kochav Yair to the Laughlin, Nevada conference. I think conferees will agree this is a most dynamic and important trio of films. I will also be bringing photos of the three mutilation cases as well as samples of the Kadima "coral" to be offered for serious laboratory testing. Israel's unique and powerful wave did not diminish in 1997, it simply went unreported. That will end in Laughlin.

UFO Report - Sighting at sea - 12-97

Subject: UFO Report - Sighting at sea - 12-97

I thought this may be of interest to some of you, again it is a UFO Report reported on the B.U.F.O.D. Space, Above and Beyond website :

All the best...Ben Field
ben@abcfield.force9.co.uk

Permission to publish report: Yes

First name: Jeremy Clark
Surname: Packer
Age: 32
Occupation: Engineer

Year sighting took place: 1997
Month sighting took place: December
Day sighting took place: Monday
Time sighting took place: 8:00 am

Country: USA
Nearest town: Corpus Christi

Description of area where sighting took place: Oil Platform- 30 miles from Shore of Gulf of Mexico.
No land masses...no clouds...heavy wind...several liners.
500 manned oil rig.

The UFO was sighted in or near a Reservoir/River/Canal/Water
The UFO was sighted in or near an air route

Did anyone else witness the sighting?: Yes
Relationship of witnesses: Co-Workers

Circumstances of the sighting/experience: I had just woke up for our daily routine on the rig. Our sleeping quarters were below sea level, so we all had to trundge up to the main core housing to start work. It was about 7:58 to 8:00.

My watch stopped ticking at 7:58 but I don't know if my time was right. Everyone else's watch stopped ticking as well with various times.

As I and about 20 other men neared our stations to perform the daily greasing and releasing routine, we stopped cold in our tracks. The Bore that drills the hole into the ocean floor was bent like a toothpick into a V-Shape.
We looked at the underwater cameras to recheck what our eyes saw and we could't believe it.

First off..this bore is 140.65 Feet thick made of solid steel. Nothing can bend it...let alone something on the ocean floor...and it wasn't even on the ocean floor! It was just right below the surface of the water about 200 feet...the amount of pressure it would take would be equal to the sun's force. We were dumbfounded... then we got scared! Everyone started hearing a rumbling noise and we knew it wasn't the Engines running the platform bore...everything shuts off when something goes wrong. Out of th West we saw what looked to be about 25-30 Helicopters on maneuvers...not uncommen a sight. What was uncommen was that the rig commander came up and told us he had no alerts to any military maneuvers from the coast guard that day. They usually alert us whenever they do these things in our vicinity. Another peculiar thing was that the helicopters made no sounds..none ZIPP!

Then we all ran to the west side of the platform...about 250 of us in all...the others were below sleeping...they have the night shift. Then we saw something that totally changed us! All of the helicopters stopped in midair and something LARGE..very LARGE surfaced beneath them.

It was a HUGE Metal object about the size of our platform! It just came straight out of the water and straight into the air! It hovered over the Helicopters for about 2 minutes. Enough for us to use the telescopes to check it out!

it was as large as about two football fields, concave underneath with 4 large bulbouse domes in the concave part of the bottom of it. It turned on it's side and we saw that it looked like a huge flying CIGAR which was tapored at both ends. On the top of the thing was another concave indent that had lights circling within it.

Every color you could possibly imagine! It was BEAUTIFUL! We heard the soft rumbling all througout the sighting.

Then something amazing happened as we stood there in disbelief. Like someone turning off a light switch...it was gone. One second we were all looking through binoculars, telescopes and through just our eyes...hell it was close enough you didn't need the devices! then it was gone. I would say as fast as you could blink or a light switch would turn on and off a light...it was gone.

The helicopters headed our way and passed us overhead, again never making a sound. We could see that they had absolutely no markings. Familiar with the stuff the military does around here, we knew they were ren't military craft. Some looked like they were stainless steel, almost invisible, some were jet black. I counted 22...my best friend couted 28.

Everyone had a different amount. We all also noticed that our watches were about 30 minutes later than what the time actually was when we got back to the mainland.

We were sent on temporary leave by our bosses for what we reported so that they could fix/repair/replace the bore on the rig.

I'm back at work now but I still look out at the ocean every chance I get!

The height the UFO was from the ground was about: 280 - 300 feet above sea

Noise info. heard during the sighting: Rumbling Sound for most of the sighting. Our watches stopped working!

The UFO was sighted for [] Minutes: 30

The UFO Manoeuvred
The UFO Changed Colour
The UFO Hovered
The UFO Rotated

Was any photographic record made at the time?: Yes, Camera

Did you experience any effects ie loss of time: Yes...All our watches showed 30 minutes late/about the time the sighting took place.

SPACESHIPS PAYING REGULAR VISITS,

UFO SPECIALISTS CLAIM

EDITOR'S NOTE: Articles from the Northern News Services are taken from newspapers from nations around the north, translated and distributed by the Novosti Press Agency in Moscow. The Daily News publishes them to give readers a view of issues peculiar to northern areas and as a view of how the news is reported in other nations.

By YEVGENI BUGAYENKO

Northern News Service

In Khabarovsk in the evening of March 21, 1990, bright red spheres stole across the horizon and darted above the ice-bound Amur River. According to witnesses, they kept strict distance. They arrived in force, say militiamen who saw the UFOs and tried to videotape them. As always in such cases, the video ran erratically and through interference, and that was how Khabarovsk television explained the flickering and flashing image. Witnesses were many. Numerous telephone calls came to the militia and city executive committee offices and military headquarters. Hospital No. 10 called for help: The cigar-shaped object which hovered above it caused panic among the patients and personnel. The militia patrol car hurried to the scene. Spotting it on the highway, the UFO took off. That was not all. According to a witness, he and his wife were out for a walk in the evening and saw a low-flying "saucer" with a bright surface and running lights all along the board. The UFO was restless and its nose now dipping, now rising. The sensational news came from a woman criminal inspector. On the day after, she reported an extra-terrestrial visiting her while she was watching a TV film at night. Interference choked the screen. Then a breeze seemed to push aside the curtain and a tall creature in a "lustrous suit" with enormous shining eyes and arms which reached below his knees entered. He held an oblong object in his hand. Small wonder the criminal inspector blacked out, seeing the heavenly visitor. Remarkably, in the morning the balcony door knob was electrified and the dog whined incessantly. The Suvorovski Natisk daily (the Far Eastern Military District organ), which never published untrustworthy reports, came up with the following. Asked if the radars had spotted the UFOs, the anti-aircraft defense headquarters spokesman said: "March 21, the UFO was observed moving 100-120 meters above ground. It was a black cigar-shaped object 50 meters in length. In its rear part, a ruby glow was seen. The information was phoned in by the duty officer. Our radars spotted nothing."

Flying saucers are flying above the Far East according to a timetable, specialists maintain. I leafed through the newspaper files for regularly published reports on UFOs. On Oct. 2, saucer-like, ellipse-shaped objects up to 10 meters in length were seen flying in broad daylight above the river near the Verkhnyaya Manoma village. The sky became a rosy tint. Children ran about, crying "Extraterrestrials have come." In Troitski-on-Amur, Nanai National District center, many saw a mysterious phenomenon at around 11 p.m. Three bright beams cut the sky and then merged into one, which gradually faded in the dark. Last January, inhabitants of the Tumnin village in the taiga on the Sea of Okhotsk saw a huge spherical gondola-shaped body, which slowly drifted to the southeast. There were no clouds. Weathermen made an entry in the log, which contains many such entries: "Red, yellow, and green luminous spheres observed in the sky;" "an isolated large luminous object arrived from beyond the horizon and hovered above the village center;" "on November 29, an unidentified oval object hovered above the village and emitted three colour beams, lighting the ground." The daily Magakanskaya Pravda appealed to its readers to establish a UFOlogists' society. The daily Sovetskaya Chukotka devotes an entire page to extraterrestrials. Khabarovsk television has shown two 90-minute "UFO Mysteries" round tables. The mysteries are many, Trustworthiness and objectivity of observations cannot always be verified. In most cases, television and photo cameras fail when it comes to filming UFOs. But there are irrefutable proofs, which only make scientists shrug. The breath-taking one is the Dalnegorsk phenomenon. On the fringes of Dalnegorsk (a city in the Far East) four years ago, a spaceship had an accident on Height 611. According to witnesses, it happened at 5:55 p.m. The low-flying reddish sphere was moving noiselessly towards Height 611. Reaching it, the sphere went down, then up and again down, eventually catching fire. Aflame, it made six attempts to take off. One hour later it slowly rose and flew away. Expeditions from the Far Eastern Scientific Center and other notable institutions inspected the site. Opinions differ. Enthusiast Valeri Dvuzhilni, who was a teacher when the accident happened and now heads the anomalous phenomena commission Far Eastern group of the Academy of Sciences' Siberian branch, gives the following facts. Instruments registered six anomalous points on the site. Strange iron and lead drops and welded, not charred, pieces of wood were found. Atop the hill extraordinary finds were discovered. Firstly, the "grid," which no one can explain what it is. Scientists from the Institute of Chemistry say, "We don't know how this substance was formed. Nothing like it exists." Another mystery is the quartz-sheathed gold thread 17 microns (three times less than human hair) in diameter. Three days after the accidents, scientists rose to the hill, where they lost coordination and fell down. They all registered unexplainable changes in the blood and high blood pressure. Explanations of these mysteries also are many. Dvuzhilnicites dozens of other anomalous phenomena which occurred above the Far Eastern taiga. For example, on the night of Nov. 28-29, 1987, 33 UFOs were seen. Thirteen UFOs passed above Dalnegorsk. Five of them hovered and searched the earth with their beams, while the other four flew above Height 611 between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. Too fantastic? But then again time will tell.

Kevin,

We run into alleged copyright infringement every day. I know of no laws that prohibit the reproduction of excerpts from any publication providing there is no intent to profit from the endeavor. The wording of copyright protections are a lot tougher sounding than the legal ways of backing them up.
I go to great lengths to obtain permission where it's possible.

When it's not practical, I limit my discussion to brief excerpts and/or re-phrasing of the author's message. For instance, were I to use excerpts from one of your copyright works, and you found it necessary to object, I would simply cease and desist. ...No law-suit necessary or applicable.

The answer is, newspaper articles are more likely to be less biased than a book that has been written with embellishments and wording designed to sell ideas that may be considered exaggerations or falsehoods by main-stream thinking. ...Just my point of view, of course. ...And then there's the fact that I was there.

Best regards,

Hiya Mark,

As an avid amateur astronomer of long standing I have followed NASA's exploration of the solar system closely. One of the more astounding discoveries (aside from the odd structures in Cydonia) were extinct river beds! Some of these 'river beds' led to basins where water must have stood for long periods in mars' ancient history. Modern theory is that a percentage of the martian water supply is frozen in the polar caps while much may yet lay frozen beneath the surface. It is one of the questions geologists need/want answered.

If water existed, then it is possible that a rudimentary form of life had an opportunity to gain a foothold. If Cydonia turns out to be artificial, then it's a 'done thing' that life there was a bit more complex than a simple bacteria or single celled organism and that it established -much more- than just a tenuous foothold hold on Mars! <G>

BTW, I understand that the funding for Cydonia was acquired by a Martian that claimed to talk to God personally, a little blue fellow named Orell Royburtz. He simply went on Martian Planetary TV one day and told the population that if he didn't raise $76,000,000 gurns to build the temples in Cydonia that God Himself was going to strike him dead by bleemday of that very week. The rest is history, and we'll soon have the pictures to prove it! <VBG>

Peace,

John Velez ;-)

THE PROPHETS CONFERENCE - WHITLEY STRIEBER

'UFOs, Current Anomalies and What They Portend' - Panel - Opening Remarks Los Angeles - March, 1997 - Presented by Axiom

Introduction by Scott Catamas

SCOTT CATAMAS:

"Whitley has probably done as good a job as anyone on the planet of expressing outrageous, extraordinary phenomena in very human and remarkably honest terms. Being willing to be so honest and to personalize it is very courageous, I believe. He didn't play it safe."

WHITLEY STRIEBER:

"UFOs and Current Anomalies and What They Portend." Well, what are current anomalies? It's an interesting phrase - current anomalies. I don't know what was meant when this was written, but I do know what it means to me. I think the most extraordinary current anomaly is the fact that an awful lot of people are beginning to notice that there's something very wrong with the vision of the world that we have created. It doesn't work. It's not real enough to take in all of our experience. The model of the universe of which our world is living has to reject these things (OBE's, NDE's, UFO encounters), it has to say their not real because it hasn't got any room for them. That means it hasn't got any room or at least not enough room for us, all of us. Every human being is bigger than the model of the universe by which mankind now lives: which is why the model is in peril, in jeopardy and is in the process of being rebuilt.

'A most interesting thing happened in France in the early 18th century, 1720's. There was a movement...which was a sort of ecstatic Christian movement. Pretty heretical by the standards of those days. And the leader of this movement died, and after his death people discovered that if they touched his tomb, they had the same kind of experience that people have had for many thousands of years when touching the wall near where St. John wrote the Book of Revelations on the Island of Patmos. They felt a sort of electricity coming through their bodies. And it did much more than simply provide little moments of shock. It created a sensation in France in those days because the people who had this experience began to go into an extraordinary ecstatic state, completely unprecedented in human experience up until that point. They would become rigid: a kind of rictus. And during this state they could be hit with sledgehammers; they could be used to hammer nails into wood; heavy stones could be dropped on their bodies; they became impermeable to harm. They were called convulsionnaires. A sort of group of hospitalier volunteers was organized to help the convulsionnaires when this condition overcame them in the streets. At one point there were 10,000 people involved in helping convulsionnaires in the streets of Paris. In other words the city had exploded into a state of anomaly. Finally the church and the King had the little chapel yard of the little church walled up so that people could not get to this tomb.

'I was fascinated by this story because it suggests that at the beginning of the Age of Reason, the body of humankind made a last, desperate effort to try to express itself in the direction

Thanks for keeping me abreast of the Taiwanese UFO cult story.
Great Knight-Ridder story you sent. There was also a good Chicago
Sun Times story on Saturday and one in the Gary Indiana Post Tribune with front page photos.

Gathering steam. Bob, be careful.

But seriously, if you see any more news stories can you please send them my way by email? Thanks. I am compiling huge website

One I respect observed to me that our government might need to have some secrets. A republic (he says, though I would argue oligarchy), requiring immunity from the 'lone crazy' a pure democracy "suffers", needs to keep secrets from enemies. I can only offer that our un-elected, and unconstitutional government, a government outlined by many from Dwight Eisenhower to Edgar Mitchell, has so far and away abused that prerogative that the original reasons requiring it are no longer valid!

It's a government of shadows, making more shadows, that puts the weave of our system at risk, and NOT the persons that are ground up in its wheels like those disabled or killed at Area 51, or our own John Ford. The wheel grinds its way to you and I. It is an unjust wheel, I'll wager, and one we would not support if we knew what required it.

A meltdown of the current system in its present form is probably inevitable. Why not a controlled melt down now in a time of relative prosperity when we have the extra wealth to weather the possible storm. Do it now coming out of this winter -- in a year the dust will have settled a little and we will all be on much firmer ground. We'll be READY for the next winter. Think of it fellow notes! We could be ready for far more than a mere winter!

We must have firmer ground, you and I; it's the only place one can find any real and lasting satisfaction.

Restore John Ford.

Dear List Members:

I read the BUFOD story about the UFO surfacing near an oil rig in the Gulf of Mexico, just offshore from Corpus Christi, Texas.

As incredible as it sounds, there may be something to it. During the past two weeks, UFO ROUNDUP has received reports of UFO activity near Corpus Christi.

In particular, sightings of UFOs near Harlingen and San Benito, Texas. Yesterday I received a report of a UFO over Bayview and Laguna Vista, Texas, right on the Gulf coast.

List members, if you come across any more south Texas UFO reports, please list them.

Thanks!

Serge,

No disagreement from me. Ray Santilli is one of the most frustrating people I have ever had any dealings with, and I can't count the number of times he has promised things and not delivered. However, just because the film is in his hands does not automatically prove anything. Ray is Ray, the film is the film, and it is a damned shame that the two ever came together.

As for providing original film, I think this is a matter of definitions to Ray. He has provided pieces of what he bought from the cameraman.

At this point I do not think he has any camera original film, and I do not think he ever had any. He bought copy film from the cameraman and copy film is all he has ever seen.

After a lot of time around Ray and his staff, I have to doubt that they are competent to put together a hoax of this magnitude and quality, so I am left with the thought that if it is a hoax they have been hoaxed as much as any of the rest of us.

Let's not forget in our haste to dismiss this that there is still the debris footage to deal with. I treat the film as a whole, and there are still many unanswered questions about the autopsies, the tent footage, and the debris footage.

To me it is a fascinating puzzle and that's why I have been willing to devote so much time to it.

Hi Stan,

No argument. I'm just against the knee jerk reaction that we must be dealing with ETs. I see no hard evidence that this is the case.

Recent writings by some physicists would make it seem likely that time travel may be much easier than long distance space travel, and if that is so then we may be dealing with temponauts.

I don't think we should narrow our field of vision with blinders without good reason.

I tend to view time as like a tree with many branches. Our actions at any point determine which branch we travel down. Time travellers would merely create more branches if they changed things.

Additionally, in common with some physicists, I reject the Causal Order Postulate, which states that cause must precede effect in time. I view both past and future as fluid, multi branched, and think that our actions in the present determine not only our future, but our past as well.

Maybe several races and species of time travellers, or maybe just travellers from several different times. Both future and past, and not necessarily from OUR future and past.

I do not think that we should assert that the TTH is the answer any more than I think the ETH is the answer. I just don't want to narrow my vision by only considering one hypothesis. My gut feeling is that neither is actually the answer, and that the truth of this is something we have not thought of yet.

Back to my earlier comments. Time travel does not carry with it a common heritage. Besides, we don't know how much time we might be talking about. Look at how much knowledge we have lost in just a few thousand years. If these things are from millions of years away, then we may be totally unknown to them.

Excerpts, yes, but whole chapters, no. In fact, as we all go to the library to copy articles from magazines, we are all engaging in copyright infringement. While the laws are clear the enforcement is less clear. I was just suggesting that we all be careful before we begin to post whole chapters on the internet.

You seem to understand not only the law, but the spirit of the law which many refuse to understand. Copyright law is designed to protect the authors of specific work from having that work exploited by others. Again, there is a fair use doctrine, but many people claim fair use and then engage in infringement. No, Jack, I'm not suggesting that you are guilty of that, only attempting to make a point that is sometimes lost.

>Best regards,

Again, what gives you the idea that newspaper articles are more likely to be less biased. Yes, the journalists talk of objectivity, but when we begin to look at the tone, we see their bias showing. As just one example, THE NEW YORK TIMES, when the Air Force released their first report, wrote an article claiming that the Air Force had explained the Roswell case. They did not bother to call me for a quote. They didn't bother to call Stan Friedman. They didn't seem to be interested in the other side. Instead, they called some university professors who suggested that we were writing about the Roswell crash just to make a living. Not exactly the epitome of sound journalist investigation. In other words, they had a bias.

Just a few thoughts.

>Question from an amateur. How do you (or any UFO researcher) go >about determining which aspects of a particular report are
>'tainted' (for lack of a better word) by individuals with >agendas, or "committees?"

Hello John -

I think part of the answer lies with common sense. If we read a statement by Donald Menzel, we all know, based on his past history, that he is going to claim either a weather related phenomenon or a hoax is the answer for the report. We know his bias.

In other cases, it is somewhat more difficult. We often reject the data from the Condon Committee because of the overall conclusions. But, if we read the case studies carefully, we find them to be in conflict with the overall conclusion. That provides us with some clues.

However, we must look at all the evidence offered and determine, often for ourselves, what we find to be persuasive. Do many of the witness statements agree, or disagree. Is there something in the case, physical evidence, that argues for, or against, the story being told. It is a process of analysis that we each must undertake.

My standards for accepting or rejecting a tale may be, and probably are different from yours. That doesn't make me right and you wrong. I might decide that a case has merit with less objective evidence or testimony than you. I have my standards and attempt to use them in analyzing a case.

In the end, it really is just a question of what I believe to be the truth and why I believe it.

>On the flip side, what criteria do you use to determine what >parts (may) represent -good- or usable information. It just seems >to me that an awful lot of random individual interpretation can >material that you encounter in your research. I'm sure a lot of >the aspiring "UFO Detectives" on this list would learn alot from >your answer and benefit from your years of experience.

My criteria is the evidence. Is there good evidence for the acceptance of a particular case. That evidence can be testimony of the eye witnesses, photographs, physical evidence, etc. How does the whole package fit together. At the risk of starting another debate, I think the case of Glenn Dennis might be illustrative.

As you all must know, I accepted the tale told by Dennis at face value. He seemed to be an honest, sincere man, who provided all of us with information that fit, generally, into the tale of the UFO crash at Roswell.

He said that his nurse had been killed in a plane crash that killed 5 other Army nurses. Okay. I looked through the NEW YORK TIMES INDEX, starting in July 1947 and carrying through until 1955. There was no record of such a crash. I understand that Don Berliner did the same thing with THE STARS AND STRIPES and failed. This raised a red flag but wasn't sufficient to reject the story.

Other aspects of what he said were checked and failed to produce positive results. He provided us with the name of the nurse, but we found no record of her existence. She wasn't in the 509th YEARBOOK produced in 1947. That, by itself meant nothing because 10 or 20 percent of the people weren't in it. She wasn't in the base phone book, the unit history, mentioned in the Morning Reports, a listing of all Army Nurses from that era, or anywhere else we checked. More red flags.

But the final straw was when confronted with the information, he said he had never given any of us the right name. A major change in the story that marked the point where it had to be rejected.

The point is, I guess, that there is no simply answer. We must examine all the evidence, and continue to examine it as we learn more. There may come a point where you say, Yes, I believe this, or No, I reject it. We all go through that learning process, and on a question as complex as that of UFO reality, there is no simple way to do it.

I hope this provides a little insight.

>Thanx, just curious. Best of luck to you and Mr Estes with your > new book.

>Regards,

>John Velez

Thanks to you for the kindness about the book.

Yes, well, the problem with the standing water isn't if there were bodies of water that existed, but if they existed long enough and stably enough to support the development of life. Kindest estimates for earth I think require standing water for at least a half billion years, i.e. oceans. We don't know how long the water remained in the areas at the ends of the channels - probably I should have stated it more clearly.

Until we get core samples and have a much better idea of how much sedimentation occurred in these areas, we will still not know how long they were there.

And even once life develops, for land based life to evolve will require that water to stay around for proportionately longer.

> TTH. ...

Hello Mark,

Someone (me I guess) needed to point out here that the ETH and TTH are not exclusive categories. It is more likely, in fact, that ETs who are 10**5 - 10**7 years more evolved than us have capabilities of time travel than that unknown ancestors on our own Earth, who we must suppose left no traces behind, had the capability.

So when someone talks about the TTH, they are likely to have time travel by ETs in mind.

Hello Tom,

A key possibility I keep in mind that could explain it, in keeping with the ETH, is that every few centuries some of the visiting ETs not only take samples of our flora & fauna, but leave samples of their own behind, suitably transplanted. Those samples that are compatible enough with what's already here then may survive. This then would have occurred countless times in the past millions of years.

This is only a slight extension to what Shklovskii & Sagan proposed in their 1966 book, before Sagan closed his mind to UFOs.

The ETs would have done the same with other habitable planets at or below our stage of development, since there's no reason to think that Earth would have been treated in a totally unique way. And their own home planet would have experienced the same in its past millions of years. So there would have been a massive amount of co-mingling of DNA throughout the galaxies that will make a nightmare for future Earth biologists to try to sort out.

In the course of all this, there would have been genetic manipulations performed as well.

The occasional observations of thousands of frogs or fish, etc., falling from the sky (but no debris), could be part of this, since whirlwinds & waterspouts are not viable explanations for it. The fact that UFOs can render themselves invisible, or remain invisible, would tie in with this.

Dear Robert,

Not so I'm afraid. If I can prove to myself conclusively enough that the film is a fraud I will be the first to stand up and admit I was wrong. I am only human after all and prone to err. As yet, though, I have not reached this stage.

An easy way of saying this is that species that are genetically isolated would have no specific use for the genes of the other. Since horses and chickens can't mate their isn't much benefit in transplanting genes between the two; however transplanting between species that are not genetically isolated like horses and donkeys may produce benefits for either. I suppose the real question is what are the genetic similarities between us and aliens that have been here?

Mapping alien DNA or chromosomes would be a fascinating prospect (assuming aliens actually have DNA). If intelligent aliens are carbon based, which some probably are than they must have some type of nucleic acid that's at least similar to Earth lifeforms.

I would imagine that if the occupants of UFO's have proceeded to mess around with human genetics their ability to manipulate it would at least parallel their ability to manipulate physics in ways we don't yet understand. Since this is all speculation here. I imagine that advanced biological technologies could easily inhibit promoter sequences of expressed genes through the administration of repressor proteins to block transcription or replication. Conversely, sequences that have been deactivated through, evolution, inheritance, or mutation could probably be reactivated by translocating promoter sequences or temporary re-engineering of polymerases. There could be biochemical engineering applications that work at the enzyme level that allow transportation of specific genes from the genome of one cell to another. If aliens have the technology to do these things they could map out genetically related birth defects and diseases or at least reduce the risk since environmental conditions affect the expression as well as genetics.

Some abductologists have advanced the idea that continued and repeated abductions serve some purpose related to genetic breeding and hybridization. If this is the case then their bio-molecular engineering technology must not be very advanced because if it was they wouldn't have to continue coming back and placing themselves at risk. Perhaps repeated abductions, assuming they actually happen are not related to genetic engineering directly or at least in a capacity that aliens would be attempting to acquire genetic information from humans to be used as some type of resource. Maybe there's another explanation to account for repeaters.

Jared.

Hello Bob and All:

O.K. I've been a spectator here for several months. Now it's time for a question which has always bothered me about this A.A.

Re: 'Alien Autopsy' film 'Danger' sign

film thing which I've never seen discussed. Of course, I could have missed something or was not paying attention - apologies if so.

Does anyone really believe, given the extremely tight security surrounding the events of 1947, that the "cameraman" who shot this footage would have been allowed to take the stuff home with him? We are told that every last tiny scrap of material was combed (vacuumed?) from the crash site; and witnesses threatened with their lives for any disclosure about this crash that never took place. So how did this astounding 'evidence' get liberated?

Any comments?

The Mars Global Surveyor had some problems with opening one of it's panels. And because of this, it will have to take a slower aerobraking path to not further damage the solar panel. However, because of this, there are now MORE chances to photograph Cydonia. They are traveling closer to Mars with each pass, and they are traveling much slower. People like Mark Carlotto have analyzed the new flight path and are already predicting when MGS would be able to snap a shot of Cydonia. They may have already taken photos! See link----->

(<http://www.psrw.com/~markc/MiscArticles/MGSupdate/nerbun.html>)

Dr. Malin says this has not happened yet, but promises it will at the nearest opportunity. Which would be sometime in early MARCH of this year, 1998. And when we get these photos, some people will still need to see the Hieroglyphics written on the D&M just to believe these are actually artificial. The resistance to a new idea is increased by the square root of its importance!

Hi Joe,

Is there anybody following up on this event. Christ there's enough witnesses. One thing though. The witness mentions a drill bit 146 feet in diameter. That's got to be a typo. Must be 146 inches or less. I doubt the platform is much bigger than 146 feet if that.

Dear Philip,

From what you said, you are working from the point of view that the film is **real** unless proven otherwise.

I am glad to see that you will be the first one to admit that I am curious about what you standards of **conclusive proof**

To which I say again... ...Because I was there! I was able to read the newspaper articles on the spot. The book didn't come out on the spot news accounts as the most accurate source of information. The book is useful upon reflection, but then, I didn't know of any such book until recently. Call me stubborn, but that's just the way I feel about it. The newspaper accounts were written at the time the events were actually taking place.

The book came along years later after the fact.

This would only work if 'they' had dropped in 4.3 BILLION years ago and dropped methanogens here based on their DNA. I don't want to acknowledge that possibility, but I suppose I must. If our DNA chemistry were based upon some other viable viable form of life, presently unknown to us, earth could have been terraformed. And we could have sympathetic, if not interchangeable, DNA. And we might look like some of the ETs, at least in a very basic way. But, until the K/T boundary, you might have thought that they were more interested in reptiles than humanoids. <grin>

Fish and frogs are usually found in water. You would not expect a lot of debris. Besides, if a whirlwind could take Dorothy and Toto to Oz, why couldn't it move a few fish? The idea of an ET being able to scoop up a bunch of amphibians and modify their DNA only to be unable to remember where he got them and drop them on dry land doesn't appeal to me very much.

Mark...

I am not a professional so I can't say there is or is not any validity to what Sitchin has to say. However, He is. I would like to see you address a message to him, and discuss this with him. I would be interested in reading the conversation you two would carry on. <G>

So what. We may find that these isotopes are common to all Sun Systems and their planets at some point.

AS far as the time frame is concerned, we really are only guessing at the "age" of our solar system. I can't really argue this but, I can admit that I am not smart enough to prove or disprove what Sitchin writes. <g>

>> Well, that is the story which Sitchin says the Sumerian Cuneiform

Ah, but that is not unusual. Just look at the way they dispute the contentions we have that UFOs are real. <G>

I'm sorry, but I don't give these so called professional scholars that much credibility. They are only working with bits and pieces of say a million year history. That can be very misleading. What they surmise in one part of the globe may not apply in another, to an advanced race, separating itself from those primitive races located elsewhere on the planet.

WE may find at some point in our future history, that we did not truly have a good grasp on the mechanics of creation. We may well find that we simply parrot the same jargon of the anti-Scientific community in the 5th through the 19th century, where the earth was the center of the universe.

Sure we have satellites to gather data, but we still suffer from the "only kid on the block" syndrome...and although we preport to be searching for life "out there," we really don't expect to find it...by we, I am referring to our Scientific Scholastic Institutions and their clones. <g>

Hi Diana...

I am not new to the UFO field or to UFO UpDates. I have been around a long time. I operate Space_Link BBS which carries both the FIDO BACKBONE and MUFONET BACKBONE. It has been up since 1989. In fact, I am the only surviving BBS in my town.

I also have a webpage by the same name.

<http://www.mindspring.com/~mchristo.com/>

It is continuing to be expanded gradually, but still has quite a bit of info on it at this point.

My library contains about a hundred UFO books; 200+ audio tapes;
300+ video tapes on the subject.

Not to mention my file cabinet and the 3000 or so files I have on the BBS which cover everything from Astronomy, to Paranormal, and Re: Washington DC 1952 investigation

Metaphysical Files as well as UFO material.

Take care,

Yep, I agree Bob. We are very young in our science. If we had developed our science two thousand years ago, and it remained "unbroken" over this period of time, we might not be having this conversation. We may well have the answers to these questions.

Take care Bob.

Sorry, but I can only ripen so many eggs at a time. And, as for the guys...it takes a certain number of sperm to fertilize one egg. So many eggs, so little time! ;-)

Also you assume that our genetics remain constant over a lifetime. Perhaps in some respects they don't and therefore samples taken later are different than those taken earlier.
(There's a LOT we don't know.)

Or we Earthlings may be extraterrestrial in origin. Who can say that we are genetically isolated from other solar systems? The universe may be one big pot of stew and we're all swirling around in it. Our minimal knowledge- and immense hubris- would lead us to believe that we are isolated by great distance. Who knows just how life can perservere through the harsh environment of deep space? There may be a thousand dormant seeds zipping around space. And who can claim to understand the capabilities of the DNA molecule? Perhaps primitive life of a completely different sort sprouted elsewhere, say one of the gas giants in our own solar system. The possibilities are endless and all are fascinating.

Good fortune, safe travels

'Report on Unidentified Flying Objects' Indexed

From: galevy@pipeline.com [Gary Alevy]

Subject: 'Report on Unidentified Flying Objects' Indexed

A couple of questions:

- 1) Who created the term "UFO"?
- 2) Can you name the name the author most synonymous with these terms: Project Blue Book, UFO, flying saucers, the "Era of Confusion", the Washington National Sightings, flaps, 1950's the Golden era of UFO's.

Answers to both:

Edward J. Ruppelt - the former head of the United States Air Force Project Blue Book, the author of "The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects".

His book The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects is one of the seminal books of early UFO history. Like many books of its era it was never indexed and that has limited its usefulness to researchers.

Until now...

I am in the final stage of completing an index of this book designed for researchers and students of the UFO phenomenon.

The index consists of over 1200 words, concepts and terms. The indexing has been performed by both automated and manual technique. A sample of two of the sections of the index is included at the end of this posting. The actual index is typeset and not in ASCII as are the samples. Pricing for this index has not yet been determined, at present plans are to include the indexes for all editions in one publication.

Two editions of The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects have been indexed:

Ace Books paperback 1956
Fieldcrest Publishing paperback 1965

Also planned for early completion is the Doubleday hardback if I can locate a copy (or someone will loan me one for a couple of weeks).

If you have an interest in obtaining a copy of this index please contact me via email: galevy@pipeline.com

Many readers of this list are researchers who may be interested in the index of this book:

- 1) If you have a specific research interest in this book that you would like to see incorporated in this index please contact me as soon as possible.
- 2) If you are aware of other editions besides the Doubleday, Ace and Fieldcrest ones I would appreciate any information you can provide about these editions.
- 3) I plan to index other books of the "historical era of UFOs", indications of interest in other titles to be indexed will help guide their priority.

Here are samples of the indexing for the letters "A" and "R" as of this date (pre-publication):

Jack,

Kevin Randle has already responded before me but I will add that I do not consider it "fun" to distribute copyrighted materials illegally.

Its interesting that you would not consider purchasing one of the few books that most researchers in this field consider a seminal book in the history of the UFO phenomenon. Are you involved in this field seriously or for "fun"? Who is your royal "we"?

As far as Ruppelt's accuracy - almost 40 years of FOIA releases have backed up what he described back in '56. Some of the the material he discusses has still to be released.

If you are looking to newspapers for accuracy consider this, he describes how and why newspaper reporters were fed information and managed, that was part of his job. The discussion of their exclusion from the control tower at Washington National Airport is of note. Remember these were the post-war years and pre-Watergate.

This book is perhaps one of the five most important in understanding historical ufology if you don't want to own it borrow it from the library, I think you will be pleasantly surprised and challenged by it.

Jack,

What does that "fact", which you so glibly offer up, mean?

You state you where there, where exactly was that?

What exactly did you witness?

Were you a participant in any of the airport control towers?

Were you a member of one of the intelligence services cleared for investigation of the sightings?

Tahoe Daily Tribune: Lab Shopkeeper's Notebook

Subject: Tahoe Daily Tribune: Lab Shopkeeper's Notebook

[The following is a 'non-subscriber' post - the phone number and name check out, according to the Trib Pat is an "environmental-writer" -- ebk]

Errol,

I haven't posted to this or any other mailing list before, but have some information I know your readers will find interesting. The post will explain everything.

Pat McCartney

Dear UpDates List,

I interviewed Jack Shulman of the American Computer Co. today for my small regional daily newspaper (which happens to be at Lake Tahoe). And I wanted to share with this mailing list what he said, and my impressions.

Personally, I find their story, and Philip Corso's, pointing to an unexpected direction of UFO research, namely the private sector. I think you will find what Shulman's goals are as interesting as I did. Unfortunately, there doesn't seem to be much of a way to speed the process up, unless you can help with their research.

I will be writing about ACC and Corso spoiling Bell Labs' 50th anniversary of the transistor for my paper, so if anyone has an informed and opinionated comment they'd like to share, you can e-mail me or call me at the Trib (530-542-8012).

Anyway, as others have described, interviewing Shulman is quite an experience. He's extremely voluble, and you really have to work to break in and ask a question or redirect his monologue. Gee, kinda reminds me of myself.

Having said that, he's also quite friendly, very open to a point, and fluent about computers in a way I can only envy. We spoke for more than 90 minutes, when he returned a call I left in the morning asking to talk to someone about the company's Roswell page.

My main interest was to see what kind of care and research they are exercising with regards to the "lab shopkeeper's notebook" they acquired that kicked off their current "investigation."

If their claim -- that the notebook is evidence Bell Lab's 1947 "discovery" of the transistor was based on their receiving debris from a crashed saucer -- proves to be true, than this document may come close as close to being the smoking gun as anything we could wish.

When you think about it, it only makes sense that such documents would surface in the private sector, which by definition is not under the direct control of the federal government. And, as much evidence suggests, unacknowledged programs have been privatized to a large degree over the years.

Following are points he made about the documents, in answer to my questions.

1) The notebook bears the "eyes only" security stamp of the then-War Department, along with the printed names of Bell Labs and General Electric.

2) Shulman said the notebook wasn't a hardbound diary, but rather a ring binder with individual pages and reports. Some of the reports are typed, others are mimeographed or handwritten.

3) If I followed him correctly, the consultant's initial acquisition of a journal came from the "estate of the deceased shopkeeper."

3) The unnamed consultant then somehow acquired 28 boxes of supporting material, perhaps from inside Bell Labs was the implication, but he did not specify how. Shulman first said each box contained 300 pages =97 which would be under 10,000 in all =97 but described the complete collection as 20,000 pages!

4) The old cardboard boxes are rotting and some of the papers in terrible condition. They smell to high heaven, Shulman said. His staff wear masks and gloves while working with the documents, and are using sealants and plastics to restore and protect the pages.

5) Because of the instability of the decaying pages, the investigators have photographed, rather than photocopied them.

6) Age analysis (unspecified) has confirmed the age of the paper as being from early 1940s to 1947, indicating it was written on different stores of paper.

7) A university forensics expert (unnamed) is analyzing the style of the reports for inconsistencies and other information.

Shulman told me the company is planning some kind of public event within 90 days, publicizing what it has learned about the shopkeeper's notebook, and the revolutionary ideas that it may contain. He was very vague about what he planned to disclose, and I simply advised him to go with a hired gun public relations firm that could get the attention of the mainstream media.

During our dialogue, Shulman said his Grand Strategy is to force the government to make its own disclosure by releasing top secret information from the notebook and supporting documents =97 at a rate of one bombshell a month.

"Let's say there are 600 such details in all," Shulman said. "We can release one a month for 50 years, devastating military secrecy, until they realize the public losses are so great that they will have to throw in the towel."

He identified the transcapacitor, announced Dec. 5, and the photonitron, announced Jan. 4, as the first two exposes. I did not ask about future announcements.

He said he has given representatives of the major players =97 including the Air Force, National Security Agency, Army Intelligence and Office of Special Investigations a certain (unspecified) deadline to come forth, or he will upload the entire collection of 20,000 pages of documents onto the Internet.

"If they don't prove the case of Roswell, we'll go public," Shulman said.

Shulman describes himself as a patriot who is outraged by the action of his government (and its contractors). Today's political leaders, and other keepers-of-the-secret, "have inherited a responsibility that is outside Constitutional authority," he said.

In other words, no matter what the original need was to hide information about the Roswell crash, the government now has an obligation to reveal it.

"I think the answer to Roswell is apparent," Shulman said. "I think the answer needs to be disclosed, and the government needs to own up to it." Shulman said he has made certain his plan to release the material will not be affected if he is harmed or thwarted in some other way. "We set up a mechanism, a process that will outlast me," he said.

He was not so helpful in steering me to people knowledgeable about the notebook or the transcapacitor who are independent of the American Computer Co., or who have not signed non-disclosure agreements. I will have to scrape to get comments from other insiders.

That's the gist of Shulman's remarks. He is a meteoric speaker, much given to sprinting away on a tangent until reined in. Someone who knows more about computers, or the companies and agencies he talked about, might have gleaned more than I from the conversation, but, as I say, interviewing Jack Shulman is a challenge. You'd need at least a weekend to debrief him. At the end, he was even trying to give me computer advice when I mentioned my love/hate relationship with computers.

I plan to do more interviews before writing a piece for my paper within the next two weeks.

I can hardly wait for the ACC story to unfold. The proof, of course, will be in the successful operation of the devices the notebook, but at least we won't have to wait until the transcapacitor to go into production to learn more.

While reviewing a recent CIA article related to UFOs on the Center for the Study of Intelligence (CSI) web page, I found that there were several unclassified articles that may prove to be of interest as the call for an end to government secrecy grows.

One article speaks about the problem of maintaining an intelligence operation in the face of judicial review:

<<http://www.odci.gov/csi/studies/96unclas/manget.htm>><http://www.odci.gov/csi/studies/96unclas/manget.htm>

Another interesting document relates to how the intelligence community deals with Congress (and Congressional oversight):

<<http://www.odci.gov/csi/monograph/lawmaker/toc.htm>><http://www.odci.gov/csi/monograph/lawmaker/toc.htm>

The CSI web site is an interesting one to review, and they have a couple of publications that are duplicated on line. Their main page is located at:

<<http://www.odci.gov/csi>><http://www.odci.gov/csi/>

These, of course, relate primarily to the intelligence community in the US.

Hello, Jack -

I think we might be talking at cross purposes here. Are there newspaper accounts of events that are more accurate than the books written years later? Yes.

Are there books that are more accurate than the newspaper accounts written at the time? Yes.

Does this make one source of information better than the other?
No.

We have to look at everything and evaluate it based on all the other available evidence. No one source is better than another until we have the opportunity to evaluate it and place it in context with the other evidence.

What this boils down to is that we're probably in the same church and in the same pew, but not necessarily on the same page. Let's just keep looking at the evidence which will help us sort out the events of the past.

>Jim Deardorff

Jim,

This "seeding" of our planet is something that my old friend Ivan Sanderson was very interested in. Of course Fort was the first to systematically document it.

One thing that particularly intrigued Ivan was that in all of the cases he could get enough information on, it seemed that the fish, frogs, whatever, were of unknown species.

I don't think this happens every few centuries, but constantly.

We also have the somewhat mysterious reappearance of species which science has "known" were extinct in places where their survival seems highly unlikely.

Again, I'm not sure this implies ET intervention, or even any deliberate act at all. Holes between dimensions comes to mind as one possible explanation. We do have accounts of people apparently falling into such holes and simply disappearing.

Maybe they ended up on a parallel earth and, if they survived, mingled their DNA with the local strain.

This is one reason why I do not fully accept traditional scientific explanations of evolution. None of them include this mechanism in their theoretical basis. My alternative theory is called "Punctuated Creationism", and it says that evolution goes on as normally understood for long periods of time both here and elsewhere, but periodically a new genetic strain "falls through" which is so advanced above our local strain that it disrupts the slow flow of evolution and kick starts things in a new direction. Needless to say, my theory has not been taken seriously by my scientific colleagues.

Charles,

Good point, and one of the main ones which bothers me about the story. Even Ray Santilli has characterized this part of the cameraman's tale as "nonsense".

No, his tale of how he came to have the film makes no sense at all. So, here are the possible explanations I can think of:

- A/ Assuming the film is real:
1. He somehow stole it, after filming it.
  2. He is not the cameraman at all, but an opportunist who somehow came into possession of this film and made up the story surrounding it.
  3. He is a govt agent and this is part of a controlled release.
- B Assuming the film is a hoax:
1. He is a hired actor and someone else wrote the story after reading up on Roswell
  2. He is part of the group that put together the hoax.
  3. He is an opportunist who somehow stumbled onto this film and made up a good yarn to sell it. In this case he may not know himself what it is.
  4. He is a govt agent, and the govt faked the film for their own reasons.

Now I have no idea which of the above is true, if any. Remember that I think he does not have the camera original film. If he really is the cameraman, then he must have made unauthorized copies of the original and somehow smuggled them out of the base.

I really want to talk to this man, and I have been repeatedly promised that he will phone me, but so far no contact.

Although I believe the film is fraudulent, I must respectfully disagree with this argument, Charles. How does someone wander into Queen Elizabeth's bedroom? How does a private pilot blunder through the Soviet air defenses and land in Moscow? This fallacy, the assumption of bureaucratic competence, probably props up more conspiracy theories than all the others put together. The idea that they would nail everything down tight and then let some flunky stroll home with the film strikes me as exactly the way things happen in real life.

Kind regards,

Keith

When we perform experiments on animals, it is advantageous to use those of known genetic composition, so we typically use highly in-bred mouse strains that are virtual clones of each other. If these were not available, we would have to keep performing experiments on the same mouse.

Hello All,

'Profits & Me$$enger$'

This post really rattled my cage! Allow me a 'rant' if you please.

(Pope to Michaelangelo: "When will you make it end?")

"Prophets Conference, . . . Prophets, Messengers!?" What a load of pure unadulterated bullsh*t! These New Age priests, prophets, and messengers may be oh so 'heavy', and 'deep' and 'out there' but back here on earth it's all about good old fashioned greenbacks and blind -unquestioning-unthinking- followers!

John the Baptist was a "prophet", Mohummad was a "messenger" could someone please explain where Whitley Strieber and Gorman fit into that noble lineage? I find it the height of egotism and pretention to allow oneself to be presented as a "messenger" at a "prophets conference." If all of this wasn't so serious I'd be laughing my ass off.

Nah, I'll laugh anyway these (side-show clowns) -are- funny.

Loaded words like, 'prophet' and 'messenger' are chosen -intentionally- by the marketing dropouts that sponsor and run these 'side shows' and for the same reasons an alleged science reporting program calls a segment on abduction, "Kidnapped by UFO's" for -RATINGS AND SENSATIONALISM !-

Translation: Ratings and sensationalism = "Mo people means Mo money!"

Because they are on the pro-UFO side of the fence does not excuse them.

I don't hear anyone criticizing Strieber for the same infractions that people find so offensive when they come from a skeptic! Baloney is baloney no matter what deli you buy it in. I'm starting to get a little tired of saying that unless we demand the -best- from -all- of those who claim to represent us in this field, we're always going to be dismissed as frivolous air heads with nothing of real substance to offer. "Prophets" and "messengers" indeed! They ought to be ashamed of themselves or at least know better. All it does is lend a 'carnival atmosphere' to something of urgent import for all of us.

Example: You are a person that has just learned of the details of the 'abduction scenario/pattern' that is being reported by so many people. As you read this information you begin to realize that you yourself recall these very same odd and unexplained experiences. You slowly start to blow a gasket as you begin to question your own sanity for even contemplating such a possibility. Fear, confusion and a completely unsettled feeling replaces your normal daily composure. You can now think of -nothing else- finding an answer rapidly becomes obsession.

At some point you realize that you have a thousand questions that you need answered, -and immediately-! Relief from the torment of the internal hell of self-doubt and fear that you suddenly find yourself in is urgent. You know that if you tell your doctor or your wife or friends that they are going to cock their heads over to one side the way that dogs and people do when they don't understand or can't relate so, . . . you contact say a "Whitley Strieber" for info and advice because you saw one of his books and you figure, hey maybe this guy will understand and not laugh me off.

Pay attention here!

What you will be greeted by is a fee of $50 for a half hour audience before you can speak to the "prophet" (or is it "Messenger?") about your 'problem!'

No lie, "I kid you not" as my beloved Jack Paar used to say. Old Whit is charging Park avenue, New Yawk psychiatrist prices for his time as if he shared their credentials and experience or even had anything of value to offer these tormented souls.

So you tell me, is the 'prophet' concerned with souls or greenbacks? Is 'He' interested in the lives that God has placed in his path or in their disposable income. You be the judge. I've just had a belly full of the Boylans and the Hoaglands and now Strieber who sell out for few pieces of silver and leave all rationality -far behind- in the wake of their collective money making dust.

Well we pay the price! They make us all look like mindless boobs, oportunists, and followers in the eyes of the uneducated/uninformed masses. As long as we allow this and support it with $ it will continue unabated and will -continue to muddy already murky waters.-

Just my seventeen cents!

John Velez, (Common abduction experiencer who has *-no idea- whats -really- going on.)

*See Whit, it's not so hard to say, (and BTW) No charge dude! <EG>

No, that's not how it works. The distribution of isotopes is the issue, and is related to the temperatures of the early solar system. I refer you to either Arrhenius and Alfven's seminal text for NASA or to Dermott's The Origin of the Solar System from Wiley.

No, we're not guessing. That's not how science works. A large number of independent chains of evidence have been used to develop the solar system chronology, and the time it takes for an orbit to regularize after capture is well understood - partly because of the intense examination it received in the origin of the moon debates. Even a nearly parallel orbit capture barely fits into the age of the solar system, much less a tranverse capture.

Actually, those scholars have nothing to do with the UFO debate. They simply take issue with his interpretations.

That his interpretations are at variance with theirs does not give him more credibility.

Scholars of ancient languages are quite specialized, but they know their business. As do the planetologists who have worked on origin questions.

I can't see any reason to give more credence to a purported legend from a long gone people with a very primitive technology over the work of professional scientists with modern tools.

We won't get far rejecting the parts of modern science we don't like. That's the kind of thing that justifiably gets professional scientists laughing at us.

> WE may find at some point in our future history, that we did not > truly have a good grasp on the mechanics of creation. We may > it...by we, I am referring to our Scientific Scholastic > Institutions and their clones. <g>

Yes, well that may be comforting to those of us who want belief rather than knowledge, but knowledge comes from extending the work of science, not rejecting it.

I agree that there will be a future science, and that it will know things which we don't, and some parts of what we think has been established will have been rejected. I don't expect that to happen to fundamental concepts - even relativity and Newtonian mechanics coexist.

But the way improvement in science gets done is in the context of science. When the geocentric theory was rejected, it wasn't on the basis of belief or on the basis of some tattered legend. It was done because the predictions of the new better fit reality than the predictions of the old.

The material under discussion doesn't account for the presence and structure of the solar system even as well as existing theory - in fact, it is contradicted by most of what we know. And, for that matter, the legend it supposedly derives from is based on an ancient culture, who science was clearly less advanced than ours. So maybe this is where "they" find that they really didn't understand the universe.

I can understand why some of us are angry against "establishment" science for ignoring what we consider to be an important problem. But the answer is to be more scientific, not less.

Hard as it may be for some of us to remember or admit, 1956 was a long time ago, more than 40 years by my crude calculations. (My Ace paperback copy of Ruppelt's book carries a 50 cents cover price.) In other words, I suspect the book may well be in the public domain. If it is, not only could you copy it with impunity, you could reprint it if you had a mind to.

I forwarded this report to an old college friend of mine now at NASA/Marshall. I thought his response (below) was worth posting to the list. He makes some good points. Any report this dramatic should make ripples somewhere. If not, it has to be suspect. There were 250 supposed witnesses and cameras as well. So as the ad says, "Where's the beef?". I'm not saying its bogus, but it should be taken with a grain of salt until corroborating evidence appears. (Sorta like an autopsy film most of us are acquainted with :-)

Brian,

This just can't have happened. For one thing, I have no idea what the guy is talking about when he mentions a "bore" "140.65 feet thick" that "drills the hole into the ocean floor." Oil drill stems aren't within two orders of magnitude of that diameter. Next, if something disabled a drill rig 30 miles off Corpus it would be international headline news that very night -- we're talking many thousands to millions of dollars of damage to a private company. If no one else, at least their insurance company would be mounting a huge investigation as to how the damage was done. And 30 miles off shore is about twice the distance to the horizon, so a huge craft lifting off would become visible in Corpus itself after rising only a few tens of feet from the surface.

Again, think of it. Kilobucks of damage, maybe more, and 250 witnesses, and this DOESN'T make the news except on a ufo website? It ain't reasonable!

Dear Robert, my opinion as the authenticity or not of this film has changed several times. Atv the moment I am undecided one way or the other.

Proof to me could come in many forms. If the film could be accurately dated and was shown to be of a recent make. If one of the items in the film was not around in 1947, say a wrist watch (there are none in the film)> that was post 1980, for example.
Or if Ray Santilli or someone else (I doubt if it would be Ray) would come forward and show us all how they hoaxed it. These are just a few of the many things that would work for me. What about you ?

Philip.

I am not a UFO investigator, if that's what you mean. However, I am the moderator of the Fidonet UFO conference, and have been involved with UFO group discussions for more than 40 years, either from a "fun" standpoint, or as an overseer of discussion

Van Greunen is a fraud, everybody knows that and I am rather sure

Since Joachim (who was or still is quite heavily involved in the Egyptian Director of the Giza Plateau, Dr. Zahi Hawass, was on Art Bell radio show for 2Hrs Wednesday, the night of 14-JAN-98.

I also heard the entire show; Mr. David Billington has already given a very good synopsis (re-posted below); I can attest to his reporting accuracy. I will give further quotes from Zahi Hawass, and some of my own commentary.

.jj. <Jon D. Jefferson

-----
From: davidpb@leonardo.net (David Billington) Subject: Dr. Hawass
-----

I just finished listening to the two-hour interview with Zahi Hawass on American radio (1/14 between 10-12 PM). The interviewer, Art Bell, asked Dr. Hawass (1) why permission to drill the cavity under the front Sphinx paw has been denied, (2) whether the wellshaft between the Sphinx and the Khafra Pyramid has been excavated in the last seven days, (3) what has been going on in the Khufu Pyramid, (4) whether any evidence of a pre-existing civilization has been found at Giza, and (5) whether there is any connection between Giza and the American space agency NASA or the alleged pyramids on Mars. There were some other matters but I think these were the main points covered.

On (1), Hawass observed that Stanford Research Institute drilled the location under the front paw in 1977 and found nothing, so another penetration of the rock was unnecessary. More definite evidence than radar or sonar would in his view be needed to justify any further drilling in the Sphinx enclosure. Apparently Dr. Schor never had a license in his own name to visit Giza; Florida State University had the license and still has it according to Dr. Hawass.

On (2), the "sarcophagus lid" that Boris Said and Tom Dobecki found in the wellshaft 100 feet down was apparently lifted last week and nothing was found underneath except the water table, although later in the interview Hawass said that further exploration might occur. He did not explain, nor did Bell ask, exactly what this "sarcophagus lid" was. Bell apparently learned of this excavation privately and sprang it on Hawass, but apparently the latter already knew about it and said that the excavation was connected with routine work of some kind.

On (3), Hawass disclosed that his staff had cleaned the chambers above the King's Chamber to look for inscriptions. I was unable to hear or understand exactly what he said but he seemed to be saying that nothing anomalous was found. There may have been some inscription that prompted the cleaning, which entailed the removal of some dust or stone. Hawass also disclosed that he is now planning to open the Gantenbrink door. The Khufu Pyramid will be closed for six months in 1998 for work to undo the humidity damage of tourism, although he said that New Age groups would be allowed in for brief periods to meditate. Archaeological work will also continue in the Khufu Pyramid during the restoration.

On (4), Hawass stated that to this date no evidence of Atlantis or another preexisting civilization has been found at Giza. He declared his willingness to accept such evidence if any appears.

On (5), Dr. Hawass said he has never met a NASA official and that he knew of no connection with Mars.

Dr. Hawass will attend a cruise along the west coast of North America that will go up to Alaska in May. The cruise will include a debate moderated by Bell that will include Hancock, Bauval, Ed Krupp, and the American psychic Dannion Brinkley.

The impression I had was that Dr. Hawass wants to address the concerns that have been raised abroad about Giza archaeology and he wants to dispel the unfavorable public image he has acquired among those with such concerns. I had the impression that Hawass was tactful with some details but that he was not really concealing anything of importance, although it is possible that he thought the wellshaft might have been connected to something of interest. Bell didn't press him about this.

The debate on a cruise ship near Alaska (an unusual place to debate Egypt)(but no more unusual I suppose than anything else surrounding Giza!) next May will hopefully bring a fuller airing of the controversies in recent years if Dr. Hawass attends. I would expect the results to be made public. I will be revising my own web update page to delete some things now.

Cheers,
David

It should be noted here that Art Bell referred to himself as a "moderator" , not really as a journalist doing a true indepth investigative report; this has to do with the "cruise debate" referenced above. Thus, many significant points that were raised during the interview that warranted followup questions , were not followed through very thoroughly. Cause in point #1.: the Gantenbrink Door in the Queen's Chamber of the Great Pyramid. Hawass said that they are "in progress of trying to find out what is behind the door. We will know what is behind it by May of this year."

Something so important an issue as this begs the followup questions, such as: are the Egyptians going to do so by themselves? HOW? Is such work in progress at this time? If not , WHEN, and by WHOM?. No such questions were asked, and NO further details were given by Mr. Hawass, even after one caller brought up the subject for further clarification. It seems to me that Bell would rather have such information released to the public on the May cruise, which he heavily advertises on his show.

On John A. West, Hawass had this to say: "I have nothing against him personally. I am not his enemy". He went on to say that West would be granted exploratory access to the Giza sites, only if he was associated with an already accredited University or Institution recognized by the Egyptian Government. When asked by Bell as to the status of Robert Bauval and G.Hancock, the answer was the same. Mr. West has publicly confirmed the above. Hawass also stated that these people would never be denied access to the Giza sites as individuals. "They are always allowed access to Giza", he said.

Some further, general quotes by Dr. Hawass:

---

The Luxor massacre: "An accident. It will never happen again, because security is now very tight".

On alleged on-going secret excavations, and "coverups", at Giza:

ZW: "I try to reveal the truth. My mission is to reveal the truth".
"I am not a bad guy. I am not hiding evidence".
However, "when I discover something, I don't announce it in the first minute", he said.
"If there ever is anything [new] found [while excavating], we will let the people know".
"I don't want to drill a hole for a TV movie; I want to drill a hole for science".

On the Sphinx:

ZW: "On the north side is a tunnel, first opened in 1926. We would like to reopen it again, to go underneath the Sphinx".

(no further details on this, either).

ZW: "No one [is stopping me from doing any new excavations]; I had to restore the 'sick' Sphinx. The Sphinx is [now] smiling; the Sphinx is saved; the Sphinx is restored, and is to be reopened to the public again".

ZW: "We are just guardians of the monuments. They belong to the whole world". "Anyone who wants to enter the Great Pyramid will be granted access. New age groups are welcome".
"The pyramids were plundered. There is evidence that they were tombs, representing the power of the Pharaohs".
"When I enter inside the Great Pyramid, I feel like I am entering the most sacred place in the world. The pyramids and the Sphinx should have dignity and respect ; power and magic".

The pyramids were built as a "national project of the Egyptian peoples", said Hawass, when questioned by Bell as to who he thought built them.

On the newly opened Tombs of the Workers, Dr. Hawass stated that "the bones and skeletons: they are all Egyptians. Genetic studies will be done by the University of Hawaii, beginning later this month".

As to the alleged secret excavations in the GP's relieving chambers, Hawass had this to say: "We were just cleaning the five rooms. I found only one inscription, nothing else. I did not find anything else. The five rooms were full of stones, and I cleaned them out, that's all".

Art Bell: "Has there ever been anything discovered at Giza that goes against orthodox Egyptology?"

Z.Hawass: "Not one single piece of evidence to prove anything of a 'lost civilization. Not one piece of evidence of Atlantis. Nothing". "If I am [proven] wrong, fine. Until you prove to me that I am wrong, I am right. You have to prove to me 100% that there is something [else] there. I am not trying to hide anything".

Art Bell: "Have NASA officials ever been to Giza that you have met?"

Z.Hawass: "No. Never any officials, only Egyptologists. I never met anyone from NASA. Ever".

Commentary:

I agree with David Billington's assessment that Zahi Hawass is intentionally playing "nice", mending fences with everyone, and to clear his "bad-boy" despot reputation with the international community. He now knows that this is the only way to gain world-wide acceptance of his own work, and given the drastic cut-back in tourism due to the Luxor massacre, this must be with the insistence of the Mubarak government also. They need the cash flow of foreign dollars, and the Giza Plateau still remains the key linchpin for tourism. It is in Egyptian national interest that Mr. Hawass now be cordial to well known independent writers and researchers, as well as the general public for that matter.

The tragedy at Luxor has seen to that. Horrible as those deaths were, perhaps their legacy to the world will be that a crack in the secretive door of Ancient Egyptian explorations has now opened up.

We must now continue to watch how the story unfolds as to the Ganterbrink Door and the still undisclosed further excavations in and around the Sphinx area. This latest interview to a wide American radio audience failed to get the answers we still are all awaiting from the newly rehabilitated "nice-guy" , the ever elusive Dr. Zahi Hawass.

Aloha All.....

Since everyone seems to be unsure, I'll clarify it a little.

Prior to Jan 1, 1978, copyright was secured on the date of publication, or on the date of registration if the work was registered in unpublished form. Copyright extended for 28 years from the date it was secured. During the 28th year, the copyright could be renewed for an additional 28 years. The current copyright law extended the renewal term to 47 years for copyrights that were in effect on Jan 1, 1978.

That same law, effective Jan 1, 1978, made copyrights effective for the life of the author plus an additional 50 years.

More information is available at:

I wish the UFO issue were that easy to resolve...:)

Aloha Kevin...

This the first time I have heard the argument that _more accurate_ information is not better than _the other_ types of information. While I agree that all real information is worthy of consideration, the most accurate information is always the best, and that is what people look for. Otherwise, what is the point of gathering it at all? You could never find out the truth about anything. Is that really what you meant to say?

Mars' Life May Be From Earth

.c The Associated Press

By PAUL RECER

WASHINGTON (AP) - Organic chemicals found in a Martian rock may be contamination from Earth and not evidence of life on the Red Planet, new studies suggest. But NASA scientists say the reports ``don't shake our belief one bit.''

Laboratory studies at the University of Arizona, Tucson, and the Scripps Institute of Oceanography conclude that amino acids and carbon found in a rock from Mars probably got there after the rock landed on Earth and lay on Antarctic ice for thousands of years.

This disputes a theory led by two NASA scientists that found evidence that Martian microbes once lived inside the rock and left behind fossil-like blobs and organic chemicals.

``Neither paper changes our original hypothesis,''' said Everett K. Gibson Jr., a NASA researcher. ``They don't shake our belief one bit.''

Gibson and David S. McKay, both of the Johnson Space Center in Houston, announced in August 1996 that they had found evidence of life in a meteorite from Mars. The rock, called ALH84001, was found in an ice field in Antarctica and has been identified chemically as originating from Mars.

The theory that the rock once contained Mars microbes has failed to win universal support among experts and the new studies, to be published Friday in the journal Science, are the latest to offer alternate explanations for the lifelike chemistry found inside the rock.

J. Warren Beck of the University of Arizona, a co-author of one study, said his group analyzed part of ALH84001 for organic carbon, an essential chemical for life. He said there were four types of carbon found and most of it originated on Earth, probably from contamination that got into the rock while it was on the ice.

But Beck acknowledged that his team found ``a mystery carbon component'' that could be extraterrestrial.

``What we found does weaken their case, but it does not rule out the possibility for life on Mars,''' said Beck. ``We have left the door open to there being extraterrestrial organic carbon in this rock.''

Jeffrey L. Bada of Scripps, however, said that his study clearly disproves the Gibson-McKay theory.

The Scripps researchers analyzed the Mars rock for amino acids, organic compounds that form proteins and are fundamental to life. Bada said that his team was looking at the chemical symmetry of the amino acids. On Earth, amino acids have a left-hand symmetry.

``If there is really evidence for Mars life in these meteorites, then amino acids should provide a diagnostic indication,'' said Bada.

Amino acids were found at very low levels, he said, ``but they look just like the ones on Earth.''

Additionally, he said the amino acids matched those that are found in the Antarctic ice.

Bada said the work suggests that the rocks soaked up moisture from the ice where they lay for thousands of years and that this water contained organic compounds, including the amino acids. If the amino acids were from Martian life, he said, then they should have been different from amino acids on Earth.

``When you find something that looks just like it came from Earth, you are on very dangerous ground to conclude anything else but that it came from Earth,'' said Bada.

Gibson, however, said that Bada's team analyzed a sample that included minerals from around the lifelike structures in the rock that he and McKay found. A true test, he said, would be to analyze only the lifelike structures.

For instance, he said, an analysis of a chocolate chip cookie would give different results, depending on what part of the cookie is tested.

In that analogy, said Gibson, the NASA team examined only the chocolate chips, while the Scripps team looked at the whole cookie.

Aloha Philip...:)

Opinions are like.....er.....well, that is to say everybody has one. The way these things would ideally work, is that when someone had a story...or a film...they should present it along with everything they had to back up it's authenticity and let the world have a go at the _whole _ package.

It is up to the author of the story to provide sufficient information to prove that what he (or she) says is true. While many people _want_ the film to be real to justify their belief that the incident really happened, it should not automatically be assumed to be true. That is neither sensible, scientific, nor serious investigation.

As far as I am concerned, anyone who asks us to believe something _BUT_ who won't tell/show/give us either the proof or the whole story, should not accrue any consideration for belief at all. PROOF of something means that it can be proven to be true....If Mr. Santilli didn't have anything to hide, he wouldn't be hiding anything.

But that's just my opinion...:)

Unknown species, but probably looking so much like some existent

it?

>I don't think this happens every few centuries, but constantly.

If it should be part of the UFO phenomenon, however, in the sense

WASHINGTON (January 15, 1998 2:37 p.m. EST <http://www.nando.net>) --
NASA has decided to let John Glenn return to space, officials familiar with the decision said Thursday.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration scheduled a Friday news conference at its Washington headquarters. The 76-year-old astronaut-turned-senator planned to attend.

NASA declined to say what its decision was, but two officials familiar with the decision told The Associated Press that Glenn has been approved for a space shuttle flight.

MSNBC and CNN first reported the decision by Administrator Daniel Goldin.

As a throng of reporters staked out his Capitol Hill office, Glenn emerged long enough only to say: "I can understand there is a great deal of interest in this matter, but today I have no comment on it. I look forward to discussing this in the future."

Glenn was the first American to orbit the Earth and if his mission takes place he would also become the oldest man in space.

Subject: Project Silver Bug

Hello Fellow Updaters,

For anyone who's interested we now have the Project Silver Bug documents online at our web site. Late in 1996 we filed a FOIA request with the US Air Force requesting the documents and received them in February of 1997. I was surfing the net late last week and ran across a site that was charging $4.95 a pop to view them. I thought that was ridiculous so I scanned in my copies of the documents and have made them available for free.

Project Silver Bug was one of the US Air Force's early attempts at producing a vertical lift craft. What makes this craft so unique was that it was shaped exactly like a Flying Saucer. With all of the reports of saucer shaped craft flying around in our airspace back in the 1950s and 60s ... could it be that some of these odd craft were ours? I think it's highly possible. The direct URL is

<http://ufo-world.simplenet.com/silverbug.html>

Your comments are welcome. Any additional information about Project Silver Bug or any other vertical lift craft would be appreciated.

Regards,

Bob wrote,

>Let's not forget in our haste to dismiss this that there is still the >debris footage to deal with.

Bob,

The 'debris' footage arrived late on the scene and is of course the only 'tie-in' with the 'Roswell' case.

Arguably that footage alone should be sufficient proof the entire video 'evidence' is an accomplished hoax.

As we know, when Dr Jesse Marcel remembered seeing metallic 'I-beams' with embossed 'hieroglyphics', this became a foundation for claims that the Roswell case concerned the crash of an ET craft.

To recap on some of the issues, this is a relevant extract from "The Day Before Roswell" article I wrote last year:

As noted, Dr Marcel was shown some of the wreckage by his late father. The revived story having gathered momentum and attention, on a number of occasions, Dr Marcel described metallic 'I-beams' with symbols, recalled as part of that wreckage.

"There were I-beam fragments that had writing on the inside of them", he claimed.

As for the symbols:

"I thought at first it looked like hieroglyphics, but it wasn't. Hieroglyphics have animal forms birds, and cats, and things, but this wasn't hieroglyphics. It resembled it. Geometric forms and figures, solid forms, but not any kind of recognizable numbers or letters or anything like that. More like squares, triangles, circular ellipsoids, put together in various combinations to form different types of occurrences. I do recall very strongly it was a metallic, purplish color".

"And the hieroglyphics were embossed on that. So they stood out from that".

Yet, in the 1995 UK Channel 4 'Incident at Roswell' documentary, he seemed to have changed his mind.

The program featured the infamous 'alien autopsy' video, which includes some brief film of debris supposedly from the crash site and which shows I-beams with embossed symbols.

Asked for his comments on similarities with what he recalled, Dr Marcel claimed the embossed symbols in the video footage were different because, "the ones I saw were not raised above the level of the beam".

Apparently, a complete contradiction.

Dennis Murphy, an acquaintance in the US, spoke to Miller Johnson, who designed a 'replica' I-beam with Dr Marcel.

Dennis confirmed, "I asked Miller Johnson if Jesse Marcel Jr. knew whether or not the symbols were embossed into the I-beam. He stated that Jesse was not sure if they were or not".

Dr Marcel is also unsure of the exact shapes of the symbols. He acknowledges that there is only one symbol, resembling a truncated triangle with a circle on top, which he can recall with any confidence.

Whilst Dr Marcel believed the members "sure didn't look like balsa wood, unless it was sprayed with aluminium paint or something like that", his father recalled that they did not look metallic, but "something like balsa wood".

And although Marcel Jnr originally claimed the symbols were "actually an embossed part of the metal itself", his father stated, "they looked like they were painted on".

Another witness to the debris, Charles Schmid, described "some material that looked like wood" and which "had some writing that looked like flowers on just one side". He added, "it had pink petals, centred like a flower".

Dr Marcel has also described the I-beam symbols as "pink and purple", or "a violet-purple type color". His father concurs; "those symbols were pink-purple, lavender was actually what it was".

Loretta Proctor confirmed that Mac Brazel told her, "there was more stuff there, like a tape that had some sort of figures on it...there was also something he described as tape which had printing on it...the colour of the printing was a kind of purple".

And Brazel's daughter, Bessie Schreiber, told of how "some of the metal-foil pieces had a sort of tape stuck to them, and when these were held to the light they showed what looked like pastel flowers or designs".

As the existence of the tape with purplish symbols isn't disputed, it seems there is good reason to suspect that this tape was also the source of the purplish symbols found on some parts of the debris.

Significant corroboration for this is given in Kent Jeffrey's recent article "Roswell - Anatomy of a Myth".

He states:

"In the last few months, as part of my effort to reconstruct what happened at Roswell, I have had a number of conversations with Irving Newton, the weather officer at Fort Worth Army Air Field who was called in by General Ramey to identify the unusual debris".

"In one of my conversations with Newton, quite by chance, a new and important revelation came to light. He was describing the color of the symbols on one of the balsa sticks and mentioned how it was faint and had somewhat of a mottled appearance because of "the way that the dye had bled through onto the surface of the stick." This was a very important piece of information. The symbols that Newton saw on the debris in Ramey's office were on the surface of the stick, not on tape! The tape had apparently peeled away, probably because of several weeks' exposure to sunlight while it lay out in the desert. This serendipitous revelation immediately cleared up one of the biggest questions in my mind about the Roswell case -- how could Jesse Marcel, Sr., or Jesse Marcel, Jr., for that matter, not have recognized flower patterns on tape? The answer is now crystal clear. The symbols they saw were not on tape. What they saw were images of the original symbols from the dye that had bled through before the tape had peeled away. Jesse, Jr.'s testimony about the symbols definitely not being on tape was absolutely correct".

When Dr Marcel first gave his testimony in February of 1978, he made no mention of any symbols on the I-beams.

Subsequently bringing this to light, in April of 1979, he wrote to Stanton Friedman's associate, William Moore, advising, "I omitted one startling description of the wreckage for fear it might have been the fanciful imagination of a twelve-year-old".

"Imprinted along the edge of some of the beam remnants there were hieroglyphic-type characters".

There seems compelling evidence, the source of the mysterious "hieroglyphics" was that same pinkish-purple tape with flowers.

In the US Air Force report, Colonel Trakowski, who was the TOP SECRET control officer for Project Mogul, confirmed the distinctive pinkish- purple tape with flower and heart designs was used at that time, in the construction of balloon radar targets.
[End]

Conversely, if a number of obvious indications such as the above were supportive of the debris containing metallic I-beams with hieroglyphics, what credence would then be given to the claims of a witness who recalled that when he was a young boy some 32 years previously, he believed these to be wooden beams, imprinted with symbols from pinkish-purple tape.

And whose recollections had become seemingly contradictory and unsure.

It's a straightforward conclusion.

If the metallic I-beams with hieroglyphics never existed, but are folklore born of Dr Marcel's uncertain memories, then the debris footage is bogus and consequently the rest of the video footage exceedingly likely to be equally so.

The Roswell case has been shown in a number of ways to be explained beyond any reasonable doubt and critical documents released under the FOIA confirm the absence of any fallout that the known crash of an ET craft would have, and then some.

It should perhaps therefore be clear by this time that extraordinary claims which attach themselves to 'Roswell', whether video film of 'aliens' and ET debris, stories of reverse engineered technology, tales from people who claim to have participated in this or that related project, MJ-12 and now E2, and so on, can never produce any meaningful evidence.

Roswell was a compelling case deserving of scrutiny and it's regrettable it has become the focus for so many clueless charlatans in recent times.

Like the case itself, it's not as if research into the 'alien autopsy' footage hasn't turned up some telling evidence.

There's plenty of obvious clues and the 'debris' footage is one.

CSETI's Push for open hearings

Subject: CSETI's Push for open hearings

Hi all!

I just sent out 15 letters (requesting open hearings on UFO secrecy) to the chairpersons on the committees that Dr. Greer stated were the important ones. I hope everybody, even if you dislike Dr. Greer, does this. This is not about personalities, this is about making your voice heard and pushing our elected officials into something that's long overdue. It doesn't take that long to write or call some of these Congresspersons or Senators. Maybe I'm naive, but I think it's going to work! The contact information is on CSETI's page.

Thank you Steven Bassett for all of the work you're doing with the ufology groups and Frances Barwood. She's a great lady who I had the pleasure to interview last year. I would love to have you on my team any day.

How the heck do I print the Congressional Hearing petition from Bob Dean's page? It's too big for my printer. Obviously I'm not that computer literate and would like some help. Where do I send it when I have lots of signatures?

One more thing. I'm 32 years old & a professional producer/director/videographer/editor for the City of Tampa's Government Access Television. I want to start putting all of my efforts into producing UFO/Paranormal documentaries. I really want to quit my job (It's so boring videotaping City government pieces!) and "do" UFOs full time.

I'm good at what I do (Believe me, I'm not trying to brag. I hate talking about myself) and only put quality work on the air. I have gotten compliments on my work by such people as the Mayor of Tampa. And you know what? It doesn't really feel that great to get those compliments because I'm not putting my talents to use on something I believe in 110% and love (UFOs & ETs). 'It's not rewarding at all.

I'm ready to do whatever it takes. If I'm needed as a producer/videographer/editor (With a working knowlege of the subject) in this field then that's what I'll do. I'd rather ride around in a Pleiadian Beam Ship with Semjase (SP?) but I'll take the producer position. Plus, I'm married and I hope my wife doesn't read this email or I'll be in trouble!

If anybody has any ideas for a serious, up-to-date, documentary on these subjects, let me know. Obviously, whatever we do, it would have to be sellable and marketable to a network or a big cable channel (Discovery, A&E, TLC).

Raring to go and waiting to quit my cushy government job in Tampa,

Joe

P.S - I'm real easy to work with. I used to play drums in a hard/rock band with an egomaniac/psychotic lead singer/guitarist. If I could get along with him, I can get along with anybody.

"Look at the size of that can of tuna! That's not for a person!"

That's for Biosphere 3!!!"

Dennis,

The Ruppelt book is not in the public domain. The author retains the copyright for 75 years. Books copyrighted in 1923 are coming into the public domain now.

For further information on this you might find the Project Gutenberg website of interest. The purpose of that project is to make available on the internet books which are legally in the public domain.

Hello Jack,

I was too harsh in using the term "glibly". Also it was not my intention to belittle your experience as an observer of the Washington DC events.

However, I think you may be unaware and therefore a bit naive about some unusual aspects of the Washington National events which have been researched and documented in books such as Ruppelt's which have never and may never be reported in the newspapers. For instance I offer for your consideration the following passage from Ruppelt's The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects, Chapter 12, The Washington-merry-go-round.

In some aspects the Washington National Sightings could be classed as a surprise -- we used this as an excuse when things got fouled up --- but in other ways they weren't. A few days prior to the incident a scientist, from an agency that I can't name and I were talking about the build-up of reports along the east coast of the United States. We talked for about two hours, and I was ready to leave when he said that he had one last comment to make -- a prediction.

From his study of the UFO reports that he was getting from Air Force Headquarters, and from discussions with his colleagues, he said that he thought that we were sitting right on top of a big keg full of loaded flying saucers. "Within the next few days," he told me, and I remember that he punctuated his slow, deliberate remarks hitting the desk with his fist, "they're going to blow up and you're going to have the granddaddy of all UFO sightings. The sighting will occur in Washington or New York," he predicted, "probably Washington."

The trend in the UFO reports that this scientist based his prediction on hadn't gone unnoticed. We on Project Blue Book had seen it, and so had the people in the Pentagon: we all had talked about it.

end of Ruppelt quotation.

Think carefully about what Ruppelt documented here. A scientist in one of our intelligence agencies notified or predicted to Ruppelt in advance that "flying saucers" - remember this is before Ruppelt coined the term UFO to obfuscate the Washington National sightings, would be appearing over Washington. Somewhere, in probably at one of the intelligence agencies is that scientist's data, etc....

Another interesting factoid about the Washington National Sightings is that Raymond Fowler's father (Raymond is the well known UFO investigator) predicted in print when and where they would occur in advance of the events!

I fairly consistently close my posts with only my name no offense was intended but why not make exceptions.

Regards,

Gary

Effects of UFO "sightings" on Asian countries

Subject: Effects of UFO "sightings" on Asian countries

Those of you involved in ufology and UFO sightings and abduction promotion might take a moment to think about the effects of this stuff on people in Asia: Japan, Taiwan, Thailand, Hong Kong, China, Singapore, Malaysia, India, etc.

Many of these so-called sightings of things like the Phoenix Lights and the Roswell affair and Heaven's Gate and alien abduction talk get picked up by the media over here (I am in Taiwan as I write this; was in Japan previously) and never questioned. The result is that many Asians are very influenced by USA media reports and never have a chance to learn the truth. For example, when TIME and NEWSWEEK made big deals of out Roswell and the Phoenix hoax last year, those magazines were sold all over Asia, often in translated versions, and everybody over here knows this stuff. They think it's real. They think that if the USA media says it happened, it must be real. So the result is that a lot of Asians have fallen victim to this kind of shallow reporting. They really think UFOs land in the USA all the time. They really think alien abductions happen all the time. They don't know the difference, as we do, between the National Enquirer and the New York Times. They think all USA media is the same. So please be careful how you report things. Many Americans, with their silly belief in aliens and UFOs and conspiracies etc, are messing up other parts of the world. It's a real shame. As you can see I am a skeptic and a nonbeliever, and I fear for the way AMERICA is messing up the rest of the world. Ever notice how these UFOs never land in poor rural Vietnam or even in modern sleek Japan? No, they always pick No. 1 Country in the World the USA (okay, sometimes the UK or France, other snotty uppity nations that think they are Number 1 too)?

Americans are so damned concerned with their own navels! It's really messing up the world. Just something to think about; not that anyone cares (they are so self-obsessed, another American hobby...)

Very good point Mark. Even if Sitchin has translated the old texts perfectly, what reason do we have for thinking these people knew what they were talking about??? There are lots of ancient texts, some well understood many not, but we have no good reason to assume that any of them have any value other than for historical studies of mythology.

Filer's Files #2-1998=A0 MUFON Skywatch Investigations
From George A. Filer:=A0 MUFON Eastern Director,
Jan. 14, 1998=A0 Majorstar@aol.com=A0 (609) 654-0020

It isn't a question of whether UFOs exist. The question is, who do they belong to?

UFO AND SPACE SHUTTLE

WASHINGTON - The Space Shuttle Endeavor narrowly avoided a collision with=A0=
a gigantic UFO during its 12-day mission in September and a top-secret NASA audio tape proves it!=A0=A0=A0=A0 That's the word from author William= Kliner, who claims to have obtained a=A0 copy of the tape from highly placed NASA= sources and flatly calls the incident=A0 "the most dramatic close encounter in= history."
In the 23-second tape, which was recorded off one of several secret radio frequencies that NASA reserves for classified conversations with space= shuttle astronauts, Commander David Walker is heard to say:=A0=A0=A0=A0 "Bogey at 3= o'clock,
God what is it?=A0 My God, it's coming right=A0 at us!" NASA asks: What's= there?
Walker: There's no way! Oh God! Get back. Move!"=A0=A0=A0=A0 NASA asks:=
Endeavor!
Endeavor! What, explain=A0=A0 Walker states: "What the.=A0 Where is it?= Where, it's gone.=A0 It's gone! . . UFO, Spacecraft, huge, intelligent, over there!=A0= =A0=A0=A0 NASA tells: Endeavor to: Switch now!=A0=A0=A0=A0 The tape ends abruptly with what= would appear to be a NASA order for Walker=A0 to change radio frequency. And while nobody other than Walker, his crew and a handful of NASA officials=A0 knows exactly what happened next, the Endeavor returned to Earth safely on September 18, indicating that the close encounter ended without further incident.=A0=A0

"This is dazzling proof that UFOs not only exist, they are piloted by extraterrestrials who are interested in our technology and possibly even mankind's ventures into space," declared Kliner, who has published hundreds of articles on America's space program over the past 25 years. "Until now, I didn't believe in the existence of UFOs and I certainly didn't=A0 believe= that extraterrestrials were visiting our planet.=A0=A0=A0=A0 "But now I know= better. Space aliens actually observed our shuttle astronauts=A0 as they orbited Earth -=
and NASA's own tape proves it."
NASA spokesmen declined to comment on the author's report pending the= outcome of what one official called "an investigation into the source of= unauthorized information that might or might not have basis in fact."=A0=A0=A0=A0 Like= NASA,

Commander Walker and his crew - Pilot Ken Cockrell and Mission=A0= Specialists
James Voss, James Newman and Michael Gernhardt - aren't talking.=A0=A0=A0=
But
Kliner's sources say the Endeavor and crew did, in fact, avert an in-orbit collision with "a massive, walnut-shaped spacecraft of unknown origin."
"From what I understand, the spacecraft was the size of a small city and glowed bright green as it approached the shuttle," he continued. "At some point during the encounter, the UFO veered off course to avoid a=A0= collision.
"As far as I know," he continued, "there was no contact between the UFO and the shuttle. If there was contact, my sources are unaware of it." Thanks to: Eric Howarth: erich@cycor.ca=A0 and A.J. Craddock. Editors Note:=
Investigators who live near Cape Canaveral often report sightings of UFOs during the= launch of the shuttle.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

EXETER, NH,=A0 01/10/98 (AP) - A Newmarket man was nearly blinded by a= bright light in the sky last month, and he's on a mission to find out what it was. Dave Jackson said the mysterious brilliant blue flash lit up the sky over Exeter on December 28th, as he drove along Route 88.=A0 "It was brighter= than anything I've ever seen," he said.=A0 Jackson said, he's heard from a= Hampton Falls woman who saw a similar blinding flash in the same area about a month earlier.=A0 He plans to meet with a UFO investigator near the site.=A0 Peter Geremia, director of the state chapter of the Mutual UFO Network, said an investigation begins by ruling out explainable causes such as aircraft or= the weather. He said some UFO investigations take several months, but most last only a couple of weeks.-Thanks to=A0 Brookline Copshmrnas Boston Globe's website: <http://www.boston.com/dailynews/wirehtml> and Current Encounters.

VERMONT

On January 11, 1998, two MUFON members and their adult daughter were= traveling south of Newport, VT on Route 91 around 10:30 p.m.. It was a clear night,= with partial clouds, snow starting later. The witnesses saw flashing red and= white lights that changed to a horizontal=A0 row of white lights. Then, they= changed to a red and white light, back to all white, then back and forth. The object was low, headed north, and no sound was heard. The temperature, ground= level, was in the upper 20's. The wife said that there was a double vapor trail.=A0= She said that they were amazed because it was so low and so wide. She compared= it to a WW II bomber. She also felt that it was faster than it should have been at that elevation.=A0 Thanks to Sandee Black, MUFON State Director Vermont .

MASSACHUSETTS

=A0=A0=A0=A0 On Wednesday, December 31, 1997, Lynn S. was driving in= rush-hour traffic
at 8:52 a.m., in Rockland, Massachusetts a suburb southeast of Boston.=A0=A0=A0= =A0=A0 As
she neared Reed's Pond, on Market Street in Rockland, she spotted "a cigar-shaped craft that hovered for a minute and 45 seconds above the waters of Reed's Pond before it plunged in and exploded. I saw the object come across the sky, pulsating a blue light from the top with two strong flashing lights on each side."=A0=A0=A0=A0 "Traffic slowed, but no one seemed to care enough= to get out and see what the object was," she=A0 reported." As I approached the= traffic lights, people were pointing back at the pond.=A0 But without the traffic= light working, drivers were beginning to swear, cut people off and no one was= paying any attention to the object."=A0=A0=A0=A0 "Upon driving home and finding I= had no electricity, I called the electric company but only got a recording. I began calling other residents of the town.=A0 They all said they had no= electricity after they heard the planes go over.=A0 At 9:15 a.m., Lynn drove back to=

Reed's Pond."To my amazement, a black ball hovered in the sky above it, as big as a silver dollar, but nothing was astir in the pond.=A0 I noticed dead ducks= and seagulls floating on the surface."=A0=A0=A0=A0 The UFO zipped away seconds= later.
"For the record, I never heard any planes." Thanks to Joe Trainor editor of UFO Roundup 3-2, 1/9/98.

NORTH CAROLINA

Terry Kimbrell reports,=A0 "Wanted to pass an observation I had of recent activity in the Blue Ridge Mountains around the Asheville area.=A0 As you= know there has been three reported UFO sightings in December, two near Clyde, NC and a Decemvber 20th,=A0 sighting around Mars Hill. These areas are within a= 20 mile radius of Asheville. I still haven't had any luck with contacts. On January 5th, a hiker on the Appalachian Trail, in the Nantahala National Forest=A0 reported finding what appeared to be human bare-footprints in the= snow along the trail.=A0 Matt Moneymakers Bigfoot Research reports these= footprints were 13 to 14 inches in length. This area is located 45 miles from= Asheville, in the vicinity of two of the UFO sightings.=A0 Hope Right now the weather= is pretty bad in some of these locations with flooding and the high mountains have snow.=A0 Thanks to Terry Kimbrell and John Thompson.

GEORGIA

MUFON State Director, John=A0 Thompson reports he was a was a guest on an Atlanta news-talk radio show on January 10th. On the "Royal Treatment" one-hour show with host Royal Marshall on WSB, 750AM (a 50,000 watt station) we had several interesting calls come in. The best was from a former naval officer now living in Fayetteville, Georgia. The gentlemen would not give= the name of his ship or the "body of water" that the incident happened in but provided many interesting details.=A0=A0 He said that he was on a= "antiaircraft weapons ship" --probably a TICONDEROGA class, Aegis equipped guided missile cruiser from other details he provided. He said, while he was in the operations center they tracked a UFO=A0 doing "Mach 8." (About 5,000 mph.)= After watching the UFO on the screen and judging it to be within visual range he went "to the bridge" and there was the UFO! He said, he then proceeded to watch the UFO settle to near ocean level and he said it began "to lighten." After growing bright it suddenly shot straight up and was out of sight= within "two seconds." On asking him if they painted the target, he said, "No,= because we were on condition one status."=A0 So all tracking was done solely by= passive radar. He said, an entry of this incident was made on the ship's log and occurred about twelve years ago. He wouldn't even name the location or ship= he was on. Nonetheless, there is not a doubt in mind, just based on one conversation with him, that he was an excellent witness reporting something highly unusual that had radar confirmation. He knew exactly what I meant= when I asked, "Did you paint the target." This guy was for real. Wish he would= call us. Thanks to John Thompson.

Chief Tom Sheets reported on his investigation of several cases. In the October 15th, 8 PM, sighting by Jennie and Shelley B. they saw a coned or bell-shaped object with lights moving over a wide area near Cannonville, in western Georgia for about 30 minutes. They relocated the UFO on the south= side of Bartley Road. It was moving away at a slow even speed, and they followed= it in a generally westerly direction...The object=A0 had moved from its= original location at a slow but steady speed.=A0 The sisters described the= bell-shaped object has having a large non-blinking light on top=A0 and two red lights on= its bottom. It was the size of a "small aircraft or large car."=A0 The light= hovered at tree top level, when it suddenly accelerated toward them very fast. They said, "It moved faster than an airplane could move." The object traveled 2= 1/2

miles in west and returned to Rosie Civers Road.=A0 Chief Sheets concludes= that the "movement" and "no engine noise"=A0 rules out "standard aircraft" or balloons.

On the second case, last summer at dusk, 18 year old Jennie B says she saw= an UFO only 200 feet away from her near Cannonville, GA.=A0 After looking at= UFO
photos, she=A0 positively identified the Bell-shaped 9/16/96 Valley, Alabama= UFO
photo as exactly like the craft she observed. She saw the UFO for just five seconds as she did not stop her car. She indicated, "The UFO was the size of= a small car and hovering about 1/2 off the horizon only 200 feet from the= road."
This is similar to other reports we have had of the Valley UFO in Georgia, Colorado, and Kentucky.

In the third incident with Jennie B., and somewhat further north of Cannonville off the Willie Hodnett Road, she saw a rectangular shaped-UFO shining a bright beam. The box-like UFO,=A0 had a forward-looking white beam=
and many non-blinking red lights. Jennie said, it was only a 100 yards away.=
This sighting occurred in early November at around 7 PM. The UFO was about the= size of a large transfer truck. She only saw this for about 3-5 seconds. It= should be noted that another UFO sighting took place on this same road that= involved a square-box like UFO shining a light in a cow pasture. That sighting= occurred in Sept. of 1995 and involved a couple and was indirectly verified by a farm wife that lived nearby. Jennie's sighting may suggest something is regularly returning to the Willie Hodnett Road area.

The final case of Tom Sheets took place in 1992-1994. The exact day is unknown. It involves a van-load of LaGrange church people going to Bingo= games in Alabama. Chief Sheets interviewed the van driver and five other= witnesses.
All saw a "shining globe of light...as large as a small helicopter" that chased them on Highway 431 at treetop level. The passengers claimed the UFO followed at only 50 feet away." The light accompanied them for about 5 miles and disappeared on reaching the outskirts of Anniston. Two of the church members said they later had eye problems that required medical treatment, because of the extremely bright lights. Thanks to=A0 John C. Thompson

FLORIDA

ISUR reports that Alexander Cox in West Palm Beach, Florida saw a UFO on January 12, 1998.=A0 Alex was just off the pier in the downtown area between= 7:15-9:00. The UFO was described as bright in color, almost like the moon,= but smaller. Alexander indicated, "The light attracted me and my friend." His phone is: (407 )737-5689,1051 Adams Road, West Palm Beach, alex_cox@hotmail.com Thanks to John Thompson and ISUR.

GERMANY

On Saturday, January 3, 1998, Emil D. was driving on an autobahn in= Germany's
Bavarian Alps near Traunstein, a small city 110 kilometers(66 miles) east of Munich.=A0=A0=A0 Suddenly, he looked in his rear-view mirror and saw "a= gigantic flying disc" coming up behind him.=A0 The UFO was described as "bright= silver with rotating lights along the rim."=A0=A0=A0=A0 The UFO pursued Emil's car= for 8
kilometers(5 miles) before rising quickly in altitude and zipping away over the southern horizon.=A0=A0=A0=A0 The huge daylight disc was also seen in= Muhldorf, 60 kilometers north of Traunstein, and across the border in Austria.=A0 (See= Victor Kean answered several of my questions concerning Flying Traingles (FT's) hovering over Nuclear Power Stations=A0 in Southeastern England. I= wrote the FTs stay several hours on station. Victor corrected me as follows: "In= the early days of 'Project FT' our sources used to provide both 'Arrival Time'= and 'Departure Time' over Sizewell Nuclear Power Station (NPS).=A0 Looking at= those 'old' (June 1995) reports the times varied from 5 minutes to=A0 25 minutes.= =A0 (I note that "photos were taken" I'm still trying to get copies !)=A0= Occasionally there was a very long interval such as 55 minutes, but this was very rare= and I wondered if a 'typo' mistake had been made. Then in 1996, these stopped= and we only got the 'Arrival Time'.=A0 I am one step removed from the 'actual source' and we are all nervous at losing this invaluable 'source' if we ask too many questions.=A0 Looking at the current time interval between the= Sizewell times and the next nuclear power station times, they appear to be fairly constant which suggests that the FT is not spending more than say 5 minutes= at Sizewell before moving on."

TWA FLIGHT 800

WASHINGTON Gannett News Service - Admiral Thomas Moorer, the former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said yesterday that it's possible a missile brought down TWA Flight 800 and called for new congressional=A0 hearings.=A0 The Boeing 747 disintegrated July 17, 1996, and plunged into the=A0 Atlantic= Ocean near Long Island, N.Y., killing 230.=A0 Moorer and other retired Navy brass,= at a press conference,=A0 expressed grave suspicion over the FBI's recently concluded=A0 18-month investigation of the disaster. They said a missile explosion just outside the 747's forward cabin seems the likely=A0 cause.=A0 "All evidence would point to a missile," said Moorer, who is an=A0 expert on= missile weaponry. "All those witnesses who saw a streak=A0 that hit the airplane --= you have to assume it's a missile. In=A0 an investigation like this, you can't overlook anything."=A0 Joseph Valiquette, FBI spokesman in New York, said= the agency is=A0 "comfortable" with its conclusions that "there's no evidence a criminal act was responsible."=A0

The Navy officers said a new study of evidence from Flight 800's=A0 data recorders rebuts the government's official story about fuel=A0 vapors= exploding in a central tank of the jetliner.=A0=A0 "This is either a train wreck in= the sky, or an explosive device=A0 -- mid-air, outside the plane," said retired Navy Cmdr. William=A0 Donaldson, a former plane crash investigator.=A0 Donaldson examined the mountain of material released in early=A0 December about the federal investigation. He particularly=A0 criticized one National= Transportation Safety Board document=A0 reflecting flight recorder data that was not= discussed when the=A0 material was unveiled in Baltimore.=A0=A0 Donaldson noted a line= drawn through readings of the last five=A0 seconds of the doomed jet's flight,= with a handwritten margin=A0 note reading "End of Flight 800 DATA" -- except there= are more=A0 revealing readings below it. He thinks this was an attempt to=A0 divert attention from the final readings on the flight recorder.

The final readings show chaos in the sky -- with airspeed=A0 dropping= instantly by almost 200 knots, the pitch angle jumping=A0 five degrees, altitude= dropping
3,600 feet in about three=A0 seconds, the roll angle going from zero to 144 degrees (the plane=A0 almost inverted), and magnetic heading changing from= 82 degrees=A0 to 163 degrees.=A0 Donaldson said all these indicate an extremely= high-pressure wave=A0 coming from the lower left side of the plane's front. The measurements "indicate there was an explosion -- a big explosion=A0 --= outside the cockpit."=A0 Editor's Note: There also appear to be other terrorist= attempts to destroy aircraft with missiles that have not been examined carefully.

Hello Tom -

I was merely suggesting that as we study an event there are many sources of information, some more accurate than others.

We cannot, however, say that the books are more accurate than the newspapers just because they are books. Nor can we say that the newspapers are more accurate than the books because they were written at the time the incidents happened.

We must evaluate each source of information to determine the validity of the information contained it in, rather than accept one source over another because of our own bias. I have found newspaper stories that are filled with inaccuracy and I have found books filled with inaccuracy, but I don't suggest that because I have one that all others are that way.

In other, shorter words, I'm suggesting that we assign a level of accuracy after we have had a chance to evaluate the source.

If I had to make a guess at the mind set of the USAF back then, they were probably trying to duplicate what they hoped might have been Russian aerotechnology and therefore explain the presence of UFOs. They already had the Avro Air Car to play with and were trying to make it stable with a newer design. The picture you have here shows a very unstable looking craft that is powered by conventional means. Though I don't see exhaust ports I'm guessing that it was jet powered. Judging by the landing gear on the Silver Bug it was either very heavy or they used gear of another aircraft in order to save money. It had little space for fuel for the two jets and had poor visibility below. Note it still sported vertical stabilizers.

Again, I would think that even if this thing did fly with any degree of stability that the pilot would have been summarily shot if he dared stray off the test range and into civilian airspace.

Joe, and list

I wanted to add a couple of comments:

>Hi all!

>I just sent out 15 letters (requesting open hearings on UFO >secrecy) to the chairpersons on the committees that Dr. Greer >stated were the important ones. I hope everybody, even if you >contact information is on CSETI's page.

Dr. Greer is probably his own worst enemy in this genre, with some of his earlier work coming back to haunt him. But I would agree that everyone should fire off letters to let their elected representatives know of their concern. But since I happen to work in that environment (the U.S. House), let me make a couple of suggestions.

In spite of all the hype about Congress getting on line and accepting email from the Internet, write your thoughts on paper and send them to your elected Representatives in Washington. You vote for them, and they will be far more responsive than a representative you don't elect.

Form letters are a bad idea. Send a form letter, and you are almost guaranteed a form letter in response and you'll get just about that much attention from the staff. A letter they have to actually read and consider because it is unique is far more visible. Sure it takes more time, but no one said this was going to be easy.

>Thank you Steven Bassett for all of the work you're doing with >the ufology groups and Frances Barwood. She's a great lady >who I had the pleasure to interview last year. I would love to >have you on my team any day.

Steven Bassett is catching a lot of flack as a result of his comments on the Art Bell show on some "lists". He doesn't deserve it, and it highlights the fact that this genre is certainly not well organized. Fearing the negative reaction, Greer and Dean both distanced themselves from Bassett so as to avoid being tainted. This is unfortunate in that Steven seems to have tried very hard to help push their causes, but...well, never mind.

>How the heck do I print the Congressional Hearing petition from >Bob Dean's page? It's too big for my printer. Obviously I'm not >that computer literate and would like some help. Where do I send

I hope they have a logical place to send such a petition.

>pieces!) and "do" UFOs full time.

Good luck, but I would advise against quitting your "day job".
Few are actually making a good living in this genre, and those that are have been criticised as professionals who are biased in support of their income. You might also keep in mind that TLC and TDC purchase their material from other sources and much of UFO oriented material comes from the Great Britian, where a number of paranormal documentary shows are produced. IMHO, these shows are often more tabloid than news oriented, and they are being produced because they can turn a profit, and not because they hope to lead to the "truth".

Just a few thoughts,

Hi Joe,

Working as I do in a government position myself, although a little closer to the action, I found that the only time that our elected officials take notice of petitions is when they have a desk with uneven legs. They can use it to level it up. A few thousand names out of 260 million doesn't carry much weight with government. No one is going to lose his/her seat over a few thousand names.

Now you've done it Terry. I can't think of a quicker way to find out how many unexplained sightings there have been in the countries you listed above (including Taiwan) than to say that there are no reports there. Clever ploy my son. Be prepared to be deluged with reports. And I can't believe you put Japan in there.

Dear Bob,

Of course it would be better to contact John directly and obtain the data from him. I've tried to do so ! If I had succeeded I wouldn't look after the assistance from our colleagues and friends. If I am doing so, its because I couldn't locate Dr. Mack.

?tie in?

MMmmm? I thought the main contention of the AA Film was the fact that it WASN'T related to the "Classic" Roswell case and allegedly happened 1 month earlier and 125 miles away near Socorro.?

If any case out there can be tied in with it, (and has been, if witness statements can be believed) it should be the Barney Barnett story.

This is the kind of thing that passes for argumentation in "skeptical" circles. I've seen it again and again.

I think you need to spend a little time with the case literature, such as the Project 1947 EM Effects catalog from which the following excerpts were extracted. You'll notice that these cases are not in the US, France, or other European countries, and are often from rural areas or over the ocean, and a number of them date from before major US press coverage of UFOs.

Jan 1942                      Arjeplog, Sweden                      E. Thorander; object/humanoid/effects      Stig Aggestad      Kuslig narkontakt skramde

1944                      India      glowing disc immobilized airplane

p. 60, from: Flying Saucers Magazine n. 18 and Constable: sky creatures (1976), no page given.

February, 1944      2:30AM      4,500 feet over Bass Strait (Aus)
"...the plane gained a most unusual companion. A "dark shadow" appeared along side the plane and kept pace with it, at a distance of only some 100 to 150 feet. The Beaufort was travelling at about 235 miles per hour. The object appeared to have a flickering light and flame belching from its rear end. Only about 15 feet of the rear end of the UFO was visible to the bomber crew, apparently due to "reflection of light from the exhaust." The strange object stayed with the bomber for some 18 to 20 minutes, during which time all radio and direction finding instruments refused to function. It finally accelerated away from the plane at approximately three times the speed of the bomber. Upon landing, the pilot reported the incident to his base superiors, but he claimed he was only laughed at.
Such a reaction seems extraordinary in retrospect since it turns out that Beauforts figured heavily in official RAAF list of planes that "went missing without trace" during World War Two in the Bass Strait area - an area that was not linked to any significant enemy activity. I have been told that the Beauforts had a mechanical problem that may have accounted for some of these losses."

Debunkers are so wrapped up in their own navels they think that a priori belief (i.e. prejudice) is a substitute for scientific inquiry.

Sure, there are more UFO reports recorded in the US. There are and have been several major civilian research organizations in the US, along with a major and public inquiry by the USAF. Places like India don't even have a MUFON representative. Furthermore, there are 250,000,000+ people in the US covering a massive land area fairly evenly.

Taiwan, on the other hand, has a population of about 15,000,000, with ten percent of that tied up in Taipei. And while my catalogs don't contain any Taiwanese UFO sightings, I am sure there have been UFO sightings there, just as every formerly thought to be free of UFO report area has proven once an investigatory presence came into existence.

JAMES -- Quoting from your recent post on UpDates:

>Another witness to the debris, Charles Schmid, described "some >material that looked like wood" and which "had some writing that >looked like flowers on just one side". He added, "it had pink

Who's Schmid? He's a new one on me. What's your source on him?

BTW, as I'm sure you know, the description of the "members" as "I beams" comes only from Dr. Marcel, and this not until sometime well after he was first interviewed by Moore/Friedman. (This fact somehow always gets swept under the ufological rug in discussions of who saw what when.) All other credible witnesses to the debris found on the Foster Ranch, including Dr. Marcel's father (Schmid, too?), describe the "members" as being of square or rectangular cross section, 3/8 of an inch or so, and balsa-like (or, flat out, balsa) to boot.

Jack,

Kevin Randle has already responded before me but I will add that I do not consider it "fun" to distribute copyrighted materials illegally.

Its interesting that you would not consider purchasing one of the few books that most researchers in this field consider a seminal book in the history of the UFO phenomenon. Are you involved in this field seriously or for "fun"? Who is your royal "we"?

As far as Ruppelt's accuracy - almost 40 years of FOIA releases have backed up what he described back in '56. Some of the the material he discusses has still to be released.

If you are looking to newspapers for accuracy consider this, he describes how and why newspaper reporters were fed information and managed, that was part of his job. The discussion of their exclusion from the control tower at Washington National Airport is of note. Remember these were the post-war years and pre-Watergate.

This book is perhaps one of the five most important in understanding historical ufology if you don't want to own it borrow it from the library, I think you will be pleasantly surprised and challenged by it.

As I recall of the various tales coming from the Scantilli camp this supposed footage was all taken at the end of May 30? 1947 according to the cameraman NOT the Roswell crash of early July 1947.

The "debris" footage always struck me as something trying to tie the two events together or at least muddy the waters between May 30, and Roswell.

So far we have no proof that there was ANY kind of military operation at the end of May 1947 in New Mexico to recover the alleged crashed UFO that the cameraman allegedly filmed?

Re: The 'Debris'

So we should not be mixing the film, and the Roswell event in the same bowl. Just my 2 cents worth.

Cheers,
Robert

Scientists Stand By Mars Theory

By PAUL RECER

WASHINGTON (AP) - NASA scientists who say they found evidence of Martian microbes in a rock that came from Mars are not impressed with two studies that say the rock actually contains organic contaminants from Earth.

In reports published today in the journal Science, researchers at the University of Arizona, Tucson, and the Scripps Institute of Oceanography conclude that amino acids and carbon found in the Mars rock got there after it landed on Earth and lay on Antarctic ice for thousands of years.

The findings dispute a theory by a NASA-led team that interpreted chemical traces and minute tubular forms in the rock as fossil evidence of Martian microbes.

``Neither paper changes our original hypothesis,'' said Everett K. Gibson Jr., a NASA researcher. ``They don't shake our belief one bit.''

Gibson and David S. McKay, both of the Johnson Space Center in Houston, announced in August 1996 that they had found evidence of life in a meteorite from Mars. The rock, called ALH84001, was found in an ice field in Antarctica and has been identified chemically as originating from Mars.

The theory that the rock once contained Mars microbes has been questioned by experts, and the new studies in Science are the latest to offer alternate explanations for the lifelike chemistry found inside the rock.

J. Warren Beck of the University of Arizona, a co-author of one study, said his group analyzed part of ALH84001 for organic carbon, an essential chemical for life. He said there were four types of carbon found and most of it originated on Earth, probably from contamination that got into the potato-sized rock while it was on the ice.

But Beck acknowledged that his team found ``a mystery carbon component'' that could be extraterrestrial.

``What we found does weaken their case, but it does not rule out the possibility for life on Mars,'' said Beck. ``We have left the door open to there being extraterrestrial organic carbon in this rock.''

Jeffrey L. Bada of Scripps, however, said that his study clearly disproves the Gibson-McKay theory.

The Scripps researchers analyzed the Mars rock for amino acids, organic compounds that form proteins and are fundamental to life. Bada said his team was looking at the chemical symmetry of the amino acids. On Earth, amino acids have a left-hand symmetry.

``If there is really evidence for Mars life in these meteorites, then amino acids should provide a diagnostic indication,'' said Bada.

Amino acids were found at very low levels, he said, ``but they look just like the ones on Earth.''

Additionally, he said the amino acids matched those that are found in the Antarctic ice.

Bada said the work suggests that the rocks soaked up moisture from the ice where they lay for thousands of years and that this water contained organic compounds, including the amino acids. If the amino acids were from Martian life, he said, then they should have been different from amino acids on Earth.

``When you find something that looks just like it came from Earth, you are on very dangerous ground to conclude anything else but that it came from Earth,'' said Bada.

Gibson, however, said that Bada's team analyzed a sample that included minerals from around the lifelike structures in the rock that he and McKay found. A true test, he said, would be to analyze only the lifelike structures.

For instance, he said, an analysis of a chocolate chip cookie would give different results, depending on what part of the cookie is tested.

In that analogy, said Gibson, the NASA team examined only the chocolate chips, while the Scripps team looked at the whole cookie.

Phillip,

General thoughts about the film.

If the film was done by FX professionals, or anybody with a background, we won't see anything in the film to suggest that it is phony unless of course somebody comes forward. Meaning that research was done so that everything appeared to be "in period."

You recall the fairy photograph hoax that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle fell for in the early part of this century. It wasn't until one or both of the sisters were at the end of their life that they 'fessed up to the hoax and how they used cutouts of the fairys etc etc.

Likewise I suspect that if somebody manufactured this film, we won't find out about it until 20-50 years from now when the person fesses up to it.

I have seen some of the TV footage from the FX experts who say its real and phony, and in one case as I recall they even show how someone could have done it including setting up a dead alien corpse.

Needless to say in our day and age getting film of a phony dead alien is no big deal. This suggests to me that we should at leaste examine the film.

Santilli has endless promised to provide 1 or 2 frames of the film so that they could be examined by Kodak and or other experts. Has not happened inspite of all of Rays tales/claims/stories/promises. Sure makes you wonder about Ray and if he knows something about the film.

The cameraman is alleged to have claimed that the crash happened at the end of May1947. I have yet to see or hear of ANY proof that ANY kind of military operation took place in, around during May 1947 that was remotely connected with a crashed UFO.

I have also noticed how some have attempted to connect the film and Roswell even though the two events are separated by a month.

At the time I wondered about the *possibility* that the film was something designed to "discredit" the events at Roswell. You know connect the two in the general public's mind, then we have the public examinations and interviews with FX experts on how it could, or how they would have faked it, then in general public's mind the film is a fake, so Roswell is a fake also.....

In the final examination it seems like everybody is sitting around waiting for Ray to do something and Ray isn't doing anything nor is he showing any signs that he plans to do anything all his tales and stories aside.

Cheers,
Robert

(1) Re: Sitchin,

I typset a book for a Sumerian scholar (and a history of religions professor) a few years ago. Recently I asked her about Sitchin's work and his theories. She had not heard of him or his theories. She said the group of Sumerian scholars is quite small, less than 100 people. They know each other and interact. There are no Sumerian dictionaries, lexicons or grammars and the language must be taught personally by someone who has studied under others. She could not imagine how Sitchin could be self-taught. He must have been privately tutored. There are no ongoing discussions of Sitchin's views or anything like them in her scholarly circle.

However, she did state that accepted translations can be difficult, can be in error, and that all who "play the game" of scholarship have preconceptions and cannot stray too far out of the accepted path. It did not concern her that Sitchin's ideas were radical, or not accepted.

(2) Re: Roper Poll,

How can I get hold of the original Roper Poll on abductions? I am not interested in the various reports of the conclusions. There are many of those. I want the original report, the raw data, or a copy of the report itself.

What was the background of it? Who commissioned it? Who funded it? Any help will be appreciated.

However, it is disturbing to learn that the people in Asia

Bob,

The 'debris' footage arrived late on the scene and is of course the only 'tie-in' with the 'Roswell' case.

Arguably that footage alone should be sufficient proof the entire video 'evidence' is an accomplished hoax.

As we know, when Dr Jesse Marcel remembered seeing metallic 'I-beams' with embossed 'hieroglyphics', this became a foundation for claims that the Roswell case concerned the crash of an ET craft.

I am again amused by the emphasis on whether or not symbols on the I beams were marks on tape, or marks transferred to wood beams from the tape, etc.

Generally overlooked is the fact that the "beams" in a radar target assembly did not look like an I-beam. They were rectangular. Has anyone talked about balsa wood beams in radar targets that actually have the form of I-beams (with top and bottom horizontal segments, unlike the stupid capitol I printed here)? I suspect that the term "I-beam" never would have been brought up if the actual beams (or whatever they were) actually were square or rectangular in cross-section.

Idaho Teacher Gets Turn in Space

.c The Associated Press

By MARK WARBIS

McCALL, Idaho (AP) - In the 12 years since her friend and fellow teacher Christa McAuliffe died in the Challenger explosion, Barbara Morgan had heard the same question over and over.

``Not a day has gone by that people haven't asked me when I'm going to fly,'' she said.

On Friday, Morgan, 46, finally got the go-ahead from NASA to begin training for a shuttle flight. She will become America's Teacher in Space.

``It's been very frustrating that it takes so long, but I know many astronauts who have waited a lot longer, starting back in the Mercury days,'' Morgan said last week in her third-grade classroom.

Morgan was on the ground at Cape Canaveral, Fla., as the Teacher in Space backup when the Challenger exploded on Jan. 28, 1986, killing all seven astronauts, including Ms. McAuliffe, a high school teacher from New Hampshire.

The Teacher in Space program was put on hold after the disaster because of safety concerns.

Over the years, Morgan remained with the program, underwent annual astronaut physicals and, until cutting back last fall to spend more time in the classroom, traveled one week a month on education and public relations duties for the space agency.

``What Christa was trying to do then has not changed. All of that is really important. And that's part of my motivation for making sure it still happens,'' Morgan said. ``Every year we have a new generation of classroom students. Every year there's more for us to learn about our universe.''

NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin said Morgan will be added to the astronaut roster for an unspecified flight. He also announced that Sen. John Glenn, now 76, will return to space for the first time since 1962 on a shuttle mission scheduled for October.

``We're tickled,'' said Steven Lowder, superintendent of the McCall-Donnelly School District. ``It's like what one of the employees said when I gave her the news. She said, 'I'm getting goosebumps and I think I'm going to cry.' We're pleased for Barb because she has just put so much energy and dedication and commitment into this.''

Morgan, a mother of two boys, ages 10 and 8, and the wife of writer Clay Morgan, said she remains in excellent condition.

She admitted being annoyed by the long delay after the Challenger disaster, but said she remained confident NASA eventually would try to continue what Ms. McAuliffe started.

``I'm in the business of education and teachers are persistent and patient,' ' Morgan said.

As for the risks, she said: ``Safety is an important issue, but living in a risk-free world is a big mistake. If we are not willing as a society to take some risk for learning, for our future, then we are not doing enough.''

>end of Ruppelt quotation.

NOTE: Starting in April, 1952 the sighting rate began to rise rapidly. Statistics I have published in "THE UFO FBI CONNECTION" are as follows, starting in January, 1952: J - 15, F-17, M-23, A-82, M-79, J-148, July -536, A -326,, S-124, Oct-61, Nov. 50, Dec.--42. Total= 1503. The Air Force had never seen anything like the sighting rates from April through Sept. In July they were consistently getting 15 -20 or more reports per day from all over the USA. No wonder someone predicted in July that there would be a "big event." It was, in fact an "easy" prediction. The Washington DC sightings during the last two weekends in July were publicized more widely than any of the other HUNDREDS of sightings and so when Gen. Samford called his press conference, evidently to quiet things down a bit, he only had to concentrate on those sightings. Most reporters were unaware of what the AF knew: namely that military sightings had been occurring all over the country. Hence the reporters did not push the general to explain some sightings that were even more bizarre and unexplainable than the DC sightings.

1952 was, indeed, the YEAR OF THE UFO.... and merits two chapters in my UFO/FBI/Real X files book. It was also the year that the AF admitted to the FBI that there were unexplainable cases and "interplanetary" was being considered.

Go to art bell's homepage and follow his links to the real audio archives. On one of his program's this past week, some eyewitnesses to the march 13th siting have been interviewed and what they have to say is nothing short of extraordinary. I am not talking about the crappy video footage of the so called flares. We've all seen hundreds of video tape of this sort. What these witnesses describe is a triangle shaped object about 1000 feet in the air that was immense in size. Many of the witnesses estimated the object to be over 20 blocks long! Many got out of there cars to watch it fly by as it was moving very slowly at this point. Some even reported that the object was so low there headlights reflected off of it. It obviously was using some sort of anti-gravity propulsion. Also the lady who is taking a stand running for office in AZ was interviewed last week. For those that are skeptics to the whole UFO thing, well you are the same type that told columbus the world is flat. The universe is humungous. There are billions of planets out there and you think earth is the only one that supports life? WAKE UP! We have a bigger issue at hand. Our government has been hiding from us one of the most important discoveries of all of human history for over 50 years.

If you all want to continue living in the "earth is the center of the universe" dreamworld then go ahead. Don't be rudely interrupted when a UFO lands in broad daylight for all to see.

June '97 Scottish Sighting

From: Dave Ledger <dledger@cableinet.co.uk>
Date: Sat, 17 Jan 1998 00:12:19 +0000
Fwd Date: Fri, 16 Jan 1998 22:46:50 -0500
Subject: June '97 Scottish Sighting

--

Hi Group,

Here are a couple of interesting sightings from last year, that took place here in Scotland. I thought I would forward these to the list members as they are slightly unusual in nature. May the coming year be a fruitful one and good luck and good health to you all.....Dave Ledger.

DUNDONALD SIGHTING, AYRSHIRE, SCOTLAND.

Date: June 1997.

Source: The Kilmarnock Standard: 4\7\97 11\7\97 25\7\97\ (Special thanks to Mark at Haunted Scotland for these reports)

-----
About a dozen people watched a strange spectacle over Dundonald at around the end of June. For about two hours an unidentified flying object appeared to drift over several houses. At first the object seemed to be elliptical and was about the size of a large radar satellite dish. There seemed to be 14 or 15 flashing lights underneath it as the object drifted over houses in Auchans Drive and Cochrane Avenue.

People watched it from around 11.20pm to 1.20am. At times it seemed to change its shape to resemble a large letter 'M'. The object often changed altitude to just over the roof tops and at other times at a very high altitude. Some witnesses were genuinely afraid others were astounded.

Debbie McNally described the thing, "as a series of circles, giving off lights and rotating." Residents in the area also believed that the UFO caused their light bulbs to blow.

The Kilmarnock Standard put forward the explanation that it could have been a Gegenschein, although it is very rarely seen as far North as Scotland. It appears in the sky, exactly opposite the sun, after sunset and is caused by dust in the atmosphere. That dust, says the Standard could have come from the volcano in Montserrat and the flashing lights could have been stars!

On June the 27th members of the Ralston family from Saltcoats saw something strange over Dundonald, "which kept disappearing and coming back." By the time Mr. Ralston was back home in Saltcoats, Ayrshire, they saw, "three layers of electric blue triangles inside an oval shape which hovered just above the rooftops, tilting on its side. It would disappear for a few seconds and come back lower down in the sky. This lasted up to one hour and then it disappeared. It was very frightening.

Philippa Knapp also saw something strange over Dundonald the same night. She said: "My husband, son and friend and I all saw it. My husband referred to them as lights but my son and myself thought they were more like a cloud type substance of a purple shade, small circles rotating forming a larger circle. We watched it come towards us over the rooftops in Castleview from the South-West direction. As it got close to us it changed shape, swirled to its right then left and disappeared, but two or three minutes later, exactly the same format took place. We observed it for over an hour from about 11.35.

Local residents who witnessed the objects have rejected the Gegendeschein theory out of hand. More light bulbs in the area have blown and there is an upsurge in failing electrical appliances.

Debbie McNally, using her sisters camera took a photo of the 'thing'. Every frame on the camera when developed turned out fine but the one showing the mystery object turned out blank.

KILMARNOCK TRIANGLE SIGHTING.

In the last week there has been a sighting of a triangle object over Kilmarnock, the person making the report is an amateur astronomer and he described it as 'sinister'. He said: "It was a large object and it rose above houses at around 2.am., than slowly flew off over London Road.

The object was kite shaped with three or four white lights around the edges and a flashing red light in the centre."

The witness thought the object was on the "prowl".

Half an hour after the sighting he saw lightening in the sky, which he thought odd as it was a clear night.

Duchovny, Anderson Sign Until 2000

X-Files co-stars Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny have agreed to stay with the show until the year 2000, according to TV Guide. The announcement came shortly after Fox said it would air at least two more seasons of the series, with or without its current stars.

The pair's decision to stick with the hit show was likely helped by Fox's recently announced plans to move the X-File's shooting location from Vancouver, B.C., to Los Angeles, Calif., something first Duchovny and then Anderson had demanded. Duchovny has said he would like to be closer to his L.A.-based wife and The Naked Truth star T=E9a Leoni, while Anderson is said to be interested in pursuing a movie career, which would all but require a move to L.A.

In still more Files news, today Fox announced that an interactive road show based on the series--dubbed "The X-Files Expo"--will begin a 10-city U.S. tour in March. "The Expo will be a place for people who like the show to get together and have a great time," said X-Files creator Chris Carter.

The tour is tentatively scheduled for the following dates and cities: San Francisco, March 6-8; Los Angeles, March 13-15; Dallas, March 20-22; Atlanta, March 27-29; Miami, April 3-5; Chicago, April 17-19; Detroit, April 24-26; Boston, May 1-3; New York, May 8-10; and Washington, D.C., May 15-17. Tickets for the tour go on sale Jan. 20 and can be purchased through Ticketmaster by calling 1-888-397-6849 or online by visiting <http://www.thex-files.com>.

King, Gibson Pen X-Files Episodes

Best-selling authors William Gibson and Stephen King have each co-written upcoming episodes of The X-Files that will air on Fox during the crucial February Nielsen sweeps month, according to published reports. Gibson, best known for his groundbreaking SF novel Neuromancer, penned his script--about the bizarre death of a computer genius--with fellow SF author Tom Maddox.

Meanwhile, horror guru King co-wrote the episode "Chinga" with none other than X-Files creator Chris Carter. Their story takes FBI agent Dana Scully on vacation to King's home state of Maine, where she discovers people suffering from self-inflicted wounds, apparently at the direction of a young girl. The episode is slated to air on Feb. 8.

In addition to these special episodes, Fox will air a behind-the-scenes X-Files feature on Feb. 1, which may feature scenes from the upcoming Files movie, according to TV Guide.

U-Haul Creates Roswell Tribute Truck

Today U-Haul International Inc. unveiled a new U-Haul truck image that pays homage to what many believe was a UFO crash landing that took place in Roswell, N.M., in 1947. The graphic, which will adorn the side of about 300 U-Haul trucks in service, depicts a UFO, a large alien figure pining for home, and the slogan "What happened in Roswell?"

The Roswell truck graphic was created in conjunction with the International UFO Museum and Research Center as part of U-Haul's "Salute to America" campaign, and a special version of the image with the tag line "Everyone has to move sometime" will be donated to the museum for permanent display. In honor of the event, which included the unveiling of the first UFO U-Haul truck in front of the museum, Roswell Mayor Tom Jennings proclaimed Jan. 12 "U-Haul UFO Day" in his city.

"It's a euphoric feeling here in Roswell," Jennings told Sci-Fi Wire by phone from the unveiling ceremony. "It looks great."

The Truth Behind 'The X-Files'
Bill Bradley

Not just any TV show on UFOs could land the No. 1 spot among Bay Area viewers ages 18-49. (The show is most popular here and ironically, in Washington, D.C.) Could it be that the adventures of FBI agents Fox Mulder and Dana Scully reflect not so much fanciful fiction but indeed real life: the truth is out there, and trust no one?

"The X-Files" engages deep anxieties among us about double-talk and conspiracy, reflecting a profound distrust of big institutions -- governmental, corporate and media. (Interestingly, the press plays no role in the show, presumably because the agents view it as clueless or bought off.)

The officially sanctioned double-talk of everyday corporate and political life -- in which a call for "honest communication" often means anything but -- has already made "Dilbert" a growth industry and tech support a national joke. It takes a decidedly sinister turn in "The X-Files"; the agents are countered at nearly every turn by cleverly bland lies followed by terminal force. In a line that's been applied to the Washington fund-raising scandals, one of the agents' enigmatic informants notes, "They only have one policy: 'Deny everything.' "

That might sound disconcertingly familiar to a lot of Americans -- "X-Files" fans and otherwise. What's behind the official denial? Well, in Mulder and Scully's universe, the double-talk of official lies is the bodyguard of sinister conspiracies. And that motive doesn't seem too laughable to a lot of us -- not in a country where 75 percent of those polled believe that John F. Kennedy was the victim of a conspiracy.

"The X-Files" promises to become even more nefarious, and we love that, too. As its popularity has skyrocketed over the past four-plus years, the show's themes of conspiracy and coverups involving aliens, technology, and elements of the national security apparatus and private industry have sharpened. The trailer for this summer's movie, called "The X-Files: Fight the Future," declares: "For years, the world has seen reality distorted, facts manipulated and truths hidden. But there's even more to the story than anyone has ever suspected."

Again, we can relate to that. The show has already depicted conspirators nefariously compiling a genetic catalog of the U.S. population -- something that may have crossed the minds of some folks at the real-life Human Genome Project -- and conducting secret experiments on Americans using aerial spraying, mysteriously programmed electronic devices, a biological weapon, and sinister TV signals not that dissimilar, really, from the cartoon that caused seizures in Japanese children recently. One can only imagine what more there might be for Mulder and Scully -- and for us, too.

This is tremendously paranoid stuff. But it's also perfectly pitched to the tone of the late '90s, which is, on the one hand, placid and undemanding, reflecting the elite corporate, political and media consensus. But the mood is also one of suspicion about the present and anxiety about the future.

We've come to accept corruption and conspiracy as a matter of course, but we're still uncomfortable with it. Last year's 25th anniversary of the Watergate break-in was a bust for the simple reason that most Americans believe that Watergate-level corruption and conspiracy are now par for the course in U.S. politics.

President Clinton has high poll numbers, but many Americans despise the political culture he represents. It's a form of cultural cognitive dissonance. "The X-Files" represents the discordant notes. Indeed, there is something more than a little disquieting about the naive old belief in One Big Union being replaced by the paranoid new belief in One Big Conspiracy. If the fix really is in, it's not illogical to conclude that there's nothing to be done other than settle back in one's seat and root for the Mulders and Scullys of the world as they "fight the evil that would otherwise overcome us," as Mulder puts it.

There's just one thing. They wouldn't like that.

Yesterday I conducted an email interview with a Swiss citizen who saw a UFO over Kimsar, a town in the Rajasthan desert about 450 miles southwest of New Delhi in India.

The sighting took place on December 24, 1997, at 11 p.m. New Delhi time. Eyewitnesses included two Swiss adults, four Swiss children, and 12 residents of Kimsar, both Hindu and Muslim. Not an American in the bunch.

So tell us again, Terry, how UFOs are never seen in India...

Current-Encounters: Portage County, Ohio

From: slk <slk@EVANSVILLE.NET>
Date: Fri, 16 Jan 1998 12:01:50 -0600
Fwd Date: Sat, 17 Jan 1998 08:19:16 -0500
Subject: Current-Encounters: Portage County, Ohio

Here is the Portage County, Ohio (Spauer/Neff Case), CE-1, located at:

<http://www.evansville.net/~slk/portage.htm>

on InterLink:UFO at "Casebook" at "1966".

PORTAGE COUNTY POLICE CHASE
Date: April 17, 1966
Portage County, Ohio

(If this incident seems to be familiar to you, just maybe you saw the motion picture, "Close Encounters of the Third Kind". This report, also known as the Spauer/Neff Case, was the basis for the UFO "chase" in this film. F.R.)

One of the most dramatic encounters by police officers with an apparently structured, low-level UFO occurred in the early morning of April 17, 1966. Officers of the Portage County, Ohio, Sheriff's Department first saw the object rise up from near ground level, bathing them in light, near Ravenna, Ohio, about 5:00 A.M. Ordered by the sergeant to pursue the object, they chased it for eighty-five miles across the border into Pennsylvania, as it seemed to play a cat-and-mouse game with them. Along the route, police officers from other jurisdictions saw the object and joined in the chase.

Deputy Sheriff Dale Spaur and Mounted Deputy Wilbur 'Barney' Neff had left their scout car to investigate an apparently abandoned automobile on Route 224. Spaur described the sighting in these words:

"I always look behind me so no one can come up behind me. And when I looked in this wooded area behind us, I saw this thing. At this time it was coming up... to about tree top level. I'd say about one hundred feet. It started moving toward us.... As it came over the trees, I looked at Barney and he was still watching the car... and he didn't say nothing and the thing kept getting brighter and the area started to get light. ... I told him to look over his shoulder, and he did.

"He just stood there with his mouth open for a minute, as bright as it was, and he looked down. And started looking down and I looked at my hands and my clothes weren't burning or anything, when it stopped right over on top of us. The only thing, the only sound in the whole area was a hum... like a transformer being loaded or an overloaded transformer when it changes....

"I was petrified, and, uh, so I moved my right foot, and everything seemed to work all right. And evidently he made the same decision I did, to get something between me and it, or us and it, or whatever you would say. So we both went for the car, we got in the car and we sat there...."

As they watched, the UFO moved toward the east, and then stopped again. Spaur picked up the microphone and reported to the dispatcher. At this time, the object was about 250 feet away, brilliantly lighting up the area ("It was very bright; it'd make your eyes water," Spaur said.) Sergeant Schoenfelt, off duty at the station, told them to follow it and keep it under observation while they tried to get a photo unit to the scene.

Spear and Neff turned south on Route 183, then back east on Route 224, which placed the object to their right, and out the left window. "At this time," said Spaur. "it came straight south, just one motion, buddy, just a smooth glide... "and began moving east with them pacing it, just to their right at an estimated altitude of 300-500 feet, illuminating the ground beneath it. Once more the UFO darted to the north, now left of the car, and they sped up to over 100 mph to keep pace with it.

As the sky became brighter with predawn light, Spaur and Neff saw the UFO in silhouette, with a vertical projection at its rear. The object began to take on a metallic appearance as the chase continued. Spaur kept up a running conversation with other police cars that were trying to catch up with them. Once when they made a wrong turn at an intersection, the object stopped, then turned and came back to their position.

Police Officer Wayne Huston of East Palestine, Ohio, situated near the Pennsylvania border, had been monitoring the radio broadcasts and was parked at an intersection he knew the Portage County officers would be passing soon. Shortly afterward he saw the UFO pass by with the sheriff's cruiser in hot pursuit. He swung out and joined the chase. At Conway, Pennsylvania, Spaur spotted another parked police car and stopped to enlist his aid, since their Cruiser was almost out of gas. The Pennsylvania officer called his dispatcher.

According to Spaur, as the four officers stood and watched the UFO, which had stopped and was hovering, there was traffic on the radio about jets being scrambled to chase the UFO, and ". . . we could see these planes coming in... When they started talking about fighter planes, it was just as if that thing head every word that was said; it went PSSSSSHHEW, straight up; and I mean when it went up, friend, it didn't play no games; it went straight up" (Transcript of taped interview with Dale Spaur).

The Air Force "identified" the UFO as a satellite, seen part of the time, and confused with the planet Venus. Under pressure from Ohio officials, Major Hector Quintanilla, chief of PROJECT BLUE BOOK, had an acrimonious confrontation with witnesses and refused to change the identification, although it was pointed out to him that they had seen the UFO in addition to Venus and the moon at the conclusion of the observation. Major Quintanilla also denied that any jets had been scrambled.

William B. Weitzel conducted an exhaustive investigation on behalf of the NATIONAL INVESTIGATIONS COMMITTEE ON AERIAL PHENOMENA (NICAP), obtaining taped interviews, signed statements, sketches, and all pertinent data which was assembled into a massive report that was made available to congressional investigators. When the UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO UFO PROJECT was initiated in 1966, a copy of Weitzel's report was hand-delivered to the director, Dr. Edward U. CONDON, for his consideration. The CONDON REPORT, published two years later, does not mention the case.

Are you suggesting that Marcel altered his testimony as a result the interviews with Moore and Friedman? Like perhaps Bill or Stan "suggested" that perhaps it would be better to call the
"structural members" I-beams?

You're right, Karl, them hucksters in Roswell were so dumb in blowing this all out of proportion. Why, you would think that when handed some light, rigid strange struts, they would have been a little more creative in comparing it to something familiar. Really, couldn't one of them compare it to, say, extruded anodized aluminum tent poles? Or fiberglass plant stakes? Maybe at least one could have compared them to carbon fiber composite fish poles. Why didn't one of these yokels compare these weird struts to aluminized polycarbonate? Damn fools, why you would think that Balsa Wood was the only commonly known feather light construction material available at the time. And we all know how deceptive Balsa Wood can be. Its very hard to bend it and break it. The military was always machining it to a smooth finish and painting it with a hard metallic coating. You can't mark it with your thumbnail or small tools. After you pound on it, it always regains its shape. And it is so hard to set it on fire. And of course, you can't blame some hayseed for being confused when the broken ends don't reveal any grain or pores or rings. If only they would have been smart enough to really recognize balsa wood when they saw it, why we wouldn't have to be bothered talking about this neoprene and Rawin target retrieval.

Thanks for clearing this up for me, Karl...

Bye... Ted..

G'day Mark and List,

>That being the case, I am not sure what we gain by asserting the >TTH.

I have been unable to catch up with my email until today so these comments are probably a bit late but I think that they are well worth making. Now I must confess that discussion of time paradoxes goes well over my head so if I make a totally dumb statement just smile and pat me on my head and I'll go back to the sand pit but I don't think that we should dismiss the TTH lightly.

In defence of that statement let me ask a general question of the list. Do we have any indication of advancements in alien technology over the years since they began appearing on this planet?

What brings that to mind is the repetitive sightings of similar craft over centuries. For example, cigar shaped craft have been depicted in woodcuts from Germany crafted during the Dark Age/Renaissance period and very similar craft are still appearing today. Does that faintly support stagnant technology or time travel? I don't know but it is worth pondering.

<snip>

>ETH - we know life exists in the universe, that intelligent life >non-human beings. UFOs come from the sky and return to the sky in >a significant proportion of cases. The obvious suggestion is that >UFOs are from another world somewhere in space.

Mark, this may be an obvious suggestion but we should not allow it to blind ourselves to other possibilities. Put yourself in the shoes (or bare feet :> ) of a villager in the wilds of the Amazon, or New Guinea or somewhere similar that has only had minimal contact with more advanced human cultures. Their contact may be with people who fly in, spend a few days interacting with the village and then fly out again, the visitors come from the sky, possess incredible technology and return to the sky and in that context how would the villagers view these outsiders? Now we know where they come from but to the villagers it may well appear as ET's do to us. In fact the analogy of the villagers is probably quite applicable to us when our, despite what Corso claims, our technology is so almost stone age in comparison to that of the ET's.

Now don't get me wrong, I like to think that I'm not "off with the fairies" when considering UFOs/Aliens but the more I look at this phenomena the more I am beginning to feel that the things on which we base our investigations of UFOs/Aliens is probably like looking at the world through welders goggles. Our view is hindered by our preconcieved ideas of what was, what is and what should be.

Stuart

Subject: Frances Emma Barwood Campaign for Secretary of

To all list members and beyond:

The national press release for the launching of the Frances Emma Barwood campaign for Secretary of State of Arizona is reprinted below.

Ms. Barwood is a conservative Republican, former Phoenix City Councilwoman who is running on principal for state office. She is a courageous and forthright public servant with broad appeal.

She will be facing formidable opposition which will be heavily financed.

We are going to reach out to the millions of concerned Americans in cyberspace who believe that full disclosure of the government posture relating to the 50-year history of sightings and other anomalous phenomena is in the best interest of the public and our constitutional system.

A temporary website has been published at: www.anagramvideo.com

Soon there will be a permanent site at:
www.francesemmabarwood.com

While many may not agree with the full range of Ms. Barwood's views, many will recognize the overarching and transcendent implications of her willingness to take on the UFO enigma and lack of proper government response as a viable candidate for high office.

She needs your support.

Financial contributions may be sent to:

Barwood Election Committee
P. O. Box 86189
Phoenix, AZ 85080-6189

By Arizona State law, all contributions must be accompanied by:

- 1) name
- 2) address
- 3) occupation
- 4) employer

and may not exceed $760 per individual.

The success of Ms. Barwood's campaign could result in a sea change in American politics in which dozens of other public servants shed their fear and step forward to address this issue on behalf of their constituents. History is being made in 1998. Please consider being a material part of these events.

Thank you,

Please feel free to forward and repost this request.

*** FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE ***

January 1, 1998 -- Washington, DC -- Former Phoenix City Councilwoman Frances Emma Barwood will hold a press conference from noon to 1 p.m. on January 13, 1998 at the Hyatt Regency Phoenix, 122 North 2nd Street, Phoenix, AZ.

At this time Ms. Barwood will formally announce her intentions to seek the office of Secretary of State of Arizona. Supporters from throughout Arizona and the United States will be in attendance.

Ms. Barwood, who is well known for her stance on constitutional matters, states' rights and open, truthful government, will elaborate on her intentions to make a campaign issue of the substantive evidence for the possible intelligent extraterrestrial presence within state and national airspace as well as the failure of the federal government to respect public demands for a proper response. It is the first time a viable candidate for high office, state or national, has formally raised this issue within a campaign.

Ms. Barwood's attention to the UFO issue and the government's posture began with the extraordinary sightings of objects and lights above Phoenix in and around March 13 of last year. The failure of Arizona based federal military facilities to adequately respond to citizen queries led her to raise the matter in City Council session. While the events of March 13 were already receiving national attention, the mere action of calling for a proper investigation resulted in a firestorm of personal attacks. During this same period a recall effort which had been pending moved to a vote. This effort failed when Ms. Barwood won the recall election by a margin of two to one.

During the intervening months Councilwoman Barwood took the time to speak with researchers and witnesses and familiarize herself with the most recent published works on the subject of unidentified sightings and other possible extraterrestrial related phenomena. It became clear to her that this is an issue of state and national significance which cannot in good conscience be ignored by a responsible candidate for high office.

At the January 13 press conference Ms. Barwood will also introduce co-managers for her campaign: one who will focus on the relevant state issues, the other who will assist her in bringing the UFO issue to the citizens of Arizona in a professional, intelligent fashion.

From Larry Hatch [*U* UFO DATABASE]

Dear Don, Terry and all:

My *U* Database lists some 16,580 sightings these days.

Of these, 111 were in Japan, and Japanese data are hard to come by!

I only have 12 sightings in Taiwan for the same reason, but one of these is a landing .. In Chia-Li, Taiwan, on 13 June, 1981 .. a semi-transparent cone shaped object landed for a while around 1700 hours, local time.

Oh, I know that I'm obnoxious <g>. Conscience usually is. I read and see conclusions the elitist would dismiss. I'm not a bleeding liberal but I'm inclusive as the devil and I know our game's unfairly played -- it's canted, shaped, and beveled! I accept that there are criminals. I accept they should be blamed for a lack of real innocence that they've lied about and claimed. But, that's a sword that cuts two ways, and just as well for both. Who IS the real criminal, and then we see the joke!

The system goes beyond _just_ pale and trifles with the lives of those that *inconvenience* men I've learned we should despise. These men don't walk among us. They don't live like you and me. They do not fly the same blue sky that's free for them, you see. They tally up their ill got gain that's stolen from your children; they're never late to obfuscate enigma that's been building. Thirty Thousand starve a day to lube the lives of these. They are the length and breadth and depth -- the very quality, our disease. Point them out as you can find them, they're the ones you should deplore, and risk the fate of one who asked -- You guessed it! Johnny Ford <g>.

You want to hear some foolishness you're expected to believe? The strangest thing that anyone could think of, or conceive! Bad enough for _one man's_ madness (hot atomic toothpaste!?! ) but we're to eat that _three_ conspired; that's madness gone too far, too great!

THREE men were that crazy? Three men saw that way? Three men left their brains at home, then thought they'd get away? Nonsense is my proffer!
Nonsense I decry! Three engaged this foolishness? Then pigs and monkeys fly!

I've said it before and I'll say it yet again: the whole of this mess -- incredulity distends! It _looks_ all put up -- elitist skullduggery, the facts of this case are contrived, its check's rubbery! It's a dog that won't hunt! It's a brick shy a load. It's a mire of "old boys" and political toads!
Who are these doctors who claimed him unfit? Where is their consult, did they make it up quick? Let's ALL hear the TAPE of their *STING* operation. Let's ALL hear John laugh at the show they were taping!

John -- keep your head as you value your soul. You'll soon be released from their cruel, unjust hole. You'll once again walk on your canvass of streets (!), stitching tattered evidence into cloth from their deceit? You'll campaign, the truest warrior, to banish your night once again my good friend; it's your honor -- your right!

Lehmborg@snowhill.com

I would prefer to believe that these machines of county government always act in ethical, inclusive, and even handed ways -- but too often they do not.
Many individuals have been ground up in the gears of these cruel mechanizations to fuel short term goals that readily detract from the ethical behavior of all concerned.

But who does what to whom, first?

We've all heard the stories of cold fusion, zero point energy capture -- even Newman engines. We hear rumors of miraculous cures from endangered plants, or simple paints that stop all electromagnetic radiation. These enigmas are never adequately discredited, and reappear from time to time with tantalizing and teasing regularity. All of these anomalies we hear about, but never quite realize, share a characteristic, perhaps, that dooms them. They all point back to an actualization of more individual autonomy. Let me say that again; they all point back to an actualization of more individual autonomy. That's the key point.

Individual autonomy is, and always has been, dangerous to the man who must keep you on his meter to keep you in control. An autonomous person is not a controlled person. You say it can't happen in America? I don't think it likely it can happen efficiently anywhere else. Washington, Hamilton, and Jefferson et. al. wrote the rules like that from the very beginning. Take a turn through Jefferson's Federalist Papers #10, if you don't believe me. Find out the real reasons for Shay's Rebellion.

"America has always been about protecting the haves from the have not's," says Dr. Michael Parenti of Harvard University.

John Ford would have what he does not now have -- freedom, a government of fidelity, straight answers ("though heavens fall") to the intriguing questions of our time, and the restoration of his good and honorable name. The 'man' will work hard to keep these things from him, and us.

And any one of our number that points a finger at John Ford in desultory, insulting, and titillating criticism points THREE fingers back at themselves. John's politics, manner, priority, or appearance are not the issue in this matter. His circumstances (he's cleaner than ANY of the Bushes, I'm betting), and extremely suspect incarceration, ARE.

RESTORE John Ford!

Attached below is a list of sightings reported over Japan,

Have you read about the secret military "flying wing" called the "Blimp?" Art Bell's first UFO sighting, that forever changed the character of his show, answers to this description. He says the craft was definitely "floating" through the air.

According to the Federation of American Scientists (<http://www.fas.org/irp/mystery/blimp.htm>):

*****

"A very intriguing aircraft was been reported in the late 1980s.
Some observers claim to have witnessed a vast black flying wing, estimated at between 600 and 800 feet in width, passing silently over city streets in California. The craft moved so slowly one observer claimed that he could jog along with it. The aircraft reportedly executed bizarre maneuvers in which it stopped, rotated in place and hovered vertically, pointing its thin trailing edge toward the ground. This vehicle's unlikely gyrations suggest that it is distinct from the other sightings, and could be a lighter-than-air craft pushed by slow- turning propellers."

*****

Even if it's not lighter-than-air, it seems possible that a large cross-section-to-mass ratio, ultra-light materials, and advanced aerodynamic contours could enable a heavier-than-air craft to float in the observed manner. My point is that a craft behaving this way would not necessarily need an antigravity device.

There may be religious fundamentalists who believe earth is the only planet supporting life, but the mainstream skeptical position actually holds that the universe is probably teeming with life. According to this position, astronomical distances, the speed-of-light limitation, and the lack of irrefutable evidence indicate that it is unlikely we are being visited. Since this position can be cogently attacked, there is no need to set up a straw man.

Kind regards,

Keith

Neil,

The only connection is that the cameraman supposedly says that this is the Roswell event. I was told that he says he was at Roswell a month later when "some rancher" found some stuff that had been missed earlier and "all hell broke loose".

The obvious differences invalidate this comparison. The fairy photos were still photographs done by two sisters. The AA film is full motion and involves at least five people, probably more.
For every person who is added to the hoax, the probability that someone will spill the beans increases exponentially.

UFO*BC Report - UFO Crash In Chile?

From: boliver@Direct.CA (Bill Oliver)
Date: Sat, 17 Jan 1998 08:41:38 -0800
Fwd Date: Sat, 17 Jan 1998 19:53:57 -0500
Subject: UFO*BC Report - UFO Crash In Chile?

List,

UFO*BC received a letter from a friend who previously lived in the Vancouver area now living in Chile. The following article is from the latest issue of UFO*BC Quarterly and we post it here for you to read and welcome your feedback. Check out our site for the latest activity in British Columbia at <http://www.ufobc.org>

A Chilean Andes "Fender Bender"
by Graham Conway, 3-Jan-98

In 1995, a Chilean mining prospector of Japanese descent was in the mountains when a large shiny UFO appeared above. It was about 30 metres in diameter. The craft hovered and then moved closer to the mountain. This maneuver caused the vehicle to graze the hillside, creating a flare in the soil. Barely negotiating the hillside it ascended before disappearing from view. The witness, J.T., went to the impact site and was able to recover four chunks of an unknown material weighing about 3 kgs.

We have been informed that this account did not appear in the local or national press. A variety of organizations displayed a keen interest in the recovered metal, namely NASA, U.S, Air Force, Chilean Air Force, plus various scientists and investigators. Pieces were sent to Japan for analysis. Our Chilean informant stated his own opinion, as follows:

The objects are extraordinary in shape and in looks; with all my experience in mining and metallurgy, (I am a graduated mining technician of a Chilean University), I have never seen any metal that is or behaves like that in the laboratory or at eyesight.

First, according to the Japanese that studied the metal, it is composed of 12 (first analysis) and 22 (second analysis) elements, bonded and molten into one homogeneous mass, that breaks in unusual fracturing, much like an irregularly shaped - river polished rock type of thing - metal. I hope you get the drift. The metal actually looks like Platinum or Silver; it has Nickel, Aluminum, Zinc, and other gray metals, however it was deemed to be + - 68% Copper; the unusual thing is that:

- a) Does not conduct electricity at all; a wired rod applied to its surface, only creates a field of sparks that dissipates outward and rebounds; thus, if you place your hand in the opposite end, electricity does not touch you(!) and is Silver like in colour, no copper red!
- b) It can not be detected or identified by radar!
- c) It is not radioactive or responsive to a metal detector?
- d) some faces are so well polished that it looks like steel, and it does not have sharp edges at all, even when fractured.
- e) Pieces do not fit with each other, what makes me assume that there may be others to be retrieved; we will make a new exploration expedition to the site this spring. One of them is exquisite in shape and thin.

- f) It does not melt over 1500 degrees Celsius/over 1 hr. exposure.
- g) Did not react to Nitric acid from 5% to concentrate exposure, Sulphuric acid 5% to concentrate, Picric acid 5% to concentrate, all the possible combinations amongst the three acids above over 30 minutes exposure.

Conclusion : Unknown material not harmed by acids(!) under microscopic observation from 100 to 1000 magnifying tests.

It would seem that the witness to this described event was also abducted some time later. But not before the UFO had visited and hovered over his home many times. As a result of his interaction with these visitors and his ensuing experiences, he has written a short booklet. It comes as no great surprise to learn he has been assigned a mission to inform our planet's inhabitants to respect each other, love and live in harmony with our neighbours.

I hope I don't sound too cynical when I point out that this is not a new message, by any means. Therefore I must conclude that the senders are more than a tad fed up with our very evident lack of attention and demonstrated response. Anyway, "if you don't succeed at first", etc.....

Mr. J.T. however seems to have gotten lucky in a direction seldom accorded to other lucky(?) abductees. Not only was he taken on a Cook's tour of the visitor's planet but he awoke with two soil samples and two metallic looking pebbles. on which our informant comments as follows:

I checked the soil and the pebbles with my Geologist lens and this is my assessment :

- a) fertile like soil: Apparent composition is extremely fertile, some traces of turquoise (copper) is observed, dark like top soil, granular as earth, very interesting. Opinion : very fertile soil.
- b) Sand like soil: Apparent composition is a very un-earth like sand, composed of yellow crystals like zircon or rutile (titanium) 15%, flakelike chalcites much like silica over 30%, Copper like turquoise 15% and other rare earths.

Opinion: very strange mixture, hard to duplicate (all vials contain no more than 10 grams.)

- c) metallic like piece fingernail size: Apparent composition: Native Copper; looks like a fibrous asbestos???

Opinion: impossible to classify according to earth like matter.

- d) metallic like pebble: one side is metallic like with iridescence like molten metal with outer rim golden and purple tinted center, thin as an orange skin, the other side looks corrugated and porous.

Opinion: hard to reproduce under normal circumstances, first of its kind ever observed by me; looks metallic on one side and non-metallic on the other side.

- e) Green liquid (like mint liquor) with sediments inside (20/30 milliliter), viscosity like petroleum leaves the glass of the vile with a tint like odin, the sediments are white. Apparently serves as catalyst to detect the metal composition?

Opinion: hard to imagine and impossible to give an educated guess. Out of my league!!!!

Our Chilean informant also goes on to describe the circumstances experienced by another mining prospector who was returning from the Andes with his three children asleep in his vehicle. It seems that Mr. A.G.D. was intercepted by a UFO and its occupants. He described how the E.T.s roamed around his truck with "laser type guns". They fired at rocks, resulting in them achieving a transparent look. The visitors seemed to jump, walk or float rapidly. His engine died and he tried to move down hill with the aid of gravity. Looking in his rear view mirror he became the unfortunate recipient of a "laser" blast. This resulted in him becoming blind for almost six months. Mr. D. was only able to negotiate his way down the mountain by touching the edge of the hill with his truck wheels.

The forgoing account is only a synopsis of the principal events reported from a region where UFO stories are a regular occurrence, seen and described by a wide variety of reliable residents. We have taken steps to obtain additional information regarding this landmark case. Should we be fortunate to receive further confirmatory evidence, we look forward to publishing it in the not too distant future.

In conclusion, our sincere thanks go out to Jorge R. Lopehenda, of Santiago, Chile, for providing this story and permission to relate it to our readers.

Of course, the legal interpretation of the laws on the books (which tend to be extremely conservative) may not directly relate to how they are enforced. People exceed the legal speed limit on our highways, and enforcement is often spotty. The same tends to hold true for copyrighted materials on the Internet. To a great extent, I would suspect that it depends on whether the material is being used for profit, and/or whether the profits of the actual owner of the intellectual property are impacted by the "theft".

I tend to err on the conservative side, and will point to URLs where material can be found, rather than cut and paste it into a posting. However, I've noted that often the moderator of the lists will actually place the text in my posting. This is helpful for those who don't have Web Browser access, who are otherwise left out.

I have a great deal of trouble with this notion. Each branching in the Universe.

As much as I would want to timetravel, I can't help but feel that Past and Future are simply mental constructs.

G'day Stuart...

I take your point of course, but it could go either way. Trees and sharks are examples of things that have stayed essentially the same for millions of years because they have attained the optimum shape for doing what they do. And, like nature, we can only improve things until we cannot make them any better. The wheel has stayed round because that is the most efficient shape for it. It doesn't mean that the technology of the wheel is stagnating. Spacecraft probably have a most efficient shape as well, based on their function, their method and materials of construction, and propulsion. It might change and it might not.
It doesn't necessarily support the TTH either, unless you are suggesting that only one group of time travelers exist, or that THEIR technology is stagnant....

Aloha

Mind Scan Paradox

Subject: Mind Scan Paradox

<=====
T.R.I. Website Changes and System Upgrade
=====>

The Respond.txt document dealing with resistance to alien abduction has been greatly expanded and seriously written by John Archer, D.Ph. (Doctor of Phenomenology), and it has been incorporated into the website I maintain for the Trionic Research Institute: The URL is <http://www.trionica.com/response.htm>

Respond.txt is still available in a plain vanilla form from ASP-L by sending the command 'Get-Respond.txt' (without quotes but with the file extension) in the Subject: field of a msg to the list address: nightflyer@mindspring.com

However, as soon as technical difficulties can be resolved, it will be incorporated into the ASP FAQ and placed into T.R.I.'s autoresponder, info@trionica.com. It will then be available at any time not just when I'm on-line.

<====Reshma Kamal Defeats Aliens by Spiritual Technique=====>

One new section of "Respond" is titled: "Reshma Kamal Defeats Alien Mindscan with Arabic Religious Phrase while Moving her Eyes Rapidly".

Archer writes:

In his new book, The Threat, Dr. David M. Jacobs presents his case for the view that abductees are involuntary participants in a 'Breeding Program' conducted by aliens. Naturally, the aliens need to control the involuntary human participants in this program.

Without the ability to manipulate the human brain, the aliens would be unable to control the abductees physically or mentally and the Breeding Program would not be feasible in its present form.

Dr. Jacobs postulates that the dreaded 'Mindscan' procedure, a feature of many abductee reports, allows the aliens to control the humans by 'somehow' giving the aliens access to the abductee's optic nerve and those sections of the brain to which it is linked. By exercising this control over the abductee's brain, the aliens acquire the power to make the abductees see, hear or feel whatever illusions the aliens present to them.

Notice the paradox? If Dr Jacobs postulates that aliens use this power of illusion to delude abductees selected to participate in the alleged breeding program then nothing in abductee reports may be relied on.

But Dr Jacobs relies exclusively on Abductee reports to support his thesis that aliens are conducting a breeding program with abductees who need to be controlled by this power of illusion.

Anyway, Dr Jacobs reports one case where the nefarious plans of these high tech mental giants were defeated by means that may be of interest to others.

But another abductee successfully resisted mental engagement.

During a recent abduction, Reshama Kamal found that she had more muscle control than usual and she used it to prevent a neural connection. She shifted her eyes back and forth rapidly while reciting an Arabic religious phrase. The first alien tried to lock into her eyes but could not. He diverted her attention by causing a pain in her head, and he threatened not to take her home, but she refused to give in. Another alien took over and increased the threats. Still she refused to stop, although she was getting dizzy moving her eyes back and forth. A third alien tried, and then a fourth. They could not stop her from shifting her eyes. Eventually they gave up and said that they would continue the procedure at the next abduction.

[Jacobs, David M. (1998). "The Threat --- The Secret Agenda: What the Aliens Really Want ... And How They Plan to Get It". New York: Simon & Schuster. p. 87]

<snip>

If my theory is correct that Alien Abduction Experiences, AAEs, occur when the brain is in its REM-sleep state and the body is in the corresponding state of REM-state paralysis, but the consciousness is nevertheless aware, then there is no mystery as to why Ms Kamal was able to move her eyes. The eyes are not subject to the paralyzing signal! She might have become conscious of their movements and that may have assisted her, but it would seem that the effectiveness of her resistance came mainly from her recitation of the Arabic religious phrase.

<=====My Experiences with Frozen Eyelids=====>

Has anyone noticed the movements of their eyes during an episode of ASP?

Dr. Jacobs does not indicate whether Ms Kamal had her eyes open or closed while moving them about as she recited the phrase (which was not published either)

While some ASP experiencers report being able to open their eyes and see their surrounding --- which may be accurate or slightly altered --- I have never been able to do this. I 'come to' in a state of total blackness *already* struggling to open my eyes.

Somehow, it seems significant to me that the struggle precedes the awareness.

Anyway, when I am relaxed I might look within and 'up' and see a distant light. I'm a little hazy on what follows but it seems that in attending to the light I cease to attend to the feelings of bodily immobility and I end up in a non-lucid dream that is not remarkable except for having followed an episode of frozen eyelids.

In other cases, I imagine myself running in the blackness. I 'receive' and feel the feelings of running, but my body does not move. Sometimes (not often) consciousness or awareness suddenly becomes situated in the 'running me' rather than in the 'frozen eyelid me' and I proceed to enter a dream scene knowing it is a dream.

Comments?

Joe Polanik <jpolanik@mindspring.com>
Moderator, ASP-L

<=====What is ASP-L All About?=====>

Have you ever found yourself lying fully conscious or in a dreamlike state, unable to move or cry out, while perhaps experiencing auditory or visual phenomena? If so, you have experienced Awareness during Sleep Paralysis [ASP].

ASP-L is a mailing list for the discussion of Awareness during Sleep Paralysis [ASP] and experiences with which it has been associated: Lucid Dreaming, Out-of-Body Experiencing, Alien Abductions, Old Hag Attacks and Supernatural assaults such as the Incubus/Succubus assault.

ASP experiencers feel intense fear and may even believe that they are dying. Experiencers often sense the presence of an unseen, malevolent being. An episode of ASP can occur while the body sleeps in any position, but it is much more likely while sleeping on one's back. Often experiencers feel the pressure of a crushing weight on their chest as if being pushed downward into the bed. A few sense a what seems to be a phantom being sitting on their chest. They may be unable to feel the breathing process continue, but those who see their chest can see it continue to inhale and exhale --- they just don't feel it as the body has gone to sleep and the awareness has lost contact with sensory input from the body.

The name of the list reflects the fact that everyone experiences sleep paralysis every time they cycle into REM sleep, about every 90 minutes of every night. What's remarkable in some cases is that the consciousness retains a degree of Awareness while the body descends into the paralysis of the REM state.

You may subscribe to ASP-L to discuss: how to resist Alien Abduction or other psychic assaults, how to turn the unpleasant experience of ASP into the pleasant experience of a lucid dream or Out-of-Body Experience or other issues related to Awareness during Sleep Paralysis.

To subscribe to ASP-L send an email msg with the word 'Subscribe' (without quotes) in the Subject: field to the list address: nightflyer@mindspring.com.

Neil,

The video and story package was always supposed to relate to the Roswell case.

As Ray Santilli confirmed in his original statement, published on the "Roswell Centre" web site:

"The cameraman asked if I would be interested in publishing outright very valuable footage taken during his time in the forces. He explained that the footage in question came from the Roswell crash that it included debris and recovery footage and of most importance autopsy footage".

The following extract from "The Manikin Who Fell to Earth" article may help explain this further:

* The Roswell Perspective *

It isn't necessarily the case that the original intention was a hoax based on the Roswell story, the bow-legged, muscular, six-fingered, pot-bellied creature bearing no resemblance to perceptions of the bodies some spoke of seeing at Roswell.

Additional to the "alien autopsy" film, Santilli has released some "debris" footage, which shows six fingered "control panels" and "I-beams" with "hieroglyphics". This footage is the only tie-in with the Roswell incident, the I-beams with hieroglyphics being a unique and distinctive feature reported from the wreckage recovered from the Foster ranch in July 1947.

The "Roswell debris" footage could have been a subsequent addition to increase the market value of what was simply envisaged as an "alien autopsy", however, if it was never intended to relate to Roswell, that doesn't explain the use of contemporary 1947 props.

One of Ray Santilli's earliest explanations of the film's claimed origins was in an article for the French magazine Phenomena. On 8 April, 1995, Santilli told the magazine:

"Our cameraman states that the event in Roswell occurred about one month before it was announced in the press. What happened was that the vehicle did crash and they were sent there to film and to clear up the area. The whole area was totally cleaned up. And then, purely by accident, a small piece of debris was found in an area that had been cleaned up and when that was found, the military had to go back in to the area again. That was a couple of weeks after the main event happened".

Where the "cameraman's story" differs, is in the claim that the autopsies took place at Fort Worth, Dallas between the 1st and 3rd of July 1947 and before the dates given in various accounts of bodies having being seen.

Central to the belief that autopsies on small, four fingered creatures had been carried out at the Roswell base was the testimony of Glenn Dennis, the local mortician. Dennis revealed that an Army Nurse at the base had confided how she had been asked to participate in the autopsies of the severely damaged bodies. Shortly thereafter, she was transferred to England and he was later informed that the Army Nurse, a "close friend", had been killed in an air crash.

Dennis had always seemed the most reliable and conservative of witnesses, but recently Kevin Randle, one of the foremost researchers of the Roswell case, acknowledged, "We have been unable to confirm a nurse with the name Glenn Dennis gave her. More importantly, he has not said he didn't give any of us the right name for her because of the promise he made her. Sorry, I just don't buy that. The Glenn Dennis story is slowly, perhaps rapidly, falling apart".

If the claims of small, four fingered creatures are now in some doubt, perhaps Ray Santilli's timeline and film evidence are not so inadmissible after all.

As a hoax, the effrontery of the hoaxers in rewriting the script seems to have been justified, almost perceptive of them.
[End]

The full article, which contains a considerable amount of factual background, remains on my web site at:

<http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/pulsar/autopsy.htm>

The claim that some further debris was found 'a couple of weeks' after the incident, seems to be a reference to Brazel's Foster ranch material and its suggested relationship to the story.

It's a plausible scenario to some extent, not dissimilar to other claims and theories about a damaged craft and bodies being found elsewhere. The 'second crash site' was primarily a necessity to account for the bodies reported by Glenn Dennis, before his testimony, an absolute foundation to the ET argument, was discredited.

>If any case out there can be tied in with it, (and has been, if >witness statements can be believed) it should be the Barney Barnett >story.

Barnett's has always been an intriguing story. Alas, it's second-hand and there's no corroboration whatsoever.

His reported account of finding dead bodies, 'all males', with small, 'oddly spaced' eyes, doesn't equate with the video footage or the story which came via Ray Santilli - i.e., the still alive, screaming creatures roasting in the intense heat, etc.

You mention witness statements which do indicate a connection with Barnett's story. Which statements are these, Neil?

On November 26 1997 UFO Updates posted my item 'Nazi Saucers Described In Atom Bomb Classic'. At that time I wasn't able to quote the relevant footnote from Robert Jungk's "Brighter than a Thousand Suns, a Personal History of the Atomic Scientists" (Swiss edition 1956, English translation 1958), but now I would like to supply this want, as I have just received a copy of the book.

First I would like to quote the November item in its entirety, though.

NAZI SAUCER!

Milton Keynes, England, it's not the kind of place where we expect to get new information on real life flying saucers. But after our recent report on a saucer-shaped aircraft in Canada, top secret American saucer projects and Germany's development of craft like this during World War II, a SIGHTINGS Researcher received a letter from viewer D. Robin Stowell.

A typesetter by trade, Stowell alerted us to the book, 'Brighter Than A Thousand Suns'. An authoritative history of the race to build the first Atomic Bomb. Stowell typeset the original manuscript nearly forty years ago. And never forgot this brief reference to a Nazi Saucer that could out-maneuver any allied aircraft.

Four decades after publication, Stowell found a copy of the out of print reference book and confirmed what he had long remembered. The footnote describes German Saucers that were forty five yards across, capable of reaching speeds over Mach One and climbing to an elevation of nearly eight miles. Some experts believe that these Nazi Saucers could have been responsible for the legendary Foo Fighter sightings over Europe late in World War II. But if they were, it still does not explain Foo Fighters spotted over the Pacific during the same period.

*****

Jungk's book is now a classic. Bertrand Russell had this to say about it: "One of the most interesting books I have ever read. It is more exciting than any novel."

Robert Jungk was born in Berlin of Austrian-Jewish parents in 1913 and was nineteen when Hitler came to power. He has been an American citizen since 1950. His articles and books have been published in more than a dozen countries.

Here's a piece of the text and the accompanying footnotes from the book (Harcourt Brace & Company paperback edition, which is still available by the way, p. 87f):

"The indifference of Hitler and those about him to research in natural science amounted to positive hostility.* It had at a very early period cost Hitler the good will of the physicists. Only a handful of them, out of ambition or because they had failed to make their mark prior to the advent of the Third Reich, offered Hitler their full co-operation.**

*The only exception to the lack of interest shown by authority was constituted by the Air Ministry. The Air Force research workers were in a peculiar position. They produced interesting new types of aircraft such as the Delta (triangular) and "flying discs." The first of these "flying saucers," as they were later called - circular in shape, with a diameter of some 45 yards - were built by the specialists Schriever, Habermohl and Miethe. They were first airborne on February 14, 1945, over Prague and reached in three minutes a height of nearly eight miles. They had a flying speed of 1250 m.p.h. which was doubled in subsequent tests. It is believed that after the war Habermohl fell into the hands of the Russians. Miethe developed at a later date similar "flying saucers" at A. V. Roe and Company for the United States.

**These were mainly engineers. Those engaged on theoretical research only co-operated in exceptional cases. It is true that the Allied Nations' technicians, after the occupation of Germany, found thousands of new military inventions there. But these always concerned the practical application and technical improvement of scientific principles already well known."

Dear Robert,

I'm not sitting around waiting for Ray or anyone else for that matter.
There are others involved with the ownership of the film other than Ray Santilli, Volker Spielberg in Germany to name but one. I honestly believe that if Ray Santilli was in sole possession/ownership of the film, then things would have turned out quite differently.

As for FX/movie companies research capabilities we only have to look to Hollywood to see that sometimes, despite how many millions of dollars you have at your disposal, errors are made in movies regarding artefacts being out of place, in the wrong era, etc. Of course Hollywood does get things right more often than not but they do make some errors from time-to-time.

Fake or genuine someone other than Santilli and Co know more about this film. If it is a fake then several people at least would have been involved and as yet they are not talking.
Likewise, if it is authentic, the same might possibly apply.

I'm a patient man, but I can assure you I'm not just sitting here waiting for Ray Santilli.

Philip.

Not really. Part of the observer effect. No one observer can observe more than one of these universes at any given time, so for that observer only one of them exists. The rest exist as quantum probabilities unless collapsed into reality by observation.

Dear collaeagues,

I have recently come into possession of a daylight-disc photograph from Hungary. The written details accompanying it are some scant, but it is interesting if nothing else.

What I would like to know is who do you recommend as the most reliable person/lab to offer unbiased analysis of this photograph. I would like to submit it to someone but as I have not dealt with such a photo-case for a year or two I'm not sure who best to contact.

If anyone has any suggestions I would appreciate it if you could let me know.

Yours Sincerely,

Philip Mantle.

Damned good point. I don't think we have seen any progress in technology by the "aliens". To me that argues that the idea of them being visitors from an advanced civilization is flat out wrong.

There's worse places to be than "off with the fairies"!!

I've been saying that I think this phenomenon is going to turn out, if we ever understand it, to be something far weirder than just visitors from somewhere/somewhen else, but nobody seems to want to throw off their blinders.

ALIENS LAND IN CROATIA

A newspaper in Croatia reported last week that four aliens had landed at a farm just outside the city of Sibenik.

Sibenik is a port on the Adriatic Sea about 225 kilometers (140 miles) south of Zagreb.

According to the newspaper Vercernji List, a farmer named Jako Vrancic was herding his cattle on his farm north of Sibenik when a UFO landed soundlessly in the pasture. He described the object as looking like a household flatiron.

Vercernji List described the event as "a close encounter between a (retired) peasant farmer and four aliens...The aliens had the stature and build of human children, he said."

Vrancic offered to share his lunch--ham and dried figs--with the occupants, but they told him they weren't hungry.

"We had no problem communicating, as they spoke a broken form of Croatian," Vrancic said.

"I felt no fear, as I had previously seen things like this on TV," he added.

Following a brief visit, the occupants reboarded their "iron-shaped spacecraft" and flew away.

Vercernji List stated that the "pensioner" Vrancic "is reportedly well-liked in his village and was described as an honest and down-to-earth man by his friends." (See CNI News volume 3, number 22, part 2. Many thanks to CNI News editor Mike Lindemann and contributor James Sutton for this story.)

ARIZONA CITIES REPORT MANY NEW UFO SIGHTINGS

Three large cities in Arizona reported multiple UFO sightings last week.

The new flap began Sunday afternoon, January 11, 1998, when residents of Phoenix, the state capital, reported spotting "three shiny silvery objects flying at a high altitude" above the city.

That night, at 9 p.m., a TV station in Tucson (population 405,390), a large city 117 miles (187 kilometers) southeast of Phoenix, aired an amateur videotape showing "a large bright orange glowing UFO" flying near Mount Lemmon and Spencer Canyon north of the city. The news broadcast described it as "a possible campfire."

According to Tom King, director of Arizona Skywatch, park rangers investigated the event "and found nothing."

On Monday, January 12, 1997, at 12:30 a.m., witnesses in Mesa, Arizona (population 288,091), a city 19 miles (31 kilometers) east of Phoenix,

"saw the strange orange object. It brightened and dimmed several times," King reported. "It split in two and headed in formation towards Phoenix" at "three times the speed of any normal military aircraft." (The object's estimated speed was about 1,800 miles per hour--J.T.)

On Wednesday, January 14, 1998, at 10 p.m., Arizona Skywatch received calls from several residents in the Broadway Road/Southern Avenue section of Phoenix. They reported videotaping "mysterious orange lights" over the South Mountains, scene of the big UFO flap on March 13, 1997.

King said his group has "obtained the schedule of (military) flare drops" and will compare these times with the UFO reports.

On Thursday, January 15, 1998, at 10 p.m., witnesses in Phoenix and the city of Casa Grande (population 19,082) about 40 miles (64 kilometers) to the south reported seeing "three glowing objects with slight pulsating motions" over the nearby desert. (Many thanks to Tom King of Arizona Skywatch for this story.)

UFOs AGAIN ACTIVE IN NEW HAMPSHIRE AND VERMONT

A mysterious bright blue flash lit up the sky over Exeter, New Hampshire the night of December 28, 1997 and was seen by two people.

Exeter, N.H. (population 9,558) is on Route 108 approximately 15 miles (25 kilometers) south of Portsmouth, near the state's Atlantic Ocean shore. The town was the site of numerous UFO sightings back in September 1965.

According to the Boston Globe, "Dave Jackson said the mysterious brilliant blue flash lit up the sky over Exeter, N.H. on December 28 as he drove along. 'It was brighter than anything I've ever seen,' he said."

"A woman from Hampton Falls, N.H. saw a similar blinding flash in the same area about a month earlier." (i.e. late November 1997--J.T.)

The cases are being investigated by MUFON New Hampshire, according to Peter Geremia, the group's state director for New Hampshire. (See the Boston, Mass. Globe for January 10, 1998, page B-5, "What Was It?")

On Sunday, January 11, 1998, two members of MUFON Vermont and their adult daughter were driving on Interstate Highway 91 just south of Newport, Vermont (population 4,484) at around 10:30 p.m.

"It was a clear night with partial clouds...The witnesses saw blinking red and white lights, which changed to a horizontal row of white lights. Then they changed to a red and white light, then back to all white...The object was low, headed north, and no sound was heard."

The wife said "they were amazed because it was so low and so wide" that they compared it "to a World War II bomber."

Newport, Vt. is on the south shore of Lake Memphremagog, just below the Canadian border, approximately 65 miles (104 kilometers) north of Montpelier, the state capital. (See Filer's Files #3 for 1998. Many thanks to George A. Filer of MUFON for this report.)

DAYLIGHT DISC SEEN OVER SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI

On Monday, January 5, 1998, at 2:50 p.m., Ms. C.R. of Ozark, Missouri was in her car, waiting for a traffic light to change at 3100 South Glenstone Avenue in the nearby city of Springfield (population 140,494) when she spotted something strange in the overcast sky.

"What appeared then was a round disk-shaped object moving slowly to the northeast. She observed the object for well over a minute while waiting for a left-turn signal."

"She described the UFO as having a dull gray bottom with a bright silvery top as it slightly turned on its right. The woman had her (car) window down and she said no noise was noticed during the sighting. She attempted to take a photo of the UFO in a bank parking lot, but when she got out of the car, the object had disappeared." (Many thanks to Brian Adams of the Ozark Area Research Group for this report.)

UFO SEEN BY CROWD IN NORTHERN INDIA

A Swiss family and a dozen local residents watched a UFO perform aerobatic maneuvers high above the town of Kimsar, Rajahstan state, India at 11 p.m. on Christmas Eve, December 24, 1997.

Kimsar is located in the Rajahstan desert about 720 kilometers (450 miles) southwest of New Delhi, capital of India.

Eyewitness Alex Carrara said his family had left their home in Geneva, Switzerland to spend the Christmas holiday in India. Alex was standing outside their rented home with his parents, his brother and his sister when they saw a crowd of "10 to 12 local people looking at the sky."

"We were struck by the sight, and there was no sound," Alex reported, describing the UFO as "bright yellow or orange. I'm quite sure there was a yellow-orange aura around the object."

The UFO approached Kimsar from the east "at an extremely high altitude...flying about at between 50 to 70 degrees above the horizon. Some of the (local) witnesses argued that it was a satellite, but the direction of the object wasn't straight like a satellite. The object followed three different courses. I know the sky well and have been studying astronomy for years. I know this was not a star."

Alex also pointed out that it couldn't have been a distant electric light because "there are no lights (in Kimsar) because there is no electricity."

The UFO performed its strange turning maneuvers for another five minutes before "it disappeared in the west," towards Phalodi. (Email Interview)

UFOs SEEN OVER BEDFORD AND IMMINGHAM, UK

Two UFO sightings were reported in the United Kingdom last week, over Bedfordshire and Humberside.

On Wednesday, January 14, 1998, at 6:10 p.m., Andi T. was in a car "near the roundabout (rotary) where the (Motorway) A6 Luton-to-Bedford road meets the Bedford By-pass" when a UFO flashed by overhead. The sighting took place about 60 miles (96 kilometers) north of London.

"A bright light shot across the sky about a mile from the roundabout," Andi reported. "This light was like a shooting star except it lasted a lot longer and had a tail. Not long after I witnesses this light, I saw two lights at the horizon (near Bedford), but those objects didn't move any nearer to me." (Email Interview)

On Sunday night, January 4, 1998, at about 11 p.m., a UFO described as "a yellow harvest moon" hovered above a residential neighborhood in Immingham, on the river Humber, approximately 75 miles (120 kilometers) northeast of Sheffield.

The object was first seen by a woman in the house, who immediately called her relatives to come and look. Among the relatives was Paul H., a local skywatcher.

"There was a harvest moon in the wrong part of the sky--too low, too large and too yellow," he said. "Whatever it was, it was at about rooftop height, under conditions of low cloud. We saw the 'moon' from upstairs, and from there the 'moon' appeared to be at the same elevation as us. It appeared to be big, as is a harvest moon, but the actual moon had already been seen about one hour earlier by me, much higher up in the sky. The (UFO's) colour was yellow. I got out my 30mmX30mm telescope for a better look."

Paul estimated the UFO's size as "about ten meters (33 feet) in length."

"After five minutes of discussion and telescope viewing, we checked from another angle from another room, but in the time I moved from one room to another, it had moved so as to be no longer visible... I went back to my room, and it appeared that the 'moon' was rapidly being covered by cloud--much like watching an eclipse," he noted, adding that, because of the overcast, "nothing was visible above 50 degrees" from the horizon. (Email Interview)

NETHERLANDS TOWN GETS MANY VISITS FROM UFOs

On December 21, 1997, ufologist Geert van Halem left his home on the van Beethovenstraat in Gorinchem in the Netherlands when he spotted a strange object in the northern sky.

Van Halem described the UFO as "about 8 to 10 meters (25 to 33 feet) in diameter, which illuminated a bright white light. It was not normal light but was kind of a shiny glow. Its altitude was about 500 meters (1,650 feet) and it was about 45 degrees above the horizon. It was hovering silently above my neighborhood."

Van Halem said he had seen an identical white UFO in the same part of the sky the night of October 30, 1997.

On November 8, 1997, at 7 p.m., he observed "an object which illuminated a bright red light with a kind of glow to it" to the north-northwest "at an angle of about 50 degrees above the horizon."

Two weeks later, while bicycling after dark across a dyke on the Merwedekanaal in the nearby village of Woudrichem, he saw "an object about 20 meters in length. I could see a row of lights around the object, but I'm not sure if it was circular or similarly shaped...It moved silently with a speed of 17.5 meters per second (i.e. 6,300 kilometers per hour or 3,780 miles per hour--J.T.) It was this speed that convinced me that it could have absolutely not been an airplane." (Many thanks to Dutch readers Stephan and Annet for forwarding this story.)

MORE UFO SECT MEMBERS ARRESTED IN THE CANARY ISLANDS

On Monday evening, January 12, 1998, Spanish police arrested another 19 members of Centro Sagrado de Isis in Santa Cruz de Tenerife.

Santa Cruz is on the north shore of Tenerife, one of the seven Islas Canarias (Canary Islands) off the northwestern coast of Africa.

"The nineteen, including three children, were taken into custody late Monday, after police searched a house belonging to their jailed leader," Dr. Heide Fittkau-Garthe, 57, of Santa Cruz de Tenerife, "said Mari Paz Bernal, a spokeswoman for the Interior Ministry."

"Their leader, Heide Fittkau-Garthe, 57, was arrested last week and accused of an earlier plot to lead her 31 followers in a mass suicide. According to police, the original scheme called for the followers to kill themselves on January 8--the day they reportedly believed the world would end."

"Fittkau-Garthe has denied the charges of a group plot to take their lives."

"The followers, police said, believed a space ship would come and pick up their bodies at (Pico de) Teide (a volcano) on Tenerife."

On Tuesday, January 13, 1998, the nineteen suspects, all Germans who had recently come to Tenerife, were "released without charge...a day after being accused of allegedly planning to take part in a mass suicide."

Sra. Paz Bernal reportedly had no comment about whether the release meant the Spanish police still considered the group "a dangerous cult."

"Police said they would continue to monitor the Germans, who were staying in Fittkau-Garthe's house, but they were free to leave the country."

The other 12 members, including Germans and Belgians, were not arrested, Sra. Paz Bernal said.

Dr. Fittkau-Garthe remains in police custody in Santa Cruz de Tenerife. Her attorney, Enrique Porres, said the doctor is "currently charged with attempted murder and incitement to suicide" and added that "the allegations were unfounded."

Dr. Fittkau-Garthe dispenses "spiritual therapy," Porres said, and Centro Sagrado de Isis "has nothing to do with mass suicide."

"During their search of Fittkau-Garthe's house, police discovered a child's drawing of a UFO and then concocted the spaceship story, he says."

(See the Las Vegas, Nevada Sun for January 13, 1998, "German Cult Members Released.")

(Editor's Comment: No doubt about it. Dr. Heide Fittkau-Garthe is the new John Ford. Free thought in the NATO countries? In the words of an old farmer I met in Bethel, Maine... "Ain't no such animal, sonny!")

STRANGE MYSTERIES OF THE CANARY ISLANDS

Dr. Heide Fittkau-Garthe's decision to locate her Centro Sagrado de Isis in the Canary Islands, owned by Spain, probably has much to do with the seven islands' unusual history.

Although located out in the Atlantic Ocean, the islands were known to the ancient Phoenicians, Greeks and Romans.

Roman author Pliny, in his HISTORIA NATURALIS, Book IV, pages 31-32, describes the Canaries as the "Happy Islands" or "Blessed Islands," located 750 miles "southwest of Gades." (modern Cadiz, Spain--J.T.)

Around 85 B.C., the Roman general Sertorius and his followers fled to "Junonia" (Gran Canaria island) after his arch-rival Sulla siezed power and became dictator of Rome. Sertorius brought with him the rebel treasury, which is reportedly buried somewhere in the islands.

On April 11, 1307, a caravel belonging to the Knights Templar sailed down the Seine from Paris, loaded to the gunwales with medeival iron-bound chests brimming with gold, silver and jewels. This particular Templar treasure ship also landed somewhere in the Canaries. Just as other treasure ships left France the same week, just before King Philip IV lowered the boom on the controversial Templar order.

In September 1492, Christopher Columbus and his three-ship fleet spent a month anchored there when the Pinta lost her rudder.

In 1862, a Roman Catholic priest hiking along the forested western shore of Hierro Island "discovered signs of writing engraved on the side of a cliff. At the base of the rocky wall were seats of hewn stone arranged in a ring."

The unknown Hierro Island inscription bears a strong resemblance to the writing on Harappan seals discovered at Mohenjo-Daro, Pakistan, the sacred rongorongo boards found on Easter Island and hieroglyphics at several sites in southern Algeria. (See THE WORLD'S LAST MYSTERIES, Reader's Digest Association, Pleasantville, N.Y., 1976, page 299)

In the 1930s, author Paul le Cour, president of Societe Francais d'Atlantologie, found several mysterious clay seals in a grotto near San Miguel de Tenerife, which he claimed were "artifacts from the lost continent of Atlantis."

The writing on the San Miguel seals did not match the Hierro Island inscription, however. (See SHADOW OF ATLANTIS by Alexander Braghine, 1940, reprinted 1995 by Adventures Unlimited Press.)

Another interesting site on Tenerife is Las Canadas, which has what looks like three stone dolmens half-submerged in a pyroclastic lava flow. The site is located in the main caldera of Pico de Teide.

1971: AUSTRALIAN HIKER HAS AN ALIEN ENCOUNTER
AT WARRAGAMBA DAM

In January 1971, Australian hiker Glenn Weston had a close encounter with aliens near Warragamba Dam on Lake Burragorang in New South Wales, about 110 miles (176 kilometers) west of Sydney.

"One night while camping in a remote area to the south of the Warragamba Dam backwaters," Glenn Weston awoke to "a loud humming noise. He got to his feet and, torch (flashlight) in hand, started off into the bush in the direction of the strange sound, hoping to find out the source."

"He soon became aware that the scrub ahead of him was lit up by a glowing white light. As he approached a nearby clearing he could see through the trees that the glow was coming from some strange structure that he thought to be somewhat egg-shaped. Dark, manlike figures appeared to be moving hastily about the craft."

"Feeling a little uneasy Weston switched off his torch and remained hidden among the trees for a moment, wondering whether to approach the figures to enquire what was going on. While he hid there the figures disappeared into the object and the glow suddenly faded. The mysterious dark shape rose into the air, its loud humming noise now silent."

"Mr. Weston returned rather hastily to his camp. Unable to sleep after what he had witnessed, he remained awake until morning when he wasted no time in packing his haversack and leaving the valley." (See MYSTERIOUS AUSTRALIA by Rex Gilroy, Nexus Publishing, Mapleton, Qnld., 1995, page 22)

The People's Rally at AREA 51 will take place as scheduled on Saturday, June 6, right at the restricted boundary line on Groom Lake Road, as previously announced. This will be a legal, public assembly and will take place on legal, public land.

The event will be a spontaneous, peaceful gathering of concerned citizens.

One of the primary purposes of the gathering will be to bring to the attention once again to the newsmedia the plight of former Groom Lake workers who are still suffering from illnesses caused by long-term exposure to highly toxic materials without their knowledge while working at AREA 51, the base that officially "doesn't exist".

The former workers and their families' plea is not monetary compensation but to seek for cures for the diseases.

There will be no organization behind this scheduled event. It will simply be a spontaneous gathering. Quite a number of people may already be camping out overnight on Friday, June 5 at the site.

The news media may show up to cover the event, depending on how much publicity will be generated regarding the event.

The event will start at 6 a.m. on Saturday, June 6.

Each participant is suggested to bring a mirror (of any kind.....the larger the better) for the event.

All vehicles are to be parked off Groom Lake Road. Lincoln County Sheriff Dept. will not allow any vehicle to be parked on the dirt road for the event.

And also, early on Sunday morning, June 7, there will be a hike up to the ridges of Tickaboo Mountains to observe the Groom Lake facility.

This particular hike may be a little strenuous since this time it will not originate from the Alamo side, but it will be from the west side, a direct "frontal assault" on the mountains from the Tickaboo Valley side.

<snip>

There are many billions of stars that have existed in our galaxy for millions and billions of years prior to the appearance of the Sun or of home sapiens on earth. Any civilizations associated with those stars could be just as old.

So if we're being visited by civilizations millions of years old, a couple of points spring to mind:

1. A few thousand years of recorded human history isn't much compared to such time frames. In fact, its nothing.
2. It isn't hard to imagine that any civilization that old probably won't be changing their spacecraft models as fast as Detroit produces car models. In fact, chances are any civilization that old settled on basically reliable craft designs tens of thousands if not millions of years ago. More or less like our basic design of scissors hasn't changed much since the days of the Roman empire.

I think the above post reflects a viewpoint with "time blinders" on. The universe is as vast time-wise as it is distance-wise. With all that might imply about those visiting us.

Subject: Repeat showings of "UFOs: The 100-Year Coverup"

For them as may have missed it last night, the 2-hour "Sightings" special "UFOs: The 100-Year Coverup" will be rebroadcast on the Sci-Fi Channel as follow (times are U.S. EASTERN): today, 1/18, at 3 p.m. and Sunday, 1/25, at 10 a.m.

Yrs Trly is prominently featured (including, on camera, some of my recent on-site work on the famous August 1952 Florida scoutmaster "saucer-attack" case). Those of you who've formed your impressions of me on the basis of my Roswell work and conclusions may be a tad surprised.

Have you even tried to contact Spielberg directly without having Ray involved in the loop?

Whatever happened to all of Rays blabbering about having filed looking forward to the suit to see what popped out during the discovery portion.

Re: 'Alien Autopsy' film 'Danger' sign

Or was this some more of Rays tales and stories that don't quite come true.

JJ,

A very interesting article indeed. Thank you for sharing this with the list.

I would also like to share with the list a note that I sent to the author of the article. My note is below:

Hello Gerry,

An excellent article on SETI.

Many of the apparent contradictions in the history of SETI can be better understood by investigation of the background of the individuals involved. In particular Frank Drake's "Is Anyone Out There?" scratches the surface of his military intelligence connection pp. 13.

He was also a prot=E9g=E9 of Donald Menzel the noted Harvard astronomy department head who was also the commander of Frank Drakes Naval Reserve Unit. Menzel was also a National Security Agency operative for many years, this has been documented by author Stanton Friedman (Top Secret/Majic chapter 2 "The Double Life of Dr. Menzel") who interviewed Menzel's widow and reviewed his personal papers at Harvard. If you read Drake's description of his military background you will see it is a discussion of an intelligence position. Most likely on the Admiral's carrier he was in Signals Intelligence on assignment to the NSA. Its funny that almost the same time of wording is used by other authors in describing their intelligence assignments with the NSA. Raymond Fowler who was in the US Air Force on assignment to the NSA uses a very similar description of his /military intelligence service.

Frank Drake was Lloyd Bernker's "wunderkind" see pp 27 of ISOT?, in fact that entire chapter 2 "Lost Keys Under a Streetlamp" is an amazing discussion of the genesis of Project Ozma that never once discusses a crucial piece of information that is now in the public domain in open sources, namely that the National Radio

Astronomy Observatory was a cold war project whose funding primarily came from the NSA which had created it for communications intelligence, radioastronomy was a part of the picture too and a nice cover operation.

There is nothing conspiratorial about any of this, in fact it is only logical that our government, apprised of the possibility of ETI, should seek to manage the discovery process and contact. What I do find surprising is discussions that ignore this material which is well documented in open sources and that find the SETI situation illogical when in fact that is only true if these critical issues and historical connections are not included in the discussion.

In your attempt to invalidate a comparison, you missed the point.
Simply being that hoaxes can happen, do happen, and have been kept secret for years, whether the number of people involved is 2 or 5.

It is true that the more people you have involved, the more *chances of the beans spilling* BUT it does not mean that those responsible will in fact tell all.

Like I said perhaps in 15-30 years on somebodys death bed, we will get the real story of the film.

Cheers,
Robert

Three US Channels Offer UFO Specials

Subject: Three US Channels Offer UFO Specials

Ufo Shows Might Wow the Gullible, But Will Leave Skeptics Unbuded

The Columbus Dispatch
Sat, Jan 17 1998

Forget about watching the skies, all you ufologists. For the next week, watch the tube.

Three channels will offer special programs that focus on extraterrestrials. Some shows take a somewhat objective viewpoint, while others report just about anything as true.

Don't expect skepticism from the Sci-Fi Channel's Sightings, for instance, unless it's about the government. The program's special report, UFOs: The 100 Year Cover-Up, features host Tim White (wearing a rather otherworldly toupee) scoffing at pointy-headed bureaucrats while raptly informing viewers that 1947 is "the single most important year in ufology."

It's all here -- scoutmasters seeing UFOs, "flying triangles" near Stonehenge, secondhand reports of alien autopsies at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

While mention is made that Stonehenge, like UFO central Roswell, N.M., just happens to be near high-security air bases, Sightings somehow can't believe that many of those unidentified flying objects could simply be military aircraft.

Nor does the show bother to look for reasons that UFO sightings seem to have started in 1897 in Aurora, Texas, even though the report is the basis for the program's title.

The fact that War of the Worlds was published in 1897 does not escape the bright folks who produced We Are Not Alone, a three-part miniseries that is part of the Learning Channel's Alien Invasion Week.

Actor French Stewart, who plays an alien on the NBC sitcom 3rd Rock From the Sun, hosts the channel's second annual weeklong celebration of Agent X, Area 51 and alleged alien abductees.

We Are Not Alone takes a far more careful approach to the whole business, looking not only at abductions but at such mainstream scientific projects as SETI, the Search for Extra Terrestrial Intelligence.

We Are Not Alone presents spectacular images from the Hubble Space Telescope, underlining aesthetically what the telescope revealed scientifically: that the universe contains many more stars than anyone had previously believed.

The show talks to credible witnesses; looks at the Hale-Bopp comet and its influence on the Heaven's Gate cult; and examines "Epona," a World Wide Web site that speculates on how alien beings might have evolved.

But, hey, why bother speculating when Alien Abduction: Incident in Lake County can show a family's encounter with "what may be extraterrestrial life forms."

The UPN special was purportedly recorded and, at times, narrated by the family's 16-year-old son, Thomas McPherson -- and it looks like it. Footage shows a family gathering on Thanksgiving and a series of events that supposedly culminate in a close encounter of the third kind.

Alien Abduction may be surpassed in laughability only by the show preceding it -- Real Vampires . . . Exposed!

I spoke with Jacques Poulet tonight (Sunday). He reported that yesterday, he received word that electrical power would not be restored in the "Black Triangle" for as long as two more weeks. Christian Page had been staying with him up until this point, but with this news, they each have abandoned Poulet's house and have moved in with relatives.

Would you believe that Jacques *apologized* for not sending the 1997 Canadian UFO case data to me yet!!!!??? With all that they're going through, he was still thinking about ufology!

I told Jacques to tell Christian and the others that we on UpDates and CANUFO wish them well and hope they get back home soon. Good luck to them all!

The Learning Channel Presents Second Week On

LITTLE GREEN MEN

The Learning Channel presents its second week-long look at alien invasion

By Doug Mason, News-Sentinel entertainment writer

Cable TV exec Steve Cheskin thought up "Shark Week," the genius marketing stunt that made a success of The Discovery Channel. So after he moved to The Learning Channel, a TDC sister, Cheskin looked for another gimmick with bite.

The result was "Alien Invasion Week," which debuted last year and begins it's second go-around today.

The idea came to Cheskin one night as he stared into the blackness of a star-filled sky.

But it had it's genesis earlier that day, when Cheskin, who is a runner, wore his "Shark Week" promotional T-shirt during a race. A lot of people had come up to him to say how much they loved the annual TDC's all-sharks, all-week programming marathon.

"Driving home that night I thought 'What can I do at The Learning Channel that draws the attention that "Shark Week" does?' Then I looked up at the sky. And I thought . . . Sex shows always do well."

Then he thought some more. "I can't see putting 'Sex Week' on a T-shirt," ' ' Cheskin decided.

So he went with his second choice: Aliens.

"(Programming about) aliens and UFOs had always done extremely well for us. Plus, 'Independence Day' was in the movie theaters. And there was 'X-Files.' There was a lot of interest in those kinds of shows."

The gimmick worked: The first "Alien Invasion Week" brought The Learning Channel some of it's highest ratings.

Of course, The Learning Channel doesn't support theories of government cover-ups of UFO landings, or present as fact claims that aliens have abducted human beings. But it does give a forum to those who do believe something is out there, as well as those who don't.

"We do our shows in a real credible way," Cheskin says. "We talk about the science of it. And the history of it. We don't make fun of anybody that does believe. At the same time, we don't say that is how it is."

"Alien Invasion Week" begins today and continues through Sunday, Jan.

25. Here's what's out there:

TODAY:

=B0"Roswell," 9 p.m. and midnight. Did aliens crash land their flying saucer near a U.S. Air Force Base in Roswell, N.M., in 1947? Is that infamous video of an alien autopsy the real thing? Scientists, government spokesmen and believers offer their versions.

=B0"We Are Not Alone: Sky Watchers," 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. Using footage of purported UFO flights, this episode of a three-part series tries to sort the facts from the fantasies. Interviewees include NASA scientists, a bewildered jet pilot and his air-traffic controller, and former Soviet flyers and cosmonauts. Included is a photojournalists look at America's most secret air base: Area 51.

MONDAY, Jan. 19:

=B0"We Are Not Alone: Alien Hunters," 9 p.m. and midnight. Episode 2 looks at "evidence" of alien visitations gathered from around the world. Did the White House order an investigation into possible alien landings - and then cover them up?

=B0"We Are Not Alone: Space Voyagers," 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. Episode 3 asks: Will we get to them before they get to us? NASA astronomers and the space agency's chief, Dan Goldin, state their science-based odds on whether or not their is extra-terrestrial life. Footage from the Hubble Space Telescope and microscopic looks at the rock from Mars illustrate a new view on cosmos-wide evolution. Mystics centered in Santa Fe, N.M., explain why they believe in life on other worlds.

TUESDAY, Jan. 20:

=B0"Alien Secrets: Area 51," 9 p.m. and midnight. A two-part look at the top-secret Nevada Air Force Base that some believe contains downed alien spacecraft, which the government is rebuilding and possibly even piloting. Despite photographic evidence to the contrary, the U.S. government denies the existence of the subterranean operations center. Capt. (Ret.) Edgar Mitchell, a physicist who flew to the moon with Apollo 14, is among the experts who comment on Area 51's existence and its possible mission.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 21:

=B0"UFOs and Alien Encounters," 9 a.m. and midnight. "Star Wars" star Mark "Luke Skywalker" Hamill narrates a historical review of humanity's accounts of alien visits, from Bible stories to medieval Japanese folklore to 20th century sightings.

=B0"UFOs Above and Beyond," 10 p.m. and midnight. UFOs have been caught on film, video and photographs for 50 years. What are these mysterious aircraft?

THURSDAY, Jan. 22.

=B0"U.F.O." 9 p.m. and midnight. This documentary takes UFO sightings from around the world case-by-case, offering alternate reasons for many strange sightings.

=B0"Aliens Invade Hollywood," 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. Filmmakers and movie stars, including Glenn Close, George Lucas and Danny DeVito, are interviewed about their other-worldly films. Plus, clips from sci-fi flicks from the '50s to today.

FRIDAY, Jan. 23:

=B0"Alien Encounter," 9 p.m. and midnight. In 1985, a team of Silicon Valley astronomers found two new planets in the Big Dipper constellation - planets that may be capable of sustaining life. The discover spurred on astronomers at NASA's SETI (Search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence institute, who are creating possible ways to contact life outside Earth. Scientists offer their views on what might be out there.

=B0"Future Fantastic: Alien," 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. Gillian Anderson, Agent

Scully on "X-Files," hosts this look at how science fiction is becoming science fact. Hollywood designers and evolutionary biologists give their views on how extra-terrestrials are likely to look. The program also delves into the mysterious Area 51.

SATURDAY, Jan. 24:

=B0"E.T. Please Phone Earth," 6 p.m. A look at astronomers' attempts to detect voices from outer space.

=B0"Case of the UFOs," 7 p.m. An investigation that provides scientific explanations for purported alien phenomena, exposing hoaxes and showing how political fears have fueled the popular imagination. Apollo 12 astronaut Pete Conrad contributes his reflections on life both on and off Earth.

=B0"Close Encounters of the Fifth Kind," 9 p.m. and midnight. Are abductions by aliens myths or reality? Psychologist Dr. Susan Blackmore offers medical explanations for claims of nocturnal alien abductions, including sleep paralysis, dream phenomena, and even brain mini-seizures than induce hallucinations.

=B0"UFO and Other Close Encounters," 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. Personal accounts and home video of purported alien phenomena. Some areas revealed as hoaxes, others continue to defy explanation.

SUNDAY, Jan. 25:

=B0"We Are Not Alone: Skywatchers," 1 p.m.

=B0"We Are Not Alone: Alien Hunters," 2 p.m.

=B0"We Are Not Alone: Sky Voyagers," 3 p.m.

=B0"Alien Secrets: Area 51, Part One," 4 p.m.

=B0"Alien Secrets: Area 51, Part Two," 5 p.m.

Skywatch: New Wave in Arizona

Subject: Skywatch: New Wave in Arizona

FOR POSTING

reply to:

Report by Tom King

A new wave of UFO sightings are under way in Arizona and two mass sightings have occurred within the last week.

1/11/98

Sunday afternoon after the rain stopped I noticed some strange silvery blinking objects moving slowly in the sky. I attempted to videotape these objects with my new Super camera but it only resulted in a game of "caught me if you can" with these objects.

1/12/98

Monday night the local news in Tucson aired a report of an ongoing UFO report. A orange object was on the Catalina Mt. which is north of Tucson. They speculated it could be a campfire. Although many people who saw the broadcast said "no way it was a campfire."=A0 Reports of over a thousand people saw and event with an orange object that night. Among the witnesses were Bob Dean who was driving up to Phoenix that night. Hours later the orange object was seen traveling from Tucson to Phoenix at a very high rate of speed. It was two orange lights closer together traveling in a tight formation. It pulsed brighter and dimmed at times during the observation.

Reports were coming from all over the southern area of Arizona.

1/13/98

Tuesday night a witness of the March 13 lights saw the orange objects again. She videotaped and photographed them and reported the sighting to Village Labs. She was told to call if the lights returned and Village Labs took the evidence to analyze.

1/14/98

Wednesday night another mass sighting occurred, this time near the south Phoenix areas. This sighting is very complex and will take some time to figure out exactly what happened.=A0 The woman from the previous night saw the lights again and called Village Labs to report it. People at Village Labs saw the lights and called residents around the valley to videotape them whatever they were.=A0 Thousands of people saw them and atleast 7 different videotapes captured them. These lights were similar to the orange objects seen on March 13, 1997. Over 2 dozen orange lights hung in the air between 7-8 pm. Some people recorded 30 and others 40 minutes of footage of these orange lights.

Even the local news was out skywatching for them and caught them on tape.

What the local news captured was military flares over the Estrella Mts. They rushed back to the studio to get this on the air and missed the rest of the show. Geometric formations of lights in a line appeared and latter a triangle of lights. The lights appeared in a area of possibly 20 miles in length just south of the valley.

The news all came up with different stories with who was responsible for the "flares" seen that night. All of them claiming they had solved the mystery. The "Michigan" Air National Guard and others explanations were the sheriffs department training in the Gila Bend range.=A0

The flare theory seemed plausible until I was able to see the videotapes shot that night. Some of these objects have characteristics that flares simply do not.

Objects were videotaped hanging in the air for over 11 minutes. They do not descend or break formation as flares do. Some are even seen moving horizontally and not descending at all. One even appears to travel upward. The videotapes triangulate the objects over the Estrella Mts. Almost in the same spot as seen on March 13, 1997. This is outside the military operating area and is illegal to perform flares drops.

The Michigan Air National guard is claiming responsibility for the sightings and there is no waste of time to explain this away.=A0

So what about the flares seen descending over the Estrellas during the middle of the events that night? This is still a mystery and does not account for all of the sightings and eyewitness reports. I do believe the Air force is covering this up and has a better plan on how to deal with this than they did last year.

Thursday night was one of the biggest UFO stakes in Phoenix history. I called dozens of people all over the state and had Skywatch on alert to videotape any strange orange light in the sky.

I took a position half way between Phoenix and Casa Grande. We sighted some of these orange lights 15-20 miles=A0 west of our position. We took photographs, and two separate videotapes, including the ultra high powered Super camera.=A0 These objects appeared under 1,000 ft and did not have any sign of smoke. If these were military flares then we have proof that they are operating well outside their military boundaries. This is illegal and we will continue to push for people responsible to be prosecuted if they want to claim these objects are theirs. They could burn down houses or half the desert with these objects.

While the media is calling for video footage from 1/14/98 the investigators are taking their time with the analysis work before they release them to the local news to do sloppy work like they did on 1/14/98 nightly news.

I have been asked to post=A0images from these events. They will start coming online next week in the OVNI Chapterhouse. Where the best UFO video in the world can be seen.

Philip,

Not meaning to sound unfair, but we must all realize that your question is meaningless. Submitting the original prints and original negatives to the best labs and analyst can no longer be a guarantee of authenticity.

It is not that Maccabee, Delitoso and others are not capable of doing rigorous analysis according to their favorite techniques, it is that it is now possible for many people using widely available computer tools to manipulate images and have service bureaus print directly to film, images that cannot be distinguished from fortuitous snapshots.

It is now necessary to verify still and moving images by investigation of the site and witnesses. From this investigation, a timeline can be constructed that can make the evidence very reliable. Its not that I am trying to negate the contributions of Bruce, Jim and others nor cut into their income, its just that I want to instill a little honesty about the current value of such analysis.

Bye... Ted..

Philip, having no experience at this, other than a past interest in photography and photo-processing, I would first make good copies of the original (If you are not in possession of the original, then forget it), then send a copy to some of the skeptic groups. You need a biased point of view as well as unbiased. Besides, it will be good for you to know just how biased certain groups are.

Regards,

Jack

[Volker] Spielberg was contacted directly by Nico Maillard, but all Nico got for his trouble was an ear full of cursing.
Spielberg has refused interview requests repeatedly, and my meeting with him was abruptly cancelled the day before I was to fly to Germany.

As I understand it, the suit was settled out of court.

On the other hand, it seems to me that what has changed in that time is our own concept of the fantastic. I personally believe that something is happening which we do not understand, but I have some serious problems accepting the "nuts-and-bolts" view of UFOs, given that the character of those UFOs seems to change along with science fiction tastes (although, to be honest, I suppose one could question the causality). If one is going to presume a million-year-old civilization, their science would (according to Clarke) probably seem magickal to us, and it would seem to me just as reasonable to assume they exist in a form we cannot comprehend and that our contact experiences are what happens when an intelligence beyond our understanding is expressed through the limitations of our brains.

If anyone is aware of evidence which substantiates the existence of actual alien spacecraft (as opposed to simply unknown luminous phenomena) please tell me; I'm certainly open to changing my view.

Assuming no real progress is made, and that we continue to view UFOs as mythological phenomena, I wonder how they will appear, say, 100 years from now, or 200.

Gary,

Many thanks for your letter.

One of the reasons I placed the paper online as I did was to pull in more information to help with the research so the paper would in time become more useful.

I had heard anecdotal references to Drake's background but had not followed up on them, nor did I know about his connection with Menzel. Again, Menzel's background is something I had heard about through Stanton Friedman, but I had not read Friedman's book. I can see I need to spend some time with the materials you reference and I thank you for showing me that. This will very likely result in my adding something to the paper.

The point about NRAO is also well taken, although I don't know what this would add to my own discussion. You would probably find some government funding and agendas in any number of radio astronomy facilities after all.

In your letter you mention that these relationships are not necessarily conspiratorial and that our government would naturally wish to manage discovery and contact, and furthermore that this should be acknowledged in the literature. You also find it surprising that it has not been.

I can only say that in my case it was simply due to not having fully realized that there were important connections in the personal backgrounds of Drake and Menzel.

I do want to make one point, though. There is a certain common point of view between a radio astronomer involved in SETI and an organization doing signals intelligence. This is so obvious of course that I hesitate even to mention it but my point is that such a person could gravitate to intelligence work just due to the predilection. There is a charm there that can go beyond political agendas.

In a more rational world there would be no need for a government to conceal its deep interest and involvement in SETI. As it is, however, there are layers upon layers of problems that would need to be worked through before our government would be able to acknowledge this. In the larger arena, I fervently hope that these matters can be resolved.

For the meantime, I will go ahead and say what needs to be said.

Don't look for a revision of the article in the immediate future, as in the next few days. It's going to take me a little longer to get to the books etc. and digest the information.

Thanks again and very best regards
Gerry Zeitlin

I do not know of any deathbed revelations of hoaxes involving more than one or two people.

BTW, with regard to the fairy photos, I saw an article some years ago in a photography journal which conclusively proved that the two sisters could not have hoaxed the fairy photos in the way the old lady claimed and with the equipment they were said to have used.

Philip,

Aren't you still the MUFON rep for the UK? If so, why wouldn't you send them to one of MUFON's analysts? What about BUFORA?
Aren't you involved with them as well? I'd be curious if BUFORA has analysts available for that sort of thing.

Good luck

Yes I am indeed still part of MUFON and BUFORA. I've sent a message to MUFON to see who their photo analysts is. I know Jeff Sainio looks at video's but I'm not sure about still photo's.

As for BUFORA they do have someone, but he works at a University full time and getting analysis of this sort done can be a lengthy project as it does it in his spare time.

Like I said, it's a while since I was involved with such a photo-case so I'm basically checking who is still available just in case things have changed.

Philip.

Dear Robert,

I have tried on several occasions to contact Spielberg but I do not have an address or phone number for him. As for Ray and his legal arguments that has nothing to do with me and I am not interested in it.

All the best,

Philip.

PS.

If anyone has a contact address/phone number for Volker Spielberg I would appreciate it if they passed it on to me.

Barwood is clearly right-wing, to judge from the way she links states' rights to constitutional rights, in remarks reprinted here more than once earlier.

What bothers me is that there's a link between the right wing and UFOs. For instance:

-- William Cooper, that dear man, has been both a UFO nut and a militia nut. He reprinted a classic anti-semitic forgery, the Protocols of the Elders of Zion, in his book "Behold A Pale Horse." Ten years ago, I heard him give a speech at Hollywood High School in Los Angeles. He said the aliens were responsible for gun control. (Ovation from the crowd. "I think I'm in the wrong place," I muttered.)

-- Joe and Pat, who run the Little Al'e'inn in Rachel, NV, are right-wing crazies. Especially Joe. He poured himself a beer or three when I visited his place, and let me know at great length that we've been living under a military dictatorship since 1933. He found proof of that by closely scrutinizing a dollar bill.

-- As I was driving around Nevada and Arizona during that trip, I listened to lots of right-wing radio, and found one show that stresses UFOs. The government coverup of aliens (sorry, too tired to write "alleged government coverup") got lumped in with the New World Order and the general government coverup of everything else the right-wing is sure is happening.

I've never heard of anything like this happening on the left, though there certainly are UFO crazies in New Age circles. My question: is Barwood an honest conservative, Barry Goldwater-style, who takes a personal interest in UFOs, or is she an extreme rightist who fits UFOs into repellent conspiracy theories? Does she blame the aliens for gun control?

Someone please reassure me.....

What we seem to have thus far in the film investigation is Santilli's endless tales/stories/promises -- that haven't occurred.

The next link is the alleged cameraman of which nobody knows if he in fact is real, in fact living or dead, because that information is filtered through Ray. Needless to say Ray hasn't been the pillar of truth and honesty about various film information.

So then when truth seekers try to get ahold of the alleged *owner* of the film for further information he provides nothing and discourages phone calls, visits... essentially any means of contacting him. I say alleged because as I recall all we have is Santilli's word that there is some kind of arrangement between the two of them.

So what it boils down to is Santilli can make endless promises and tell all the stories he wants. If anybody calls him on it then he can blame Spielberg for why the tale/story/promise is not fulfilled. When the folks try and contact Spielberg that's a dead end, so it's back to Santilli. What a vicious cycle. It could be called the autopsy film circle of investigative death.

I see why folks are looking at the actual content of the film for clues.

You mentioned that the suit was settled out of court. Do we know where the initial suit was filed and the case number? The initial pleadings could be interesting reading.

Cheers,
Robert

Dr. Jesse Marcel Jr., who was pretty young at the time, appears to be the only eyewitness who remembers them as I-beams. Most witnesses simply described them as "sticks", which is certainly not the first word I would come up with if something had an I or H cross-section.

Bessie Brazel Schreiber said they were "like kite sticks". Loretta Proctor described the one she saw as like a "dowel stick". Jesse Marcel Sr. described them as "rectangular members, just like you get a square stick" (quoted in Karl Pflock's book "Roswell in Perspective").

Possibly "I-beam" came to be used simply for lack of a better term, as a convenient shorthand to describe a support strut or structural member, just as one might say "a glass of water" even if it came in a plastic container having no glass whatsoever. First Lt. Robert Shirkey, who saw the debris being loaded onto a plane, is clearly following someone else's lead when he says that he saw "what was described by another witness [Dr. Marcel?] as an I-beam and markings".

He's interviewed on one of the video tapes, 'UFOs: A Need to Know', claiming to have examined some pieces at the Roswell debris field. It sounded to me like he was simply repeating what he had read or heard from others to make it seem like he was there. An example:

"...there was pieces of material that looked like aluminum, real light stuff, but strong. It was about 16 inches by 2 1/2 inches, and maybe a quarter inch thick. You couldn't bend it or twist it or do anything with it. Even by putting it up against a rock and jumping up and down, you could not bend it."

Hello the list and Philip,

Philip,

If you have access to the original negative(s) for this sightings I would be interested in having the companies that have offered assistance with our 1952 investigation into the Washington D.C sightings review them. The companies that have offered assistance are state-of-the-art television/media groups that specialize in special effects for movies and television. They are not interested in getting publicity for themselves, so I believe their analysis will be un-biased, and they certainly have the resources to conduct the photo analysis.

A Watch The Skies Newsflash!

This is amazing

According to a Ukrainian newspaper, (dated yesterday, 18th Jan), a "large unknown object" has crashed in a forested hill-side outside the small village of Vechne, about 100 miles from the city of Kharkov; the crash-site was spotted at first light on Sunday morning by a potato farmer who was bewildered by the large flattened area left by the crash; he could see it over a mile away on the side of a hill; he alerted the local priest, and went out to investigate, within close proximity of the crash, he said he became fearful and returned back to the village.

Kiev Air Traffic Control have insisted they haven't lost any aircraft, neither have they received any distress signals. The locals in the remote village are too frightened to go near the site, and since there's been no report of a civilian or military air crash, no emergency services have been called out.

As far as us Italian were concerned (and we were the first ones violating Santilli's copyright), nothing happened: a lot of menaces against us, but nothing more.

The same is true for our Spanish colleagues who did the same.

Post-human evolution and Little Gray Men

From: "M@C TONNIES" <0212104@ACAD.NWMISSOURI.EDU>
Date: Mon, 19 Jan 1998 22:19:53 -0600
Fwd Date: Tue, 20 Jan 1998 09:36:07 -0500
Subject: Post-human evolution and Little Gray Men

Have you ever noticed how decidedly posthuman the standard "little gray alien" is? It's almost as if there's a Jungian fascination with the human physique after being stripped of muscle, expression, ethnicity. The large black eyes almost correspond to some sort of virtual reality interface (some "abductees" even claim they're removable).

Whitley Strieber's described watching frail, alien-looking bodies "stacked like cordwood" stirring to life and beings walking in lockstep as if operated by a single mind. If what he saw was real in some sense, the "aliens" might be uploading/downloading themselves. And the UFO literature is full of descriptions of alien technology that appear to describe "utility fog" and various nanotech applications (walking through walls, levitation, etc.)

Many of the descriptions of flying saucer interiors could be straight out of K. Eric Drexler's "Engines of Creation": everything's seamless, rounded, without visible moving parts.

It's ink-blot, starry speculation, but the parallels between alleged "aliens" and transhuman technologies seem more than coincidental. I'd argue that "aliens" have never manifested in a "technologically impossible" manner. I can see many of their abilities at least hinted at in the transhumanist literature available at www.extropy.com and other places. I've compiled a list at www.nwmissouri.edu/~0212104/trans.html.

From a folkloric perspective, at least, it's pretty fascinating.

DISPATCH # 79 -- the weekly newsletter of ParaScope

S O M E T H I N G   S T R A N G E   I S   H A P P E N I N G

1/19/98

Quote of the Week

"There, spread out as far as I could see were literally thousands of tiny luminous objects that glowed in the black sky like fireflies. I was riding slowly through them, and the sensation was like walking backwards through a pasture where someone had waved a wand and made all the fireflies stop right where they were and glow steadily."

-- astronaut and U.S. Senator John Glenn describing the view from his space capsule as he orbited the earth in 1962.

Rant of the Week: "Wake Up and Go to Sleep"

Every week we pick the wackiest, scariest, nastiest or funniest rant from the hundreds of letters received by us here at ParaScope headquarters, and present it to you as our Rant of the Week. This week, "Jasmine" quotes a provocatively named text to point out -- well, we're not sure what she's pointing out. Enjoy.

"People, I am sending you a message from God. This is a quote from the book 'Arieolla.'

"Many of you are aware of reincarnation. A person lives on earth and develops his thought forcefully, which means negatively, hence he disturbs harmony in his organism going against nature on earth, convincing himself that life is only what one sees and hears, but not feels. The law of UFOLOGY states that human consciousness is not killed unconsciously. That causes him to fall into unconsciousness at certain times, depending on the time of his birth. Awakening occurs only when the unconsciousness falls asleep and wakes the consciousness. The misleading opinion of ufologists brought the humanity to a dead end in regard to understandings of My teachings. I have never spoken of Moses as a subject who was effected by pharaohs specifically RamsesII. However it is hard for ufologists to deal with the past of Moses, who saved his people from corruption and devastation. People made up fables where Moses appeared to be the means of profit gain used by pharaohs."

"I A
E ETHEREAL WORLD, PARTICULARLY DREAMS: DO NOT TRY TO CONCEIVE WITH THOUGHT WHAT YOU DO NOT UNDERSTAND! DO NOT TEACH OTHERS WHAT YOU DO NOT KNOW! DO NOT PERCEIVE THOUGHT AS MEANS TO MATERIAL GAIN!"

"It could cost you your life that you are obtaining through my teachings. However, if you do not obey it will be too late. Before you die in the Universe your inner feelings (inner bodies) will be subjected to devastating torment in the course of their destruction, because pain is a feeling, and any kind of pain will result in Physical Pain. If a person has no internal pain, he wouldn't develop any physical pain."

The Key to Finding Us Online

If you use keywords to navigate America Online, you might have noticed lately that your favorite ParaScope keyword isn't working for you like it used to. Due to a change in AOL policy (or perhaps an insidious conspiracy to hide us from our readers), many longstanding forums on the service can no longer use "generic" keywords. For instance, keywords such as "ufo," "conspiracy," and "weird," all of which used to point to ParaScope, now no longer access our area. You can still reach us via "specific" keywords like "parascope" or "scope," so please update your keywords accordingly.

Get the Whole Story on Martin Luther King

He had a dream, and they murdered him for it. But who shot MLK, and why? If you believe what you've read in history texts or the mainstream press, you've only learned the tip of the iceberg in the titanic story behind MLK's death. ParaScope boasts the largest collection of documents anywhere online covering King's assassination and James Earl Ray's subsequent trials and tribulations. If you're interested in learning the story behind the story, check out our extensive six-part overview of the assassination and then browse our dozens of hard-hitting articles about every aspect of the case.

Coming Up Next Week!

Catch a number of great stories next week on a daily basis on America or all at once next Friday on the web site, including daily updates to our Conspiracy Newsline and Daily Dose features. Among the articles you'll want to check out:

Stalin's Propaganda State: The Commissar Vanishes

Soviet leader Joseph Stalin ruled the Russian people with an iron hand, and exercised the same totalitarian control over the printed word and picture. As his victims disappeared to work camps or to the grave, they were also rubbed out of history -- literally. In the new book "The Commissar Vanishes: The Falsification of Photographs and Art in Stalin's Russia," propaganda collector David King puts this disturbing process of historical cleansing on display. Dossier reviews the startling collection of materials, which show how even top Soviet officials and former friends of Stalin were blurred, painted and cropped out of the national memory.

Bruce Maccabee on the "Mexican UFO Video"

By now you've all probably seen the "Mexican UFO Video" footage showing a wobbly rotating saucer drifting through the sky over downtown Mexico City. This video has been a topic of constant debate since it initially aired, with some holding it up as evidence of extraterrestrial visitors, and others asserting that the video is simply a hoax. In this piece, film analysis expert Bruce Maccabee gives his initial comments on the Mexican UFO Video, using analytical techniques and hard visual evidence to conclude that if this film is a fake, it's a VERY clever fake.

Psychic Predictions 1997: What They Don't Want Enquiring Minds to Know

They said scientists would capture a live, English-speaking Yeti. They said Barbra Streisand would convince Rush Limbaugh to become a liberal Democrat. They said Kathie Lee Gifford would be abducted by aliens and then abandoned in the Colorado wilderness. But they were wrong. Horribly wrong. (At least about everything but the Kathie Lee thing.) Although they are always good for a laugh, the predictions of tabloid newspaper psychics are not known for their accuracy. (surprise, surprise) didn't come true.

Conspiracy Newsline

Just kidding, of course -- if we really believed that, we wouldn't bring you daily updates on everything conspiratorial via Conspiracy Newsline. Get the latest

The Kooks vs. the Spooks:
CIA Pen Pals from "The Fringe and Further Out"

In 1965, the Central Intelligence Agency prepared a secret history of its bizarre encounters with the "cranks, nuts, and screwballs" who just wouldn't leave the agency alone. From the CIA's perspective, it's not a funny story, but Dossier editor Jon Elliston will show why this document is the most hilarious report ever put to paper by these supposedly somber spy analysts. If you've ever wanted to see the agency's harassment operations come home to roost, this is a gut-busting tale of CIA woe you dare not miss.

UFO Cautionary Tales:
The Jet-Propelled Couch

Human imagination consists of infinite space, and many universes may exist in a single cranium. Nowhere is this more aptly demonstrated than in the case of "Kirk Allen," a physicist at a sensitive government research installation who became convinced that he was an extraterrestrial. Allen was sent to psychoanalyst Dr. Robert Lindner for treatment, which ultimately succeeded in returning Allen to his undeniably terrestrial roots -- but by technology had completely ensnared Dr. Lindner! In this ultra-bizarre UFO Cautionary Tale, Nebula editor Paul B. Thompson explores the vast capacity of human imagination -- and human delusion.

Fortean Slips: Dispatches from the Paranormal Fringe

Greg,

Be reassured. Frances Emma Barwood is a citizen public servant who rarely leaves her community and focused on many community projects during her tenure on the Phoenix city council. She is not right wing. She has broad appeal and is even well supported by the unions.

She had no background in UFO issues prior to the March 13 Phoenix lights and has been trying to educate herself as to these matters. Her position is crafted around the inappropriate posture the government takes in these matters - both towards the states and the public.

She is the mother of three. She keeps her husband's books who makes a living in alternative energy production.

She is a nice person who acts on principal, has little interest in monetary gain from public service, is afraid of nothing save flying and will not back down from what she thinks is right.

From the left or the right, we could use a lot more just like her in office at all levels.

Philip,

I have seen the work of a number of "photo analysts" in the UFO field. Generally speaking, I have not been impressed. I will say right off that I am not including Jeff Sainio in this lot.

The person who has impressed me the most in dealing with still photos is Bruce Maccabee. Bruce knows his business and is thorough. Ted Phillips has also impressed me with his genuine photographic knowledge, but I don't know if he is still doing anything.

Unfortunately, in today's world, a still photograph is very unlikely to prove anything one way or the other. Photo fakery is just too easy today.

The suit was filed by the USA video distribution company directly involved. I don't know the venue. I know it never came to trial.

*****As an aside*****

The Duke triggered a half-hearted research quest on my part some months back---I was going to throw him a zinger....couldn't find grist for the mill, though, and never really finished it---but I came up with an interesting commentary from Hymn III of the Rig Veda regarding beings designated as "Asvins" who/which were new to me. They were noted in the Hymn:

"Come ye whose paths are red with flame."

The commentary indicates there were two of these Asvins, "Nasatyas" and "Dasra," who had "nimble hands" with which they were "quick to seize the offerings" of the locals after, apparently, coming on their red-flamed paths.

See Hymn III, at page 2, 'Sacred Writings, Hinduism, The Rig Veda' Translated by Ralph T. Griffith, Edited by Jaroslav Pelikan, Copyright by Motilal Banarsidass Publishers PVT.LTD. (1992)

It seems that if you are of an analogous mind, you can winnow the context of ancient writings for all kinds of interesting and entertaining anecdotal "evidence" for visitors from the heavens.

What I found most intriguing, however, in the commentary to the Asvins, was the fact that the ancient Indian commentators found these guys to be very puzzling in the context in which they, the commentators, found them. The ancient commentators:

"Next in order are the deities whose sphere is the heaven; of these the Asvins are the first to arrive....Who then are these Asvins? (And follows a list of speculations, which includes: " 'Two Kings, performers of holy acts,' say the legendary writers." Professor Roth comments:... "They are the earliest bringers of light in the morning sky, who in their chariots hasten onward before the dawn, and prepare a way for her." Commentary at page 2, supra.

Anyhow, I became interested in The Rig Veda itself, and lost interest with winnowing the context, since that aspect of viewing ancient writings is well-covered by numerous authors.

Kevin,

What's your problem, man? Since when is a straight answer to a question a cop-out????

If you are talking about the lawsuit, I do not have any personal knowledge of exactly what happened and have heard several different versions, but all of them have the same conclusion that the case was settled out of court.

If you have real information, why not impart it to the list instead of insulting me????!!!

Dear Phillip,

IF in fact the suit was filed the court file which would contain a copy of the initial suit filings, the response, plus motions and any other filings that might have occurred before the suit was allegedly settled. In these papers, you might be able to glean some *interesting morsels* of information about the film.

If the claim of a lawsuit came from Santilli and was not verified, there is a good chance that its a pile of something the bull left.

Hi Stuart!

This is, of course, a good point. But aircraft technology on earth has also failed to evolve in a way that would be terribly noticeable to the below referenced stone age natives, since, say the 1960s(?). Though the mix has changed, with helicopters becoming a larger part of the mix.

Unfortunately, I think the statistical data on geometries which some consider to indicate an upswing in triangular shapes is not in good enough condition to come to that conclusion, but it is certainly possible that the triangular / boomerang shape is becoming more prevalent, which would indicate a possible shift in technology or in the mix of civilizations generating them (if, indeed, the UFO source is ET).

It's certainly possible that the external geometry of UFOs isn't amenable to change because of the form follows function so tightly that gross geometric changes won't happen and small changes are swamped by perceptual differences in witnesses, the strangeness of the event, the variations in luminosity, etc.

The problem is that the stagnancy of UFO geometries is not, as far as I can see, a sufficient factor to distinguish TTH as the UFO cause from ETH.

I guess I don't see the conflict between your comments above and mine.

Actually, I tend to lean (but not too heavily) in the direction of the picture you paint (which I think I also put forward a while back) as to what's going on, as opposed to the massive scientific research sub-hypothesis, the cosmic prank sub-hypothesis, or the interstellar conquest sub-hypothesis.

(I call it the tourist / anthropologist sub-hypothesis).

Here's how I keep my perspective. I have a fish that lives in a tank in my living room. He's obviously attentive and, for a fish, pretty intelligent. But what does he make of my vacuuming the floor, or the strange way the sun goes out and then multiple suns appear (lights in the room)? Or how could he comprehend the optical physics that makes it seem that I am in two places at once (refracted or reflected by the tank walls).

I am very respectful of the possibility that in looking at the UFO phenomenon, I may be the fish.

So while most of the list seems to think that UFO geometries remain largely unchanged for at least 50 years, you believe that they follow science-fiction fashion.

What exactly leads you to that conclusion? Can you point to such a pattern in Magonia or the Project 1947 EM Effects catalog?

How do you cope with the presence of boomerang formations in the 1800s, disks in the early 1900s, triangles in the 1940s?

Why do most movie UFOs look nothing like reported UFOs? Why do most 1940s and 50s spacecraft look like cones and finned tubes and we have few or no reports of geometries that look anything like that?

Metal/solid surfaces - verified by touch, radar, bullets and rocks thrown.

EM effects

Heavy weight ground traces and ground burn traces

Radiation output verified by geiger counter

These all indicate an objectively existent, solid, possibly technological phenomenon. Alien spacecraft? Maybe.

Scott Adams, Dilbert's creator, is definitely on an anti-skeptic tear. In the latest strips, Dilbert's pet rat, Ratbert, turns out to be psychic. Dilbert can't stand this, and brings in a debunker to prove it's not true.

Today, the dialogue went like this:

Debunker: I've used the scientific method to debunk 100% of the people who claim they have mental powers.

Ratbert: Are you saying that every test you perform turns out the way you predict it will?

Debunker: What's your point?

Ratbert (shouting): YOU'VE PROVEN THAT YOU'RE PSYCHIC!!

I think a brief moment of thought will suggest what happens to this "vehicle" in any kind of wind.

Flip, turn, roll, catch wing on tree, crash...

Don't forget the Hudson Valley sightings had several under very windy conditions, including the Indian Head nuclear power plant.

A friend who is an abductee managed to obtain a short tape recording during the night of one of his/her abductions. The cassette recorder was hidden near the window in an adjacent bedroom where the abductee's child was sleeping. It is not known whether the recording was of sound picked up through the microphone, or of a waveform induced in the circuits of the recorder.

I would be happy to email to anyone interested the .wav file (912KB). My friend would welcome your opinions of the sound, posted to this list or privately (as appropriate).

He/she wishes to remain anonymous so I will relay email to/from him/her.

Hi all,

In the Economist of January 3 an excellent and well written history of the transistor can be found. At least for me it connected some loose threads.

>the interviews with Moore and Friedman? Like perhaps Bill or >Stan "suggested" that perhaps it would be better to call the
>"structural members" I-beams?

Of course not, my friend. Read what I wrote again:
"BTW, as I'm sure you know, the description of the 'members' as 'I-beams' comes only from Dr. Marcel, and this not until sometime well after he was first interviewed by Moore/Friedman. (This fact - I should have typed, "these facts" - somehow always gets (get) swept under the ufological rug in discussions of who saw what when.) All other credible witnesses to the debris found on the Foster Ranch, including Dr. Marcel's father (Schmid, too?), describe the 'members' as being of square or rectangular cross section, 3/8 of an inch or so, and balsa-like (or, flat out, balsa) to boot."

My point is threefold:

(1) In his earliest interviews and communciations with ufologists, Dr. Marcel never once referred to what he recalled as a metallic strut-like member on which he remembered seeing strange markings as an I-beam, a strut having a capital 'I' cross-section. This first surfaced in his descriptions a couple of years later, I'm quite sure as a result of his honest efforts to recover details of decades-old memories, not as the result of dishonesty or of undue influence by Moore and Friedman but, it would seem, with the help of Kevin Randle and Don Schmitt (see their UFO CRASH AT ROSWELL).

(2) Not one of the other credible witnesses to the debris recovered from the Foster Ranch site described the members or beams as having an 'I' cross-section. In fact, ALL those who did discuss the cross-section of these fragments--including Dr.
Marcel's father--said it was rectangular or square. Similarly, all such witnesses other than Dr. Marcel--including Dr. Marcel's father--described the members as sticks looking and feeling like balsa or simply as balsa, not metallic in any way.

(3) Given the above, it is more than a little reasonable to conclude Dr. Marcel's recollections are faulty in many important respects.

Finally, lest anyone further misconstrue my views, I consider Dr.
Jesse Marcel to be both an honest man and one of the nicest guys I've ever met.

-- Cheers, Karl Pflock (aka El Topo No)

Stan,

I have just finished watching the UPN program. While I doubt that you were talking about this goofy video (AT LEAST I HOPE NOT), the producers of this program certainly made it appear that way (to a more naive audience, for example) in the way ALL the conversations were edited.

I can only hope that your intentions were good, but IMO, don't do us anymore favors. This video was a complete joke and I think your appearance on this program lessens your credibility.

Leave these shows for the "Alien Hunters" of the world.

Don't become one of ufology's bad guys.

Plan 9 From UPN!

From: John Velez <jvif@spacelab.net>
Date: Wed, 21 Jan 1998 01:54:53 -0500
Fwd Date: Wed, 21 Jan 1998 06:04:59 -0500
Subject: Plan 9 From UPN!

Hello Errol, hi All,

The folks at UPN wanted me to review the abduction video and by gum I'm gonna do it. But, I'm going to do it here with you guys, away from cameras and those 'editors' that can make you sound like a blithering idiot. I'll do it in a forum where I will not be edited.

My "Review"

PLAN 9 FROM UPN!

Sci-fi movies have had a 'best' and a 'worst' candidate for years.

You can fill in the name of whatever movie you consider to have been the 'best.' That one varies, but I'm positive that we can all agree that the very worst sci-fi movie ever made was, "Plan 9 From Outer Space!" <G>

Well ufology has a 'worst' now too! Our version of 'Plan 9' aired last nite in the form of that purported video of an abduction. First, let me say that my money is on the 'little girl' being the alien that was wearing gloves, (they looked a little like Mickey Mouse hands! <G>) at the end of the video, and that the little girl was also one of the aliens at the "UFO!" Even money it's the kid in the bug head and bodysuit! <G>

Why am I comparing that travesty of a video to "Plan 9 From Outer Space?" Well, let's analyze!

Plan 9 was 'bad' because;

- a. The acting was very baaaaaaaaaad, as wooden and contrived as it gets. (So were the 'actors' in last nights little soap opera!)
- b. Plan 9 had the cheapest sets and 'special effects' that anyone ever tried to pass off as 'realistic!' (Ditto the abduction video. )

The 'home' seemed nice enough mind you, but I'm talking about the "UFO" that had charred rockets on the bottom, and that computer generated ball of light, -that the actors eyes didn't follow around the room accurately because the incompetent schmuck that directed it didn't use the traditional 'tennis ball on a stick' to help guide the actors eye movements through the 'scene.' The computer artist then substitutes the "ball of light" for the tennis ball and Viola! you have a scene where a ball of light enters a room and all eyes follow its movements accurately.

Not so in last nights farce. I've never even directed traffic, but even I know enough from watching PBS to shoot a sequence like that and make it look real. I hope the banana that directed that crap we saw last night never works again! Geez, what a "hacker!" <G>

- c. It becomes obvious (quickly) that Plan 9 is a "turkey" as any who have seen it will testify. (Ditto for last nights 'video.') I didn't get past the 30 second mark before the alarm on my BS Detector went off and damn near drowned out everything else that followed. <G>

Enough said that it was a sorry joke and that they really shouldn't have bothered. Now on to more serious business!

1. Jeanne Sutton! (The "abductee" that commented so knowingly throughout that painful sham/scam of a program.) If you didn't pick up on her love of the lens that was staring her in the face then you missed the 'love story' part of the UPN presentation.

2. Stan, I love you man but you really should have passed on it! They edited/chopped you to death. Some of the cuts were downright amateurish and plainly made to make your comments -fit- the video presentation.

3. And now the bottom line!

Wow, that was -one sweet piece- of debunking work! Think about it. Anyone who watched that farce last night that hasn't been lobotomized or doesn't break their Prozac tablets in half before ingesting walked away from that thing thinking, " What a bunch of phoney ridiculous crap!"

How effective! What better way to attach ridicule and increase the incredulity in anyone unfamiliar with the phenomenon than to present an absolutely ridiculous piece of crap like that as somekind of 'evidence' for abduction! Whoever put this thing together is not so stupid because (I think) if what I just suggested is in fact true, then they have succeeded. In Spades!

Enough, I promise never to mention it again. I hope they catch up with and prosecute whoever perpetrated and financed this blatant hoax. It -is- criminal, and in more ways than one.

Just one mamaluks opinion!

Subject: Re: Audio recording made during an abduction

I posted yesterday offering to email to interested parties a .wav file of a recording made during an abduction. To make things easier for all, the .wav file is now downloadable from the RISKERS site. If you go to

<http://www.risk.org>

then you will see a banner referring to this file. Please download it from there rather than requesting that I email it.

Here again are the details that I originally provided.

A friend who is an abductee managed to obtain a short tape recording during the night of one of his/her abductions. The cassette recorder was hidden near the window in an adjacent bedroom where the abductee's child was sleeping. It is not known whether the recording was of sound picked up through the microphone, or of a waveform induced in the circuits of the recorder.

My friend would welcome your opinions of the sound, posted to this list or privately (as appropriate).

He/she wishes to remain anonymous so I will relay email to/from him/her.

My friend requests that the few other people who have heard the file, and so will recognize it, do not pass on his/her identity to anyone else.

Hi Mark,

Are you talking lighter-than-air, or ultralight as well?

It won't take much for me to fold on this issue because I have no engineering aptitude at all, and I know zilch about aviation. Is that generally true of gliders, that they can't handle any kind of wind? It surprises me a little, because I've seen HANG gliders do okay in strong winds. And it seems like the huge size of these things might afford some stability, not to mention all manner of advanced stabilization systems they might have developed.

The other thing is that the Board of Sponsors of the Federation of American Scientists includes half the country's living Nobel laureates, so I wouldn't think they'd put this forward if it didn't make at least a modicum of sense. You're probably much more knowledgeable than I about this, so tell me what you think.

Kind regards,

Keith

If anyone has details regarding this production, they would be of interest.

IMHO, this program was poorly acted and of questionable entertainment value.

I'm curious as to whether any of our readers to the north had heard of this case previously, or if they recognized any of the actors in the program. The show, for all of its glory, provided few real details of the case.

Jeesh. I feel like I'm trapped in a rehearsal for "Sweeps Week"!

Today, at 1010hrs UTC, over Brisbane, Queensland, Australia, myself and two children watched a fast moving single white light travel from directly overhead to 45 degrees to the East and was then masked by low cloud.

There was no sound and no other lights visible. Many stars was clearly visable before the low cloud cover swept in from the south.

The arc of observence was 45 degrees and the time the object was in view was no more than 30 seconds.

Brisbane, Australia lies at 27 degrees South, 153 degrees East.

I would even carry this thought a step further and ask if those who were interviewed had actually been shown the video that their comments were to become interspersed with. My impression was that most of the comments were very general, and were edited into the video to make it appear as if there was a relationship

Who was the guy that UPN got to imitate Stanton Freidman? I refuse to believe that Mr. Friedman had ANYTHING to do with that abominable titillation. Please ... Stan -- say it ain't so! Sue for character misrepresentation, or, just to ascend to hyperbole, I know a couple of hard cases from south Georgia that will work that UPN bunch over for 'ya -- just say the word! God, I'll never go on television!!

Steve,

TV people are famous for this. A couple of years ago I did a TV interview on the AA film. The interview was around an hour in duration. The actual segment was five minutes long!

I was horrified when I saw it. They had edited it so it sounded like I was saying that I witnessed the crashed craft and creatures!!! And it was also edited so it sounded like I had the original film here in my office!!!!!!!

I got all sorts of phone calls from people wanting to know if I had really witnessed the crash. I pointed out to them that this supposedly happened in 1947 and that I was less than one year old at the time. Usual response, "Oh."

I was really worried about the implication that I had a box full of film reels in my office! I had an alarm system installed.

These guys know exactly what they are doing when they practice creative editing like this. Just watch the TV news. Someone starts to say something, and instead of letting you listen, they come in with a voice over and some talking head has to tell you his/her interpretation of what was said. Do we really need these jerks to do our thinking for us???

TV Appearances

Fwd Date: Wed, 21 Jan 1998 10:00:50 -0500
Subject: TV Appearances

Dear List,

It has been a week since I appeared briefly on a show called 'Chronicle' on The Prime [cable] Channel here in Canada.

The first thing I have to say is that what I expected was nothing like what I experienced during the taping of the show. I have been on two other TV shows for a total of an hour of live presentations. I thought there might be some kind of rehearsal, preparation or the like. Such was not the case where the hostess of Chronicle was upset and an unwilling participant in the proceedings.

The show opened with two esteemed men posturing themselves and exchanging opposite views. In one segment of taping, I described my abduction as a child in 1952. The rest of the show was merely the continued exchanging of views by the posturing men.

How embarrassed I am to have taken part in such a ridiculous and callous treatment of the subject of UFOs, abductions and all. It was so stupid to see two learned men exposing their ignorance of all of the aspects of the entire phenomenon. True, they might have been writers who had written various articles about the subject matter, but it did not help for them to be so blatantly ignorant of the facts.

Just what are the facts of abductions? What are the facts of sightings and all of the rest of the good stuff? What is going on in our public media? What do you think? Is there such a thing as 'False Memory Syndrome' that affects individuals throughout their lives?

I have never been hypnotized and remember my experiences vividly as flashbacks, even since the one experience in 1952. I will not accept the fact that I have been led to believe my experiences are really flirtations in imagination.

I am very angry and hurt to think that I have been so publicly passed off. There was simply no understanding, no compassion and no explanation for my experiences. None of the people involved in the show thought to care one whit about what I was thinking, what I had felt about the Kangaroo Court proceedings, or about what I could have said in my opinions.

This kind of wasted time treatment of ufology has been going on for a very long time. It has led to dissension and mythology, an ignorantly farcical passiveness of the public at the hands of supposed experts in the field. This isn't Star trek, its real life! And, this is how we will react to the possibility of the reality of the situation? How embarrassing to be human! I cannot say what I think without reverting to unmentionable expletives!

It is not a case of 'what if' an alien presence is bothering with humanity. I am here and in your face to say that there is definitely something going on! See me and know me. Because when it is your turn to experience, will you be as able to survive the fact as I have?

Go stuff your popcorn,
Cathy

Judging by all the responses on this list, I'm wondering if anyone caught the very end of the program where the credits were scrolled and the actors names were listed?

Stan should be ashamed of himself, as should the woman psychologist (Yvonne?) from California.

The rest of the experts didn't surprise me. Just what one would expect on production like this. Media hogs.

I have to kind of agree with Steve Kaeser that it appeared that the people commenting hadn't actually seen the production. Except that child psychologist Gary (? Never heard of him before) who said the child was assuming the adult roles, blah, blah, blah. I forget what all he said because I was laughing so hard. Hope this guy isn't licensed.

No, that was him. :0

Stan told me he hesitantly agreed to be on the show because, as he put it: "I'd rather it be me on there than let somebody with questionable research ability get more air time."

I think he knew it was a hoax to begin with, but he didn't want a (in quotation marks) "abductee/contactee expert" to be on the show and suggest it was all real. He had a point. (Too bad Sims got on anyway. :)

He figured they'd edit him to hell, and they did. (I can imagine what A&E will do with Randle and me next month!)

I agree with John Velez. "Plan 9 From UPN!" LOL!

A 45 degree arc of passage from the zenith at twilight time in near 30 seconds is very consistant with a passing low orbit satellite or high flying plane. One point to remember is that the nearer to zenith the sighting is, the faster is the perceived angular velocity. To be anomalous, this sighting would have to had taken less than 15 seconds and still be too high to be recognizable. Nevertheless, thanks for taking the time to report it.

Hi Rebecca,

At this end of Canada, the east coast, none of us-except maybe Stan Friedman-have a clue what the heck this UPI show is. We don't get it over here, nor "Sightings" which I've been on or "Strange Universe" which I've been on- if that's still going. It's a safe bet that Stan hasn't seen it unless they sent him a promo copy.

"Sightings" in mine and Chris Styles' case was fairly accurate [we received a promo copy] as was Strange Universe from what I've been told. So I suggest that you give Stan the benefit of the doubt on this one because dollars to donuts he hasn't seen it. Judging from all the comments the "talent" [Stan, etc.] were shuffled around in the edit suite so as to make chocolate chip cookies out of raisen bread.

Thanks John. You were obviously right to refuse to participate in this charade.

I'd like to make a positive suggestion here. Tell the jerks how much you resent this show! I went to a search engine last night, typed in "UPN" and managed to find a site and email address for my local affiliate. I assume there's probably also a main site for the network.

I read them the riot act for insulting their viewers. I think I also said something about "lamest thing I've ever seen." You get the drift.

If they receive substantial flak for this show, perhaps they'll think twice before doing it again. (We can only hope. <g>)

Like a fool, I did not see that they listed those people as actors. I left the room so disappointed in the film. Normally I look for credits, but it was my thought that the film was the original film found in the McPherson house. There was no verbal announcement of it being an reenactment, that I caught.

To one and all:

I made a very quick trip to LA after New Years and answered a bunch of general questions about abductions... and had a brief visit with my daughter. I never saw the video. I certainly never said anything about it on camera and never endorsed it. I didn't see the show last night because it wasn't available here. I hope to get a copy and then take whatever action is appropriate. So far nobody has said I said anything that wasn't true... I don't really believe the public is stupid and understand that acting credits were given...

Apology to MW #216 (For January 21, 1998)

Rhyming still I try, with a finger in the eye of those that I decry without a conscience. I protect myself from them with this meter kept in trim to hide in fact from him t'would put me under.

"He's a *wacko* like John Ford. But he can safely be ignored. A minor poet =85 aren't you bored -- his constant tapping"? But this tapping I can hear could have you crying in your beer -- and not so far from here; I'm not just rapping.

Is our future writ in stone? Could we go it all alone, and can we all atone our common madness? Think of Aztecs looking east, "a bearded savior? [begin the feast!]", but it's Cortezed Catholic priests that burn our answer.

We hear of Ford the 'Gun Nut', implied he's got a 'wide butt', and how he hangs with scuts, and wacko losers. But he finished up his college, and then he used his newfound knowledge, to rifle in the foliage of the system's hidden sewers! That's what I could plan to do, our constitution through and through -- you would tear that from my view, you scabrous bunky! The stuff that you report wouldn't stand in any court, and though you call yourself a sport you're just a flunky. You write what you think sells, the fairest play can go to hell; you've got yours so *it's* just swell; you're so unharmlless. But you're the one to go down first, you're the first to feel the thirst, you're the one to be immersed in sad despair.

Retired from the courts, he was a cop of sorts, republican in quarts, and seeing commies. Hell, he sounds just like my dad, and it kind of makes me sad, perhaps a trifling mad at the injustice.

It seems they call him crazy 'cause he's not the least bit hazy on the subject of your 'phasing flying saucer'. He thinks that some touch down, he thinks they're under ground, he thinks they're making sounds we should be hearing. Well the Suffolk county boys should gather up their bully toys -- and make a similar noise to label me. I hold the same beliefs, and I'm getting no relief, as the 'man' laughs up his sleeve; I would be free.

Lehmborg@snowhill.com

Think about it! Have the Suffolk county boys established the beginnings of legal precedent for a flying saucer murder defense?
Believe in flying saucers, and be unfit to stand trial -- for attempted murder -- later, murder full blown?

Where did he get the radium?

What if John -- "lik[ing] to talk about what he would do to [even imagined enemies?]", and not KNOWING about PLANTED radium in his pickup, was encouraged, by the 'wire', to fantasize about it in the same manner you could with me if you told me I could press a little red button in your outstretched palm and watch Pat Robertson's head explode on network television <even now I scramble for that button in my mind <sardonic grin>. Or perhaps it is not acceptable for me to make such an expression even when he makes every indication that I should be dispatched in an even crueller fashion! That I should die to feed the God of HIS imagination and interpretation =85 or yours -- even mine, but especially Suffolk county's! That is the REAL madness!

Restore John Ford!

I didn't see the show. If my responses to very general questions (I never saw the video) were taken out of context to make something false look real, then I suppose I can take legal action. I am anxious to see a tape. I wonder wheter anything I nobody has taken issue with what I said.I didn't make the OK, Cathy. Who were they? I'd love to know this, because I'm pretty annoyed at media treatment of the subject, too. What's worse is the expounding of ideas by so-called "experts" who don't do any original research and only regurgitate old adages.

Sorry to hear you went through that. :(

First, let me thank you for having the wisdom and courage to realize that your knowledge about these things was not complete and absolute. Many others on this mail list would do well to learn from your example.

Second forgive me for grabbing on to this to vent my growing frustration with the limited effort of many here to teach themselves more about this subject before they burden us with their misguided assertions.

To illustrate this, a few months ago we had a lengthy thread on the Brussels sightings where it was either asserted or lamented (depending on position) on how rare were combined radar and visual sightings. At that time, my reading of a dozen or so better known books about UFO incidents tended to support this assertion.

Last night I just finished reading "Flying Saucers From Outer Space" by Major Donald Kehoe, a book published in mid 1953. What a revelation. No, not of divinely revealed proof of an incontrovertible and unique cause of all UFO sightings. Rather of the cyclic nature not only of the sightings, but also of the investigation, official positions and propaganda, media coverage, and actual public knowledge and acceptance of the UFO phenomenon.

It is deeply disheartening for me to realize that the general dialogue we share on this mail list has been repeated, often in mimicked phrases, every ten or so years since WWII. This only reflects the impotence of research and science when faced with disinformation, propaganda, and media prostitution.

To return to my example, in "Flying Saucers From Outer Space" the majority of the 50 or so cases recounted were combination radar and visual sighting events. This alone makes our recent positions on this type of sightings vacuous. Beyond this is the fact that this book is not merely another compilation of widely collected reports. Rather, it is a collection of official reports from the Air Technical Intelligence Center, then the principal military group investigating UFOs. More importantly, this is not the telling of a collection of initial reports, but of a collection of the concluding Intelligence Reports with the then current best explanation of the events. Some of these events included not only radar and visual sightings, but also gun camera or other photographic evidence. Just what level of substantial evidence, then and now, is necessary for common acceptance of UFOs as a subject of legitimate, unridiculed public research? The book was published in 1953, one of the first handful of modern books about UFOs. The cases cited were from official Air Force reports. Major Donald Keyhoe has always been described as an honest and forthright author. What are we missing here? I struggle to imagine how our common knowledge of UFOs can remain so stagnant nearly 50 years after such evidence is made public. I will always underestimate the power of official and public pressure.

Underlying my ravings above is the nagging feeling that too few people take the responsibility of reading some variety of books on subjects they want to speak about. Most of my reading is from library books. Interlibrary Loan makes most all books available for a small charge. Do any of the current UFO organizations have private library loan policies? Perhaps we could maintain a minor thread of favorite and recommended reading so that every week worthy books could be suggested.

Bye... Ted..

You missed my point. I wasn't referring so much to the past 50 years as to the representation of these phenomena in the past 500 years. I have had neither the time nor the resources to evaluate the subject over the past 50 years, which is why I said in my previous message I was open to new information on the subject.

> How do you cope with the presence of boomerang formations in the > 1800s, disks in the early 1900s, triangles in the 1940s?

I was referring primarily to CE3s in which considerable detail about the craft in question is reported. Were there CE3s reported from these times? (Not doubting you; I'd love to hear more about it).

> Why do most movie UFOs look nothing like reported UFOs? Why do > most 1940s and 50s spacecraft look like cones and finned tubes > and we have few or no reports of geometries that look anything > like that?

Actually, I take issue with that. From what I remember, the "finned cone" spaceships of the 1940's and early 50's were often of Earth origin, whereas the representations of craft of ET origin were varied. Furthermore, trying to establish causality may be difficult since I'm sure that UFO sightings have influenced SF as much as SF may influence or color UFO sightings.
Case in point, one of the first reports of "flying saucers" was actually a misnomer; the sighting in question involved objects which *skipped* like saucers. Yet shortly after, saucer-shaped craft appeared both in SF and in popular sightings.

Again, I'm not saying there aren't UFOs, I'm just saying I'm not convinced they are big hunks o' metal.

Interesting ... can you give me some references for these?

> EM effects
> Heavy weight ground traces and ground burn traces

All of which are characteristic effects of stable high-energy plasma configurations (plasmoids). Of course, they could also be evidence of some high-tech propulsion system as well.

> Radiation output verified by geiger counter

Which has also been posited as a plasmoid characteristic (note: I'm not good at plasma physics, so I haven't been able to evaluate the published literature).

> These all indicate an objectively existent, solid, possibly > technological phenomenon. Alien spacecraft? Maybe.

Well, I wasn't disputing the *existence* of the phenomena. What I was trying to say (and wasn't very clear at) is that if these phenomena do exist as sentient beings, I think they may be so advanced as to be in a sense "beyond our reality", and much of what we see about them (e.g., the details of the craft, and *especially* the details of what they tell us in CE3s) may be as much a reflection of our own belief system as reality. After all, their "language" is probably very different from our own, possibly operating nonverbally, and if so, we may be misinterpreting them completely.

I'm especially concerned with interpreting CE3s as physical events. As an example, I have read several accounts from people who are supposedly abducted repeatedly while in bed, and yet there haven't been any observers who can verify this. Excluding for a moment the possibility of neurological problems, wouldn't such advanced beings be capable of immersing the abductee in a completely "hallucinatory" scenario?

Anyway, like I said, I'm open to anything, and I'm not trying to say "you're wrong" so much as trying to see what various people think and how well they can support those views. If anything I'd love to be referred to some evidence on the subject.

> > Assuming no real progress is made, and that we continue to view > > UFOs as mythological phenomena, I wonder how they will appear, > > say, 100 years from now, or 200.

> You must be the "we".

Again by "mythological" I didn't necessarily mean fantastic or false; I just meant that there *is* a modern-day mythology about UFOs which is evolving. And whether or not UFOs are real, I think most would agree that the culture surrounding UFOs has evolved into a modern mythology.

And I'm not the only one who views UFOs as a manifestation of our own expectations as much as reality. There are a couple of authors I've read who have pointed out a continuum from faerie lore to UFOs without making the conclusion many today seem to have made (i.e., that people in former times must have been mistaking UFOs and aliens for something else, and that we, being so much more advanced, know The Truth). I don't think we've gotten that much more intelligent in the past 500 years.

And I also think that in 100 or 200 years we'll look back on our current level of science and technology and consider it hopelessly primitive and naive. As such I have no doubt that our concept of these phenomena will change.

> few real details of the case.

Do we have any reason to believe that there was a real case?

As I posted to the list after seeing the promo a couple of weeks ago, I recognized actor Kristian Ayre, who played "Tommy". He is Canadian, so I think that must be where it was made. (This presumably also explains why we originally heard that the video was about a Canadian family, even though the actual video stated that it was Minnesota, in the US.)

So I wasn't surprised that the video was not of a real abduction case. What I was surprised at was UPN's asking people to get in touch with them to say whether or not they thought the video was real. How stupid does UPN think people are? The actors were fully credited at the end of the show!

Subject: LAKE COUNTY ALIEN ABDUCTION VIDEO IS FAKE! UPN KNEW THIS!
X-Mailer: NETCOMplete v3.27, from NETCOM On-Line Communications, Inc.

Everyone,

I am sure all of you have watched or heard about UPN's special "Incident in Lake County: Alien Abduction". UPN makes this show out to be a real home video of a whole family being abducted by extraterrestrials. Well, here is some evidence that could prove that the whole program "Incident in Lake County: Alien Abduction" is FAKE and a piece of DISINFORMATION!

One of the main people in the video of the so called "abduction" is really an ACTOR! Yes. Thats CORRECT! Here are the webpages that proves this.

<http://www.andromeda5.com/>

and

http://www.andromeda5.com/alien\_abduction/

The actor in the video is Kristian Ayre from shows such as Nickelodeon's "Space Cases" and "GhostWriter". The fact that he is an ACTOR strongly indicates that the ENTIRE video of the so-called abduction is FAKE and a piece of DISINFORMATION and that UPN KNEW THIS!

I am infuriated with UPN. They broadcasted this show and made it seem like it was real when they knew it was really FAKE and DISINFORMATION! We cannot let UPN and other organizations continue to dish out DISINFORMATION like this to the public! We must all unite and EXPOSE this video as a FAKE and piece of DISINFORMATION to the ENTIRE WORLD! If we do not expose this video as a hoax and a piece of disinformation on the part of UPN other networks might follow their lead and start PURPOSELY creating FAKE videos and airing them and dishing out MORE dis-information!

And we also need to (PEACEFULLY)expose UPN for airing this video like it was real when really it was a FAKE that was CREATED by ACTORS. We cannot let them get away with dishing out disinformation like this designed to DISCREDIT the UFO COMMUNITY. We need to PEACEFULLY work to make sure that a piece of disinformation like this is NEVER aired on TV again.

Please email this message far and wide and post it to mailing lists etc.

Sad events surrounding the UPN broadcast...

Subject: Sad events surrounding the UPN broadcast...

I just thought I'd take a moment to record what happened on the internet AFTER the UPN video "abduction" broadcast. I help maintain EFnet's #UFO chat channel. What struck me as completely sad was the fact that there was actually a debate about the authenticity of the UPN show! The fact that there were credits after the program was over makes any debate completely worthless. It eventually took someone going onto the web to find a page that mentioned one of the actors in the video. At that point some of the people started to say things like "Ok.. I will ADMIT that it could be a hoax, but we have no proof of that yet..." Where do these people come from?! I know I shouldn't be suprised by this sort of thing by now, but still....

I just don't know if I should be laughing or crying!

Thanks,
Scott K. Hale

Hello List,

I would like to add a few comments from a Media point of view.

First:
Not all of the folks in the media misrepresent. Editing is necessary due to the limitations of time.

Second:
Some do! Unless you live in a cave you know very well who the misrepresenters are. (They have been doing it for years and they still are!)

Third:
I would not consider insulting the intelligence of old media pros such as, Stan Friedman, Darrell Simms, Yvonne Smith, etal, by saying that they didn't know what they were getting into. Of course they did! They have all done it many, many times before.
And many times for the same producers and programs. (Bob Kiviat) (Sightings, A&E, TLC, Sci-Fi, Channel, and more talk show hosts than I care to list) and each time they signed a standard industry release allowing the producers to edit as they please.

Fourth:
If you don't want to be misquoted or misrepresented don't sit down for interviews!
As a person who sticks cameras in people's faces for a living I know all about the lure of the spotlight. I am also aware of the dubious practice of sucking someone onto a program under false pretenses. Years ago I was asked to appear on the Montel Williams Show. The topic was to be the Government involvement in UFO coverups and they wanted a documentarians point of view. It was not the topic at all but rather a typical confrontational show with the "Good Guys vs the Bad Guys." full of misquotes and B.S. editing.

Fool me once...shame on you!
Fool me twice...shame on me!

Last but not least:
Kudos to John Velez for knowing better and shining it on!

Keep an open mind,
Russ Estes

Questions around 'Abduction' video

Subject: Questions around 'Abduction' video

Hi All -

It appears from some of the posts that I've read thus far, that the impression of the list is that the video is a hoax. Or should I say definitely a hoax. Therefore, it should be easy enough to confirm this, given some background checking. How does one go about obtaining a police report on this case? I mean an entire family disappears, there would've definitely been some investigation. A police investigation would've found the shotguns melted? or mutilated? A shotgun hole in one of the upstairs doors? A thanksgiving dinner laid out, but not eaten? The fuse box melted? The truck battery corroded? How bout the power company in the area, would they be able to confirm that they had problems with their transformers on that given night, 11-27-96(or was it 97)? How bout that cow in the pasture, was a mutilation reported (or found) on that night? There was no interview with any neighbors, wouldn't they've seen some strange lights or heard shotgun blasts? Also, the producers never stated how they acquired the video? If there was an investigation, then the video would be a valuable piece of evidence in the disappearance of a family. How does UPN get it? Was there an interview with a local police authority? I didn't see one, but I might've missed it.

The video was "cheesy" which it should be, if it is an actual home video. I didn't expect some glossy hollywood production? Why is it, that at a time when the public appears ready to learn about the UFO/Abduction phenomena in a more serious tone, that we get this "too good to be true" video with little or no facts?

Politics and UFOs

By World Editorial Writers

1/20/98

POLITICS IS SOMETIMES referred to as a circus, and there is no doubt that Oklahoma politics has had its circus-like aspects down through the years. Candidates who are named for famous people, or who have funny names like "Ploughboy," fisticuffs among lawmakers and other shenanigans from time to time have caused Oklahoma voters to chuckle -- or shake their heads in dismay.

But Oklahoma doesn't hold an exclusive franchise on political zaniness, not by a long shot. Take Arizona -- please.

In 1988, when then-Gov. Evan Mecham was in the process of being recalled by voters, more than 100 people, including a death-row inmate, took out candidate petitions in the hope of running for governor. Even rock star Alice Cooper said he was thinking of running.

This year a former Phoenix city councilwoman, Frances Emma Barwood, is running for secretary of state on a platform that includes, among other things, a demand that the military explain any UFOs sighted over Arizona. Barwood's efforts to capitalize on a recent rash of UFO reports have endeared her to the supernaturalists and anti-government conspiratorialists who ply the Internet and talk-show radio. She was accompanied by UFO researchers at her campaign kickoff, and her campaign manager is a lobbyist in Washington for UFO aficionados.

Secretary of state is a high-profile job in Arizona because the holder of the office is first in line to succeed the governor. In most states that's no big deal but in Arizona two recent governors have been removed from office. In fact, the current governor, Jane Hull, was secretary of state before succeeding convicted Gov. Fife Symington.

Say what you will about Oklahoma politics; at least UFOs, so far, have not been an issue in a statewide election campaign.

Interesting comment on the UPN abduction video. Received via "alt.alien.research" January 21 at 23.59 local time (GMT+ 1 hour):

Message-ID: <34C67C29.F9E5B72@erols.com>

The SMALL closing credits include:

Shari Khademi        as Alien 1
Myles Wolf            as Alien 2

So there is no possible doubt, UPN admitted this OUTRAGEOUS HOAX that they had been repeatedly claiming to be REAL. Since most people dont read closing credits, they would need time to realize how badly done the presentation was.

UPN IS IN BIG TROUBLE. FRAUD IS ILLEGAL, AND WHAT THEY PERPETRATED WAS F R A U D.

Right on Don. I didn't see the show last night. I didn't see the video. I wasn't asked about the video. I gave no opinions about the video. I see no reason to say the video is real when actors are listed at the end of the show as I gather they were.

Little green men are green, Doug Clark muses, because that's the color of money.

Scorched UFO buffs call him a real Man in Black.

To spaced-out believers, Richard Weaver is a gatekeeper for the U.S. government's conspiracy to hush up the fact that a saucer full of cosmic commuters once took a tumble out among the New Mexico tumbleweeds.

But the 50-year-old Spokane native says he got cheated if his critics are correct.

"I never got the watch or the cool sunglasses," complains Weaver, referring to "Men in Black" -- last year's science-fiction blockbuster about a clandestine agency that keeps tabs on interstellar travelers.

Now retired from the Air Force, Weaver was a colonel assigned to the Office of Special Investigations when he co-wrote the 1994 Air Force study that debunked the famed "Roswell Incident."

The Virginia resident was in Spokane this week visiting family members. A Shadle Park High and Washington State University grad, Weaver took an afternoon off to talk about his "Roswell Report -- Fact vs. Fiction in the New Mexico Desert."

As thick as the city's phone book, the document explores the July 1947 recovery of pieces of a strange "flying disk" on a ranch near Roswell, N.M. "We literally tried to do our best," he says. "It was never me against the UFO people."

What was found in the desert a half-century ago was totally terrestrial, the report concludes. The flimsy wreckage came from an experimental high-altitude balloon deployed to eavesdrop on Russian nuclear tests.

Such an earthly explanation predictably sent the UFO community into orbit.

"The Air Force is lying through its teeth," groused renowned UFO proponent Stanton Friedman, when asked in a 1996 interview about the "Roswell Report." "... Boy did the Air Force supply the fiction."

The sandy-haired Weaver is amused by the ruckus that put him in the national media spotlight.

"I got anonymous telephone calls. I got hate faxes from people questioning my sanity and even my parentage. I never received a direct "I will kill you," but there were a lot of veiled threats," he says.

"Some were in German, French and Russian. I couldn't read them, but SOB sort of looks the same in any language."

Weaver insists, however, that he never wanted his name linked to little green men. "I'd like to be remembered for putting killers and rapists in jail. Instead, I'll be the guy who did the study on all this goofy UFO stuff."

For much of his 28 years in the Air Force, Weaver probed crimes and helped keep the lid on real secrets like the Stealth and B-2 bombers.

Then, in 1994, he was given the job of focusing his sleuthing skills on Roswell. That came after U.S. Congressman Steven Schiff, R-New Mexico, filed a request for information regarding the alleged saucer crash.

Schiff got more than he bargained for. Weaver led a staff of crack researchers who spent eight months investigating the case.

You don't have to be Rocketman to see the Roswell Incident for the load of horse twaddle it is.

Back in 1947, this was only a two-day news story that ended when the sticks and foil found were ruled to have come from a weather balloon. Space aliens didn't even enter the picture until decades later, when kooks like Friedman and others started spouting off and selling books.

Now Roswell's space fantasy has evolved into its main industry. The small city has three alien museums. The saucer crash is actively promoted through the Chamber of Commerce.

Why? Because big money is to be made.

Last summer's 50th anniversary party was a galactic blowout that packed Roswell with a horde of costumed wackos. It was, says Weaver, "a cross between Woodstock and a meeting for the insane."

There probably is a conspiracy afoot. It is with UFO hucksters who can't afford to let truth get in the way of such a lucrative scam.

"This is logic vs. emotion," says the government's Man in Black. "Roswell has become like Paul Bunyan. It's a myth that people believe."

A Tribute to Shari Adamiak

Shari Adamiak passed on to the worlds of Light today, January 20, 1998 at 9:50 am MST.

Shari made her transition in the presence of friends and loved ones, peacefully and without pain.

I ask that everyone pause to say a prayer for Shari and the progress of her soul in the presence of God.

What words can contain our sense of loss and of the love we all shared with Shari?

Since 1991, when we first met at a lecture in Los Angeles, Shari has been a pillar of strength and support, an indefatigable colleague, a true friend, an intrepid fellow explorer, an irreplaceable confidant and a fearless lioness without whose dedication CSETI could not have realized its many historic achievements.

She has been my right hand and trusted assistant for over six years. Whether braving the dangers of the remotest parts of Latin America or assisting with meetings at the offices of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the Pentagon, Shari was there with me - and for all of us. She never faltered and she never gave up.

Unphased by the barbs of critics or the machinations of relentless covert operations, she resolutely worked for a time of peace - a peace universal, for the earth and for countless worlds beyond.

How many wonders did we witness together? From walking in the shadow of some of this world's largest volcanos with extraterrestrial spacecraft floating silently above us, to watching a dozen top-secret military witnesses tell an assemblage of Congressmen the truth about UFOs, Shari and I saw events unfold of such great significance that only the passage of time will reveal their true and ultimate significance.

And through it all, Shari was filled with a joy, an excitement and energy, an almost child-like curiosity and wonder at the mysteries of creation and the astonishing potential of these times.

Even as her body began to fail her, she evinced a spirit of such grace, courage and love that all those who knew her were amazed and blessed by her example.

Just two months ago, in November of 1997, she journeyed to Joshua Tree wilderness in California with me. There she experienced what she loved most: the oneness with the stars, the universe and the communication with those peoples from other planets visiting our turbulent world. Fighting weakness, pain and increasing paralysis of her right arm and leg, Shari went into the desert each night, undeterred by the growing obstacles posed by her physical condition. And there, through the crossing point of light, we saw the depths of space and the people and spacecraft from other worlds, who await our own coming of age as a people. Nothing would keep her from this purpose.

Now, a great light has gone from this world, but it shines forever brightly in the realms of eternity. I know Shari was ready for this great journey: Precisely 7 mornings before the morning of her passing, we crossed over together to the other side, if only for a while. Awestruck, we witnessed a Light- a Presence- so beautiful, emanating from the center of creation. No words can depict it; it was beyond anything the intellect can grasp. An infinite brilliance, golden white in the center and becoming more peach, pink and magenta as it expanded infinitely before us, suffused us in a sea of love, joy and beauty unlike any experience of my life. It was the experience of the consciousness of God - pure light, unspeakable love and peace. And permeating that Spot were millions of voices joining as one, singing a melody too sweet to recall. And the refrain was: "We are all one in Spirit".

Knowing that her time was near, I came to Denver yesterday to see her to the other side. Last night while saying prayers, she emerged from the coma, and with a look of great joy on her face, opened her eyes. I told her all was ready for her transition to the world of Light, and that she should go when she was ready. I could hear her acknowledge these words, and a large tear welled up in her eyes as she knew that our time together in this world was nearly over.

This morning, we were called to her bedside. As we gathered, we said prayers and prepared her spiritually for the transition. As lights and a breath of great spirit filled the room, we saw it was time, and I said: "Shari, go into the eternal light". With that, she took her final breath and ascended to Providence...

Even while knowing the joy and love of her present state, the loss is nonetheless severe. But let us remember her thus: She lives in the worlds of Light, joyous, and she would want us to continue the work to which she dedicated her life - the establishment of Universal Peace, and the creation of a cosmic civilization.

And we find hope in the knowledge that those who have passed on to the next world become the leaven which raises this world of existence. Shari and I discussed her future work, from beyond the veil of light, which would advance the cause of peace and enlightenment in all the realms of God. I have no doubt that she will serve well from her new home in the eternal and become one of the angels of peace.

Without peace, there can be no progress on this earth. So let us work for peace with hearts filled with love. For when we pass from this world, all we really take with us is love- endless, infinite love.

Stanton,

I seriously mean no disrespect, but I can't really imagine the nonufological public staying tuned to this piece of garbage. I am embarrassed to admit that I watched the whole thing. It was truly pathetic.

Your responses to questions on abductions were probably good, but I have no idea because I just couldn't get past the total amazement I had at how the producers edited the comments. We knew you could not have possibly been talking about the video snippets we had witnessed because we know you Stan.

I'm curious about what the producers (who were they BTW?) told you about the videotape? Did they tell you it was real? Did they tell you it involved actors? Did you have some kind of contract that prohibits you from telling us what they told you?

At least one of the commentators, a Gary somebody (a psychologist OR maybe he just plays one on TV) certainly appeared to have seen the video of the family because he made comments about specific points. Yvonne left me with the same impression.

I can say, nothing you said, made that video look real. I don't think ANYONE could have said anything to make it look real. However, your comments, to the unititiated (if they were watching) could have given some credence to the video. These would have to be real low intelligence viewers though.

Rebecca

I recently saw, and will pass on, that, according to a newspaper story carried in Lucius Farish's "UFO Newsclipping Service, " researcher Ann Druffel IS in fact having the Heflin photos analyzed.

Here is an excerpt from a newspaper story dated July 6, 1997 in the ORANGE COUNTY REGISTER, by Clay Miller; the paper's story was thorough and well done, and included Heflin's original 9/18/65 statement (the event was 9/3/65):

<start newspaper story quote>

"The Air Force gave the pictures back. NORAD folks came. [...] Trouble is, says former NICAP member Ann Druffel, they probably weren't really NORAD. They took the pictures and nobody saw them again until 1993, when Heflin got a call from someone who told him to look in his mailbox. There were the faded polaroids he hadn't seen for 25 years. [.....] "

Druffel, now a Pasadena researcher of the UFO phenomenon, has the photos. Robert Wood, a former aerospace engineer who met Heflin in 1968 when the Condon Committee was interviewing him, says Druffel is having the photos analyzed with new two-dimensional, digitally enhancing equipment at California State University, Northridge. (We had some difficulty finding anybody at CSUN who knew what all this was about.) Wood says the photo scan will pick up traces of the smoke trail that Heflin mentioned in 1965 and any air disturbance in the craft's wake.

Druffel is tight-lipped; she wants to publish the work in a scholarly journal first.

There are no strings on the photographed craft, she emphatically states. None. Zip. Nada. The photos, she adds, will be available to the public sometime. Heflin wants that."

Rebecca,

Not very likely. Lake County is in the northeastern point of the state. Bordered on the south by the north shore of Lake Superior, and the Canadian border on the north.

They tend to get snowed under earlier in the year than we do in the central part of the state. Early frosts remove all green from the grass by at least November 1. Often much earlier.

I didn't see the program. Did they give a name of the town or township?

Subject: Re: UPN Abduction Video

Being a layman in ufology I was hesitant to send this message but I felt compelled to. You should know that I am a banker and in particular a commercial lender and have been for almost 20 years. My job has required me to always try and obtain the facts of a situation, weigh those facts and make a decision.

I must admit that I lost some respect for Mr. Friedman last night. He lent his name to the UPN show, probably to try and add some legitimacy to the program however his involvement was premature.

On the outside chance that the video was real, there would be all kinds of physical proof of this occurrence. Here's just a few things that come to mind:

1. Did anyone run tests on the melted gun barrels ?
2. Did anyone examine the electrical transformer box that blew up ?
3. Did anyone examine the landing site or the site that was burned by the alien's laser ?
4. Did anyone check the blood samples on the rags used by the Mcphersons to stop their nose bleeds. Was it real blood ? What blood type was it ?
5. Was the truck engine examined ?
6. Was the circuit breaker box examined ?
7. What was the condition of the house when found by the police
8. What leads do the police have in regards to the where whereabouts of this family.

I guess my point is that this SHOW should not have been presented without some of the factual information covering the above questions and many others that arise from the video tape.

This is exactly the type of presentation that negatively impacts all of the legitimate work that has gone into UFO research over the years and it's a shame Mr. Friedman took a part in it...

All,
This is the following text which I posted on several scientific and military newsgroups. Feel free to spread it around. Maybe we'll pick up some useful responses? Comments?
Jan

I am doing some serious research into an idea and I would very much like to communicate with anyone who can provide me with information, assistance or pointers to further research. I have been digging deeply into the work of astronomers and scientists - from historical times to the present.

Like everyone else I have always taken it for granted that NASA is knocking up one first after another. But gradually over several months some new thoughts have been dawning upon me and I wish to conduct serious research into the following concept:

Is NASA really at the cutting edge of space exploration?

Silly question? Perhaps. But hear me out.

BackGround: Top Secret Military Drones...
A friend of mine in National Intelligence in Pretoria told me some years ago that a lot of Air Force work around the world was being conducted on pilotless drones. He told me it was the "hot-button" of major airforces around the world. He hinted at the existence of pilotless, stealth bombers (which can drop nuclear bombs) and other planes. He told me that most of these planes are tested at night in various places. He told me that they regularly fly over Pretoria.

I made contact with an engineer in the USA. His work brings him into contact with many new US aircraft projects. When I wrote about drone research on Internet a year ago, this gentleman came forward and confidentially gave me a few quiet pointers. He confirmed what my friend in National Intelligence had been telling me.

In many places around the world people think they are seeing UFOs when in fact they are witnessing airforce experiments. Example: Triangular shaped craft flying around. Recently I think such an incident took place near Phoenix. Much was made of it in UFO circles.

About 18 months ago, people in Pretoria saw a large bright light floating over Pretoria. They called the Police. Some 120 police in patrol cars began chasing this "UFO" across Pretoria at break-neck speed and out into the country-side. Video footage was shot of this incident. The Police radioed for a Police helicopter to assist in the chase. The Police helicopter chased the "UFO" in the early hours of the morning. Later the Pilot of the helicopter stated on National TV that he'd seen a "UFO" and he even filed a report with one of the International UFO societies. But during this incident the Police control room radioed the South African Air Force base nearby to immediately scramble a jet to intercept the UFO. The South African Air Force refused the request. Didn't they care that 120 Policemen were racing at breakneck speeds through Pretoria assisted by a helicopter? Didn't they care that something foreign was in our air space? Or did the SAAF know something which was too secret to tell the Police? Some months later I had a braai (barbque) with my Intelligence friend. What did he think of this "UFO". He laughed and told me (as he had done before), that many strange things fly above Pretoria at night. He said it was very possibly a misidentification of an "air force experiment." This was when he told me some more about drones and elaborated some more on what he knew about airforces around the world. His work had brought him into contact with people in Europe and America and sometimes he went on missions there. He knew quite a bit of what was going in this field.

Later I mentioned this at a company I was doing consulting for, when a guy there, Brian (whom I have known for many years), told me how he had witnessed such a drone one day in 1972. He told me that he was stationed at an Infantry base near Pretoria which bordered on Swartkops AFB. There were rumours in the camp of a small airforce plane. But most of the guys thought it was just a joke. They stood guard in the various towers around the base. Brian confirmed what my buddy had told me. That when nightfall came, and as soon as it was properly dark, the little plane would take off. One night he had the good fortune to see it. He saw a hanger door open and a tiny 12 ft long plane came trundling out. He heard a slight whine, and the little plane with a bullet-shaped nose and short stubby wings raced down the runway and took off steeply into the dark night sky with no lights on. As it became airborne a secondary engine seemed to kick in. The engine was very quiet and it made more of a buzzing noise. Once it was high enough you wouldn't hear it any more. The plane disappeared into the night sky. Two hours later he suddenly heard the buzzing noise again and the little plane ducked down out of the dark night sky and landed swiftly. No long winded process. It just dived down, landed neatly - the hanger doors opened and within seconds the little plane disappeared from sight. It was all so fast and slick that to most of the soldiers in the infantry base, right next to the runway - that most of them considered it only a "rumour."

A similar thing happens at Groom Lake. My Intelligence friend suggested I look more closely. Forget the UFO stories he told me. I did research, stumbled upon various articles and revelations by a former director of the Skunkworks. A year later I became convinced that his analysis was spot-on. Lockheed Skunkworks is busy with a new type of drone. I discovered for example that at Groom Lake one finds a SMALL HANGER - and someone with a sense of humour has painted the number "18" on it. (In UFO literature much is made of Hanger 18 where UFO's are supposedly stored). Someone at the Skunkworks has a sense of humour. Nice touch. And at night, a light is seen looping the loop over Groom Lake and doing all manner of manoeuvres deep into the night. It takes off, like it's protege at Swartkops - some time after dusk. When people became too curious about this "American UFO" the USAF had to engage in a land-grab to keep the curious at bay. Critics always say "But what could possibly exist in such a small hanger? How can that possibly be a secret?" Well, small aircraft are HOT SECRETS.

I asked my American Engineer informant what's the rationale behind the light on the plane? His reply: "If you need accurate performance statistics on a stealth aircraft then radar is no good - a light is better." My friend the spy, tells me that there's also the issue of "responsibility." If you see a light at night which looks like the proverbial "UFO" then you don't think: There goes the USAF/SAAF or the Russians or whoever. His hints suggested that these lights may have their uses in fooling other people in other countries. He hinted that there is more to be gained from other people thinking they're being visited by UFOs than them realising the they're being spied on by an earthly power. Perhaps even, the troops might not want to report such a sighting for the sake of being made fun of. So when all is said, it would seem that there is much to be gained from this kind of spying. Other possibilities exist too which I've not had a chance to dig into - such a "close-up" spying on bases which one normally can't get near. Has anyone ever bothered trying to fire an anti-aircraft missile at a UFO? Would anyone dare?

The land with the most "UFO's" seems to be the USA. Either Aliens have organised regular tourist trips to the "land of the free" or perhaps the "UFO's" are actually American in origin to begin with?

Bottom Line: There's a lot of hot computer and aeronautical technology out there in military circles. And they've been at these things for decades. The Skunkworks D21 drone was classified for 25 years after it had been shelved. Such is the secrecy which surrounds the existence of drones.

USAF Space Plane....

Recently the Skunkworks won the contract for the next generation space shuttle. In Popular Science they mentioned the radical design. A single-stage, lifting-body, space plane, flown completely from start to finish by a computer. It is cheap compared to the current shuttle and it is a radical departure from the norm.

Popular Science mentioned that experienced aeronautical engineers commented on the suspicious nature of the Skunkworks bid. It's well-known that Skunkworks has developed the most radically advanced aircraft created this century. The SR71 Blackbird; U-2 spyplane; F117a Stealth bomber. These engineers commented that NASA is generally conservative and likes to use proven technology. Engines must have been functioning for at least 8 years before NASA will touch it for their manned program. So how does the Skunkworks get away with this? These engineers suggest that Skunkworks must have developed and flown a Space Plane for the USAF - and this thing must have been flying for at least 8 - 10 years already.

But where is it? We've never heard of it. Have you? I've never come across a single rumour or ounce of evidence to support this idea. Unless someone is keeping it a damned good secret - which I think is entirely possible.

Clementine...

I was surprised when the Clementine satellite was launched and it was sent off to map every square inch of the Moon. Then it set off for? (Was it Venus?). What really surprised me was that Clementine was supposed to be the first project funded by the Department of Defence to leave Earth orbit. I'm curious. Since when does the Moon (or Venus? Is it Venus?) have anything to do with US National Security? Why would they want to map every square inch of the Moon? The obsession with mapping the Earth completely for military purposes has been an ongoing project for some time. This data is stored in computer for the navigation of missiles, drones, cruise missiles and military aircraft. Is the Solar system being mapped for military purposes? Or has it already been mapped?

ION Engines....

I remember reading a lot about the wonders of Ion engines back in the 1970's. They are low-impulse engines. i.e. they don't have much "kick." But they have an incredible top-speed. They're ideal for solar system exploration to the Outer planets. Why wait 10 years for a Voyager when a constantly accelerating ION engine could send a probe racing across the solar system at many times the speed of a conventional rocket.

There is also another development worth noting - which I've never heard anyone speak of. I saw an interview of a scientist who stated that the next engine which we need to develop is a nuclear rocket engine. It makes me think of the nuclear submarine. This was the concept of a single Captain in the US Navy who decided to try sticking a nuclear reactor in a submarine. He found it could be done and hey presto he invented the nuclear submarine. How easy would it be to produce a nuclear rocket engine with today's nuclear technology? I've never heard of any work being done on it. Or has there been work on it which we know nothing of?

But back to ION Engines. I vaguely remembered the ION engine, but strangely no one writes about it any more. My buddy the spy had told me this about drones: "You won't see anything about it in books and magazines. The real stuff is all hush hush." I thought I was dreaming about ion engines. Then I stumbled upon a book I'd had in the 1970's. There it clearly stated, in 1972, that in the 1960's NASA had had a working ION engine. It ran for 40 hours on a test bed - 30+ years ago. It was supposed to be the next generation space probe engine. But it's not.

Have Ion engines been classified and moved out of NASA's area? Why didn't NASA ever make use of an idea so promising? Scientists were saying what a hot idea this was and then... poof... the idea disappears from public view. Or is NASA not allowed to use it? Is it perhaps the preserve of the USAF?

USAF Space Exploration....

So I began wondering. Is it possible that the USAF has gone beyond mere space planes - and has it already been scouting out the solar system - AHEAD of NASA? I have noted some discrepancies in the history of astronomy and I was digging into these issues. Then I began wondering about this possibility...

So I decided to pose my Engineer informant the question. His response: "Plenty." Of course he refuses to tell me more. Perhaps I'm being had. But I'm wondering and seriously posing the question. However, he promised me he'd point me in the right direction. He suggested I contact the Federation of American Scientists - and he gave me a contact name. I noted that they had a project which spoke of curbing excessive Govt Secrecy. Currently I'm waiting for a reply from them.

But my question is this: Can anyone provide me with any further thoughts, suggestions and contacts in this regard? No one seems to have ever really dug into this problem (not that I know of). Is it possible that the USAF has taken a greater interest in space exploration than we may ever have thought? The exact rationale behind it may be interesting. Could it be PERHAPS, as a suggestion, that all these stories of UFOs have really been taken seriously all along, and that the solar system was to be scouted ANYWAY? (Regardless of whether anything was found or not).

If you can help, then please reply by e-mail as I do not always get a chance to monitor this NewsGroup. Thank you, Jan.

Subject: Re: My sightings

Hi all,

I would like to share with you two experiences I had of what one can probably class as "sightings" of UFOs.

The first happened when I was about 14 years of age in 1976. My dad, my friend and I was flying a kite that my dad built for me. It was late in the afternoon about 5pm and the sun was hidden behind some clouds. The light was still good enough for us to clearly see the kite, which was about 200 meters out as measured by the line left on the fishing reel which we used to fly it with. We were facing the western horizon.

As we watched the kite, all three of us suddenly noticed a speck of light moving behind the kite and above it, but obviously much further from the ground than the kite. There was only one light to start with and it was pulsating red when we first noticed it. It was moving very slowly from west to east across the sky. Relative to our location it was moving slightly from the centre of our horizon to above our heads slightly to the south. Judging by my hand held at arm's length, it was moving at about 1 finger width per minute.

The color changed from pulsating red to solid green for about a minute and then to solid orange for another minute. The light then seperated into 4 smaller red lights which turned to a bright white about 10 seconds later.

The lights were now at about 50 degrees above the western horizon. About two seconds after changing to white, the four lights departed in four different directions, the outer two at about 85 degrees to the original direction.

Up to that point we were still thinking that it was some sort of terrestrial aircraft displaying some very bright lights, but the seperation into four lights and the speed at which the lights departed and shot over the horizon made us gasp in amazement. This happened in less than one second!

The second happened about a year later. I was cycling home from visiting with a friend of mine at about 7pm. I was travelling on a road next to a open piece of land covered with tall grass and small shrubs, what we in South Africa call "veld".

The night sky was suddenly lit up by a bright shining light that was so intense that it immediately drew my attention. I looked around for the source of the light and noticed a large spherical shape in the sky over the veld. I stopped my bicycle and got off to observe it. I guess that it was about 50 meters from the ground and it was about 100 meters from me as the crow flies.

The ball of light was decending towards the ground/grass and when it touched the ground, it seemed to grow more intense for a moment and then went dark. I was scared and did not want to investigate further by myself. I got on my bicycle and went home.

The next day I told my friend about this and he insisted that we go and investigate the place where it happened. When we got to the place, now in broad daylight, we observed a burned or scorched circle in the veld. All the vegetation was burned to a crisp as if there was a veld fire. The peculiar thing was that it was perfectly circular and measured 10 meters in diameter.

Re: My sightings

We did not report any of this to the police or whoever. Speaking to various people later, they told of similar phenomena that they observed. One of the people suggested that it was something called "ball lightning".

I can not say that what we saw was non-terrestrial in origin, but it sure was peculiar.

Any comments?

Andre

Rebecca:

I was called Dec. 31 by an independent producer about being interviewed.

Arrangements were made on Jan. 1. I flew out on Jan. 2, was interviewed on Jan. 3 and flew back that night after visiting my daughter. I was told almost nothing about the video. I knew that they had talked to Yvonne Smith. In a casual aside after I asked a pointed question the comment was made that the video was probably a thesis. The new guys were brought in to make a really terrible show better.. Lord knows what it was originally like. Do remember that most people are not well versed on UFOs. They may have been more interested in what the "experts" said than the story. I can't wait to see it. <grin>

Hi Stan, hi All,

Stan, they edited your comments in (as needed) in support of what was being portrayed on the screen. It was obvious to anyone who knows you that you were talking about the phenomenon and that you weren't talking about the video. But to anyone who doesn't, the impression was that you were somehow in support of the video itself. It would be an easy assumption for a viewer who is unfamiliar with either abduction or your work to make.

BTW, I missed the credits at the end and my 'review' was based solely on the 'quality' of the video itself. One more for Stan...
I don't think many are going to argue about the 'content' of your statements. I for one was surprised to learn how open minded you are on the subject. I had never heard your views on abduction before. Speaking strictly as an experiencer, I found it heart warming!

Warmest regards to you and your family Stan.

Peace,

John Velez

PS- I am mad at UPN for not being -more honest- about this presentation. An awful lot of people apparently thought, (and still think) that the damn thing was real! Piss poor man. They ought to be called on the carpet for this one.

I doubt that any fraud charges will ever stick. Their credits clearly indicated it was a staged production.

Further, no one in the serious research community thought for a *minute* that it was a "real" abduction. It's like arguing that "Sabrina" episodes aren't billed as fantasy, so that show also is a fraud.

Good grief.

UPN's "Incident in Lake County"

Subject: UPN's "Incident in Lake County"

Just thought everyone would be interested to know that there are a number of people believed "Incident at Lake County" was a real event. If the UPN online poll is to be believed, about 16,000 votes have been cast at their web site indicated whether they believed the video to be real or not. The tally so far:

8,198 believed it was a real event

8,740 believed it was a fake event

I guess about half the audience couldn't (or at least didn't) read the credits. . .<g>

First let me point out that this program was not disinformation, it was entertainment (not that Russ or some of the others have suggested that). It was produced to make money for UPN and Bob Kiviat. Too often we scream disinformation when we don't like the tone of the information out there.

Second, I think it is important that we focus on the agenda of the UFO community. We all have expressed a desire to elevate it into the scientific arena. We all talk a good game, but too often it is only talk.

John Velez, to his credit, rejected this spotlight and warned us about the tone it would take. Others sought the spotlight and now complain that they hadn't seen the completed project and didn't know the form it would take. For those of you out there who have had the opportunity to appear on television, when was the last time that you saw the finished product BEFORE it was aired? And if you did, could you have done anything to change it?

Are some of us so hungry for the spotlight that we will accept any opportunity, even when it is telegraphed to us that the program will be less than credible? Is John so clever that he can see these things when others can't? If offered the opportunity to appear in the pages of the WEEKLY WORLD NEWS wouldn't most of us decline because of the forum?

Personally, I will not appear on a stage, or a conference in which Don Schmitt appears. He has badly damaged ufology in general and the Roswell case in particular. By showing up to appear with him, I am, tacitly, endorsing him. Why do that now that we know what he is?

By the same token, should the leaders of the UFO community, or the self-appointed leaders, lend their names to a program like the UPN show? When something like this happens, and the scientific and journalistic communities see it, and know, like the rest of it that it is a hoax, doesn't that detract from the rest of us. Aren't we, by our participation, suggesting that we approve of the program? And if we participated, shouldn't we be held accountable for that participation, rather than attempting to alibi it by suggesting that we didn't know what would happen?

Those of us who have been on these programs in the past know that we will be lied to. We know that those producing the programs, with few exceptions, know nothing about the field and couldn't care less. They want an entertaining program and will do what is necessary to produce it, for ratings mean money and ratings mean another opportunity to produce something else.

Here the clue should have been Bob Kiviat. He produced the Alien Autopsy fraud. That should have been enough to suggest that those who appeared on the show should have given it a pass. We all know that Kiviat edited his shows to put all the aired segments in the best light and he cared nothing about the facts. I stood in the kitchen of the home that had once been owned by Jesse Marcel and listened to the director of the Alien Autopsy flat out lie to me.

Yes, we should be outraged at the program, but blame for the damage done to the UFO community is not in the hands of UPN, but in the hands of the UFO community. Once again, we have shot ourselves in the foot.

Re: Comments on the UPN thing

Wonder who this might be? Granted, I don't necessarily believe Mogul or the aliens at this point, but he hasn't exactly been direct in answering ANY objections regarding his report.

Now I just have have to laugh at this point. Who would think that a Col. in the USAF is "gatekeeper" for a UFO cover-up. The mere idea is absurd. Although I wouldn't put it past some believers...

How clever, and so vital to a good article on Roswell. Discussion about Ray Bans.

Sounds like he took an afternoon off to chat about UFO kooks and Men in Black.

Great.. it's a big report. A ton of information that goes a long way in showing nothing. If anything it helps prove it's own hypothesis wrong.

Substance... I'm impressed!(Really.. Journalists hold themselves into orbit... wow... this is class "A" material! Remind me to write it all down... I don't think anything went into orbit. In fact, I recall several interesting replies that were quite logical and gave both sides something to think about.

He grouched? I had to look it up myself. Interesting word tho...

Is he also amused that he was able to write a report on the Roswell Incident, yet ignore every witness who disagreed with his pre-formed conclusion sent to him by Robert Todd? Oh.. he included Sallie Tadolini, but somehow the interesting aspects of her testimony were.... gasp.. deleted from the report. Isn't it also humorous that Sheridan Cavitt managed to somehow remember suddenly that he was in fact in Roswell right before the USAF started it's investigation?

> "I got anonymous telephone calls. I got hate faxes from people question your sanity, just your reliability.

You did a study on all this goofy UFO stuff? If I recall correctly, you did a study on a top secret project to detect Russian blasts and used that as a solution to ONE UFO case. I don't remember you studying any other "goofy UFO stuff".

> For much of his 28 years in the Air Force, Weaver probed crimes and

And what a wonderful job he did. Didn't Testors have a model airplane version of the F117 and B-2 before they were declassified? Oh.. yeah.. sorry.

Crack researchers? So that's what they've been taking. And at only 1,000,000 dollars expense? I'm proud!

No, you just have to ignore a great deal of information and continue leading your sanitized lives. Am I the only one here who kooks? Is that a technical term? So they just started writing books huh? That's right. Friedman started the Roswell craze by saying "I'll start spouting off and sell books about Roswell, and hundreds of people will come forward and lie to make sure I get dinner on the table." Also, If I remember correctly, other major news events were "only two-day news stories".

Well no kidding... can you really blame them?

There's money to be made anywhere. Just because lots of people write books on the Kennedy Assassination, half of them full of crap, doesn't mean that Kennedy isn't dead...

there, but I'm sick of the generalizations...

I assume he's referring to the X-33/Venturestar, first of all its not all THAT radical a design, its heritage goes back to the late 60s when several alternate concepts were being thrown around for what became the space shuttle. True, an Aerospike engine has never been flown (at least in the "white world") but again its not a new concept... Rocketdyne was pushing them back in the early 60s and theyve been ground fired many times.

NASA has a SR-71 fitted with a small mock-up aerospike to test the concept in flight, then the X-33 will test it in hypersonic high altitude flight. Only then will a decision be made whether to go ahead with the space-worthy "VentureStar" which intially at least is NOT intended to be a manned spacecraft

For the last 10 years magazines such as Pop. Sci and even Aviation Week have been full of rumours about exotic "Black" or secret aircraft and exotic propulsion technology... craft such as the "pumpkin seed", the "XB-70-alike" mothership etc and not forgetting what is commonly refered to as "Aurora"... whether any of these are connected with secret military spaceplanes is a matter for debate... but I wouldnt be surprised if one-off testbeds had been constructed in secret. The USAF has periodically since the 1950s openly wished for a spaceplane... at least openly, theyve been foiled everytime... but there's been alot of studies.

Hello all!

I am shocked! I talked to someone today who said they felt the UPN Video was authentic. Even though she is 7 years old, she should know better!

Two easy points...

- (1) No delay between the transformer flash and the sound of the explosion.
- (2) The videographer just happened to know which lamps were going to shatter as the camera panned to each one just in time for the explosions.

There may be other obvious flaws, but I will not subject myself to watching it again. I am through with it!

Regards,
Paul

Clementine was a sensor test bed for the BMDO (ex SDI) it was intended to also get close to an asteroid (not Venus) but a malfunction ended that plan. They strung a bunch of "cheap" cameras and systems together and then looked for a good test for them..the moon looked good and it would have a nice science payoff for them too (good for PR too). Similar sensor tests continue with the MSTI series of satellites launched into earth orbit..I assume the US thinks missile defence is a national security issue..

There's been PLENTY of work on Nuclear engines done... sheesh... a 5 minute search on the internet will pull up alot of material.
Projects such as NERVA, DUMBO were large efforts in the 1960s,, more recently there was the classified (and leaked) TIMBERWIND... all of those were nuclear-thermal designs (ie... throw hydrogen over a hot reactor and make the result vent out the back)... there are many other concepts... including things like the Orion

"blast our way into space with atom bombs behind us" and assorted nuclear-electric schemes. No doubt there was/is plenty of secret work in this area too.

This is so much BS, there's nothing secret about Ion engines... again a WWW search will find plenty. Entire books have been written on them... small ion engines have been put into production for "Station-keeping thrusters" on communication satellites etc etc

Work on them continued thru the 70s until today where they finally have truly reliable working engines. One is about to be used on NASA's "Deep Space-1" space probe, to be launched this year I understand.

No

Not that I am aware of, Theresa. I saw it listed as Lake County, MN. The grass was very green but it doesn't really matter, now that we know actors were involved.

According to Michael Lindemann there were 21 actors listed in the credits of the program. George Fergus was right on the money a couple of weeks ago when his eagle spotted a kid actor he recognized. Apparently the only people who were not actors were Stanton, Derrel, Yvonne and Michael Shermer.

I'm just glad that we are not having to duke out the validity of this video with the true believers.

Dr. Edgar Mitchell - Notes from The Prophets

From: prophets@maui.net
Date: Thu, 22 Jan 1998 13:36:46 -1000
Fwd Date: Fri, 23 Jan 1998 05:43:22 -0500
Subject: Dr. Edgar Mitchell - Notes from The Prophets

The Associated Press brought national and international recognition to the comments expressed by Dr. Edgar Mitchell at The Prophets Conference presented by Axiom last October. The following excerpt by Dr. Mitchell is of significant interest to those concerned with the truth.

Following the Prophets Conference remarks presented by Dr. Steven Greer regarding technology and efforts to brief government officials on the UFO phenomena, Dr. Edgar Mitchell responded by saying...

"I'd like to add a bit to what Steven (Dr. Steven Greer) had to say. It was a marvelous report, but what I'd like to add to it is that in our briefing of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Intelligence Group, it became very clear to us that they were naive. They did not really know any more about this effort than we do, if as much. That is because, as Bob Dean pointed out earlier, most of the people in government were not in government when I retired twenty five years ago, they are younger people. The files going back fifty years just no longer exist. They've either been purged, compromised or whatever. They don't exist. So when we blame government for not being forthright, they really don't have anything to be forthright about, at least at that level. Now, somewhere there's knowledgeable people, and Steven has ferreted out quite a few of them. And in my own efforts in talking with these folks, and talking with government, the question often comes up as to how they could have kept this a secret for so long. And friends they haven't. It's been around us all the time, but it has been denied, and obscured.

I often like to state the condition, the story, the myth if you will, about Columbus coming here and some of the Indians not seeing the ships simply because it was not in their collective consciousness and their repertoire, they at least didn't want to see them. Much of what we're seeing now is what many people don't want to see either. There's been a massive effort at creating that, of denying the obvious, of saying that you're not seeing what's sitting right in front of you right now, thus causing doubt in your own mind. It's amazingly effective. So, documentation and evidence, that is probably the smoking gun type of evidence, has been totally compromised by saying that it's simply not true. So it is not true that they (government) have kept the secret. They haven't kept the secret, but it has been totally compromised by misinformation and disinformation.

Now for my own experience, I have had no first hand experience like so many of you. I have not encountered a UFO, and we did not have them trailing, us as far as we know, going to the moon. We didn't meet anyone on the moon. We did it just like we said we did. For the last twenty-five years we have dealt with the issue of, on one hand, the flat-earthers who said, 'you didn't go anywhere, it was all filmed out here in the desert,' and on the other hand, another fringe that said, 'yes you have been there, but you were followed. You were in contact with UFOs. There were beings on the moon that you met and had contact with.' Well, that's not true either. So, we have walked between these two extremes of misinformation, disinformation and pure ignorance. We did what we said we did, and I want to assure you, from that period up until the current time, NASA was one of the organizations ignorant of this type of activity. And the prevailing wisdom in NASA (at-the-time) was that we didn't even think about it. It was a ridiculous idea that we would encounter beings on the moon.

However, in the last twenty-five years since that time, I became quite knowledgeable and became friends with Allan Hynek. I know and work with Jacques Vallee consistently now, and I have known the gentlemen on this stage, Bob Dean and Steven Greer for a few years. For me with all the evidence, it's not a matter of believing, it's a matter of the preponderance of evidence, and the evidence keeps building. The sightings keep happening. So it is clear that if they are ET, and I will question some of the sightings as to if they are ET, they are making their presence known. I also think that the prevalence in the modern era of so many events - the sightings, the continual mutilation events, the so-called abduction events - that we are looking at likely reversed engineered technology in the hands of humans that are not under government control or any type of high level control. I find that quite alarming.

With regard to the technology itself, I work with folks who do know what is in our technological data base and what is available to modern armies. The so-called ET technology, the ability to have silent engines and flying machines that make no sound, flying machines that have the characteristics that are consistent with reproduction of UFO sightings, are not in any nations arsenal, but they do exist. So if there are back engineered technologies existing, they are probably in the hands of this group of individuals, formerly government, formerly perhaps intelligence, formerly, under private sector control with some sort of oversight by military or by government. But this (oversight) is likely no longer the case as a result of this access denied category that is now operating. I call it a clandestine group. The technology is not in our military arsenals anywhere in the world, but it does exist, and to me that's quite disconcerting.

I do work with a number of groups. We do know about some of the things that the technologies are used for, and I want to assure you that these technologies are not that far beyond our current state of knowledge. Now understanding it scientifically, understanding how it can be, is a long way from having a fully developed usable technology. But if in our knowledge we can understand how it has to be in order to create that technology, we're not that far away. So I want to assure you that we're not talking about technologies that are so farfetched that we can't understand them. They're just beyond the technological horizon.

I want to tell you that it doesn't appear we need to be using ultra-dimensions and wormholes, etc., for this. It looks like our three dimensional or four dimensional space-time universe is about what it appears to be, and that we can operate within that space-time universe with these types of technologies. We have tended, like the ancients of old, to have invented myths about too many dimensions and time travel, wormhole travel, etc., and it doesn't look like that's necessary to explain what we're seeing."

On January 31, 1971, Navy Captain Dr. Edgar Mitchell embarked on a journey of over 500,000 miles in outer space, that resulted in him becoming the sixth man to walk on the moon, during Apollo 14. This historic journey ended safely nine days later on February 9, 1971 and was made with two other men of valor - Admiral Alan Shepard and Colonel Stuart Roosa.

Scientist, test pilot, navel officer, astronaut, entrepreneur, author and lecturer, Dr. Mitchell's extraordinary career personifies humankind's eternal thrust to widen its horizons as well as its inner soul.

His academic background includes a Bachelor of Science in Industrial Management from Carnegie Mellon University, a Master of Science from the U.S. Navel Postgraduate School and a Doctor of Science in Aeronautics and Astronautics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In addition he has received honorary doctorates in engineering from New Mexico State University, the University of Akron and Carnegie Mellon.

Dr Mitchell has been awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the USN Distinguished Service Medal, the NASA Distinguished Medal, and three NASA Group Achievement Awards.

After retiring from the Navy in 1972, Dr. Mitchell founded the Institute of Noetic Sciences to sponsor research into the nature of consciousness as it relates to cosmology and causality.

Two Harbors: 'Nope, No Aliens Here'

UPN Show Centers Alien Abduction Believers on North Shore County

TWO HARBORS, Minn. Posted 6:06 a.m. January 22, 1998 -- It's normally not the type of phone inquiry one imagines the Lake County, Minnesota Sheriff's office would be responding to in droves.

Hello?

Yes, sir ... Uh, huh ... Yep ... OK ... Uhhhhh ... Nope. No, sir. No there is no Agent Mulder working here ... Uh, no ... No, we haven't seen any flying saucers around here either ... No, nope we haven't gotten calls from anyone named McPherson about any kind of alien kidnapping ...

The Lake County sheriff reports out of his Two Harbors office that he wants everyone to know there has been no alien abduction while he's been on the job, reports The Associated Press.

Sheriff Andy Haugan says his office phone line has been ringing incessantly since the upstart UPN television network broadcast a show called "Alien Abduction: Incident in Lake County" Tuesday evening.

The show broadcast on UPN stations across the country purported to show "actual aliens" abducting a McPherson family from Lake County along Minnesota's north shore, writes the wire service.

A sheriff's dispatcher told the AP that calls have been coming mainly from "UFO nuts" and reporters calling to find out if the video is real.

It's not, he said.

Haugan added that no one named McPherson has lived in the county since 1994.

No word on exactly how that last McPherson left town, though ...

Hi Steve, Errol, All,

Right on Steve! They were deceptive. Intentionally so I believe. Here's a 'bit' from an e-mail that I recieved from one of the producers. It was in response to my "hinting" (you guys know how -subtle- I can be! <VBG>) that they had been -less than honest- with me, and the general public. Check this out!

This is a direct quote, I have not altered or added or taken away a thing.

Wow! Unbelievable attitude right? Here's my response.

>First, . . . of all the "experts" you contacted -I- was >didn't go out of your way (while trying to "recruit" me)

>-to inform me- that the video was a fake either!

>(Until now that is!)

>Who's jerking who sister? <G>

>John

=====

What cohones man!

1. They tried to get me on that thing under false pretenses.
2. They hyped it to the public as the "real thing" even though they already knew it was a fake. (Intentional deception)
3. They did not inform any of their guest "experts" that the video was in fact a "student film" or a "fake" as this production person so bluntly put it to me.

4. They add insult to injury by wise cracking about how surprized they were that "knowledgeable" people like myself could be so easily "taken in" by this "obvious" fake!

5. UPN lied. They perpetrated an intentional hoax on the American public. The proof is in the poll they are currently taking on their website. Why would they be interested in how many thought it was real if they had already told the public that it wasn't! What I want to know is what they are going to do with the statistics that they gather. Who's it for?

>UPN has pushed all the right buttons, and >made us look foolish. Unfortunately, with the approaching >millenium, it's only going to get worse.

Not if everyone starts to boycott these "entertainment only" types of programs. Someone already mentioned that the ones who produce this type of programming are already well known, -and the same group of fellows- time and again. The solution to that problem is easy and obvious.

Nancy Reagan said it best,

"Just say NO!"

UPN should be called to task for that lie.

Peace,

John Velez

Steve,

As I said in my previous post... Not all people in the media misrepresent BUT some do. It is very evident that the fine folks at UPN do!

As a proud member of both the media and this genre, I find truth in everything that you said. Yes, once a person is interviewed the interview becomes "Stock footage" owned by the production company and it can be "Plugged" into other productions but that was not the case with the UPN show. All of the interviews used were new and shot by Bob Kiviat's production company.

When a respected UFO resercher consents to an interview they are lending credence to the production. If they have any indication that the production will be misleading it would be wise of them to back off.

John Velez not only backed off but warned all of the others on the list of what was taking place. (A very wise move)

Stanton Friedman is most probably the most interviewed researcher in Ufology. If we were to use the phrase, "Been there, done that" it would apply to Stan. He knew what he was getting into
... he has been there many times as have the others.

Yes Steve, UPN should bear the brunt of our anger, they are the bad guys. But they couldn't do what they do with the active and willing participation of the UFO researchers who they taped.

We all must take responsibility for our actions. My original comments still stand... If you don't want to be misquoted or misrepresented don't sit down for the interview.

An open mind is a terrible thing to waste,
Russ Estes

Aloha Steve.....

Those results fit the statistics very closely. Median IQ is 100. Apparently 48.40% of the viewers fell above the median and 51.60% fell below it. Given that, I suppose the show hit the mark, since the best ratings are delivered by shows which target the middle ground. That same 51.60% of people not only watch TV, though. They vote in elections.

Clinton Scandel and UFO information release

Subject: Clinton Scandel and UFO information release

Predictions for 1998, and I hope I am wrong. 1998 will not be known for the year that hearings were held about the UFO problem, or about any grand public releases of UFO information.

Whether we like it or not it will be known as the year of what some in the press is now characterizing as Penisgate complete with possible impeachment proceedings.

As they have done for 200 years Congressional committees will all be attempting to get a piece of this scandel which is now on the radarscope of the American public, national media and Congress. The committees and the media will not be interested in anything, or anybody else including Roswell and UFOs.

Cheers,
Robert

Nope, it was produced and copyrighted by The Dick Clark Film Group, Inc. Executive Producers (the dudes who put up the cash and get the profit) were Dick Clark and Neil Stearns.

You can't blame this one on Kiv.

Hi T!

No, the township wasn't mentioned. The locale was described as a "remote farm" in Lake County.

I can shed a little light on this production. If you go to the University of Michigan's site to the "Science Fiction Films & Shows" page at:

http://www.windows.umich.edu/art_and_music/films.html

You'll find this entry:

"UFO Abduction: A True Story.
Director: Dean Alioto.
Not rated. 93 minutes.
Plot: Based on an actual 1983 incident, explores how the lives of a Connecticut family were affected by their abduction and examination by aliens. "

Indeed, the credits of the UPN show have Dean Alioto as the Director and Story Writer.

The UPN credits include Don Wollman as Supervising Producer who was also the Executive in Charge of Production for the Weird Al Yankovic show as is indicated at the bottom of this page:

<http://expert.cc.purdue.edu/~jcross/weirdal/altv/cast.html>

Wollman had the same job in

NBC'S 'ALL-NEW ALL-STAR TV CENSORED WHEN BLOOPERS ATTACK!'

see: <http://www.ultimatetv.com/news/bn/sweeps/1112bloop.html>

And guess what UPN's abduction show's Executive Producer Neil Stearns has on his list of credits? "National Lampoon's Senior Trip"

(<http://www.hollywood.com/movies/seniortrip/>)

I haven't been able to find out where the thing was filmed yet; however, here are the last names of the "abducted" actors: Antoine, Ayre, Barber, Buie, Chriqui, Delver, Ducharme, Kavelaars, Pearl, and Anderson. I might guess it was filmed in Canada . . . possibly Quebec.

Does anyone know of a family who might have reported a sighting/abduction in Connecticut in 1983? It doesn't ring a bell with me . . . but I have killed many neurons in my life. <G>

For Len:

At the risk of repeating myself. I did not see the video. I did not say anything about the video. I wasn't asked anything about the video and I have not yet seen the program because it wasn't shown here. I understand that the creator was a guy named Alioto. Len.. did I say anything you felt wasn't true? Or is it entirely the context? If My words were falsely used, then I may have a cause for legal action. Has anybody talked to the FCC about whether there should be a disclaimer if fiction is presented as fact? Could one read the names of the actors which I understand were listed in the credits?

What in the world makes you so sure of that???? There will certainly be conspiracy theorists who will say there was a real abduction but the video vanished and they had to use actors and do it again.

True believers are just that.

> Hi Mark,

Hi Keith...

> Are you talking lighter-than-air, or ultralight as well?

Either way is a problem in some of the weather conditions under which these sightings have occurred.

A balloon with a hundred or more foot lighter than air wing would be incredibly hard to maintain in any sort of wind because the slightest pitch up or down or lateral would drastically increase the surface area available for the wind to affect. Because these transitions would be very rapid and probably chaotic, I would tend to doubt that even fly by wire systems would do well.

An ultralight has similar problems. All it takes is a brief look at an ultralight coming in for a landing to realize that even with a mere 20 foot wingspan, the ultralight can have serious control problems in even mild crosswinds. But many of the observations of large boomerang type objects have been of things 100 feet or more across, with the objects at altitudes which fall readily into the stereo vision range. Obviously those would be even more unstable.

Hang gliders ride the winds. There is some ability for a hang glider to remain stable in specific areas of updraft (near ridges, for instance), but in a strong 40-50 mph wind I suspect that a hang glider would be hard pressed to do anything but go with the flow.

The trade-off is weight/power vs. surface area. Now these aircraft, if they existed, would have a wing area easily as large as a 747, but at that weight, using conventional power plants to produce the energy needed to stay in the air at the reported altitudes, they would make a sound like thunder. Once we get that far, we have to then say, well, they don't need that much power because they're lighter. But as they get lighter, the wind becomes more effective against their surface area and they become less stable in winds.

Well, I'm not going to try to knock at people who have demonstrated their knowledge and their ability in various fields, except to say that a true judgement of the practicality of this sort of aircraft in the flight regimes required to account for sightings such as the extensive Hudson Valley reports would fall to aeronautical engineers. I'm not one of those, but I do have a keen amateur interest, and the "giant flying wing" sets off my BS detector whenever its proposed as an alternative for sightings like those in the Hudson Valley.

His reputation certainly will not be helped by his involvement in this "farce", but it says much more about the lack of organization of this genre than it does about his veracity. I would be interested in Friedman's comments after he has had a chance to see the video and how his comments were interspersed

If this has been a news documentary, that would have been the case, but you can post some of the questions you raise to some of the production people listed at the end of the show to see if they bothered to test any of the things you mentioned. This show was a fictional presentation. It was put together by Dick Clark Productions, and one might ask them why they felt the need to promote this in the way that they did. You might notice that the promos always asked, "Could this be a video of an actual abduction?", rather than simply stating that it actually was such a video. By implication, one assumes that there is a chance that it could be real, but in effect the idea is planted in your mind and they've avoided the threat of a legal suit for false advertising. Other promos were similarly worded to leave one with an impression, but without making a claim that it was an actual event.

>This is exactly the type of presentation that negatively impacts >all of the legitimate work that has gone into UFO research over >the years and it's a shame Mr. Friedman took a part in it...

>Ien Fedullo

The really scary thing is that nearly half of those who bothered to log onto the UPN site to vote have indicated that they thought it was a real event. Those of us connected with UFOlogy may worry that it cause others to view us in a more negative way, but the apparent reaction of the general public tells me that it's going to get really strange as the millenium approaches. Now, where are all those old titles to the Brooklyn Bridge I had around here.....<g>

Well, science fiction has only really existed for a relatively short time, at least as a literature of technical extrapolation. So I can't see how UFO descriptions, which have remained relatively unchanged (given the difficulty in interpreting or assessing the credibility of older sources) could follow SF fashion.

Still, a basic review of the UFO sighting reports over the last 50 years shows that most basic types have been present over that entire period. The UFO Evidence probably provides one of the best references for UFO geometric classifications and has excellent catalogs to support those.

When we go further back, things become more debatable, at least in part because it is harder to assess the credibility of the sources. The Alexander Hamilton tale is one example of a seemingly credible tale made of whole cloth. On the other hand, there are some reports which fit quite well with the more modern reliable reports. Basically, I think that has to be an important part of our "baseline": we have reports from the present day and the last fifty years which have been relatively well investigated, and the credibility of whose witnesses is generally known. So the patterns we derive from that data are probably representative of the "real" phenomenon (whatever that may be). Thus, when I go back and look at old data, I give much greater credibility to cases that support current patterns than to those which break them.

Sure. Vallee's Magonia

<http://www.geocities.com/~mcashman/magonia.htm>

contains reports back to 1867 of landings and CE-3s. Again, there are quite a few of the older cases which are debatable, but there are also those which seem to fit common patterns today.

No, no, there were "flying saucer" shaped "alien spacecraft" in SF as far back as the '30s. And the Arnold sighting, discussed at length, just recently in this forum was

a) of largely disk shaped objects (see the original Blue Book report sketches) and

b) analysis of object geometries from The UFO Evidence shows 1947 shapes to be pretty much similar in distribution to those in the period from 48-64. In other words, there were spheres, ellipses, disks, cylinders, etc.

and, of course,

c) SF readership has never been a major proportion of the reading public. Offhand claims that SF influences the reports of UFOs must deal with the absence of UFOs during period of high SF awareness (such as Welles' 38 War of the Worlds or the period immediately after Close Encounters, and with the (until fairly recently) limited demographics of SF and fantasy.

Also, most "alien spacecraft" in the 30s and 40s were giant metal riveted cigars with large round glass portholes. These are conspicuously absent from the UFO reports of the time period.

Films of the 50s were influenced by the major flaps, but their UFOs are rarely similar to the reports of the time. For one thing, egg / elliptical and cylindrical objects are seldom if ever shown, while they contribute a significant proportion of reports. The discs they portray rarely show the very common lenticular disc.

In other words, any theory that claims a relationship between fiction and reports doesn't stand up well to the actual cases.

I'd suggest a copy of Paul Hill's Unconventional Flying Objects.

If there were some evidence for the existence of these so far imaginary constructs existing in a state of nature, I might, slightly grant some possibility to the idea that they could cause some minor EM effects.

Unfortunately, like most UFO reports, most EM reports occur during clear weather, many are during the day and include the close observation of structured objects with a metallic appearance.

No one, least myself, would deny the presence of ionization effects near the surface of the UFO. But the cases available refute any idea that a majority of the interesting UFO cases can be accounted for in this way, not least due to the energy requirements.

The idea that plasmas can leave calcined ground traces with weights in the tens of tons, however, is completely unsupportable (pun intended).

- > > Radiation output verified by geiger counter

We'd require x-ray output at least from any UFO source. A mechanism for producing x-ray energy from such sources as ball lightnings could be postulated, but ball lightning forms under well-defined weather conditions which seldom if ever exist during UFO sightings. And the extensive literature of radiation damage cases indicates that we are not talking about minor levels of energy generation - again a major problem for any of these "self-motivated plasma" theories.

This is a Vallee-type concept which I really can't see support for in the cases that I have examined. Only a very small percentage of cases appear unusual enough to require extraordinary explanations of this sort, and many of those are of dubious credibility. Others have been successfully explained by various theorists with ideas that don't require quite so much revision of current scientific concepts as "parallel worlds", "ultra-terrestrials", paranormal "control systems", etc.

I refer you to my essay at <http://www.geocities.com/~mcashman/paracrit.htm>

and the followup study of the Magonia catalog at <http://www.geocities.com/~mcashman/magland.htm>

for my reasoning in so far rejecting these kinds of hypotheses.

Yes, there is a large amount of room for difficulty in trying to understand the behavior of a phenomenon which seems to be directed by an intelligence whose motives are inaccessible to us. But that argues for great caution and maximal evidence before theorizing, especially before making theories that really break with the knowns of physics.

- > completely "hallucinatory" scenario?

Many researchers, myself included, still have a number of problems with the "reality" of various abduction cases.

There's no question that there's room for abduction to be occurring in some fashion, though I doubt it is with anything even close to the frequency of the reports that seem to be coming with increasing pace as the years pass. The reason for that is that there are credible cases on the border of abduction, consciously remembered, and in some cases with physical evidence of one sort or another.

But I think there is also a lot of mental illness and publicity seeking and attempts to gain attention at work in the abduction phenomenon, and many of the "non-physical" abductions are probably either part of this, or are effects of PTSD on people who have had some objective experience, or they are not related to the UFO phenomenon, by the very absence of the UFO in the reports.

Read the catalogs and read the literature. My website hosts four large catalogs, and the Project 1947 website

<http://www.iufog.org/project1947/index.html>

contains a number of excellent catalogs while

<http://www.primenet.com/~bdzeiler/> contains excellent source material, including papers by a number of eminent researchers.

We recently hashed that around extensively here. I won't go into it again, but you may want to check out the UFO Updates archive.

It's not a question of getting more intelligent but of having more knowledge. And we certainly have a lot more knowledge now than we did then.

Anyway, I hope this helps in your search for knowledge.

Kevin:

I must have missed something. I never heard Kiviat's name mentioned in conjunction with this show until your comment. Not in California and not in the flood of Comments. If I had, I wouldn't have appeared. Is he listed in the credits? I still haven't a tape of the show so can't check. What is the source of this info?

Dear List:

For the record: The UPN/Kiviat production was NOT in the least bit original. It was nearly an exact copy of a film produced by Dean Alioto/Axiom Films in San Francisco in 1989, titled, UFO ABDUCTION. 75 minutes. Alioto took a group of friends, etc. for a weekend and enacted the nearly identical sequence of events depicted in the UPN docudrama. He did not however, intersperse interviews with 'personalities' in his film.

Protest UPN irresponsible UFO programming

FOR POSTING

Dear list:

Here is my letter to UPN, protesting "Incident At Lake County." I hope you all will take the time to write your feelings to your local UPN affiliate. You can get many of the email addresses by going to www.infoseek.com and typing in UPN. (The Los Angeles affiliate is UPN Channel 13, reachable at: guestbook@upn13.com)

Let's make them aware we care.

Donald Waldrop
Director, MUFON LA Mutual UFO Network,
Los Angeles.
(Donzon@aol.com)

Dear UPN Channel 13, Los Angeles --

I recently witnessed on your channel a very destructive bit of misinformation masquerading as a documentary.

The fake docu-drama, "Incident In Lake County", promoted and aired with the questions asking "Is it real?", was the worst kind of misleading and fear-mongering programming. It was clearly designed to cause fear of alien abduction in the average person.

As I am sure you know, there are a large number of people who have had actual sightings of UFOs. What you may not know, but easily could have with a little research, is that a significant portion of the public believes they have actually had contact with alien entities. This section of our population includes many well-educated and productive people. Many are traumatized by this belief and many are looking to the press and television to help them separate fact from fiction.

By televising programs like this, you are doing your watchers an extreme disservice by blurring the distinctions of reality, causing those who feel they are experiencing these events even more trauma while fueling those more skeptical members of the public to be even more closed to the possibility of life outside of our tiny world.

I personally feel programming like this is yellow journalism at its worst. I now know that your integrity is at question and will avoid watching any further UFO or ET subject programming on UPN 13.

I urge you to stay away from the Kiviat production company and its questionable goals in producing programming like this.

Yours truly
Donald Waldrop

Aliens turn gamekeeper into millionaire

Aliens Turn Gamekeeper Into Millionaire

This 'rags to riches' alien story was recently related to me by a British citizen living in southern Sweden. Peter Hesket, a translator of literary works, had been ill for quite some time, when a friend told him about a natural medicine which could not only make him well, but was an elixir of life. Peter's inquisitive mind urged him to find out more about the wonder cure, only to discover that it could have originated from an alien source.

Gosta Carisson is from southern Sweden. In May 1946 he was a 27 year old employed as a gamekeeper for a local titled Count. One evening as he was walking through a wooded area he noticed a bright light coming from somewhere in the distance. Thinking that some boys had started a fire he rushed to the scene and discovered a 50 foot disc with eleven humanlike occupants. There were originally thirteen crew, but two had apparently died in a collision with their mother ship, and they had landed on earth to dispose of (bury) their dead. The ETs told Gosta that they were from a star called Sirius B which was seven light years away, and they had never visited Earth before. According to Gosta's description, related to me by Peter, they were good looking, all the same height, which was shorter than us, with beautiful teeth and eyes, and dark brown hair. They also seemed to be clothed in strange tight fitting skin suits, which made them all look very similar.

Gosta tried to communicate with the aliens but was stopped in his tracks by a crew member who 'froze' him to the spot by stretching out his arm. However, he did make friends with them and through some kind of telepathy they were able to communicate. The aliens told Gosta that twelve quartz rods powered their ship. At the time of the incident they were replacing a damaged rod which may have been a result of the collision. They also told him about precious metals and pollens which could be found here on Earth.

Over the years, through regular contact, they taught Gosta how to collect pollens from certain flowers which could be used as medication for many human ailments, as well as serving as an elixir. With their help he later invented a machine for extracting the pollens. When news of Gosta's special medicine spread, he was invited to the United States where a deal was made that if he keep quiet about his alien source until the year 2,000, he would be guaranteed the US market for his product. Gosta agreed, and it apparently made him a very wealthy man. He eventually sold his business to a Swedish based international pharmaceutical company and became a millionaire.

Most of this story (apart from the alleged US deal) was released in a Swedish publication about twenty odd years ago. It was a lengthy journalistic investigation co-authored by the experienter Gosta Carisson, and Swedish UFO investigator Clas Svahn. The only known English translation was a full length article titled "The Angelholm Landing Report" published in Flying Saucer Review in the early 1970s. However, Peter Hesket is considering translating the Swedish story into English so it may soon be available in the UK.

Some Swedish researchers are not convinced and insist there are still many unanswered questions. However, records show that Sweden had a wave of UFO sightings in 1946, so it's possible that something landed somewhere. Peter is taking the herbal elixir himself, but admits that he's not sure about its alien connections. He tells me that the pollen tablets are available in the United States, and in Britain it's sold under the name of "Polbax", but so far I haven't been able to find it. Anyone locating this product please contact me, I could do with an elixir fix.

Santilli Debunks the Debunkers

The AA mystery deepens. A London fashion photographer who wants to remain anonymous in print (I'll call him 'Angel') says that four years ago he worked on a CD cover for one of Ray Santilli's music companies. During his working relationship with the British businessman, he claims Ray told him the truth about the "Alien Autopsy" footage, and how he came to acquire it.

According to Angel, the cameraman story is a total fabrication. He says:

"Ray told me himself that he had been approached by someone at an American Film and Video trade fair, who offered to sell him "under the table", unusual footage of an alien autopsy." Angel believes Ray was genuinely convinced the footage was of a real alien autopsy, but later when he discovered it was a fake, he decided to run with it anyway. "He was at first undecided on what to do. He contacted the man who sold him the footage and he confirmed it was a fake. Ray had already paid a deposit and spent time on looking for funding, he was too far in. He told me that if he could pull this one off it would be the biggest hoax in history." Angel is convinced that Ray talked to dozens of people at the time and he believes there are others out there with this same information.

Ray admits to knowing the photographer, and that he may well have mentioned the AA footage to him, as at the time it was no secret because he was trying to raise capital to purchase it. I asked Ray if there was any truth in Angel's story, he said. "His story is absolute nonsense. I did not buy the footage from a trade fair, he's making the story up, or he's mixed up the facts with fiction. I'm surprised he would come out with a story like that. I've had no conversation with him for almost four years. And as for the AA footage, if it were faked, not only would it cost a great deal of money to make, but it would require at least fifteen to twenty people, film crew etc. to produce it, and how on earth would you keep all those people quiet - there's bound to have been a security leak by now.

Ray tells me he has a collection of 'alien autopsy' films created by special effects experts. Apparently these films have been produced at incredible cost in an attempt to prove that it's possible to fake such a film. The collection includes footage produced by Fox, RTL, Fuji, a Scandinavian company, and even an X-Files piece. Says Ray "I'll probably get shot for this, but I'm seriously considering putting them all together to make a one hour video special. And believe me, they are nothing like the original, they're laughable, even though hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent on producing them." He's now looking for a title (any ideas welcome) and is prepared to offer the project to another party to produce. When I asked him if he was allowed to use the films, he said he was. So having been accused by many of promoting an elaborate hoax, he's offering a compilation of them. That should start a whole new debate, I'm sure. Maybe Ray Santilli will get the last laugh after all.

William Birnes Interview

Subject: William Birnes Interview

William Birnes Interview - August 1997 - Georgina Bruni

The William J Birnes Interview

William J. Birnes has a CV as long as your arm and his literary works are too numerous to mention, but what is important to ufologists is his latest best seller. A fascinating inside story co-authored with retired US Army Lt. Col. Philip Corso, titled THE DAY AFTER ROSWELL. Corso, a former Pentagon official who was Chief of the Army's Foreign Technology Division, claims he was responsible for stewarding retrieved alien artifacts (found at the Roswell crash site) to American industries in a reverse engineering project which led to today's technology. I managed an interview with William who is currently writing another book with Philip Corso, THE DAY AFTER DALLAS: INSIDE THE WARREN COMMISSION.

Georgina Bruni: William, you have stated that Corso believes he's part of the "Disclosure". Can you elaborate on this? I'm confused, if he believes he's part of the "Disclosure" how did he come to that conclusion?

William J. Birnes: First, since the publication of THE DAY AFTER ROSWELL, there has been only silence from the US Government - no official denials, no statements to the effect that Corso has misspoken or is wrong, or is out of line. In fact, the Pentagon has ordered the book for its bookstore as well as bookstores at military bases around the US. Also the Navy has ordered the book for some of its stores. I take this to be a tacit Government endorsement of Corso's book and what he says. Therefore, the Gov't seems to be using him as part of a disclosure by default, a disclosure that doesn't damage anyone's reputation. Phil himself believes that because of his relationship with the late Arthur Trudeau, he had the ability and probably an indirect green light from the powers that be inside the US military, to tell the story of what the army did with the Roswell material.

Georgina Bruni: There as been much controversy surrounding Senator Strom Thurmond's denial that he did not know he was writing a foreword for THE DAY AFTER ROSWELL, but believed it was for a memoir about Corso's career in military intelligence. Corso is said to have spoken to Thurmond and requested a new foreword for the Roswell book, for which you claim to have copies of both, as well as a signed release to use the new foreword. As yet no one seems to have seen this evidence, is there any chance of researchers having a copy of this signed release?

William J. Birnes: I will ask the publisher if I can be allowed to scan the release and senator's cover letter so that it can be published publicly on the Internet.

Georgina Bruni: Earlier this year Senator Thurmond attended a Washington ceremony were he received the Pentagon's highest civilian honour. "No American has done more for America's security than Sen Strom Thurmond" said Defense Secretary William Cohen. Do you think this is a good enough reason for Thurmond to deny he wrote the Roswell book foreword, and could it be that this was a staged government production to honour him in exchange for his co-operation in debunking Corso's claims? Didn't Thurmond state "I know of no such cover-up and do not believe one existed."

William J. Birnes: The statement about "No such cover-up" never came from Thurmond but from his staff. I think the award ceremony for Thurmond was genuine and probably well deserved. It had nothing to do with the foreword to the book. However, Thurmond's staff was genuinely surprised and distressed that the Senator had agreed to write the foreword for Phil Corso and immediately moved to snuff it out. They were unsuccessful.

Georgina Bruni: In the book Corso mentions he saw the body of a dead alien and that he couldn't tell whether its grey skin was real because it looked like a thin one-piece head to toe fabric covering the creatures flesh. I have heard similar reports of aliens bearing this kind of skin covering. A New Zealand abductee who claims he was in contact with an alien race, tells an amazing story of a machine that manufactures these coverings. The alien steps into the tube shaped machine and is sealed from head to toe, rather like we seal our frozen meat. The skin covering is supposed to protect them from our atmosphere and from radiation. Another experiencer from Sweden says he has been in contact with aliens covered from head to toe in a second skin. Does Col. Corso know if the US Government experimented with this fibre found on the dead alien?

William J. Birnes: Corso says that the Government tried for years to reverse engineer an atomically aligned fabric similar to the one that covered the alien as a kind of second skin. I think they gave a research grant to the University of Colorado (I'm not 100% sure of this) to come up with a kind of fabric based on the way a spider spins its web. The idea of shrink-wrapping or weaving the skin around the alien (and probably around the craft) is correct. That's probably the way it happened.

Georgina Bruni: A British conspiracy researcher alleges that Corso was a member of the Shickshinny Knights of Malta, a right wing group which provided a base for dissident retired military officers who were dissatisfied with the CIA's internationalism. Can you comment on this.

William J. Birnes: I've never actually asked Col Corso whether he was a member of any right wing sympathy group. I do know that the British researcher probably got his or her information from a book called "The Man Who Knew Too Much" which refers to Corso as one of the people promoting a "Two-Oswald" theory after the JFK assassination. In fact, Corso continues to believe that there were two "Oswalds" and that the CIA covered up its relationship with Oswald (Allen Dulles himself admitted to this shortly before he died. Lee Rankin said that given what Dulles withheld from the Warren Commission, the commission should have said that there really was a conspiracy to murder the President). It's also true that Corso among a number of military officers were dissatisfied with the CIA's internationalism. In this he was joined in his opinion by British Military Intelligence, where he was trained during WWII. The split between the CIA and the military grew out of tensions between the military and the OSS during WWII and continued right through the 1980s.

Georgina Bruni: I understand Media UFO researcher, George Knapp has had the Corso story for five or six years. Corso apparently did a recorded video interview with him where he revealed two close encounters with ETs in White Sands, sketched pictures of an alien, and talked about animal mutilations, Zecharia Sitchin and the Sumarians. Have you seen this video ?

William J. Birnes: No I've not seen the video, but the Col and I have discussed the story as the subject of a future book.

The Philadelphia Experiment lives on

The Philadelphia Experiment lives on

A fairly recent addition to the famous Philadelphia Experiment is a man called Drue (Andy) who claims he was one of five civilian scientists involved in the actual experiment that made the USS Eldridge disappear on August 15th 1943.

In 1947 his memory was magnetically scrambled to prevent recall, and in 1952 he was reborn as "Andy" a kind of "walk-in" with a suppressed DNA memory. Andy served 22 years of distinguished service in the Marine Corps and retired in 1993 as a Master Sergeant.

Since the Philadelphia story first came to light there have been a few major players, some have been bumped off, others debunked.

According to Drue's account, which he related to crystal skull expert Richard Shapiro, and other researchers, when the USS Eldridge became invisible it materialised in twelve different locations and time eras. At one future location advanced technology was placed on the ship which included computer systems that were taken over by "one of those in the know" as Drue describes the secret team. Namely, Dr John Von Neumann who we all know to be a pioneer of computer technology. Another historical name which crops up, is that of Dr Nikola Tesla, the alleged mastermind of the project, who apparently withdrew from the experiment because he was concerned with the human suffering factor. Telsa later died in mysterious circumstances, along with, according to Drue, approximately 2,000 other people involved in the project. We are told that the ship and crew were fragmented into multiple dimensions and out of 181 men only 21 survived, 40 died and 120 simply disappeared. Some of the dead bodies were said to have been embedded into the very structure of the ship.

Drue has some interesting information for Roswell fans. He claims it was the result of another time related experiment being conducted underground that disturbed the earth's planetary magnetic grid and caused quantum gates to open up. Any ET 's travelling the corridor at the time got caught up and materialised. He insists there was not just the one or two crashes we know about, but a total of 16, with 45 dead aliens of different types recovered.

Now that would surely account for all the different witness descriptions!

Sphinx Cover Up?

The Sphinx Cover-up?

Last year I was introduced to an Egyptian political correspondent for London, and during our conversation I casually brought up the subject of the Sphinx opening and asked if there was any news. Oh Boy was there news!

Should the following information be true, then not only are Edgar Cayce's predictions correct, but the Egyptian government are involved in a massive cover-up.

According to the journalist, the Egyptian government have ordered their press to keep their latest discoveries confidential. Their excuse for halting the archeological excavation is that they are renovating the monuments. Dr Joseph Schor who has connections with the Cayce Foundation, is supposed to be heading the expedition and I'm told they have made a number of amazing discoveries.

Apparently the soil immediately inside the Sphinx is very soft, but just beyond it they found ancient records. Some have already been deciphered and tell the story of ATUM, the one who came from the skies, and of a civilisation from Atlantis, or Altea. Could they have found the information which may prove that the Atlanteans built the pyramids? My source says Yes!

Edgar Cayce, the "Sleeping Prophet" is known for his prediction that the Hall of Records would be discovered in 1997-1998. My source also tells of another discovery. As they began tunnelling to the left of the paw which leads outside the Sphinx, they came upon a chamber which housed the treasures of an Egyptian queen. Coins, gold and statues were found, including one of a female body with the head of a lion. I wonder, are they going to tell the world of these discoveries?

The journalist seems to think they are afraid of what the records reveal, proving once and for all, that the Egyptians may not have been the true architects of these great monuments.

Meanwhile, Richard Hoagland's 'Enterprise Mission' is still reporting on numerous "curious activities" inside the Great Pyramid. According to their report, a member of the Schor Expedition has approached them with information claiming that certain members of the Egyptian government are intent on NOT revealing exciting new discoveries which may include a "hidden excavation". Researcher Larry Hunter has provided the Enterprise Mission with photographic evidence, which includes a picture of a newly installed power cable, all of which could point to clandestine tunneling inside the monuments. Apparently Hunter left copies of the photographs with Mohammed Sherdy, an assistant editor of a daily newspaper, who promised a full investigation. But alas, if my journalist source is genuine, then the Egyptian press already have the story and they are not about to go public with it.

January 20, 1998, 6:00 pm south of the Great Sand Dunes Hooper resident reports watching a "big star doing some big twists." Object/light was described as flashing "red-green and blue." Witness described the multi-colored light as hovering for five or so minutes just south of the Sand Dunes Oasis. At around 6:15 pm, I witnessed two low flying jets headed from the east, over the Sangre de Cristos, south toward the location where the light was observed. Jets were flying under 3000 feet above the Valley floor. Witness claimed the object was not Sirius rising in the east. He claimed the "object" two times larger than the brightest planets, was 5 degrees north of Sirius the heaaven's brightest star, which he was able to identify.

UNDER FORENSIC INVESTIGATION

Wed December 17, 1997, at 10:30 a.m. 5 Miles SW of Alamosa, SLV
CO MUTE
Rancher Ron Gardiner discovered a dead gelding 5 miles SW of Alamosa, CO, in the San Luis Valley So-Cen CO/No-Cen NM. The animal was still warm and the rancher estimated the animal was killed and mutilated sometime around dawn. The horse was missing it's penis and an 8 inch circular patch of hide behind the sheath-- which was intact. The rear-end was neatly cored out in a slightly elongated circle to a depth of 8 to 9 inches. Eyes and tongue were intact. The animal was found lying on it's right side at the bottom of a dry, 7 foot deep irrigation canal channel. There was evidence of a struggle i.e., broken chimisa bushes and thrashing marks, but besides the unfortunate gelding's tracks, there were no other tracks present. No apparent scavenger interest noted and two horses in the small herd seemed curious and unafraid of the carcass. The carcass did not bloat. No downside incisions or additional evidence noted by the rancher, this investigator, or the Alamosa County Sheriff investigator, but a 5 inch shallow gash in the hide was present on the neck. Several drops which appeared to be blood were found in snow about 60 feet away over the fence and across the road. Alamosa County (Gardner/O'Brien/Alamosa Sheriff, Valley Courier VIDEO/STILL/FORENSIC)

Witness reports a close encounter with a large triangular ship in south-central Saguache County

"I saw out my back door one of those triangular UFO's hovering over the [witnesses'] south field. When I went outside to see it, it moved slowly and hovered by the roof of the house and over the silos. Then it came back over the house and a beam of white-blue light came out of the middle and something was taken up in the beam. I couldn't see what, but its shape was smallish. I was so scared I couldn't talk. It played some kind of musical rhythm when the lights around the edge flashed off and on. Let me know if anyone else saw anything."

UNDER FORENSIC INVESTIGATION

Sun November 30, 1997, around 5:30-6:00 am, SW corner pasture on Saguache County Road 61 and County Road SLV CO MUTE.

1 and a half miles west, 2-miles north of Hooper, CO, a calf "mutilation" was reported by ranchers Bill Knopfman, Jack Kuntz and their foreman, Ted Ruggles. A report was filed with the Saguache County Sheriff's Office, who also investigated the calf death. The 10-month old female calf, in a herd of approximately 40 cattle, was discovered with it's right side mandible completely exposed with all hide and tissue removed. That morning, a dense fog blanketed the entire center portion of the SLV and the temperature was around 10 degrees.

The apparent facial incision extended up and over the eye socket. Eye was removed. Tongue was intact. Rear-end coring 10" in diameter. Apparent removal of reproductive tract to a (approximate) depth of 18". Drop of blood observed on one teat. Uniform 4 to 5 inch snow cover over the entire pasture. Animal found lying on left-side. No down-side incisions noted. Calf was facing head to the south. Nearest dwelling about 400-450 yards away south by southwest of carcass. Only tracks observed were the victim animal's own tracks. No additional evidence noted, i.e., blood, tissue, footprints, tire tracks, disturbed snow or vegetation. No known observation of attendant lights or sounds in the vicinity of site at time of death. Residents of nearest dwelling reported their dogs barking at around 5:30 to 6:00 a.m. Rancher's dogs showed an interest in the carcass and evidently widened the rectum-coring shortly after calf's discovery. Magpies and crows were observed on the calf at time of discovery. Some bird scavenging was noted, i.e., eye-socket and optic nerves scavenged. Tissue underneath incisional area showed some signs of being pecked at, but no observed scavenger action on hide at or on actual incisions. Three sets of samples were obtained for separate forensic testing.

Saguache County (Saguache County Sheriff/O'Brien SLV Publishing Papers, Valley Courier VIDEO/STILL/FORENSIC)

SAME NIGHT

Sat November 29, 1997, 11:10 pm Over Northern SLV MA1 Four witnesses in the Baca watch a multi-colored light move slowly from center of the Valley toward the north.

Buddist Monk Claims death threats

Buddhist Monastic Claims She Received Death Threats

An ordained Buddhist monastic, the Rev Mary Teal Coleman, has apparently stated under oath that when she approached William Moore (best remembered for his part in the MJ12 documents expose) with information about a film of a downed UFO held inside a military hanger, Moore threatened her life. She accuses him of being a self confessed controlled informant for an intelligence agency, and believes an investigation of Moore will reveal a black budget programme, probably used by the (NRO) National Reconnaissance Office. She also states that when she visited the (then) Secretary of Defense, Perry, that one of his staff, Frank Brierton, warned her if she tried to communicate again, she would be sued for stalking.

Coleman set about contacting other government departments, supplying them with a 22 hour video taped report 'The Coleman Report, Impact Zone', which amongst other things, is supposed to offer positive proof of crashed UFO's and confidential meetings between top ufologists and government officials. The report was sent to the (then) chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Sen Arlen Specter, but she received no reply. It was also sent to Vice President Gore, and Coleman received a courtesy response from Gore's director of correspondence, Bill Mason. He advised her to continue working with officials at the FBI and Defense Department, even though the latter had allegedly threatened to sue her. Apart from the letter written on behalf of the Vice President, Coleman appears to have received no further response from any other US government department.

Mentioned in the Coleman report is reference to UFO investigator, Lt Col Wendelle Stevens (USAF.Ret). According to Coleman, Stevens has information pertaining to a film of a crashed UFO being kept by the US military. She explains that "actions carried out during 1995/6 by Stevens, Moore and the Roswell Bunch", were threatening enough to her physical safety to prompt her to make a report to the FBI. As proof of her contact with Stevens, Coleman produces a copy of a page from his letter to her. Writes Stevens. 'Remember the movie you were trying to show me one time. That subject is the biggest danger there is. I got close and had it on camera. I was about to get closer..... This of course, is in the strictest confidence.' Coleman paid no heed to the 'strictest confidence' request, and apart from reporting him to the FBI, she went public with the information, claiming that Stevens had broken his promises to her. An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth!

Mary Teal Coleman is the head of a religious organisation called the Dharma Institute. Curious to know more, I recently contacted her, hoping for an interview, but instead I received a reply from the institute informing me that before 'entities' (don't you just love that word) could be considered to interview Rev Coleman, they need to supply information about who they are. Here's what I was asked to submit. A curriculum vitae, including examples of past works, or references to past works, my full name, my private home address, my work address, the name of my employer, information about my research in ufology, and my work, other than my research. Needless to say I was not amused. When I replied to Dharma complaining about their attitude and their over-the-top demands for personal information (after all I wasn't applying to join their organisation) I was accused of being critical and insulting. I was also warned that should I contact the institute again, my communications would be given to an attorney and law enforcement officials. It certainly doesn't take much to upset this religious group. Which makes me think. To what extent has Coleman's physical life really been threatened? Could it just be that this is one helluva paranoid lady?

Subject: Re: UPN's "Incident in Lake County"

In the Las Vegas Review-Journal today (1-23-98) under "NATION briefs" there is a short article from Two Harbors, Minn. The story relates that the Sheriff from Lake County has received numerous inquiries from people asking about the UPN story about the "McPherson" family.

He tells that no McPherson family has lived in Two Harbors (Lake County) going back two years. He also says that aliens have abducted no one from his county.

The sheriff's dispatcher jokes that the only people he hasn't heard from are X-Files characters Mulder and Scully.

I searched the R-J website and could not find this article listed but have paraphrased here for you.

Sorry, folks, but a friend in California told me that good ole Kiviat was involved in this this. Saw a couple of other posts that mentioned him, but apparently that information is in error.
I stand corrected on that.

However, that doesn't change the main point which is that we, in the UFO community had better become more discriminating in our participation in UFO programs. When we lend our good names to these sort of productions, we harm the entire field for we are all lumped into the same boat.

John Velez, in his communication with the producers realized that this program was going to harm us all. To his great credit, he decided not to participate.

We all have to realize that not everyone in the world is as tuned into the UFO phenomena as we are. They see a program like the UPN show and believe that we all are like that. We all have no intelligence, we are gullible, and we believe everything that is said about UFOs. And this program reinforced that opinion by the participation of leaders in the field.

When they were not shown the video, that should have provided them with a clue about the nature of that video. We must realize that some people work to make money and no other consideration matters. That's why there are programs like the UPN show. Make money, exploit the situation, and run to the next project. They care nothing for all the time, effort, money, research, and lost family contact that has gone into learning what is happening.
They just want to make money.

But even with that, we must assume some of the blame. We are only too willing to jump in front of the camera to provide "the best information." I say again, we must realize that sometimes the publicity is not worth it. Again, I doubt that many of us would care to see our names in THE WEEKLY WORLD NEWS.

So, part of the blame falls on us and we must accept that blame. It is too easy to blame UPN for what is our desire for the spotlight.

Another really busy day, so here goes:

A&E
Thursday at 7:00 PM (repeated at 11:00 PM), the series THE UNEXPLAINED has EXTRATERRESTRIALS.

THE DISCOVERY CHANNEL
Thursday, 5:00 PM, TRAVELLERS (Las Vegas, but includes UFOs)

THE LEARNING CHANNEL
Wrapping up their Alien Invasion week...Saturday, 4:00 PM, THE CASE OF THE UFOS. Saturday, 7:00 PM (repeated at 10:00 PM), UFOS AND OTHER CLOSE ENCOUNTERS. Sunday, 10:00 AM, WE ARE NOT ALONE: SKYWATCHERS.

THE SCI-FI CHANNEL
Sunday, 7:00 AM (repeated Tuesday at 5:00 PM and 9:00 PM), SIGHTINGS special IN DEPTH AND BEYOND: UFOS, THE 100 YEAR COVER-UP. I saw a bit of this two-hour special, and was disappointed in one early thing. I find it misleading (deliberately or carelessly) when a recreation shows something notably different and more stereotypical (or sensational) from what the narration is saying. In the case of the alleged Aurora crash in 1897, the narrator is describing a cigar-shaped object which drifted slowly. The special effects on the screen are showing a spherical object plummeting to Earth at a high speed. We then see what appears to be the aftermath of an explosion, with fire around (not the way I recall the story). Outside of that, though, other portions of it I saw were, at least, worth watching. Thursday, 5:00 PM and 9:00 PM, SIGHTINGS.

Sorry I didn't have more time...still cramming Visual Basic to teach next week.

I'm very excited about this! Some of you know, I ran a bookstore for years, and it has always been a love of mine. This is being done in association with Amazon.com, which has an outstanding reputation for the five "S"s of internet shopping: selection, searchability, service, savings, and security. If there is any specific book you want (or topic in which you are interested), let me know and I will do the research and e-mail you a link you can use to check it out more (and order it if you want). I will be linking to books within the Media Alert, to make it more efficient for you. If you click on the link, you will be sent to that title on Amazon. You do =not= have to buy it at that point! I didn't see the UPN video, but I told John Valez in a private note what I'm about to share with you now. Perhaps John will be so good as to confirm that I mentioned it to him. I'm going into much more detail here.

This video has been out AND debunked for quite a while. Sightings or some other paranormal program debunked this video ages ago. I even have that episode on tape, and when I get my VCR working again, I'll give you the copyright date. Sightings, or whoever, even interviewed the director/story writer and he said he was honored that anyone thought this film was real, but that it was just a student film project. Shown where production stills of the little girls getting into alien costumes and such.

But the fact is, this video has been out and about for a long time, at least two years. And it has been debunked and a known fake for at least a year and a half. When I saw the Sightings (or whatever) show two years ago with this topic, I was under the impression that Sightings had done the story on the abduction video as if it were real over a year before.

Now, I think the interesting question becomes, "are any of the same producers behind Sightings involved in this production?" That is a far more interesting question than "is it real, is it fake, and who was fooled?"

On a related subject... If UFO research is ever to enter a realistic, respected, and honored role in the media, then it must act like it deserves it. I commend John Valez for his actions in refusing to participate. I am shocked that Stan Friedman participated in a project without seeing even a tiny peice of the film in question. As a television producer, I am shocked at the tricks used to bring legitamacy to this program...

Shame on UPN
Shame on the producers

Re: Chilling Video Record of a Family's Abduction

And double shame on the UFO community for accepting this crap.

Well, I'll hold of my assessment of that until I look further into the subject. All that I can say is what I have read has lead me to regard the descriptions as more fluid, but that may as well be a reflection insufficient reading.

> Basically, I think that has to be an important

But is it though? So much of what I have heard (and again, I'll admit much of it being more recent may very well be a poor sample) has involved little physical evidence and has relied mostly on the credibility of the eyewitness. And especially in cases where hypnotic regression has been used, I have some difficulty accepting witness credibility.

I can understand your motivation for doing this, but at the same time I worry that doing so may be dangerous. I'd prefer to have some sort of objective criterion to select or reject data. Without it, you risk massaging the data to support an existing conclusion.

But again, I do appreciate your response and will take some time to read more, and at that point, if I still have problems with your analysis, I will have more to go on that worries.

I wasn't suggesting that the popularity of SF was in any way related to the frequency of UFO sightings, only that the form of UFOs may be related to the SF representations of alien craft at the time. But I don't think I could claim that the latter caused the former without pushing it. And I would argue that ideas and other elements from limited genres do spread into society as a whole, often without anyone thinking about the source. Culture is by no means a gradual, liner phenomenon, and the existence of numerous fads, trends, and fashions which arose from unexpected places are I think sufficient evidence.

> Also, most "alien spacecraft" in the 30s and 40s were giant metal

Now that I will grant you and I apologize for not being more careful in characterizing SF spacecraft. I guess it's been a long time since I looked through my pulp SF collection.

> In other words, any theory that claims a relationship between > fiction and reports doesn't stand up well to the actual cases.

OK, it seems you're right. I still suspect some cross-contamination in either one direction or the other (possibly influencing some of the more dubious sightings) but no, it isn't nearly enough to hope to explain the phenomenon.

> I'd suggest a copy of Paul Hill's Unconventional Flying Objects.

Thank you.

It's admittedly difficult, but the models do explain ball lightning quite effectively (although your later point about clear skies is nonetheless valid). And some considerably more microscopic effects. In any case I have some papers arriving by interlibrary loan and I'm going to take them to a physicist friend of mine for evaluation. If anyone cares, I'll tell you what he says about it.

Yeah, unless modern science has completely missed something about particle physics, and matter is spontaneously converting to energy (which I don't think it is). Well, obviously we don't know everything about physics because we haven't managed to break the light speed barrier or make a reactionless drive yet.

Actually parallel worlds aren't as hoaky as you think (c.f., Everett and Wheeler) but that's a matter of semantics. Like I said, I look forward to evaluating the evidence myself. Ultimately, though, since we can't really do any experiments, it all comes down to which theory describes it "best". And "best" is of course a matter of one's personal belief systems; the metrics we each use to evaluate the elegance and "ordinariness" of a theory are entirely subjective.

Case in point, I've met people who believe that the entire phenomenon is essentially being produced, in physical form, by mass human belief (the "Tulpa" theory). To them, this was a much more elegant explanation. Until we can figure out how to test a theory on the UFO phenomenon, it's going to come down to "who sounds less like a crackpot". And while there are some people I'd definitely consider crackpots, I'm sure others would say the same of me. Or you, for that matter.

> I refer you to my essay at
...

Thank you very much.

> But that argues for great caution and maximal evidence before > theorizing, especially before making theories that really break > with the knowns of physics.

Well, I think most, if not all, of these theories put a strain on physics, if for no other reason than UFOs appear to have some form of reactionless propulsion (if this has been addressed before please tell me in email and I'll look it up). But I rely heavily upon Clarke's Law in issues of technology, because I don't think our own level of science is anywhere close to perfection.

> The reason > for that is that there are credible cases on the border

OK, so I think one of the problems I'm running into here is that I haven't been looking towards the right sources. Although in my defense, trying to find a good book has been like finding the proverbial needle in the haystack.

Will do. Thanks.

> It's not a question of getting more intelligent but of having more > we did then.

But viewed from the perspective of how much knowledge it is possible to have (and I'm talking about major changes in understanding, not obscure stuff like "how many protons are in my cup of coffee"), I looking upon earlier peoples as more ignorant is like an ant looking down upon a flea. Many, many times have scientists (who should have known better) claimed to be close to the end of important discoveries in their fields.

> Anyway, I hope this helps in your search for knowledge.

Yes, it does. Once again, thanks for taking the time to address my concerns in an intelligent way.

Alfred's Odd Ode #217

Subject: Alfred's Odd Ode #217

Apology to MW #217 (For January 24, 1998)

Your silence, as always, is ominous and harsh, and perhaps I am uncomfortable on this road that I must march. But that point is lost in dissonance, _John Ford_ is dissed -- forgotten. His plight's ignored, dismissed and damned -- concern is misbegotten. And it really could be one of you, and you'd wish that you were missed. The measure I'm correct is made to match how much you're pissed.

You miss the point forgetting John as easy as you do. Not as pretty as Whit Streiber, lived with Mom, so what's construed? He picked up homeless strays, could shed a tear if they should suffer. We shan't demand John gain surcease from Suffolk county's bluffers?

What is it with Ford the 'whole rest =85 the world' knows? Does he play with his feces? Does he suck dirty toes? Is it 'cause he's republican (equally odiferous)? It's his guns! Or his friends, or perhaps he's carnivorous! Maybe just unpretty -- an embarrassment to some? You turn your back because he's nerdy, somewhat cluttered and unfun? He wears his cammies like Glen Campbell =85 had (and used!) decoder rings? He fell at last to keystone cops in the stupidest of stings? It's his tin foil saucer beanie? It's an image thing, you think? Perhaps he's plagued with body odor, and he reeks a stench, or stinks?

=85 Then it's you not thinking clearly, and it's you won't watch dissolve, the fabric of the tyranny from which you _think_ you are absolved! He's one of us that's gotten nailed for asking bigger questions! A casualty in war for truth, though fought with Law's suggestion! He fought our battle, now lies wounded in a dungeon of his enemy, while we stand by, our eyes askance, pretentious, and unfriendly.

What's gravy for the goose (and it's John Ford's goose that's steamed) will be gravy for the gander, and it's THEN I'll hear your scream!

Mr. Friedman,

You have spent so much of your life in pursuit of answers, real answers in regards to the UFO phenomena and then you take time to separating the fact from the fiction so that people like myself would have a better understanding of what's happening in our world. I greatly appreciate that.

But you missed my point in the earlier e-mail I posted. Your name was used to try and legitimize the UPU abduction show. Whether or not your comments are accurate in regards to abduction situations, they should not have been delivered in this "vehicle" because it hurts your cause. So the real point is, did you allow them to use your name or did they simply use stock video without your permission or knowledge. I can't tell from your response.

Tom-

"Incident at Lake County" was produced by Dick Clark Productions, not Kiviat/Green or Robert Kiviat. Are you saying that Robert Kiviat is now working for Dick Clark Productions?

Tha Alioto "film" you mention was created filmed as a low budget demonstration designed to attract investors in a full fledged feature film.
That project fell through and someone who got a copy decided to have some fun with it and sent it to some UFO researchers without further explanation. The only similarities that exist pertain to the general plot, and not much more. From some postings I have seen on the UPN show, it is claimed that it was produced as a student project of some sort. How Dick Clark Productions and the students got together on this show would be interesting to know, but the bottom line is that UPN's promotion was (at the very least) improper.

I don't know if the numbers mean much, but as of 6:30pm (est) on Saturday there were

10,428 votes cast by those who believed the video was real and 10,501 votes cast by those who believed it to be a fake

Those who have voted for it apparently don't frequent the usuall "lists" and haven't been engaging in the debate. If the web site's poll is to be believed, about half the viewers who have computers believed it was real. On the other hand, I'm not too trusting of anything that UPN does or says these days.

Of the three "lists" I monitor, no one has argued for its validity, and UPN is taking the brunt of the anger (as they should).

Tom,

For the record, this was not a Kiviat production. Mr. Alioto is given credit in the end credits. No one stole the idea from him, he just did another one.

Someone out there must have video taped this program.

Would someone please send Stan a copy. I fell asleep before the credits but it was obvious to me that this was an attempt to make fun of those of us that believe something real is going on. Please let up on Stan. This is not the first time someone credible has been used to add credibility to a hoax or if you will, entertainment.

And, Mr. Alioto is the same dude who filmed the "abduction"

You didn't miss anything. Bob Kiviat was in no way connected the crappy stuff hosted by Jonathan Frakes last night on Fox.

Stanton and Derrel Reply to UPN's Hoax

Date: Fri, 23 Jan 1998 15:52:05 -0600 (CST)
From: Vanguard [Amy Hebert]
Subject: IUFO: Stanton and Derrel Reply to UPN's Hoax

-> SearchNet's IUFO Mailing List

Dear Friends:

As mentioned previously, I wrote to Derrel Sims and Stanton Friedman and asked them about their role in UPN's production "Alien Abduction Incident At Lake County". Below is a copy of my letter and their responses to my questions...

Dear Mr. Friedman (fsphys@brunnet.net):

I, and many others in the UFO community, watched UPN's show the other night in which you appeared and gave your opinions as an investigator and researcher.

The video was an obvious fake and many in the UFO community are outraged. We are boycotting UPN, informing the producers and advertisers of our feelings and spreading the word.

Many find it hard to believe you, Derrel and Yvonne would support such an obvious hoax and theorize that your interviews were edited to make it look like experts were supporting the alleged video of an abduction. It does appear that your comments as well as Derrel's and Yvonne's do not refer to the video directly.

Could you please answer the following questions so many are asking?

1. Did you know your comments would be used to support the alleged abduction video?

Friedman: No of course not. I didn't see the video and haven't seen the program I gave answers to questions about abductions.

2. Did the producers edit your interview to make it LOOK like you were referring to the video when, in fact, you were only referring to abductions in general?

Friedman: I have no idea how they edited my comments. I wasn't asked about the video and said nothing about it.

3. Did you view the alleged abduction video before making your comments and did you believe it to be real or an obvious hoax?

Friedman: I didn't see the video. I haven't seen the video. How can I have an opinion? Everything I have heard indicates that actors were listed and that the probably filmer was a guy named Alioto. I have seen nothing to indicate that either the video was genuine or that UPN said it was genuine.

4. Did the producers tell you the video was in actuality produced with actors and special effects (as listed in the credits at the end of the program) and not a real video of an abduction in progress?

Friedman: It was implied after the interview.

5. This program has openly attempted to discredit you and all researchers who are trying to inform the public of the true nature of abduction phenomena. Can you explain how you came to be involved in this project?

Friedman: I don't understand how the program attempted to discredit me or other researchers. Were my answers off base? Did they give me false credentials? I was called on Dec. 31; trip arranged Jan. 1, I left on Jan 2 stayed overnight, was interviewed Jan.3 , saw my daughter and caught the red eye. Obviously I was contacted because I am well known and have been at it a long time. Would it really have been better if somebody less able to answer the questions rationally had been used? So far nobody has complained about what I actually said or how I said it.
Hastily, Stan

And this reply from Derrel Sims (derrel@holman.net):

DEAR AMY,

Thank you for asking,

I was interviewed on the subject of abductions by an interviewer at Dick Clark Productions who asked a series of very general questions about abductions, I signed a release for the interview I gave not knowing that it would be cut and edited into another piece. I was not informed by either the producers, or interviewer, that my comments would be used in a video. I did not see the video. I did not comment on the video in any way. If I had known I was going to be a part of a production--dramatic or otherwise--parts of which I was not being shown, I would not have done the interview. The production entitled "Incident in Lake County" in no way reflects my opinions about the video. I regret the way my image was used. In the future I will scrutinize with great care any requests for my appearances.

Derrel Sims

It appears no one has complained to Derrel or Stanton about this video nor does it seem that either has seen it. Perhaps those wishing to express their opinions to UPN may also wish to share it with Stanton and Derrel.

Dear Anatoly,

Your e-mail of January 15 (written in Russian in MIME format) was quite readable, but your e-mail of January 20 (in Windows-1251) was not (in its Russian-language part, of course). Thank you for the information on the supposed crash of an unknown object not far from Kharkov - I did not hear about this. Isn't there a possibility to find out the title of the newspaper, in which this report was published? In any case, I will try to verify it. At present I have no independent confirmation of the report.

As for the stories about supposed Chernobyl UFOs, this was a part of my paper "Alien Contacts and Abduction Experiences: a Look from the C.I.S.", published in MUFON 1994 International UFO Symposium Proceedings ("Ufology: a Historical Perspective", Seguin: MUFON, 1994, pp. 138-152). What follows is this fragment (p. 150):

"...About one month before the Chernobyl disaster I had a talk with an air traffic controller of the Kharkov airport. He told me that, according to pilots' reports, there was a raising number of UFO observations in the area of the Chernobyl nuclear power station (ChNPS). I did not pay special attention to this information, but put it down. After the disaster I took these notes from my file and for some time stared at them with, I can suppose, a rather stupid expression on my face.

Later it became known that on the night of the fire in the ChNPS, some 3 hours after the explosion, a team of nuclear specialists saw in the sky over the station a fiery ball of the color of brass. The witnesses estimated its diameter as 6-8 meters and its distance from the burning nuclear reactor No. 4 as some 300 meters. Just before the observation these specialists measured the level of radiation in the place where they were standing. It was measured at 3000 milliroentgens per hour. "Suddenly two bright rays of crimson color extended from the ball to the reactor... This lasted for some 3 minutes... The rays abruptly faded and the ball slowly floated away in a north-westerly direction, towards Byelorussia. Then we again looked at our radiation monitor. It displayed only 800 milliroentgens per hour..." (quoted from: V.Kratokhvil. UFO: A Time Machine. Kiev: Vypol, 1993, pp. 6-7.)."

Of course, you may use this text at your web-site.

All my best wishes!

Sincerely, Vladimir Rubtsov

You're thinking of a different video. The video shown on sightings was very similar, but not the same one. I believe that John has confirmed some of the details regarding the history of the UPN video, and posted that information to UpDates. If I recall, the video shown several years ago on Sightings was a demonstration video that was created to try and attract interest in a full fledged production (thankfully never made). Someone later decided to send it to a UFO researcher for a laugh and a number of man-hours were wasted in researching it.

Given what we know now, I wouldn't have bothered to watch it.
But given the hype, I didn't want to miss it. Unfortunately, the acting was so bad that I didn't stay in the room long enough to read the credits, which would have confirmed what I already knew.

No offense Georgina, but this is the third nonsensical post you have sent today. This one is simple, too. If Andy was a civilian scientist in 1943, he was at least 21 years of age at that time, assuming that he went to college for at least a little while. If he retired from the Marine Corps in 1993 after 22 years of service, he joined in 1971. You cannot now, nor could you ever in this century, join an American military service on a regular enlistment if you are over 35 years of age. If he was 21 years of age in 1943, he would have been 49 years old in 1971 and would have been on active duty into his 70s.

There is not even anything to debate here. It didn't happen.

This is one of the most complete examples of the media insulting the scientists and researchers working in ufology that I've seen in a long time.

Very impressive.

I personally think that Weaver and his associates in the Air Force didn't even come close to matching research which indicated a balloon explanation that hard working civilian researchers like Karl Pflock and Robert Todd have dug up through the years. Weaver doesn't deserve credit for original research, he played off civilian research, we all know it.

This report goes a lot further than interviewing Weaver and presenting a skeptical perspective on Roswell. It insults the whole field of ufology with extreme prejudice.

Jared.

I don't understand your question. I was interviewed in person on January 3 for the UPN show. Parts of my pieces were apparently used in the show.

What stock video? I gather it was skillful editing not having seen the show. I am not psychic. If this was a terrible show, as I

Charleston AFB, SC, 1975

The 1975 flyover reports were very interesting. Not all reports have been published. Perhaps the report below was related to that activity. It is too bad this report was not followed up at the time. The name has been deleted per the writer's request.

>To: National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena

Dear Sirs:

I just finished reading an article in the Sunday newspaper magazine, Parade. The article, UFO's vs. USAF, described incidents which were identical to one with which I had some personal involvement. Though I can't pinpoint the exact time, the incident occurred in late 1974 or early into 1975.

I was a staff sergeant in the Air Force, working an evening shift at Charleston AFB, SC., xxxxxxxxxxxx Section. I received a call from a chief petty officer at the Charleston Navy Weapons Station (nuclear storage area). He wanted to know whether we had any information on the three helicopters (or whatever) which were hovering over the storage area. He said they were just hovering and each was shining a bright light which was scanning the area. I informed the chief that I had no flight plan information on helicopters or any other aircraft which would be in that area. I took his name and number and told him I would call back if I found out anything. I then called the airport control tower. They informed me that tower personnel had been and were observing the three lights and had assumed them to be helicopters on a VFR flight plan. When I explained that the objects were over the weapons station, tower attempted radio contact with no response. The tower controller also checked with airport radar who could not pick the objects up on scope nor had they had any radio contact. I then called the Jacksonville, Fla. Air Traffic Control Center. The controller there also had no information on the "helicopters". I made one other call in trying to determine information on the objects. The Charleston AFS, an Air Defense Command radar site, is located near the municipal terminal side of the airport. The person I spoke to there (airman) seemed vague, unconcerned and unresponsive to the information but said they would check on it. I then called the navy chief to let him know I had struck out. He said the objects had just left the area heading in the direction of the ocean. A final call to the control tower revealed that they had just observed the objects disappear from view, out to sea at a very low altitude.

The incident described is accurate to the best of my memory. It left me a bit shaken and greatly concerned about our air defense and security procedures. Since there was nothing about the incident in the news the next day nor any apparent concern from military superiors, I decided to "tip" Mr. Hal Boykin, a local TV anchor man. He gave a brief report a couple of days later. Basically all that was reported was that Charleston navy officials had confirmed the incident and had it under investigation.

As you can tell, the incident I have described is very similar or identical to the ones in the Parade article with nuclear storage areas being the "target" of the objects. However, this incident happened several months prior to any of those. It happened in a different geographical area and to the Navy instead of the Air Force. Could this have been the initial practice run as a prelude to the sightings mentioned in the article?

There still may be a casual record of the Charleston sighting in the dispatchers log book at base operations. These logs are usually kept for a longer period than routine office files. Regardless, four civilian employees are still there who should have some recall of the incident. They are Mrs. Lois Wells, Mr. McFarland, Mr. Froman and Mr. Thornburg. I'm not sure, but I think Mr. Froman was my shift supervisor when the incident happened.

Personally, I do not believe these were UFO's in the traditional sense. I believe they were penetration of our security and defense either by our own forces for the purpose of testing the system or by a foreign adversary for reconnaissance purposes. I only hope that the former was the case.

I hope this information will be of some use to your organization. It has been bugging me for sometime now. Since I am a career NCO still on active duty with the Air Force, I request you keep my name and that I used to work at xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx confidential. I am not authorized to give out this type of information and am subject to punitive measures for doing so.

Respectfully,

A vague sighting and out of the 1975 flyover flap time frame. It is interesting that two members of the family witnessed possibly the same object at different locations. Perhaps Michael Hitt will turn something up in his research.

January 29, 1979

National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena
1 Bank Street, Suite 307
Gaithersburg, Md. 20760

Dear Sirs:

I am writing this after having read the report in the Dec. 10, 1978 issue of "Parade" magazine of UFO's around SAC bases in 1975. I remembered immediately something which I witnessed here during the fall of that year that I couldn't explain then nor since. Here is what happened:

I was in my house one afternoon, the exact time I'm not sure, but perhaps around four o'clock. The child who lives next door, then a girl of seven, came in and told me excitedly to come out and "look at the flying saucers." I went out and looked where she pointed, high and to the northeast or north of northeast. Shortly I saw two bright objects not too far apart, moving slowly or not at all. They appeared to be floating around and were apparently at a pretty good distance from us, about 10 mi. After a little while one moved to my left, slowly, until it was about due north. I estimate it was now separated from the other object by about five miles, if my first distance estimation is correct. It also seemed a little closer to me. It stopped there and just stayed there.

About this time I decided to go in and get a pair of binoculars. I came back out and by this time the one to the north had started moving back toward the other one, which was still. I tried to find the latter one in the glasses. I had to sight a couple of times before I found it. I saw a bright, spherical, metallic object, just sitting still. I watched it a few seconds and suddenly saw the other object whiz right past it as I watched through the binoculars. I put them down to watch and saw both of them start moving, away and soon out of sight, straight away and to the northeast, (or north of northeast).

The "Parade" article got me to thinking about this again when I realized these objects were going in the approximate direction of Warner Robins where we have a SAC base, I'm sure you know. I never reported my sighting to any authority at the time because, frankly, I just discounted the possibility that I had actually seen a "UFO" and explained it to myself as balloons, possibly launched from the base.

I have talked over the incident again with my young neighbor (Beth Akridge). She says she saw them a lot better before I saw them. She said they were round with rings around them. I'm not sure if she means stripes or circular fins. She first went to get her mother after first seeing them, and then came to get me after her mother looked a little and went back inside. Her mother did not see them, but it is possible they were partly obscured by trees when she looked, according to what her daughter has told me about their direction.

I do not recall any mention of sightings at this time in any local press.

I was able to ascertain the time of this happening as in the fall of 1975 in this manner: I had a brother who was commuting to work in Macon, north of here, at this time. I discussed my sighting with him the afternoon it happened after he returned home from work, and he had seen something unusual in the sky ahead of him on his way home. He had seen only one object and apparently not as well as I had. But he also recalled it and we were able to nail down the date in this way. On further thought, he would have been most likely driving down between five and five-thirty or around then sometime.

I hope this will be of interest. If I can be of further help, let me know.

Sincerely,

[signed]

Dear Mark and William:

Here perhaps, is another perspective on the role of Science Fiction. Sci Fi has always produced an interest in other worlds, coupled with a sober realization that we're not going to GO there. In essence it says, "OK, so we are not going there, then this is the only way, so let's get to work on it." It is a bit like someone asking whether a particular film is based on actual/true experiences. What movie isn't? I prefer to think of Sci Fi as an art form (human imagination) that fills in the void which science has yet (or may never be able) to achieve. Because it is certainly the domain of science to look for ETI, however, to actually find it is not!

What is most curious to me, is the disdain most Sci Fi writers and affectionados have for the UFO phenomenon. Perhaps, somehow, finding ETI would threaten the demise of the genre?

> In 1947 his memory was magnetically scrambled to prevent recall,

Well, I may not know very much about UFOs, but I do know something about the brain. You cannot "magnetically scramble" memory.

The term "memory" actually includes several different subtypes which operate differently. However, for the purpose of this discussion we can limit it to declarative memory operating in three time domains: immediate or short-term memory (STM), intermediate-term memory (ITM), and long-term memory (LTM) [note: some authors use STM to refer to intermediate term memory; for this discussion I'll use STM, ITM, and LTM].

STM is thought to operate as a primarily as a "signal" phenomenon with the information encoded in the various signals flowing through the cortex and limbic areas. It can hold roughly 7 (+/-2) independent "things" at once, and operates on a short time scale (up to a few minutes). Due to its electrical nature it is of course highly susceptible to electrical interference and, presumably, strong magnetic fields which would induce electrical eddy currents.

The mechanism of ITM is less well known but probably includes long-term potentiation (LTP) and long-term depression of neurons in the hippocampus, mediated by NMDA receptors (which act as a neural "coincidence detector" of sorts). ITM is theoretically susceptible to electrical (and thus magnetic) interference, as LTP can be reversed in some neurons with the correct pulse train. However, as the effects of ECT demonstrate, the reaction of an entire network of neurons is unlike the reaction of an individual neuron. Furthermore, ITM is not the permanent location of memories and the time for integration from ITM to permanent memory is highly variable, ranging from a few minutes to, potentially, years.

LTM is permanent and probably involves changes in genetic expression that affect synaptic function, presumably throughout the cortex. The process of integration of memory from ITM to LTM may include sleep (both REM and NREM) but some suggest it occurs during waking as well.

Cases of hippocampal damage or removal have demonstrated that while anterograde amnesia (affecting new declarative memories) is total, retrograde amnesia (affecting things already learned) is not, and there is no way of knowing how much of a person's past they will forget. Some people lose only a few days; others lose years of their life.

So at the very worst, all you could get with a magnetic (or electrical) effect would be an unreliable removal of memories, at least a few days and at most a few years. And that's even assuming you could somehow magically induce all the neurons in the hippocampus (and probably other regions) to "reset". Given that neither repeated ECT nor lightning strikes have reliably demonstrated even this effect, I would conclude that "magnetic" erasing of memory is impossible except for those memories encoded within a very short and highly unpredictable time frame.

Please remember, the brain is biochemical first and electrical second.

> and in 1952 he was reborn as "Andy" a kind of "walk-in" with a > suppressed DNA memory.

And I'm not even going to start with "DNA memory".

Dear Georgina:

Where do you get these stories? Do you make them up whole-cloth?
Obviously, you have an active imagination, but I would be careful including non-fictitious characters in your stories. Personally, I find these entries of yours rather insulting and wonder why you do not direct your efforts to more positive endeavours.

I have spoken with Dean Alioto in the past. This film was released for distribution years ago by him. I received a copy from him. (It seems as though your information is acquired from watching the Sightings Show and was probably a useful opportunity for Alioto to set up the sale). The first time I saw the film was at Bob Brown's UFO Extravaganza when A UFO 'researcher' brought a copy and presented it as though it JUST MIGHT BE TRUE. He thought it was- or so he said. Many people there thought it was as well.

>The only similarities that exist pertain to the general plot, >and not much more.

OBVIOUSLY, you have not seen Alioto's film. I would have a hard time finding any major differences - besides the actors themselves. Oh yea, the spaceship in the original did not have jet rockets and the reason for the family get-together was not a child's birthday but rather Thanksgiving. Thought of another one, the actors probably did not get paid in the original, whereas, in the UPN version, ALL participants received union scale. One more, the original was set in Connecticut and shot in San Francisco- UPN was shot ??? and set in MN.

WHO CARES????? THIS IS A DEAD TOPIC!!!!!!!

Bob,

Kevin was not the one off base... if it was anyone it was me.

I am the one who mentioned to Kevin that Bob Kiviat was involved.
The information that I recieved was given to me from outside the UFO community and it was the Kiviat brought the project to UPN.
This does not mean that he was ultimately the producer. SOOO if any chastisement is due you may feel free to direct it at me.

Of course the involvement of Mr. Kiviat is a moot point and has little to do with the fact that researchers sat for interviews for the UPN program.

Even worse than Mr. Kiviat is the Director/writer/producer Mr. Alieoto who is the same gent who took credit for the Birthday party fraud of 1993 or so.

The basic point made by Mr. Randle and I still stands. It is still the responsibility of each person asked for an interview to at least ask the producers what they plan to do and what will the program be about?

So lets not do the typical nit picking about Kiv or no Kiv and agree that more caution must be placed firmly on the back of the folks who are allowing themselves to be interviewed.

Madeira Island UFO Report

Fwd Date: Sun, 25 Jan 1998 12:51:59 -0500
Subject: Madeira Island UFO Report

From a journalist of "Jornal da Madeira" our organisation has learned about a alleged UFO sighting in the night of 31/12/97 at Funchal, the capital town of Madeira Island in the Atlantic Ocean. That night was occurring the New Year's festivities with fires in the sky. But several local witnesses, among them foreigners, were called their attention to a round and motionless light above Funchal. The same journalist and her husband have previously observed the same light a little above the horizon and thought it could be a fishing boat lights.

The important and significance of this was the next movement of the light: suddenly it made a very tight circle around, returned to the initial point and a few seconds latter it accelerated at great speed and climbing up to the town's vertical.

The journalist called the Portuguese Air Force Headquarters in Lisbon asking if it the sighting could be due to an helicopter movement and lights but the source discarded that hypothesis. So, the military send the witness contact me, under the usual cooperation between our scientific organisation and the FAP Command, a kind of cooperation not very common, as all we know...

A important note is this: the unusual light's was taped by a English couple who was in Funchal that night. We are asking for help from anyone, in Britain, perhaps, that could be aware of existence of this videotape. Maybe the document could be offered to a UFO expert or two. We would be happy to exchange our information and data if and when available.

So, according to Drue and his Quantum Gates theory, our multiverses are stock full of alien craft buzzing around, in which case 16 crashes seems a rather low casualty rate.

But does it surely account for the shortage of wreckage? Do you actually believe Drue - if so, why? - or are you just whimsically promulgating more BS? If so, to what end? By not applying at least a modicum of rationale to what you're told you risk losing the good (i.e. might be true) material in the deluge.

I'd like to say something here. No-one is ever (all) right or (all) wrong. Life is just a mix of hits and misses and some close calls for us all. Stan Friedman needs no 'redcrossing' from me, that man has been on the front lines of the public awareness battle for -decades!- Although anyone may choose to take issue with Stan about "work" related details I think it's unfair the way this -pioneer- is being judged here on this list about this -one- UPN appearance.

If Stan Friedman was one of those guys that turned up on these rip-off programs consistently that would be one thing, but that's not the case here. Because of all the good work that this guy has done in the past he should be taken at his word, (He went into a studio and answered the questions put to him. Period) without any of us trying to read any more into it than that.

This man was doing media way before UFOs became a "hot" or "marketable" commodity. When ridicule and personal attack was the big reward for speaking out publicly. Everybody has at one time or another applauded Stan for some contribution or other or some past program or other that he had something to do with.

Again, why is -this guy- being picked apart? It's crazy. There are guys like Derrel Sims that are consistently associated with "carnival side shows" just like the one UPN produced. He's -always- associated with questionable material and programs. Not a peep out of anyone about that snake-oil salesman, but Stan (a guy that made his 'bones' years ago and has -earned- our respect) get's talked about/ judged/ sentenced and executed all in one week!

Donde esta la justicia? Where is the justice in that?

Stan, the explanation that you gave, added to the fact that you haven't even had a chance to see how they edited your responses is good enough for me. Out of gratitude and respect for all the work you've done for so many years I think you deserve to be treated as a man of honor. Your word is good with me Stan, and I'm sure with a great many others as well.

Sorry to take so much time to say this but these posts demonizing Stan for his participation in this UPN thing has been bothering me. If you want to get after 'bad guys' make sure you -have- a bad guy! This is a case of mistaken identity, Stan Friedman -is not- and has -never been- one of the 'bad guys.'

>Shame on UPN
>Shame on the producers
>And double shame on the UFO community for accepting this crap.

There ya go Mike! Now you're putting the blame where it belongs. Add "Sims" and that "actress" of an abductee that appeared as one of the "experts" and I'll sign the petition!

Shoot, I'll throw the switch! <G>

Another two cents from my piggie! Take care Mike, good post.

Subject: Re: ID4 Shadows on Mars?

Hello!

I ran across this link:

<http://www.io.com/~stephens/Mars/id4/id4.html>

and am wondering if there is any background to this video clip. It shows the Sojourner out and about when a huge shadow passes over the entire area, akin to the ID4 movie.

I have noted that when this 'shadow' covers the area, the previous shadows of the rocks etc. are still visible, only darker. Not being versed in the photographic analysis arena, I was curious if this is a clue indicating that the picture was altered. I would expect shadows of objects to completely disappear when this larger shadow envelopes the area, rather than just get darker. IOW, the previous shadows are still distinguishable under the 'larger' shadow.

Any comments?

Regards,
Paul

<snip>

I missed this when it was first posted and have to thank a list member for calling my attention to it.

I tracked down Mary Teal Coleman a couple of years ago after Wendelle told me about her trying to peddle a film of an alien autopsy and UFO crash some years ago.

I tracked her down at the Dharma Institute in Charlottesville, Virginia. I wrote her a very polite letter telling her what I had been told and asking for more information.

In return I was reported to the FBI and local law enforcement as harassing her!

I got a couple of threatening letters from her, and then started getting letters from some lawyer, equally threatening. I turned this over to my lawyer who sent a note to her lawyer basically saying he was WAY out of line and would find himself the target of legal action if he persisted.

The lawyer also threatened me with legal action for copyright infringement if I wrote about Mary Teal Coleman and her "research", which showed me that the man had not even the vaguest notion of how copyright works. Since she has published nothing, there is no way I could violate her copyright by talking about her.

I never heard anything more from her or her lawyer.

BTW, in her initial letter to me she accused me of being a CIA operative and denied any knowledge of any such film. Now it appears that she is talking about it.

According to Wendelle's original story to me, she was claiming back in the 60s to have physical possession of the film and was trying to sell it. Wendelle set up a meeting with her with someone who wanted to buy the film, but she never showed up at the meeting. Wendelle says he never saw the film. At one time I thought this might tie in to substantiating the Santilli AA film, but after my experience with MTC I think it was all a bunch of BS.

I think the woman is seriously mentally disturbed.

Stan -

You forgot to mention Gerald Anderson and MJ-12 in your list of phony claims.

But to answer your question, yeah, it is worse than those simply because this was a national forum and most of those you mentioned are not well known outside of the UFO community. If you asked a number of people on the street, they couldn't identify those names.

And the real question is why you didn't ask the producers of the program some hard questions before you sat down for them. Apparently they were providing enough information that John Velez was able to discern the direction of the program so that he refused to participate.

Responsibility for that program lies at the feet of the producers who decided to exploit the UFO field. But, we, in the UFO community have to take the responsibility for our actions.

Finally, you might not like what Frank Kaufmann says, but he is much more reliable than Gerald Anderson.

I think he is referring to footage taken during interviews with you on previous UFO programs, either from the same production company or another. Production companies rarely throw away 'stock footage' saving it to use on subsequent programs if it suits their needs, or to sell the right to use it to some other program or network. Unless you specify differently in your release, your video material can be used over and over by the owner of the film/video stock. Most professional producers would character key the footage on final edit to indicate that it was 'file footage'.

Just to make a brief point here, and I know this is not going to happen, but if you want to put the screws to UPN the best way to do it in the short term is for all of the high profile UFO investigators, those who get regular air-time, to refuse to do anymore UFO related interviews without strict control of their material, and cite UPN's 'unprofessional treatment of its talent' as the reason. That means you want constant updates of the video edit as it pertains to your segment of the program and in the context of the program. But you can't whine to them about it. Just tell them that's the way it is and move on. They'll go along because they have to. Some executive producer and director at UPN is going to suffer eventually because of it...because down the road his/her name is going to come up for another special (UFO or whatever) and the exec.pro's. and director's name will be NOT considered because they caused trouble. Don't forget, the exec. producer, director and most of the crew are hired on contract to do each 'Special' and the producer (say Dicky baby) doesn't need the heartaches the next time he/she puts together another.

UK.UFO.NW -IRC- guest Dan Sherman

UNITED KINGDOM UFO NETWORK

Saturday 31st January 1998

United Kingdom UFO Network special IRC guest:

Dan Sherman

Dan Sherman went into the United States Air Force like most other Americans, extremely proud to serve his country and it's well trained military. During his twelve years in service he was recognised for heroism and has been decorated with the AF Commendation Medal, as well as the AF Achievement Medal with two oakleaf clusters and was honoured for service in the Persian Gulf War.

Everything appeared to be going well for Sergeant Sherman until he was recruited into a special programme called 'Project Preserve Destiny' (PPD), an ABOVE BLACK project which would eventually change his life and result in him leaving the USAF.

Dan will be answering your questions live in a moderated meeting taking place at 11pm UK time on Saturday 31st January 1998.

<http://www.aboveblack.com/>

An account of Dan's story has just appeared in the latest issue of Sightings (UK) - January 98 - Vol 2 - Issue 8 & From Beyond (USA) - January 98

From Dan's home page:

About the Author

Dan Sherman spent almost three years as an intuitive communicator while serving in the USAF. In ABOVE BLACK he tells of his training, things he learned from his alien contacts and the events that lead him to seek a discharge from the United States Air Force, at all costs.

By coming forward, he hopes his story will encourage other insiders to do likewise. Sherman says, "The information I have come forward with is important in the sense that someone has to start talking... someone from the inside. Preserve Destiny is only one of many alien projects that I suspect the US government, as well as other governments, are heavily involved with. In releasing to the public what I know, I have tried to take a stand against the keepers of the grey flame within the sacred halls of the NSA, CIA, USAF, NRO and other agencies. Hopefully this will open the door for other insiders to peer through and feel more comfortable stepping out into the light of day. If not, 'they' will continue to suppress the most fascinating aspects of our own existence... that others exist!"

Serving over 12 years in the United States Air Force, Dan Sherman has been recognized for heroism and has been decorated with the AF Commendation Medal and the AF Achievement Medal with two oakleaf clusters. He has also received the AF Outstanding Unit Award with three oakleaf clusters as well as being honored for service in the Persian Gulf war. He is married with no children.

Summary by: Glenn Campbell
campbell@ufomind.com (Glenn Campbell, Las Vegas)

An email interview with former government insider Dan Sherman is now available at: <http://www.ufomind.com/people/s/sherman/interview.shtml>

SUMMARY OF INTERVIEW

From 1992 through 1994, Dan ("D.L") Sherman claims to have worked with a secret military program to communicate with aliens. He was a government specialist who received communications from alien beings and typed them on a computer terminal. His job was analogous to a communications officer on a ship receiving morse code but with more depth and greater exchange between the parties. He never saw any aliens, only communicated with them "intuitively".

Sherman says he was prepared for this role by the aliens before his birth. Apparently during an abduction of his mother in 1963, his genetic structure was slightly altered to allow him to receive alien communications. He was unaware of this ability until, years later, he was briefed about it while in the Air Force. He was assigned to a program called "Project Preserve Destiny" (PPD). He was told that the purpose of the program was to provide a network of communications in the future when electromagnetic communications would not work.

He calls the ability "intuitive communications" (IC). His abilities were "activated" during an 8-10 week course at NSA headquarters at Fort Meade in early 1992. It was a sort of "night school" after his daytime training in another secret but conventional field.

After training, Sherman's PPD duties were veiled by conventional top secret duties at two Air Force bases. While at work he would receive notification (apparently psychic), that a communication was about to begin. He would then open a special blank window on the computer terminal where he was working and would type the communication into it. He would then close the window, and the information would be sent to an unknown destination.

The content of the communications ("comms") were numbers mostly. It was mainly things he did not understand, but some of the numbers he recognized as the coordinates of locations on earth. He says he received longer comms right after major space launches such as Ariane and the Shuttle.

Sherman says: "During my last few months I started to receive what I thought to be abduction data. This is when I started having questions and I began to want out of the whole thing. This led to the sequence of events resulting in my discharge. I think they were testing my resolve as well because all of a sudden the comms were not totally in code anymore. I thought that was quite odd. I'm not sure what was going on but I didn't like the comms. I would be told locations, resistance levels, residual pain levels, potentiality for recall and each case that I reported would be given a code. I had no idea what the codes were but I didn't like it... bottom line. I felt like I was reporting the lab results of a bunch of mice experiments."

Sherman says he left the PPD program in Dec. 1994 and obtained release from the military in April 1995 because of his discomfort with what he was learning.

Sherman says he shows no evidence of psychic ability apart from communication with these aliens. Since leaving the military, he has received no further comms and has had no further contact with his previous government contacts in the program. No government agents have threatened him to keep quiet, but he fears that any improper disclosures of his "conventional" top secret work could get him in trouble. He has been working on a book, but that project has been slowed by his own concern about "legal issues."

Sherman says that his communication with the aliens was two-way. He calls them complex creatures. He says that although he cannot describe them visually, "mentally, they are rigid, disciplined and mostly unemotional." He did sense compassion from them, however. "It was almost like this was their nature but they overrode this characteristic because they perhaps felt it was a weakness."

An alien told him that they had been visiting earth "since the beginning."

"They had made their presence known at some time in the past to our ancestors and that the whole thing went haywire somehow, so they have chosen to remain selective in their revelations since. They impacted three historical cultures in the past. Which ones they didn't say, but I have extrapolated since based on other information. I also learned that there are other alien 'species' besides the ones I commed with. The whole reason for PPD is to train a certain number of humans to be able to communicate with the aliens so as to provide a network of communications in the future when electromagnetic communications will not work. I was never told what 'event' this would be, but I have my own ideas based on other information I've learned over the years."

It never ceases to amaze me that there are a number of people in this field who usually never post anything of interest, but immediately jump on the band wagon when an attack is launched on someone else.

I tend not to get involved in trashy posts, which more often than not, turn into flaming threads, and I do not wish to be a part of that. People who involve themselves with this kind of response are not doing a good service to ufology. Criticism is always welcome, but it should not be of an insulting nature IMO, or in the form of a personal attack on the contributor.

The Buddhist monk story is one I followed up and I will send attachments to the group, for what it's worth, to back up that there was a source of information there. I do not believe for one minute that Stevens or anyone else for that matter, ever threatened Coleman, but that was her story, not mine. I posted the information because it's all a part of ufology.

Regarding my posts: I have received numerous kind responses from people who are interested in what was written, and they appear to know what they are talking about. This proves my point entirely. That those who are genuine ufologists - do follow up these tit bits of information if it's in their area of research, and often do so privately.

I've been working the Internet for too long now, to understand that there are people out there who do more harm than good by taking the stage to demolish what may possibly be an interesting lead.

Having been a researcher for more than 20 years, I don't treat this subject lightly. I admit that some of the posts I sent may look rather gossipy, that's probably because they were written for a hard copy UFO magazine for which I write a monthly UFO gossip column. However, I am serious in my research and go to great pains to find good sources, and like others will confirm, many of these sources cannot be named for obvious reasons.

I don't usually post openly on the Internet because by doing so one is always open to attack, and it can be very time consuming responding to these attacks, and IMO it's a total waste of energy replying to such. Having some free time at the moment, I thought I'd add some contributions.....

Marie:

I am being sent a copy of the program. What I was asking about was a reference by Kevin and Russ Estes to Bob Kiviat being involved with the UPN show.. which I had not heard in California or elsewhere. It turns out this was false information as acknowledged by Kevin. If I had known that Bob Kiviat was connected with the show, I would never have done it based on my dealings with him re the "Alien Autopsy". But he was not involved.

Re: Buddhist Monk Claims death threats

Fwd Date: Sun, 25 Jan 1998 14:09:45 -0500
Subject: Re: Buddhist Monk Claims death threats

I thought I should add a few more details to my earlier post about my experiences with Mary Teal Coleman. After receiving letters from her and her lawyer which said I had been reported to the FBI and local law enforcement for harassing her, I placed a telephone call to the local FBI office in Charlottesville. If I had been reported to them I wanted to give them names at FBI headquarters in Baltimore who would vouch for me, since I had done consulting work for them on several occasions.

I think it best to characterize the response of the agent I spoke with as treating the whole thing as a joke. Apparently MTC was on their "nuts" list, and they simply ignored her repeated complaints about people.

I did not contact the Charlottesville police after this, since I was pretty certain that they would have the same attitude.

I have all the correspondence from MTC in my files, and will be happy to show them to any serious investigator with an interest in this case. I think they clearly demonstrate a paranoid mental state.

Georgina's post refers to MTC as an "ordained Buddhist monastic". The question is ordained by whom??? Just what is this "Dharma Institute" and how legitimate is it? My attempts to learn anything about the organization through a contact address provided in West Virginia were met with similar paranoia and threats.

Real Buddhism is not a religion of paranoia. It is not a religion of threats. It is a religion of peace and isolation from the material world. Whatever these people may be, I do not think they have any claim to being real Buddhists. I would have to classify them as a paranoid cult. I would be very curious to know just where their money comes from, since they seem to have very nice accommodations in their ashrams and apparently have money galore to throw at expensive lawyers.

Paul...

It really doesn't require being a seasoned image analyst to see this website is a person who enjoys playing with their software to create things which are not there. In other words...it is not real...it is a fake.

If you can answer this question, you will quickly realize the shadow is not really traveling over the "surface" of Mars. When you play the small film, keep your eye on the upper left corner of the image. You will notice this "shadow" darkens the far background landscape, as well as the Martian sky! How could this happen?

I think this one is pretty elementary my dear Watson...

Bryan!

Books [was: 'The Threat'...]

From: Dennis <dstacy@texas.net> [Dennis Stacy]
Date: Sun, 25 Jan 1998 13:59:21 -0600 (CST)
Fwd Date: Sun, 25 Jan 1998 16:19:18 -0500
Subject: Books [was: 'The Threat'...]

All:

Wasn't there a time, not so very long ago, when this particular thread was about David Jacobs's new book, "The Threat (The Secret Agenda: What the Aliens Really Want...And How They Plan to Get It)"?

I've barely begun the above, but based on its declarative approach, in which nothing is alleged or reported but simply stated, it is safe to make the following pronouncement:

Either this is one of the most insightful and courageous arguments in the history of modern man...or a very sad spectacle, indeed. There's not a whole lot of middle ground here to work with.

1997 was the Year of the UFO Book for demonstrably obvious reasons. Not only was 1997 the 50th anniversary of the Arnold sighting, but also of the alleged Roswell crash. As a result, more UFO titles were probably published last year than in any single year in the subject's controversial history.

On the other hand...1998 may be another banner year in UFO books. Apart from The Threat, there is already "The UFO Book: Encyclopedia of the Extraterrestrial" by Jerome Clark (Visible Ink Press), along with a new book by Paul Devereux and Peter Brookesmith (names which should be familiar to anyone on this list), "UFOs and Ufology: The First Fifty Years," from Facts on File. Haven't finished the latter, either, but I've rummaged through it and it's one of those big, beautiful, colorfully illustrated books that UK companies are so adept at turning out, compared to their American counterparts.

Technically, it appeared late last year, along with the latest from Whitley (with Anne) Strieber, "The Communion Letters," a paperback from HarperPrism. There is no attempt at investigation or corroboration of anything said here -- just a collection of some of the (we've been repeatedly told) hundreds of thousands of letters Strieber has received over the years. In other words, stories, anecdotes, hearsay, that may or may not apply to what this list is all about. Who knows? If everything is applicable to abductions and the so-called visitor experience, then what kind of relevant meaning do either of those terms actually connote?

Certainly we can say at this time that both Jacobs and Strieber can't both be right. They do point out, though, the extremes to which immersion in this subject tempts one -- toward impending paranoid apocalypse on one hand, and vague, feel-good New Age euphoria on the other. I find it amazing that such extremes can be concluded from what is supposed to be the same "body" of available "evidence."

But I wander...what I really had in mind was whether there was any interest out there in possibly starting a thread on one (or more) of the above books, comments to be confined largely to same, without too much wandering off into the ether...

Maybe we could start a new thread and simply call it Books. Comments about ufo theory, speculation etc would be verboten. The issue would be the book itself and the evidence presented -- if any -- for the statements or conclusions therein.

Just a thought...

Dennis

Most people on this List, whatever their beliefs, are not idiots and do not want to be treated like idiots. When they do have something to say they usually make a valid point as in this case.

Pointing out that your posts make no sense and, are disproven by the very information they contain, is not necessarily an attack on the contributor, but it is a clear indication that the content of the posts is not being well received. Doesn't it occur to you that someone serving as a government scientist in 1943 will be too old to join the military in 1971 and serve for 22 years?
Magnetically scrambled memory?!?!?! DNA memory?!?!?! Do you not realize that 'stalking' is a crime, not a civil matter, and you would no more sue someone for stalking than you would sue someone for bank robbery? What are you thinking about when you present material like this?

The purpose of most UFOlogists is to discern whatever truth may exist. Posting irrational stories merely muddies the water.

No, it merely proves that those people are not rational enough to discern truth from gossip and bad fiction. Nothing in your post proves your point. You do not make a point.

> I've been working the Internet for too long now, to

An 'interesting' lead is something that might contain a grain of truth. If you think that the nutloafs you refer to are 'good sources', you are only fooling yourself.

You are not serious in your research. You are completely irresponsible and make no effort to winnow any facts at all from the gossip you publish. The ability to construct sentences does not make you a researcher. It makes you exactly what you claim to be....a gossip columnist. I can speculate that your sources cannot be named for the obvious reasons that they (1) do not exist or, (2) have no idea what they are talking about. In no case are they good sources for anything except fantasy.

I see by that comment, you have been told all of this before. If everything you post is attacked, it might be because of the nature and content of your posts.

>Attached: Letter from Al Gore's office in response to Coleman's

If these are the basis for your conclusions, you apparently did not read them, or possibly do not grasp the implications. Stevens' letter mentions that he had not seen the movie that Coleman was trying to peddle. So what? What is the point? Al Gore's letter is nothing more than a polite kiss-off. At what point must you realize that Coleman is psychotic?

TEN LUMINOUS UFOs HOVER OVER GLASGOW

On Friday, January 16, 1998, at 7:45 a.m., Gordon MacAndrews and his wife Fiona were waiting for sunrise in Glasgow, Scotland when they spotted mysterious lights in the southern sky.

"I viewed the lights from the top of a hill in the north of Glasgow," MacAndrews reported, "which overlooks the city, as the lights were some way off. As I mentioned in my post, my wife also saw the lights and was as mystified as I am."

He described the UFOs as "whitish-yellow" and "smaller than a small coin" held at arm's length. "They did not approach; they stayed in the same area," over the southern suburb of Busby.

From their observation point near Springburn Road, the couple "watched the lights for 20 minutes...As the sun rose, we were unable to see them any longer."

"As I saw them from the other side of the city, I was sure someone else would have seen the display but apparently not," he added.

Glasgow, Scotland's largest city, is about 55 miles (88 kilometers) west of the capital, Edinburgh.
(Email Interview)

FAST FLYBY IN QUEENSLAND

On Wednesday, January 21, 1998, Steve Burrows and his two children were outdoors at their home in Brisbane, in Australia's Queensland state when they spied a fast-moving UFO crossing the sky.

The trio "watched a fast-moving single white light travel from directly overhead to 45 degrees (above the horizon) in the east and was then covered by low cloud."

Burrows described the condition of the sky as clear, adding "stars were clearly visible before the low cloud cover swept in from the south." They had the object in view for "no more than 30 seconds." (Many thanks to Steve Burrows and Errol Bruce-Knapp for this report.)

UFOs LINKED TO MUTILATED SWINE IN COLORADO

Three large pigs were found dead and mutilated Monday, January 5, on a ranch near Highway 159 in Costilla County, Colorado. The area is located just west of the Sangre de Cristo mountain range, about 230 miles (418 kilometers) south of Denver.

Two ranchers found two of the swine that morning, then located the third a little later. According to Christopher O'Brien, investigator and author of THE MYSTERIOUS VALLEY (St. Martin's Press, 1996), the dead swine weighed "about 100 to 150 pounds, white in color and each with a cored-out rectum and other round holes in the abdomen."

Photographs of the crime scene were taken by Bob Green of the La Sierra News.

On January 8, O'Brien learned that a local teenage girl had told her mother that she and a friend "while coming home from basketball practice" had seen "two lights emanating from the sky in the approximate location where the carcasses of the three pigs were discovered."

The girl reportedly told this story before news of the mutilation made the rounds in Costilla County.

UFOs were also seen in neighboring Huerfano County, as well.

On Wednesday, January 7, 1998, UFOs were sighted over the La Veta Military Operations Area (MOA) in the large San Luis Valley. Witnesses in Farisita and Gardner, two small towns on Colorado Highway 169 approximately 155 miles (248 kilometers) south of Denver, spotted "extensive aerial activity by dozens of unknown objects, for hours, that did not appear to be conventional aircraft."

According to local investigator David Perkins, the UFOs were described by the witnesses as "large 'disco-balls' " and "small red lights/crafts which appeared to crisscross the Huerfano."

On Thursday, January 8, 1998, two witnesses driving north on Colorado Highway 17 about 25 miles (40 kilometers) west of Farisita and Gardner saw "a 150-foot (45-meter) diameter disk (flying) at between 1,500 to 2,000 feet in altitude" traveling "down the center of the San Luis Valley over the Baca Ranch two miles east of Highway 17 at Mile Marker 93. One of the witnesses, ex-military, estimated the disk's speed at between 500 and 500 miles per hour."

On Tuesday, January 20, 1998, a witness in Hooper, Colorado reported "seeing a 'big star doing big twists'" south of the Great Sand Dunes National Monument at about 6 p.m. He described the UFO as "flashing red-green and blue lights" and estimated its position at "five or so miles just south of Sand Dunes Oasis."

"At around 6:15 p.m., I witnessed low-flying jets headed from the east, over the Sangre de Cristos," the witness told O'Brien. The jets "were flying 3,000 feet from the Valley floor." He added that the UFO was not the star Sirius rising in the east but was "two times brighter than the brightest planet" and located "some 5 degrees south of Sirius." MORE UFOs SIGHTED IN CASA GRANDE, ARIZONA

Arizona's new UFO flap swept into its second week with hundreds of sightings reported in and around Phoenix and the city of Casa Grande (population 19,082), located on Highway 387 51 miles (82 kilometers) to the southeast.

On Wednesday, January 14, 1998, Village Labs in Phoenix received "hundreds of calls" from local residents who sighted "orange lights" and "spherical red-orange UFOs" over the Estrella Mountains.

The laboratory received seven amateur videotapes of the UFOs for analysis.

At 7 p.m., "two large orange lights" were viewed for 11 minutes over the mountain range.

Other witnesses described "a formation of orange lights" and a "giant triangle" of lights.

The Michigan Air National Guard issued a statement that their planes had dropped "military flares" over the area.

On Thursday night, January 15, 1998, Tom King, director of Arizona Skywatch, staked out the area.

He reported, "I took a position halfway between Phoenix and Casa Grande. We sighted some of the orange lights fifteen to twenty miles west of our position (i.e. near the western border of the Gila River Indian Reservation--J.T.) We took photographs and two separate videotapes, including the ultra-high-speed Super camera. These objects appeared under 1,000 feet and did not have any sign of smoke," as flares normally do.

On Sunday, January 18, 1998, investigator Robert M. Collins "first observed" a UFO "while I was driving up past Casa Grande. I pulled off (Interstate Highway I-10) onto Route 387 north of Casa Grande. At that time I counted 9 to 11 orange globes all the way from west to east north of my position, over Phoenix."

"I had Bushnell binoculars and thought I could make out some sort of 'disc' structure on one or two of them. But because the light appeared to be so cohesive and (due to Phoenix's air) pollution, I was getting a lot of atmospheric diffraction effects from the lights."

Collins observed the UFOs from 7:25 to 7:55 p.m. "Two orbs were still visible" when he left the area. (Many thanks to Tom King and Robert M. Collins for these reports.)

UFO FLAP ERUPTS NEAR ATLANTA, GEORGIA

MUFON Georgia is investigating a number of UFO sightings around Atlanta during the past two weeks.

On Thursday, January 8, 1998, around 7:30 p.m., a couple driving down North Greenwood Street in LaGrange, Georgia (population 25,597), a city near the Alabama state line approximately 64 miles (102 kilometers) southwest of Atlanta, when they suddenly saw "a strange intense beam of light" coming from the clouds "down to the ground."

LaGrange was the site of intermittent UFO sightings throughout 1997.

On Saturday, January 17, 1998, at 7:30 p.m., a 38-year-old woman and her parents "were driving south on (Interstate Highway) I-75. About 50 miles (80 kilometers) north of Macon (population 106,612), they saw a circle of blue-white lights hovering just off the interstate. The lights formed a continuous circle and one solid (mass), like a piece of 'Swiss cheese.' The craft was the size of a small jet airliner. The lights were hovering over some nearby trees." Other motorists also saw the lights "and slowed down" for a better look.

At 8:45 p.m., as the family "was driving on (Interstate) I-16, twenty miles (32 kilometers) southeast of Macon, she saw a strange beam of light go to the ground. Then they saw a very bright light shooting across the sky in a 'strand' of flashes. Only one light was involved, but it darted across the sky going from north to south."

On Sunday, January 18, 1998, an elderly lady of LaGrange, Georgia phoned John C. Thompson, state director of Georgia MUFON, and reported seeing "a real shiny dot moving extremely fast" and zipping across the sky about a half-mile north of North Greenwood Street, site of the January 8 incident.

"The perfectly round ball had sunlight reflecting off it and was moving from north to south," she reported. "But at a high rate of speed at least twice the speed of a commercial airliner (meaning the UFO's airspeed was between 900 and 1,000 miles per hour--J.T.) It made no noise and disappeared in clear open air as I watched."

At 6:06 p.m. on January 18, about three hours afterward, a man reported seeing two UFOs over Conyers, Georgia (population 7,380), approximately 27 miles (43 kilometers) southeast of Atlanta. He described the UFOs as "two black circular objects flying west to east with no lights. The second pulled up and slowly disappeared. The first UFO kept going straight and disappeared." (See Filer's Files #3 for 1998. Many thanks to George A. Filer, John C. Thompson and Todd Ganas for these reports.)

MYSTERIOUS LIGHT FLASHES SEEN BY MOTORIST NEAR CHESHIRE, CONNECTICUT

On Friday, January 16, 1998, at around 6 p.m., Robert D. was driving home from work on Interstate Highway I-691 west of Meriden, Connecticut (population 59,479), about 25 miles (40 kilometers) southwest of Hartford, the state capital.

"I saw a very strange, very bright blue light off to the southern horizon," Bob reported. "It was after an ice storm" and the area "was without power."

He estimated that the light was 11 miles to his south, in a wooded area just beyond the town of Cheshire (population 5,759), near Sleeping Giant State Park and the Broad Brook reservoir.

"It was an unbelievably bright blue light. Hundreds of times more bright than lightning. It was so bright it left shadows of the trees to my right. It lasted for two seconds, then a 15-second pause, then another two second flash," he said.

"I'm an electrical engineer with a fascination for lightning, and this was definitely not lightning," he added. "Nor was it a transformer exploding, etc. High voltage lines would not show this intensity. What's strange is that where they were located there are no towns or people, just woods." (Email Interview)
(Editor's Note: Similar mysterious blue flashes were seen in Los Alamos, New Mexico last October.)

1988: ATTEMPTED ABDUCTION
IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA

Ten years ago, on January 21, 1988, the Knowles family had a very harrowing experience while driving on the Eyre Highway across the desolate Nullarbor Plain in southern Australia.

The Nullarbor Plain is an arid, flat desert 330 miles wide overlapping the states of South Australia (S.A.) and Western Australia (W.A.) The rainfall is so sparse that no trees can grow there, only saltbush and bluebush.

On January 21, 1988, Faye Knowles and her three sons, Sean, Wayne and Patrick were driving home to Perth, W.A. following a visit with relatives in Melbourne. Their car was a light blue four-door 1984 Ford Telstar.

"Before daylight, after the family had left the Madura roadhouse (near Mundrabilla--J.T.), as they were driving on the Eyre Highway, they noticed a bright white light ahead of them on their side of the highway. As they got nearer, they could see it was a large glowing object hovering just above the road. Sean, who was driving, had to swerve into the other lane to avoid colliding with the unknown object."

"Soon after the near collision, they passed another car that had a bright object following overhead. This time Sean's curiosity got the best of him and he made a U-turn and sped back toward the west to see what the light was."

"After following for a few minutes, the light changed course and started back toward the Knowles car. Sean again turned around and drove east."

"The object quickly overtook the car, which at this point was doing over 100 miles per hour in an attempt to elude the strange light. Suddenly, the object landed on top" of the car's roof "with a loud thud."

"We were going silly, something was going into our heads," explained Faye Knowles.

'It felt like we were dying, and our voices were distorted, as if we were talking in slow motion.'

"Two dogs in the car became very agitated, and one of the sons, Patrick, said he felt as though his brains were pulled from his head."

Wayne yelled, "Get off the road!"

"I can't!" Sean replied, realizing to his horror that the Ford's steering wheel was locked or frozen by some irresistible force.

Just then, they saw the highway's centerline falling away from the Ford's headlight glow.

"Faye rolled down her window and looked out at the object, which she described as a bright white light with a yellow center 'like an egg in a cup.' Faye then reached overhead and touched the bottom of the object. 'It felt like a warm sponge.'"

Suddenly, the UFO released the Knowles' car. The Ford plummeted ten feet and hit the asphalt on its right rear quarter. The tire exploded on impact.

Instantly the car went into a shrieking skid. The steering wheel loosened in Sean's hands, and he turned in the direction of the skid. The Ford fishtailed all over the road, with Sean applying the brakes, and then screeched to a halt.

"The family jumped out and hid in the bushes along the side of the highway until the UFO was gone...The family changed the tyre and drove on to Mundrabilla where they discussed the experience with truck drivers."

The case was investigated by Paul Norman of the Victoria UFO Research Society. He found that the Ford's radio "was now operating perfectly even though it had been malfunctioning during the encounter. On the roof of the car they found an indentation matching the description given by the family. Of the tyre, it was in good condition and should not have blown but in fact was ripped all the way around its edge."

Laboratory analysis of the dust found on the car "revealed oxygen, carbon, calcium, silicon, potassium and a possible trace of astatine, which is a radioactive chemical that can only be produced synthetically." Talk about coincidence. Our lead story involves the biggest city in Scotland, and today, January 25, is the anniversary of the birth of poet Robert Burns in 1759.

Not only that, but there were two sightings in LaGrange, Georgia recently. Guess what? On January 25, 1736, mathematician/astronomer Joseph-Louis LaGrange was born in France. LaGrange is the man who discovered the existence of points in outer space where the gravitational fields of the planets cancel each other out. Objects in these "Lagrangian" or "L-points" tend to float round out there, free of the Earth's gravity. Amazingly, LaGrange figured this all out mathematically, using a blackboard and a piece of chalk instead of a computer. Pretty impressive, huh?

Less impressive, of course, is our UFO ROUNDUP which will be back next weekend with the latest, up-to-date saucer reports. Here's wishing all our readers an enjoyable week from "the paper that goes home--UFO ROUNDUP."

Besides, I'm sure President Al Gore will be fully briefed on the Birnes "interpretation" of why the government ordered copies Corso's book is off.

When Testors released its version of the Stealth fighter (a version that was not correct because photos of the then classified plane were unavailable) the Lockheed employee store ordered in the kits and employees allegedly bought it. Many people saw that as "tacit admission" of what the plane looked like. It wasn't. So if that is the only thing Birnes is using to hang his hat on the "govt using Corso as part of tacit disclosure" he is in lala land.

Cheers,
Robert

Some idiot has just faked the entire thing using photoshop or suchlike... and done a really bad job. I have copies of the exact same shots without the big bad shadow effect. Everything on the website is pretty damn laughable..I hope there arnt really people out there who would buy it..although that UPN survey mentioned on this list is a worry...

Subject: Re: Regarding books to read

This is was a private email that I had sent to Ted Viens, in his response to me he suggested that I share my thoughts with the List. Below is the text:

I noticed your post on UFO Update about the Keyhoe book.

I concur.

If you haven't already read Captain Edward J. Ruppelt's (head of USAF Project Blue Book) "The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects" you owe it to yourself to do so. His viewpoint as an insider and the revelations he made have never been equalled in the UFO literature. Its a seminal book in the field.

Then I would finish reading all of the Keyhoe books because his other books do not recount prior material.

Then the Lorenzen books.

After finishing these you will have a better understanding of the situation far better than most readers of the list who are unaware of what has transpired in the history of this field.

I don't mean to be insulting with these suggestions, you may have already read many of them. However if you haven't I can assure you that they will probably have a far greater impact than just one of the Keyhoe books alone and provide a much broader perspective.

Oooohhh Goh-holly Gee... I just love a good tiff among the bigger players here. Say, since we have you both here, I just finished reading "The Roswell UFO Crash, What They Don't Want You To Know" by Kal [I am NOT a DEBUNKER] K. Korff. Now, he claims, in his gentle and cordial style, that both of you and all of your witnesses are just all but flushed with male bovine alimentary waste products. I am sure that you were both humbled by the generous contribution of his more intense and perceptive investigations. What are your thoughts about the methods and conclusions of his research? At least one of you must have some gratitude for him clearing up some of your misunderstandings.

Now, Kal has been investigating UFOs since high school, some twenty five or so years. He has furthered computer technology in the very nerve centers of some of our most esteemed and esoteric national laboratories. He has written a couple of books apparently striving to correct and clarify errors in a couple of pivotal episodes in modern ufology. Still, I am ignorant of any original work of Korff's.

What I am looking for is anything Kal Korff has done that reflects original investigation of obscure or unknown events that have furthered our knowledge or awareness of mysterious objects that cannot be explained by current technology. I am sure that in twenty five or so years of research, Kal has discovered and reported something original that taught us more about things beyond our terrestrial capabilities. It would be unfair of me to draw any conclusions about Kal Korff based only on reading "The Roswell UFO Crash" and hearing about his other book. It would be better for me to also know about his contributions in furthering our knowledge of these mysteries. If anyone could help me with this, I would really appreciate it. Thanks...

Bye... Ted..

UFO files available?

From: georgina@easynet.co.uk
Date: Mon, 26 Jan 1998 02:27:07 +0000
Fwd Date: Sun, 25 Jan 1998 22:38:11 -0500
Subject: UFO files available?

Michael Ravnitzky, author of The Putnam Pit, is a law student and investigative reporter who recently posted an Internet message to ufologists, with instructions of where to find UFO government files.

Writes Michael. 'I hope that some news organization or researcher can use these records to finally tell the real story of what happened when the military ran into the unexplainable.'

For the past ten years, Michael has been interested in the technological history of UFOs, and the sociological structure of the military-civilian relationship surrounding them. He tempts us with the knowledge that in 1996 he discovered the location of a huge cache of secret documents on UFOs and related subjects, and that 'most of them haven't seen the light of day in 30 or 40 years.' He guides us to the military archives at St. Louis and Suitland, Maryland. He claims that, there, buried in the archives, we will find boxes of records, each with an associated SF-135 form (Standard Form 135), which describes and inventories the contents of that particular box.

Michael points out that anyone can claim access to these files by writing a letter to the Freedom of Information Act, quoting their rights and agreeing to pay reasonable fees for the request. According to his research, the UFO over-up was at one time in the hands of an Air Force Intelligence Component located at Wright Patterson Air Force Base. The name given to the department was the 'Foreign Technology Division-FTD', later it became the 'FASTC-Foreign Aerospace Technology Center', and finally it is now called the 'National Air Intelligence Center' or NAIC. The NAIC is responsible for acquiring and analyzing foreign aerospace technology.

He informs us that over the years this Air Force office have sent approximately 3,000 boxes of records to military storage archives. Michael also quotes Gery D. Heulseman, TSgt, USAF, who runs the FOIA program at NAIC. His office has recently obtained 2,959 pages of SF-135 forms that describe in detail the contents of the boxes, many still classified. The SF-135s cover the period from about 1953 -1982. States Michael. According to Heulseman, no one has ever requested these forms, nor have they been added to any electronic database.

Michael suggests that by obtaining these documents, investigative reporters and others, could very well discover the real story behind some of the strange phenomena known as UFOs. Each page costs 15 cents, and there are a total of 2,959 pages. With the first 100 pages free, it would cost $428.85.

Anyone interested in these documents, should contact the National Air Intelligence Center [NAIC/SCVMS/FOIA] Attn Gery D. Hulseman, TSgt, USAF Chief, Freedom of Information Act Office Information Management Operations, 4180 Watson Way, Wright Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio 45433-5648.

They have a site on the Net if you want to check it out Bob,

Every question appears to be met by threats. You may be information from her personal site. I didn't see this on the institute's site.

That's exactly what I told her. I was amazed that someone would act in this manner. Needless to say, I was again threatened

Thanks, Keith.

I've been through some arguments with skeptics on this, and I ended up thoroughly disgusted. I hope you fare better. But be prepared for the ad hominem attacks on the witnesses, the investigators, and anything else they can think of, rather than a debate on the evidence.

You may want to prepare yourself with a quick read on my paper of answers to common skeptical objections to the possibility of scientifically researching UFOs at

Thanks for posting that Bob. I received pretty much the same treatment from her. I too wrote a very polite e-mail about a year ago, and she threatened to report me to the FBI. I then told her that there wasn't much point in doing that as I am British and live in the UK.

I think she does it with everyone who contacts her.

Well, she actually posted everything on her web site as a press release. I still have the hard copy somewhere if you ever need it. This is what I found amusing when she started threatening me because she'd put it up there in the form of a press release on the Internet with all the letters and it was up there for almost a year) When I later pointed out to her that it was already in the public domain, she took down the site.

>BTW, in her initial letter to me she accused me of being a CIA

That makes a change, it's usually the FBI that the accused are a part of <G>. I think she's gone quiet now, and I don't think she ever wrote that book she was plugging.

I think Wendelle was better not dealing with her, and not in a million years could I ever imagine him threatening anyone. Did you know that she was promising to go public with a list of ufologists who were all working for government agencies. Probably everyone who ever contacted her, you and I included.

I have to agree.

That's a different video, I think, Mike. I've seen it, too. No full-blown zero-to-180 gut-wrenching vacillation. Supreme

There's no question that much UFO data lies in the realm of "testimony". For that reason, I would argue that one does a disservice both to science in general and to the study of UFOs in particular by any insistence that the methods of physics or chemistry are appropriate for anything other than supporting roles (i.e. in the analysis of physical trace evidence). UFOs are not chemicals or forces which can be isolated and reproduced in a laboratory setting. But, unlike some, I do not believe this is something isolated to the problem of UFOs. Sociology, forensics, the various parts of the natural sciences which rely on the observation of organisms acting naturally in their habitat (such as ornithology) have many of the same problems.

It also needs to be kept in mind that there is, essentially, NO funding for UFO studies. The Ubatuba magnesium was studied with very limited resources, and, yes, there remain a number of questions about the process of their analysis, and, of course the tragedy of the loss of fragment 1, but nonetheless, even that limited analysis provided some very interesting results. The Trans-en-Provence case was studied by an arm of the French government, and their results, with regard to the temperatures and forces which were needed to cause the traces, seem to point to heavy weight and high heat - but followup is limited by time and money.

EM effects and what could cause them are certainly under investigated in the sense that very little experimental science has been done on them. The Condon Committee worked with Ford and did some experiments with magnetism to try to stop car engines, but the experiments only managed to indicate that magnetism was not the cause of UFO related vehicle stoppages. But electrostatics, EMP, non-electron charged particles, strongly alternating magnetic fields (as used in demagnetization equipment) have not yet been examined, both due to the lack of researcher interest, the lack of funds to support such research (except, perhaps, in classified weapons development projects).

So, given the amateur nature of the data gathering and the theories being generated, I think we must be prepared to live with the preponderance of verbal and photographic data for a fairly long time. But that is not to say that conclusions of a limited sort cannot be drawn from that information, or that that information need be unreliable. Haines, in his 1980 work "Observing UFOs" covered many of the perceptual factors important in understanding what happens to the UFO witness during the perception of an inexplicable event. With that sort of information as a guide, and the careful sifting of information from the witnesses, we can derive limited conclusions or at least generate partial hypotheses (i.e. hypotheses about specific events, the appearance of certain objects and effects, etc. - not global ones about the meaning and the cause).

To give an example, the Moreland case in 1959 gives an excellent example of a clear relationship between UFO luminosity and maneuvering:

<http://www.geocities.com/~mcashman/ufo/report/590713.htm>

A case from Selma in 1957 shows a clear pattern in luminosity and maneuvers of another sort:

<http://www.geocities.com/~mcashman/ufo/report/571029.htm>

From these kinds of observations, we can surely derive some useful hypotheses, as long as we have field investigators skeptically and reliably approaching UFO cases and giving us clean testimony to base our thoughts on.

Look, accepting or rejecting data according to objective criteria is an issue. But, unfortunately, in a number of cases, we're only going to be able to approach this ideal. It was this problem which led Hynek to try to formulate a system of strangeness and probability. Unfortunately, his system is very difficult to apply, and we are always, to some extent, left to rely on the reputation of the field investigator and the researcher.

However, I don't think that rejecting old data which strays wildly from well-documented modern case profiles represents anything like "massaging the data". Certainly, rejected data should still be maintained in files and catalogs, along with the reasons for its rejection. For that matter, the pattern of UFOs vs. UFOs is one which has caused some controversy, so, obviously, even UFOs should not be merely thrown away. But we have to make a decision on credibility at some point - and perhaps each researcher must make that decision separately and differently (as we do). But I believe it will be the competition between hypotheses and cases which will help decide what is credible and what is not.

I don't really think I'd agree here. What makes a theory "best" will be its predictions and how well they agree with reality as represented by observations.

For instance, Keyhoe and Vallee both made predictions about the sequence of UFO luminosity colors in various performance regimes. One of these describes the reality better - or neither does. Keel claimed that UFO cases on a particular night seemed to respect state boundaries - that can be tested. Vallee claimed that "there are too many landings" and that this indicates that UFOs are non-physical in the normal sense. My analysis of Vallee's Magonia catalog indicates that this may not be so.

<http://www.geocities.com/~mcashman/magland.htm>

As long as a theory provides a testable discriminator, we can determine which does a better job, and thus, we objectively decide on which theory is better.

Well, actually, the Tulpa conjecture isn't even a hypothesis. It needs a testable component. How would one, for instance, distinguish between a Tulpa and a holographic projection, or a trans-dimensional intrusion (whatever that is)...

Paul Hill shows that this is not really the problem. Technological hypotheses of UFOs don't strain physics, they strain engineering, which is another matter entirely.

Keep looking, there's plenty of information, just a paucity of careful thought as to how to make it useful.

Both SF authors and fans are a microcosm of society at large.
Still, I'm not sure about the general disdain part.

Asimov and Clarke both publicly were disdainful of UFOs, but I'm not sure I could think of anyone else who's made a public stand on the subject.

As the MUFON CT Assistant State Director, I offer the following concerning this report.

- 1) I was contacted by the other witness to the sighting (not mentioned in the UFO Roundup report). Both witnesses knew each other and had discussed the sighting afterward.
- 2) The other witness indicated the time was 10:45-11:00 PM
- 3) The other witness indicated the cars were driving west on 691, heading for I-84, and that the flashes were about fifteen degrees BEHIND the car, which would mean that the Sleeping Giant location is not possible. I plotted the sight lines on a map based on the information from the witness, and the sight lines crossed the densest part of Meriden.
- 4) Inquiries to the local power company indicated that 86,000 customers in that area were without power, that there were numerous lines down and transformer problems resulting from the ice storm and that any of these could have caused arcing. The power company does not generally have and does not maintain information concerning whether a downed line was arcing or not.
- 5) An arcing power line and certain kinds of transformer problems can cause extremely bright blue-white flashes of the sort reported.
- 6) The reported duration of the flashes ranges from the 2 seconds of the story to the 5-8 secs reported to me.
- 7) No object was seen at any time.

Based on this, I have classified the report as identified.

DAY AT THE CIRCUS

Kevin, Stanton and List,

Information has lost its sense since its Dollars and Cents
Reality has long lost its virginity To virtuality

(Alfred gimme a break here)

Long ago, I stopped believing in newspapers and TV.

Reference 1: "Information" is not delivered, it is fabricated.
If information was indeed close to objectivity, would we be having this List and all this hugging and pushing about getting the UFO phenomena some credibility? (please capitalize this last sentence with 42 points Courier font)

I fail to understand the present shivering indignified posts about a video flop. As if the "program" was some exceptional deceiving piece of work. It is not exceptional. It is coherent with some obscure religion named "TV ratings".

I find any %&!$#@ information show much much more insulting, for the following reasons:

1. It makes you believe that you are intelligent because you watch the show;
2. It makes you believe you are educated because it makes you believe you are informed;
3. There is no point in persuading an imbecile that he or she is right. The Devil (figuratively speaking, I am no religion freak) has no interest in an already conquered soul. Mucho delights must be expected from hoaxing a mucho wise guy (or lady).
4. The program Frontline on PBS should be considered and exception.
5. If you don't believe in informative deception, I suggest you talk to ANY person you know who has been directly concerned with TV and newspapers. Strangely enough, they ALL come up with the same observation: "This is not exactly what I said..."
6. Don't believe this ? Please go back to reference 1.

In an edited TV program, you see only what the producers want you to see. Evidently, when you choose to participate to a TV program, you decline any responsibility towards the viewer. It is not your thing. You merely get paid for it. I understand that Stanton in one of the very few researchers who earn their life with Ufology. It is understandable he has become some figure most UFO shows will want to have. I have seen and talked with Stanton Friedman at a conference here in Montreal 2 or 3 years ago. He had this rare Cartesian approach to UFOs. In my mind this guy stood for credibility and honesty. He still does. Seeing him in an edited-to-death program cannot surprise me or annoy me in any way. How could it ?

I have seen Bruce Maccabee quite a few times on shows like Unsolved Mysteries. He even appeared in the latest "Most Controversial UFO Videos" or the likes on Fox TV a couple of months ago. I never met Bruce, but if I judged the guy from what I saw on TV, I'd swear he plays the organ in a remake of the Phantom of the Opera ! Well... I know... he does play the organ... But mainly at parties :) And judging from what he writes on the list, I'd say that an image is now bullshit and that we should all start going back to some era where words were meaningful. In this age of media, image has become worse than meaningless, it has become a substitute for what is real. It pretends to be a clone. But it's a changeling. Worse than a lie, because you tend to believe it is your child and you act accordingly.

The UPN thing is merciful crap. Much better in this way than the insidious Nova program last fall, or the fallacious Alien Autopsy on FOX some years ago. The one's who believe the UPN BS couldn't tell Stanton Friedman from Philip Klass. Who and what are we defending or attacking here?

Hi!

Bingo! My concerns exactly. The UPN farce beautifully illustrates that even an obvious hoax such as 'Lk County' can sway large (larger than I would have expected) numbers of individuals, without really trying to deceive. When people really put their mind to it.....

An excellent point and one I think that also applies to advanced propulsion systems as well. Case in point, I have often wondered if many of the "Area 51" sightings might not simply be unusual or highly advanced aircraft, not necessarily back-engineered from UFOs, but nonetheless using technology beyond the realm of what most people are aware of. I would love to see funding for public research into EM propulsion, because I think that everyone could benefit. I simply cannot accept that we are in such dire straits that we need to keep the entire country in the dark about what could be revolutionary advances in propulsion. The real threats to the country today would seem to come from small terrorist groups using nonconventional weapons, and with this type of threat it doesn't matter how many "gee-whiz" planes, drones, EMP saucers, or whatever else they happen to have nowadays.

But, unfortunately, the military has a lot of money, and we don't. And unless Bill Gates decides he wants to start his own research center I think this will remain a problem, despite the fact that I think there must be a hell of a lot of commercial applications.

> Look, accepting or rejecting data according to objective criteria is

I wasn't saying what that there was any better way of dealing with the problem, only that rejecting cases to fit a theory is risky. But, as you said, the original data are maintained (or should be) so of course anyone else is free to try and come up with a better theory.

> For that matter, the pattern of IFOs > vs. UFOs is one which has caused some controversy, so, obviously, > even IFOs should not be merely thrown away.

Do you know if anyone has attempted to correlate sightings (based on raw data) with anything else? Once the sample size becomes large enough, the noise should fall away if the statistic used is sophisticated enough.

> But I believe it will be the competition between > hypotheses and cases which will help decide what is credible and > what is not.

Exactly. That's why I want to look at the original data myself -- to see if any of the ideas I have, or that other people have, fit better.

> I don't really think I'd agree here. What makes a theory "best"

That's assuming any of them are predictive. I have yet to see this, but again you bring up examples of predictions (Keyhoe and Vallee) so I'll be most interested in reading them.

> <http://www.geocities.com/~mcashman/...>

I started reading through your website, by the way, which is quite comprehensive, and an excellent resource.

> Well, actually, the Tulpa conjecture isn't even a hypothesis. It > needs a testable component. How would one, for instance,

You're right, conjecture is a better term, although it's not the first time someone has used "hypothesis" to describe a conjecture which cannot, at this time, be tested. But to be honest much of the less academic UFO literature describes conjectures (and much of it depends so heavily upon conspiracies that one cannot reasonably refute the conjectures).

> Technological hypotheses of UFOs don't strain physics, they > strain engineering, which is another matter entirely.

Interesting. Well, if UFOs do use some type of EM propulsion I'd hate to wind up underneath one without some serious magnetic shielding around my noggin.

Thanks.

Actually most science fiction writers do have a disdain for the UFO phenomenon. Frederik Pohl and I have debated the topic at a couple of science fiction conventions. He also did some UFO investigations in the 1960s but ran into some of the hoaxes or misidentifications that convinced him that all sightings would meet with a similar fate.

At other conventions there have been debates between the SF writers and the UFO researchers. It is interesting that, many, if not most of the SF writers believe that UFOs are not real.

On the other hand, when I have lectured at SF conventions, the lectures are always among the most heavily attended and my time is expanded from the normal hour to 90 minutes.

In other words, there is interest in UFOs, but the SF fans want something in the way of solid proof. Any lecture that contains the physical evidence cases is well received. They don't want to here uncorroborated tales of alien visitation. They are a different crowd, many of whom have a solid grounding in science.

As I said in my original note, I didn't see the UPN production, and based my claim on the descriptions seen on the list. But as Bob Shell pointed out, I wasn't far off the mark. That alleged demonstration video and this UPN fiasco were written and directed by the same man. Either way, the two videos are simply too much alike for there not to have been a connection.

What I find most curious is that Carl Sagan, whom I remember as being quite skeptical about UFOs, nonetheless wrote a novel, Contact, in which the protagonists contact an alien race and yet the entire event is totally without substantiation; it all comes down to eyewitness credibility. That seems strange to me, but then again I suppose Sagan didn't see any inconsistency since his novel was fictional.

(Actually, my friend Ken, who worked under Horowitz (sp?) at Harvard on the SETI project, met Sagan and told me that, despite his public image, he wasn't exactly one of the better minds of the 20th century. But that's neither here nor there. The other relevant point Ken made about SETI was that many in the field believed that any reasonably advanced alien race wouldn't be wasting energy broadcasting their communications across the galaxy, and that until or unless we start saying "hello" ourselves we probably won't find much.)

Subject: Re: Books - 'The Threat'

One might begin, for example, with the conclusions Jacobs extrapolates from the Roper Report, which lead him to proclaim that "millions" of Americans may have been abducted. (See pp 124-5 of The Threat.)

The unfortunate fact of the matter is that no such claim can be made in the first place, let alone supported by the resulting evidence. This should be self-evident by a simple reading of the poll questions and the responses to same.

In other words, why not simply ask: do you think you have ever had a close encounter with a UFO, and following that, do you think you may have been taken aboard same?

Instead, Hopkins and Jacobs ask a series of questions -- none of which has to do with a distantly perceived ufo -- and then conclude that anyone positively responding to a certain number of indicators unequivocally(sp?) indicates an abduction by alien extraterrestrial beings -- that is, respond yea to, say, six out of ten questions, and you therefore corroborate our theory and assumptions of what abductions are all about, no ifs, ands or buts. You've been abducted by literal ETs, no other theorists need apply.

All very neat, if extremely messy. But let's suppose you wanted to take an equally oblique approach in determining what numbers of Americans are heavy drinkers. The direct approach would be to ask such questions as a) do you drink more than such and such a day, b) starting at what time of day, and so on.

The Jacobs/Hopkins approach, however, is to ask whether you might not have smelled beer on one occasion, sipped champagne on another, imbibed Wild Turkey on a third, downed a scotch on a fourth -- and thereby conclude that one is both an alcoholic and abductee.

To put it bluntly and parsimoniously: nothing in the Roper Report supports Jacobs's latest contention -- let alone his cataclysmic and catastrophic warnings that we are now hovering on the edge of alien absorption.

For all the money spent on it, the Roper Report means nothing whatsoever.
Over to Greg and the rest of the list,

Greeting esteemed list members...

A fellow-countryman has a need to request a FOIA search for certain documents.

However, not being US citizens, we are obviously going to experience certain fundamental problems.

Now my countryman is willing to pay the FOIA levy if the search proves fruitfull, but we need a US person who is willing to initiate the request.

Anybody care to respond privately to this? (Mr. Gersten, maybe? Glenn Campbell? anybody?)

Replies to lowwje@telkom.co.za, please.

Books - Tim Good on Alien Bases

From: georgina@easynet.co.uk [Georgina Bruni]
Date: Mon, 26 Jan 1998 21:10:55 +0000
Fwd Date: Mon, 26 Jan 1998 20:20:58 -0500
Subject: Books - Tim Good on Alien Bases

According to Tim Good's literary agent, Andrew Lownie, Tim's next book 'Alien Base' which is due to be published early this year, is the best he's ever done. So good in fact, that Tim has received a huge up-front payment to the sum of $3200,000.

'Alien Base' is the result of a thorough investigation into alien bases right here on our own planet. Tim believes that Earth itself is one big alien base. I asked him to name some of these bases but I guess he's saving those for the book, however he did offer some locations. Possible underground alien bases are apparently located in the US, with one in Taos, New Mexico, others exist in South America and Russia, but none in the United Kingdom. Underwater bases are in Central America, Mexico, Peru and Brazil. Tim has found no evidence of any activity in the infamous Dulce site, but he has no doubt that some kind of evidence did exist, and has spoken to the local Indians about this.

In a recent issue of Saucer Smear, editor Jim Mosley, writes that Tim Good has sent him a copy of a letter (dated May 9th 1968) which pertains to be from the late Senator Robert Kennedy to the late Gray Barker. In the letter, Kennedy claims to have a positive interest in flying saucer research and to be a card carrying member of a pro-contactee UFO group based in California. I haven't seen the letter, but if it's genuine it surely proves that Robert Kennedy was a believer. However, Tim Good will have a hard time convincing Jim, who as we know, has edited his sceptic newsletter for over forty years now.

Dear Vladimir,

Alexey V. Arkhipov of the Institute of Radio Astronomy in Kharkov, Ukraine had a letter published in the March 1995 issue of Spaceflight magazine and in your RIAP Bulletin, April-June 1994 issue which he gives details about a May 15, 1994 crash of an unknown object about 40 km to the SSW of Kharkov. He says "Apparently this artefact of unknown origin seems a promising candidate for being extraterrestrial trash which accidentally hit the Earth.". Could the this incident have something in common with the other alleged Kharkov UFO crash?

UFO*BC News

From: UFO*BC <pengilly@axionet.com>
Date: Tue, 27 Jan 1998 02:35:04 GMT
Fwd Date: Tue, 27 Jan 1998 07:44:03 -0500
Subject: UFO*BC News

From time to time, UFO*BC sends out a group e-mail to let people know about upcoming lectures, changes to the website and interesting UFO tidbits. If you do not wish to be on this group list, please let us know and we will gladly remove your name.

1) "Sightings On The Radio" - <http://www.sightings.com>

As well as having an excellent website, Sightings has a radio show 6 nights a week, Monday to Saturday, from 7 PM to 10 PM PST. Please check out their site and listen to some of their archived radio shows (you will need to download "RealAudio" if you don't already have it). UFO*BC has been chosen to host the radio show on the fourth Tuesday of every month. We usually start off the show with the latest UFO news from British Columbia and then delve into our vaults for some of our favourite historical BC cases. We then bring on an interesting guest from across Canada. Last month we had Don Ledger from Nova Scotia and this month we will have Chris Rutkowski from Manitoba. At present the show is not broadcast over the air waves in Canada, but negotiations are underway for the CHUM radio stations to pick up the show. We strongly urge everyone to contact their local CHUM affiliate to request that they carry the show. If you live in the Lower Mainland of BC the CHUM affiliate is CFUN, and the Program Director's e-mail address is ngallagh@cfun.com

2) UFO*BC Website - <http://www.ufobc.org>

We have slowly been making some changes (we think improvements) to our website. Linked directly from the bottom of the Homepage, we now have one or two "Feature Articles" and the "Latest Sighting Report". Sometimes the "Feature" story might be one of our favourite historical cases, but right now we have two new articles written by Graham Conway. The first one, "Let's Close the Gap" is about the need for recognition and investigation into the injuries reported by close encounter witnesses. The second article, "A Chilean Andes Fender Bender" is about the recovery of four chunks of material from an apparent collision between an UFO and the side of a mountain. The "Latest Sighting" is from the Cowichan Valley area of Vancouver Island, although this is about to be updated with a couple more recent cases.

We have just added a "Picture Gallery" of Yvonne Lowe's photos (click on "Supernatural BC" on the Homepage, then "Strange Photos"). We presently have 24 of her pictures up now, but we will be making some substitutions and adding some commentary in the next few weeks. We will then work on Robert Spicer's "Photo Gallery", and eventually a list of Dorothy Izatt's pics.

Bill says he has a bunch more "Bigfoot" stories to go up and he is almost finished with the "UFO*BC Store". We will have our own magazines, bumper stickers and pins listed, as well as some selected videos and books. We have more ideas, but I will let you know about those after we finish what we have on our plate at present.(so much to do, so little time)

If you have comments please e-mail me at:
pengilly@axionet.com

Thank you,
Dave Pengilly

Mr. Friedman,

I would agree, as would the majority of people who follow your work or for that matter anyone with an interest in abduction, that many of your comments on the UPN show were accurate. But again, I must state that my point was not to question what you said but where you said it. So I'll ask as clearly as I can. No matter what your comments are, if you associate yourself with a television show such as this highly questionable one that UPN aired, does that help your cause? Are more people incline to believe in your work? Or does it hurt your cause? That's all I'm really asking.

I don't know about their attitude toward UFO's in general, but presumably from having read numerous stories about all kinds of possible alien life forms, most of the science fiction fans I've asked view the likelihood of humanoid aliens such as the greys as extremely unlikely, and they tend to laugh out loud at the mention of the Santilli alien autopsy film.

Hi Bill and Mark and List,

Who makes the bigger contribution, the scientist that finds the magic bullet to a terrible disease or the person(s) who sweated to find the millions so the scientist could do the research? Sagan probably did more than any other scientist to popularize space and its wonders and he pushed SETI, which in turn further legitimized our field. Besides Carl was, I think, a closet UFO supporter.

I though they were looking for the equivalent of the Howdy Doody show that has been on its way out into the galaxy from here for the last 50 years. It doesn't have to be a message of profound import, a weather forecast, stock market report, a president being impeached...etc. If we're lucky, maybe it will be "Laugh-In".

Hi Ted! Why not hear "all about Kal" from me!! You can then take what I say and go check it yourself if you want to.

So, just ask me...ask away.

By the way, I am back from travel and some projects and appearances, so I owe some people on this list some responses and I will get to them throughout this week. Unfortunately, because of some dumb formatting errors, my last posts did not get posted in a timely manner so I did not have time to respond to people last time around. It was my fault.

There were several emails asking me to clarify my own UFO sighting, for example, and I intend to do this.

Regarding my "research history", Ted, I have had many articles published over the years...going back to when I was in high school and was a columnist and writer for several UFO magazines. Email me and I will send you photocopies. Other magazines that were very popular at that time were UFO publications by True, Argosy, and a publication called 'Frontiers of Science'. Hell, even NICAP still existed back then, and so did APRO.

APRO was the first UFO organization I ever joined, in eighth grade. I also knew Jim and Coral Lorenzen very well.

Those bygone days were certainly LESS full of nuts, whackos and charlatans than today. Meier was pretty much the only major scam in town and there was no Ray Santilli, Derrel Simms, UPN 'alien' abduction crap, etc.

I miss those times...especially the sense of RESPONSIBILITY and OBJECTIVITY SOME of the UFO researchers USED to show back then, but do not now. They seem to have lost something as of late.

One piece I wrote, which stands out, and I think it was published during my senior year in high school, was a detailed article (with photos) of UFO motion picture films I had catalogued and tried to present statistics on.

At that time, it was the most comprehensive review or list of UFO films ever published in a widely available magazine.

While I have since changed my conclusions about some of the cases I talked about, the major point of the article, some 26-27 years later, STILL REMAINS THE SAME -- that MOST 'UFO' films have never been analyzed or studied properly and scientifically!!

This is not the fault of ufologists, in every case, but certainly with many of them.

One of my goals for 1999 is to re-open my investigations into this area.

Well, I appreciate your interest in my research, Ted, and for what it's worth, I find it totally INEXCUSABLE and DISGRACEFUL that Kevin Randle continues to endorse the tall tales of Frank Kaufmann.

At least Stanton Friedman (much to his credit) never fell for Kaufmann as Randle did. Randle has no excuse for STILL endorsing Kaufmann.

I continue to have the utmost respect for Mr. Stanton Friedman, and the UFO field NEEDS someone like Friedman who is out there 'pounding the pavement' and keeping his ear to the ground for UFO-related evidence.

Stan and I may disagree on Roswell, but he ENDORSES my Meier expose (I haven't a clue where Randle stands regarding it) and Friedman played a VERY IMPORTANT role in helping secure some recent UFO related documents I mentioned on MSN recently, and The Laura Lee Show, in a nationwide radio broadcast.

I am presently working on making these Roswell related UFO documents just recently released available to the public. That time should be by this weekend roughly, give or take a few days.

Finally, IF I had to choose, for what it's worth (and here I guess by saying this I will get deluged with another 300 odd emails or so) I would take Stanton Friedman's data over Randle's any day.

They're distinctly different animals.

Friedman's knowledge of the government's UFO related memos and data, from what I can tell in my own opinion, is much more thorough than Randle's.

You may not agree with this, and cite as an example the MJ-12 papers, but Friedman IS tenacious and doesn't try and 'blame' his co-author when mistakes are made nor use his co-author as a scapegoat.

Personally, I have NO PROBLEM with anyone who makes an honest or innocent research error or mistake...heck, look at my Art Bell apology and episode.

However, I DO have a problem with ANYONE who REFUSES to admit they are wrong or are in error, (especially when they know better), and they try to weasel their way out of being held accountable and blame their hapless (now former) colleagues.

I am STILL WAITING (as is THIS LIST) for ALL of the ADMITTED ERRORS by Kevin Randle in his two Roswell books that he BLAMES Don Schmitt for.

I 'psychically' predict that Randle will never produce such a list...and my theory is that close investigation would establish that BOTH were just as guilty. It's up to Randle to "come clean" on this. I doubt he will and I HOPE he PROVES ME WRONG!!

Also, having debated Kevin Randle now in person on a highly-rated TV show, let's just say that I know from firsthand experience that Randle is, well.....put it this way: I wouldn't want to be him in about one week or so.

Sorry to be so 'mysterious', but I PROMISE I will send YOU this new data first, before it becomes public and gets published.

Best always,
Kal

I am suprised that Ray thinks you would need as many as fifteen people tomake a film like the AA footage. Many very good films are made with much smaller crews than that. Apart from the people you see on camera, you would need a cameraman, a lighting man and continuity. Assuming that the actors and the crew do any props, scenery and model making you could at a minimum get away with maybe six people.

And six people could be the cameraman, his best friend and maybe a couple of close relatives of each - people that would not want to talk for fear of dropping their buddies in it. Or alternatively a small enough group that somebody could use threats against to keep them in line. This is just speculation.

One of my correspondents, cryptodude@aol.com (an illustrator of cryptozoological books), pointed out that THE LEARNING CHANNEL is airing MYTHICAL BEASTS AND MONSTERS tonight at 9:00 PM and at midnight. Supposed to cover Nessie, among others. Cryptodude also mentioned that they are presenting BIGFOOT on Thursday at 9:00 PM and midnight.

In a real hurry this morning, but I also noticed that TLC has some parapsychological programming this Wednesday: THE GHOSTHUNTERS at 8:00 and 11:00 PM; HAUNTINGS ACROSS AMERICA at 9:00 PM and Midnight; and SECRETS OF THE SUPER-PSYCHICS at 10:00 PM and 1:00 AM on Thursday.

This is Bufo saying, "If =everything= seemed normal, that =would= be weird!"

You can stop receiving this from me just by asking (note: it is commonly redistributed, and I can't control you getting it from those sources) by e-mail at BufoCalvin@aol.com. You can also subscribe or unsubscribe to Bufo's WEIRD WORLD Media Alert the same way. Also, please let me know if there is something in the media you think I should cover. Deadline is Tuesday, the week before.

Bufo's WEIRD WORLD Books

I'm very excited about this! Some of you know, I ran a bookstore for years, and it has always been a love of mine. I get asked often to recommend books (I do write reviews for several publications) on these topics, and now I can do it and actually give you a source for them at the same time! This is being done in association with Amazon.com, which has an outstanding reputation for the five "S"s of internet shopping: selection, searchability, service, savings, and security. If there is any specific book you want (or topic in which you are interested), let me know and I will do the research and e-mail you a link you can use to check it out more (and order it if you want). I will be linking to books within the Media Alert, to make it more efficient for you. If you click on the link, you will be sent to that title on Amazon. You do =not= have to buy it at that point!

You may, but the option is yours.

Body marks

From: William B Jennings <WILLIAM.B.JENNINGS@usa.dupont.com>
Date: Tue, 27 Jan 1998 10:36:00 -0500 (EST)
Fwd Date: Tue, 27 Jan 1998 23:25:20 -0500
Subject: Body marks

Greeting all,

This is my first try at posting. Here it goes. I was hoping someone could possibly answer a question for me. My girl friend, along with my daughter and my self, has had a history of contact with all the associated phenomena with certain ETs.(Gullations) spelling most likely wrong. This is not something we share with the world. It's out some what now, huh.

The three of us deal with it real well and have no real complaints, partly because we haven't been bothered for quite a long time. But, I believe they might be back. If what I'm about to explain is nothing, we'll go back to our "normal" lives, but if my senses are correct, I'll be keeping a closer eye on my family and keep them under my wing (a closer bond than "normal") and re-affirm their understanding." Understanding" as it encompasses many areas.

Anyway, to get to my question. Different types of body marks are what I'm interested in. My girlfriend has 3, what appears to be punctures marks behind her right ear. They are just below the hair line on the same angle as the hair line. Approx. 1/2 inch apart in a straight line. Spider bites? I'm not too sure about that. It just doesn't look or feel right.

I don't recall seeing this type of pattern in the material I've read or on her for that matter. Have any of you seen or heard of this pattern? Any info on this would be appreciated. I took some pictures of this as well. I hope they turn out, because my flash wouldn't work. Had to hold the camera real still and she didn't want photos taken of her anyway. She just like that.

While I'm here, my family is just one of many that have had experiences and with some experiences being total real-time memories. We don't come out to talk about them because of the type of treatment we get from hard core, metal sample in hand, proof seekers along with others. The so called mental heath "professionals" aren't helping either. Most of them seem to just want to collect data. They're approaching this thing, in my belief, all wrong in the areas of helping contactees cope with this. The whole person must be addressed. I've been working on this for quite a few years now. But what do I know, I'm just the stupid smuck that has to answer my daughter's questions on what and why these things are happening to her on my own for the most part. The whole thing has made me look long and hard at a lot of life's questions. I'm hoping in the future we're accepted and our personal truth can be heard by all without ridicule. Then maybe all of us that are affected can heal and understand together. Single families and small groups just aren't enough to get a grip on this. It's time! And I would like to thank all of you that are open, searching and knocking down doors to blow this suppressed knowledge out into the mass consciousness. You're hero's in my book.

Sorry for spouting off.

Thanks, Bill

Yeah, but how will they figure out that the Howdy Doody broadcast they're receiving is meant to be displayed on a pentagonal screen with irregular length sides, and with different color depths near each corner, because the users have some weird eye?

I still think that SETI will never be able to distinguish anything but analog radio from noise, and even that will be hard if the content doesn't fall into the range we're used to.

An astronomer friend who knew Sagan told me that the public Sagan and the private Sagan were two very different people. Apparently not the way you advance in science.

I tend to think that any really advanced civilization "out there" will have long since abandoned radio as a means of communication, and will be using something we would describe as "telepathy".

Larry Hatch's U database is starting to make a large body of cases available to researchers for just such a purpose.

The AF did some work with this, esp. in the Battelle Institute study (which showed that IFOs and UFOs had little or nothing in common); that study was replicated by the French Government's GEPAN organization.

I did an analysis of Vallee's contention that there were too many landings using the near 1000 cases in the original Magonia catalog.

Still, I don't think statistics are the be-all and end-all of UFO research. The data is very noisy, even after filtering, so we have to be careful in deriving strong conclusions. At any rate, it can only be one prong of the effort.

Yes, but let's ignore that stuff. Frankly, even if it weren't unprovable it would probably be uninteresting anyway. For instance, the only thing that would make Roswell a useful case would be if it were, by access being provided to fragments or bodies, shown to be true. Unlike other UFO cases, we don't get anything out of it on UFO behavior, occupant biology or behavior, or any of the other areas that plain, regular UFO reports provide so well. The conspiracy theories have the same defect.

I doubt that they use any sort of EM propulsion. Gravity, now, there's some evidence for. Hill shows pretty comprehensively that only force fields can provide the apparent behavior of the UFO, while particle ejections have various plain to see side effects that just don't show up in the data; as for magnetism as the force field source, well, there is some data that UFOs emit magnetic fields (Vins, for instance), but none of the emissions seem strong enough to lift multi-ton, much less multi-ten ton objects.

DISPATCH # 80 -- the weekly newsletter of ParaScope

Quote of the Week

"Not yet."

-- White House Spokesman Mike McCurry, responding to a reporter last week who asked if the Lewinsky sexual allegations represented the low point of the Clinton Presidency.

Rant of the Week: "The World Is a Toilet"

Every week we pick the wackiest, scariest, nastiest or funniest rant from the hundreds of letters received by us here at ParaScope headquarters, and present it to you as our Rant of the Week. This week, "Gwerky" outlines how they have been trying to get him for years. Enjoy.

"The bastards finally got me. They have been trying for years to nail me. The FBI and the Secret Service tried for years to get me because of my computer and crypto skills. They tried to enroll me but I wouldn't play ball with them. Then I found out too much and I had to leave. After I infiltrated the Soviet Army as a Colonel, I spent several years obtaining sensitive data, red files and then I was brought back. I worked mainly with night vision development, and a few other classified projects. They put me to sleep for several years but I could not stand it. They put more bugs, cameras, taps and plants onto me but I knew it.

"Bastards! I know they pry into my computer when I am not watching through the net, so I pull all the lines when I am not here. I know they tap my lines, and I hope they get a friggin earful. I know what they are doing, I have seen things that you would not believe. Area 51, yes, they used to have aliens and craft there, but they have been moved. The ruskies have some too.

"Then they came out with cable TV, and Ted Turner was the heap big commie behind it. TV is destroying the youth of Amerika. That's what they want, anarchy and chaos, that way the people scream out for a solution to the problem and when none can be found, the government comes up with one. More control, more, more, more! Control, that's what we have now.

"I know that there are several years that I have no memory of, but I do remember a severe pain in my leg for several years. I could not stand the pain anymore so I took a razor and made a cut in my leg. There was a long white object about 75mm long and about 4mm around buried in my leg about 1/2 deep and parallel to the bone. I used needle nosed pliers to extract it. I don't know what it was, where it came from, or how it got there but I destroyed it back in '75. Since then I have had severe ringing in my ears, severe pain in my right ear and right eye.

"This world is a toilet and the elite have made it that way. They want to destroy the common man and clone themselves in their own image, to be gods. They are the beast. God will clean their clocks when the time comes."

Yes, but to my knowledge nobody's been able to demonstrate anti-gravity (yes I remember the hi-temp superconductor thing but I never heard of any reliable reproduction of the effect, and besides that affected gravity above the device, not within it). Does general relativity even permit it? Then again I wouldn't know a tensor field if it bit me on the posterior, so I may be totally wrong.

Bill, I hear your love and concern for your family, but be very careful not (implant) your own beliefs and interpretations on them. As you have said the "understanding" encompasses many areas and most of those "areas" are still very much in the dark. Love, comfort, and protect as you can but don't influence their beliefs one way or another. Allow them discover/determine their own individual "meaning."

Go to this web address Bill,

<http://www.spacelab.net/~jvif/buddhopkins.html>

Go to the pages marked, "Physical marks and scars" and tell me if you see anything familiar there. BTW, those pinpricks in triangular formation behind the ear has been repeatedly reported by many experiencers. Check out IF.

I too am an abductee and a father. I hear you man. Just give my words some consideration. I hope it was helpful. Warmest regards to you and yours.

Please understand I am not suggesting this is the case with your girlfriend, but I do want you to know why some people can be so skeptical. There are documented cases of stigmata, wounds on the hands or wrists (as in Jesus on the Cross) which appear suddenly and mysteriously. Some think those affected are (subconsciously) wounding themselves, but the evidence against that is significant, and many suggest that the brain may be capable (through an unknown mechanism) of triggering localized inflammations, up to and including open sores, either "out of the blue" or in response to mild abrasion. The same mechanism may also explain the "skin writing" in the possession case that was the source for The Exorcist.

That's why some people are looking for a "metal sample in hand" as you put it. If people took the UFO problem seriously, there would be money for an MRI, but unfortunately there isn't. So when you hear from people who demand hard evidence, that's sometimes the reason why.

I do hope, however, that you find acceptance and answers to your concerns. The last thing in the world a confused or suffering person needs is ridicule.

How many people were in the film? If you assume the actors also do the continuity and lighting (wasn't the lighting static? If so, someone can rig it before filming), that means you need only one cameraman and the actors. And I've seen plenty of student films (and I mean films, not videos) done with a similar level of competence. I realize the typical studio solution to making a film is to throw gobs of money and people at it, but dedication, skill, and plenty of time can make up for that.

Or for that matter a bunch of bored film and/or theatre geeks.
Or a few wise-asses at a big studio. Some people are capable of keeping secrets, especially if they think it's funny to keep everyone deluded.

Apology to MW #218 (For January 28, 1998)

Take a break from John Ford when the wheels are grinding, his memory fading and injustice is blinding? Forget he exists in pursuit of new toys, like signs, and Cydonia, or the words of old boys? Ignore his distress, and misplace his woes, forget that he's wearing 'those' hospital clothes? Would that I could but before I forget I think of the watchers -- them previously met. They will record, for the future's sad memory, the regret that we'll feel; and they'll make it compulsory.

~~Before the sun rose up this morning -- the first time in many days, the pre dawn air was crystal clear; the kind of sky that pays. I only saw one aircraft, no peculiar points of light, distracted by more thoughts of John -- his god forsaken plight. Dark overhead 'twas moon besotted, it hung there with a leer; gibbous and then mocking of reminded madness -- fear. And I thought of threat that's hanging, like a sword of Damocles, and I know the proudest of us could be brought to fearful knees.

A siren in the distance wasn't shooting harmless blanks. Its piercing wail sought blood in chase -- I shuddered, I'll be frank. With all our systems suspect, (what's in the mainstream news) the cops and courts and black shop sports should give us ALL the blues.

The sun came up at last for me, and I was there to see, a golden dawn forgotten by the ones that see it free. The simplest thing for granted, a sip of water from the tap =85 where you control the water flow -- or smell a puppy on your lap. To walk outside in your back yard (they'd have to take it from you) to hear the trees, the frozen ground -- see squirrels run around you. A cloudless sky, your vision flies =85 off in the grand forever, and you think it's right that this not stop -- that nothing hurts you -- never! The cold air nips your nose, your breath is frozen misted smoke, a chuckle made remembering something clever, or a joke. Something to feel good about -- "No worries!", aussies say! A promise in infinity to begin again, exciting days. Feeling good with honor is that heaven here on Earth that we scrabble and compete for from every squalid human birth.

All John has is the honor, as I'm sure he feels like shit. I would be beyond depression in their disinfected pit. The sun not on my face, drugs and orders from nurse Ratched; I think I really would go nuts; and then I know I'd really catch it=85.

I hope I'm spared attention from the psychopathic lord that engineered a prison for the gad fly Johnny Ford. Because noticed by this psychopath, and plagued with his devises, you'd let me rot his unjust clutches, ignore my unfair crisis. I'd speak for you (it doesn't matter!), but you wouldn't lift a finger; you'd let me go to sad confinement; you'd let me suffer as I lingered.

See, it's not completely altruistic. You even do it for yourself. I'd want someone to speak for me as I languish on your shelf. So I'll bleed a bit for Johnny, cause I'd want it done for me. He that stopped a bullet so's to drop his scales and see.

Lehmberg@snowhill.com

This is the last of this series -- until I hear something new; but every apology will end with a reminder until John Ford IS restored.

If you told me a year ago that I would be stridently defending one conservative republican, and thinking about throwing support to another (Ms. Barwood), I would almost certainly have been piqued, and irritated. So you see, anything CAN happen <g>.

Some of you have told me that I detract from myself with this series. Christ on crutches people, how could you so completely miss the point? This is not about me; that I cheapen myself, indicate a similar madness, or even supply the reader a reason not to read -- is simply not the issue. This is not about me being read, or taken seriously. This is not about me one whit or particle. This is about you -- you the individual. This is about your freedom to think, learn, and love in a universe that you take responsibility for. This is about your personal efficacy and your freedom to belong, constructively achieve, and ethically influence a REAL world you build out of the chaos around you. This is about your freedom to demand that the greatest are held to the same standards of accountability that you are. This is about a level playing field where everyone pays their fair share in a search to discover that "truth that's out there."

Early this century, Nazi Germany started to round up the trouble makers, it started slow as the Nazis tested the ethical waters. They were emboldened when an ignorant population CHOSE TO BELIEVE the skillful propoganda, turned their eyes away, and let it slide. As a consequence, the world slid as close to the lip of hell as it probably ever has=85

In a growing population there is a diminishing respect to parse out to each bothersome individual. That's the reason nothing is seriously done, for all the terrifying warnings of educated people, about our well recognized overpopulation problem. The man does not want to have to respect the individual, the man wants to have a choice of individuals, and manipulate those individuals with that choice! Individuals have to be =85 the right kind of individuals =85

It's ok to be kooky new age, channeling the spirits of boojum, or whatever blows the individual's spiritual dress up, just as long as you don't ask real questions and then get STRIDENT as hell if you think you're getting "shined on". Did our John Ford test the outer edge of the un-elected Suffolk county envelope? Most likely, and showed us something in the bargain. When you seriously start looking for the real deal the 'man' starts bringing out his hammers and his nails. There is no amount of due process, or equality under the law that can save you from those who command the houses where those laws are codified. John Ford became a distraction, a lawfully stinging gad fly in their ointment, and he's being unjustly hammered for it. Lastly, there, but for the grace of God, go you.

As post script, to qualify as a TRUE psychopath, one must be, by definition, NOT crazy. Bet you thought it was the inverse =85consider the implications of THAT! Who's the psychopath? Look in a mirror.

Restore John Ford.

Yes, but unless the telepathic information is embedded in an electromagnetic carrier wave (which is entirely possible if you had some kind of mind-machine implant), you're probably going to need to invent some new physics. Idunno tho, anyone with a background in particle physics care to comment on whether any of the other massless critters can be modulated (in theory at least)? Keep in mind that you can only squeeze (frequency/2) worth of bandwidth out of a given carrier wave, and I'd assume telepathy would use a fair chunk of bandwidth.

Don't get me wrong, I have a feeling there's a lot we don't understand about the nature of physical reality. But once you start assuming the existence of new laws of physics to satisfy your criteria, you might as well just call it magick. There's nothing wrong with magick per se, but it does raise certain problems.

George, Thomas and List,

I am a Science-Fiction fan myself. I don't think it is a perequisite to find the AA film laughable.

I guess the basis of Science-Fiction is the proliferation of mankind throughout the galaxy. Science-Fiction is a very anthropocentric genre. Whatever the odds, we always end on top, unless there is some philosophical lesson to gather for our advancement. Truly superior beings are generally benevolent or neutral species who seldom get involved with inferiors like us.

The Alien Invasion scenario is generally treated in a very pessimistic manner. Jack Williamson for one wrote a novel ("Darker than you think" in the sixties - I guess) about a falsely benevolent alien invader. His hero finally commits suicide... Nothing to help the sales.

Science-Fiction is a microcosm of society in the way it deals with interrelations (personal, national, international, racial).
It merely transposes societal relations in a context generally oriented towards a projected future. This context is in fact what seperates it from the standard novel (contemporary) or the historical novel (past). More imaginative worlds implying magic are treated in another genre: Science & Fantasy.

Science-Fiction is not futurology. Asimov and his hard-science fellow writers never predicted the first Moon landing would be presented on TV worldwide. Nobody predicted the Internet. We have to give Frederic Pohl some credit though for imagining a consumer-oriented future.

The assertion that most science-fiction writers do not support the idea of UFOs remains to be verified. If confirmed, it would be symptomatic, I guess, of the reality of the phenomena.

Denying a concept is not necessarily denying the reality behind the concept: it may just be the refusal of the implications of this reality. Aliens are in the garden of the Science-Fiction authors. The problem is, we are the indians. That makes very short novels and aborted sagas when it's the other side who, in the end, will probably write history.

Can't imagine a world without Star Trek.

William

I also wouldn't know a Tesla coil from a welding rod, but I have a theory....

There are various types of field mechanics, in my view:

sub-atomic: the field holding the nucleus together. Probably has a lot more to do with pure magnetism than we know trans-atomic: basic electron-induced field, or eletro-magnetic field macro-atomic: a very low-frequency (long wave-length) energy that I feel is a product of the above two, in a pure form. This is gravitic: the forces in interplay between objects having mass, ie: collections of sub-atomic and trans-atomic forces that induce gravity.

Therefore, just as an electric current, being the movement of electrons from atom to atom, induces a magnetic field, or force, which then influence other magnetic or magnetized objects, there must be a movement of some particle or wave that induces a gravitic field or force, that acts on "gravitised" objects, or objects with mass.

Now I don't know whether a gravitic field can be induced by propagating a current or force within electrons and atomic nucleii, but all things being equal (dynamic equilibrium and the preservation of energy), it follows from what we "know" from science that:

- To split an atom (destroy the nucleic field)doesn't require much energy compared to the resulting energy release - to induce a current or magnetic field takes about the same energy, relatively speaking

- then therefore, it would take a prodigious amount of energy to induce a small gravitic field.

Now thats where the Unified Field Theory has to come in.

Any comments?

Speculation . . . speculation . . . speculation.

The "experts" put the cost and expertise shown in this production beyond the reach of the student hoaxer, but who knows if that was just their own egos talking or a valid statement.

Nearly all SFX experts have stated that they could do a better job, but none of the attempts to re-create the video have come close (IMHO). I'm not arguing that the Santilli "film" is real, but rather that the attempts to recreate it all showed flaws that would have quickly been pounced upon by both skeptics and researchers. Some of these attempts were not cheap and involved a number of people, but none would have survived nearly as much criticism as the Santilli "film" has.

There is a underlying assumption here that the "film" would be easy to do by a few people, and if those few people had the exact skills necessary, and the resources at their disposal, that may be true. But, IMHO, the "film" is more sophisticated than most give it credit for.

Of course, opinions are like "mothers", in that everyone has one (sorry, I wanted to keep it clean. . .<g>).

That Ray grabbed a number to use in his statement doesn't surprise me, and since the point is a relatively minor one, I would assume that the criticism has been levelled to make a point. The validity of the "film" is in Ray's court, as it always has been. Speculation and opinion are not proof, and until actual "film" is made available we will continue to debate this issue to death with little hope of resolution.

I believe there are more important issues to discuss, and until some real "proof" comes along we don't need to beat this "dead horse" any more.
(IMHO, of course.)

Let me note that I've just received a copy of the BEYOND ROSWELL CD-ROM, and I'll be putting together a review that I hope to post here soon. At first glance it is well put together and should be considered as a companion to the book, and not a replacement for it. There are a number of video clips of interviews and statements by those involved in the book and it's material, and some new information provided by Bob Shell that isn't included in the book. Information technology is changing, and I'm pleased that this genre is moving in this direction.

Phil:

I was intrigued by your report: Straightforward, succinct, and loaded for bear. But we need a little help to get started:

What do you mean by "underground alien bases?"

What first led you to believe that you were working on underground alien bases?

Are you currently working on underground alien bases? If so, what work are you doing?

If you are not currently working on underground alien bases, what work were you doing while working on underground alien bases?

If you are currently working on underground alien bases, is there anyone else working with you?

If so, who are they, and what work are they doing?

If there are any others present, who are not working with you, who are they and why are they present?

If you are not currently working on underground alien bases, why aren't you?

Have you communicated your experiences regarding working on underground alien bases to anyone not on this List? And if so, who?

List the locations of the underground alien bases on which you are currently working or on which you have worked in the past, in chronological order, dating from the most recent to the past.

Phil, its rare to find someone with firsthand knowledge who is willing to share it. The information you have is invaluable. Thank you for taking the time to help out on the questions.

Some time ago, on his 'Sightings on the Radio' show, Jeff Rense referred to the so-called Battle of Los Angeles, chronicled in the LA Times, in which fighter planes 'skirmished' with a large globe shaped (?) UFO over LA in, I believe, 1941 or 1942. Jeff was considering posting more info on his web site, but pointed out this was quite an undertaking (the article was long, and would have to be hand-typed). So far, the article has not appeared.

Does anyone out there have any info on this incident, or a reference to the LA Times edition in which the sighting was originally reported? Apparently, a rather spectacular photograph accompanies the article.

Any help appreciated,

Regarding puncture marks behind the ear, I have never come across anything like that in a straight line in the cases I've worked on and read about. I might suggest that if you think you've had contact with them several times before to look for marks around the knees and elbows, fingers, toes, scoop mark on the back, white lines in any of these places that you were unaware of before and identify the source of. Repetitive contacts will result in more than one body mark.

Hi Mark,

As regards to EM effects on vehicles stopping car engines some time ago I posted an extract from an Air Force document which noted that device capable of doing just exactly that had become an operational weapon.

Here is that post again, please update your files, its time to stop saying that these effects first observed in the 1950s have not been examined because obviously someone in the Air Force has and moreover they have either replicated the method or independently engineered the means of doing so.

The UFO literature describes several different types of Unidentified Flying Objects. Some of these reports describe encounters with devices which I would classify as structured craft of no known human design, or structured alien craft (SAC). The UFO literature also describes some unusual effects of these SACs.

One of their interesting reported effects involves the performance of automotive vehicles in their presence. Reports dating back as far as the 1950s state that a vehicle could become inexplicably immobile and could not be restarted in the presence of a SAC. There are also reported effects on electronic devices in the vehicle powered by the battery, e.g. the car radio is temporarily non-functional. Some of these reports suggest that this disabling effect is selectively turned on and off by the SAC.

An interesting subtlety of the effect is that those reports which specify the type of internal combustion engine show that gasoline powered engines and not diesel engines are effected. At least one report that I read mentions that a gasoline engine was disabled while a diesel engine near the gasoline engine continued running in the presence of the SAC. Gasoline engines require an ignition system for sustaining the combustion process after it is initiated, whereas a diesel engine does not need a working ignition system in order to keep running once it has been started.

With this in mind it is interesting to note the following in a document published by the:

United States Air Force Scientific Advisory Board.

The www location of this document, New World Vistas Air and Space Power for the 21st Century Summary Volume, was distributed in UFOupdates in February 1997. The entire message sequence should be in the archives. The www location of the document for your convenience is:

<http://web.fie.com/htdoc/fed/afr/sab/any/text/any/vistas.htm>

for those who wish to read the entire document it is about 227K long. The sections of the document relevant to this discussion are abstracted below from Chapter II Section 5.0

What is interesting to note is that the USAF now has a sublethal weapon capability of the type called High Power RF (HPRF). This is a high power radiofrequency device which can be directed against vehicles and electronic devices. These HPRF weapons "can be effective against vehicle ignition systems" for stopping and immobilizing them. The report does not note effectiveness against vehicles not dependent of an ignition system, e.g. diesel engines. Apparently there is some effect on electronic devices although the type this effect is not specified presumably it is disabling or destructive as it is employed as a military weapon.

Telepathic communications and clairvoyance don't involve EM apparently. SRI did experiments putting sender/receivers or remote viewers into faraday cages and it didn't effect the positive outcome of the experiments.

Interestingly, many of the psi researchers ARE physicists. They don't know how to explain psi, but they have demonstrated it's validity beyond a shadow of a doubt. I especially recommend Dean Radin's book "The Conscious Universe."

The existence of psi DOES require new physics. Of course the old physicists may have a problem with that...;-)

No, it has to do with the strong nuclear force, which "peters out" after an extremely short distance (an order of magnitude or so above the radius of a proton, if I remember correctly). Exactly why the strong nuclear force seems incapable of operating over any distances was unknown (when I was into this stuff, which was about ten years ago).

> trans-atomic: basic electron-induced field, or eletro-magnetic

I'm not quite sure what you mean by 'trans-atomic' -- if you mean operating within an atom, yes there is an electrostatic attraction between the nucleus and electrons (and quantization of electron shells and the exclusion principle to keep them in place) ... but I'm not quite sure where magnetism comes into play, if at all.

Um, no offense, but I think you need to learn some physics. Yes, at an appropriate temperature/energy level the forces do unify (at least that's the theory), but gravity is probably the last one to give up the ghost, so to speak, and the kind of energy levels we're talking about are a few trillionths of a second (or less) after the big bang. Again, let me point out it's been a while since I was interested in quantum physics, but the basic idea is that as you increase the temperature/energy level the forces start to unify, with EM+weak first (electroweak), then strong, then finally gravity. I don't know if anyone's even come up with a Grand Unified Theory (electroweak+strong) let alone the Holy Grail of this sort of thing, the "Theory of Everything".

Admittedly gravity is kinda different than the other forces, but it is a separate force, not a product of two or more other ones.

Relativity would not permit anti-gravity, since in relativity, gravity is the curvature of space. Quantum gravity probably would, since a graviton could be expected to have an anti-particle.

Still, anti-gravity isn't necessarily the way to go. A strong gravity force from above an object in the local gravity field would be able to generate the same effect as anti-gravity on that object.

There is, at this point, a noticeable number of cases of "gravity anomalies" in the presence of UFOs. As I recall, there is one case where an object flew over a truck and the truck lifted and was turned over; another where a witness was walking his horse, and as the object passed over, the horse lifted into the air and then dropped. A few other cases, such as a disk hovering above the ocean with the water domed up beneath it, and some of the odd holes left behind as ground traces may also be indicative.

One thing's for sure, though - ejection of the vast majority of particles in some sort of advanced reaction drive is not an option, since most of them generate incredible amounts of radiation or heat when produced in volumes sufficient to lift objects in the tens of tons range.

Not to mention that 20-100 gravity accelerations without some sort of local gravity field would mean that UFO occupants would have to scrape themselves off the deck with a spatula after a typical UFO departure.

Brian:

This must be the well known one sided-battle, actually over Culver City, of 25 FEBR 1942. Reportedly, 1430 Anti-Aircraft shells (and who knows what else) were fired at a huge silent round object to no effect. Shell debris fell widely causing some damage and possibly injuries as well. The craft departed at 18,000 MPH in some reports. One source is Timothy Good's book ABOVE TOP SECRET, on page 15, a detailed account.

ROSWELL UPDATE:
SUMMARY & CONCLUSION
By Robert A. Galganski

Roswell skeptics suggest that the unusual thin-strut fragments found on the Foster ranch debris-field were merely casein-glue-treated balsa-wood wreckage from Project Mogul Flight 4. This claim - typical of the broad and often vague pontification that pervades ufology - is unsupported by any substantive evidence.

In this case, skeptics could have easily tested the "glue hypothesis" as I call it - but didn't. Perhaps their usual knee-jerk response - denial - to a potentially unsettling alternate explanation prevented them from even considering a scientific approach. I did.

I performed a series of straightforward and simple tests that provided unambiguous empirical data. The results led to an inescapable conclusion: The struts, which reportedly exhibited extraordinary physical properties atypical of late 1940s technology, could NOT have been made from balsa wood. This means that they could not have been components from a Mogul balloon train, which leaves no other conventional explanations that have not already been eliminated.

As such, an extraterrestrial origin for the strut; and other debris-field material must still be considered a viable possibility.

Hi Brian,

Pages 15-17 of Timothy Goods book Above Top Secret describe what has been called the Los Angeles Air Raid February 25, 1942.

Interesting aspects of this incident are:

1) other than George Marshall's vague memo to my knowledge no other information on this incident has been declassified.

2) the picture is quite interesting because what is outlined in the searchlight beams is not at globed shaped UFO but a large triangular shaped object judging from the picture in the book on pp 193.

3) The LA Times has a research service which will obtain the original articles for a research fee. Contact them via their web site.

It was reported years ago that it was these stories that formed the fictional basis of Spielbergs's comedy in 1980 titled 1941.

The movie spoofed the 1941 war nerves in LA, complete with a formation of "Japanese" fighters being chased all over the coast.

Cheers,
Robert

re: U Database findings.

I recently sent in some findings about day versus night UFO sightings from the U UFO Database. Since then, I refined the statistical routine to subdivide the raw data by decades.

The U Database has 16,575 sightings listed as of 28 JAN'98. Of these, 12,121 have 'known' time-of-day (plus or minus one hour to allow for Daylight Savings time and time-zone anomalies.)

'DAY' is defined as the hours 1000-1600hrs. 'NIGHT' is defined as 2200-0400hrs. These strict 6-hour periods are broad daylight, or dark of night, for most of the world, the year around. Sightings for all other hours are considered 'FRINGE', i.e. light or dark, dawn or dusk depending on latitude and season.

Here's the raw data from the new routine:

| Date Period: | TOTAL | DAY | NIGHT | FRINGE |
|--------------|-------|------|-------|--------|
| ALL YEARS | 12121 | 1464 | 4223 | 6434 |
| pre -1960 | 3353 | 709 | 869 | 1775 |
| 1960 onward | 8718 | 747 | 3340 | 4631 |

These figures are now subdivided as follows:

| pre - 1900 | 50 | 8 | 14 | 28 |
|---------------|------|-----|------|------|
| 1900s | 90 | 9 | 35 | 46 |
| 1910s | 23 | 2 | 9 | 12 |
| 1920s | 13 | 5 | 3 | 5 |
| 1930s | 21 | 4 | 5 | 12 |
| 1940s | 576 | 180 | 100 | 296 |
| 1950s | 2630 | 509 | 717 | 1404 |
| 1960s | 2036 | 205 | 768 | 1063 |
| 1970s | 3193 | 249 | 1267 | 1677 |
| 1980s | 1270 | 97 | 459 | 714 |
| 1990s | 2219 | 196 | 846 | 1177 |

Note the 1940s when 'broad daylight' sightings outnumbered dark-of-night by a 9 to 5 ratio.

I have no ready explanation for the steady drop in the ratio of 'day' sightings since 1940, and invite discussion.

PROJECT-1947: Ruppelt, Air Defense & UFOs

From: Jan Aldrich <jan@CYBERZONE.NET>
Date: Wed, 28 Jan 1998 11:50:53 -0800
Fwd Date: Fri, 30 Jan 1998 02:23:56 -0500
Subject: PROJECT-1947: Ruppelt, Air Defense & UFOs

I am experiencing some computer difficulties. Everytime I start a message my computer freezes up. Here is a condensed version of what I have been trying to send.

Here are some points to consider. Other than Loren Gross I don't know many others who have considered these angles except perhaps Dr. Leon Davidson in sort of a muddleheaded way. It is an absolute shame that aviation and defense historians will not touch UFOs with a ten foot pole.

The obvious implications of UFOs for Air Defenses were not lost on some newspaper columnists, the Alsop brothers during the 1947 wave did a column on this.

About the time Project Sign was being authorized there was an articles in the New York Times connecting Air Defense with UFOs. Basically, it urged that the Aircraft Warning Service's Ground Observer Corps be reactivated.

In the late 1940s and early 1950s there were big debate about military strategy. It involves how billions or dollars (much more money than in present terms--which could probably be a trillion in current dollars was at stake.)

It involved fission bombs, fusion bombs, large standing armies, and big budget air defense. Many of the important players are also at one time or another involved in UFOs.

The Air Force was basically on the side of strong strategic forces and small defense forces. However, having the air defense mission, meant also there was within the Air Force an advocacy for strong air defense with the possibility of huge contracts, expanded organizations and lots of promotions. So the pot is boiling, and then throw in UFOs.

The Commanding General of the Air Defense Command (ADC) was told by General Stamford that AFL 200-5 was put into effect to get messages on possible hostile contact to ADC faster. In the summer of 1952 Ruppelt wrote that the AFL 200-5 was a failure from his stand point. He was not getting back up information, reports were being mishandled, etc.

Well, who cares if a reserve captain with no clout and no budget to speak of is unhappy.

Ruppelt proposed a huge expansion in Project Blue Book with a large budget and involving contractors. (And probably with a Major Ruppelt to head it.) This may be why Ruppelt was susceptible to the scuttle butt about the Robertson Panel's recommendation to expand the UFO effort. (Anyone who has been around a military organization when an important decision is made will hear the most outrageous rumors back and forth prior to the actual decision being announced.)

It has always bothered me that Alvarez during the Robertson Panel discussions found no radar cases that interested him.

Richard Hall and I had a fiery argument concerning the Robertson Panel. Hall's contention was that the Robertson Panel was composed of skeptics that thought UFOs were a waste of time. My contention was that because of a defect in Project Blue Book from the beginning and Ruppelt's selection of cases, the panel did not receive a good sample of puzzling cases. The Blue Book defect involved Blue Book's treatment of close encounter cases--pitching them in the trash. However, there was a good same sample of such cases in Project Blue Book's files and in the USAF clipping collection. There were also other such cases reported to official channel which should have been available to the CIA who monitored all intelligence reports and which might have been available to Blue Book.

The Robertson Panel commented that most of the cases they saw were of short duration and viewed at a great distance. The exception was the Florida scotmaster case which had big credibility problems.

The Panel said that Robertson, Alvarez, and Griggs had looked into "foo-fighters." It was felt that they might represent an electric phenomenon. Now if they were an electrical phenomenon, they were natural, and they did not end with the World War II.

Dah?! Huh? Hello! These are scientists? They are not at all curious about such a phenomenon. They don't even recommend the funding of a small study so that some colleagues could get some work and funding. Why not? Do they have bigger fish to fry?

Some points to consider. Nothing is proven. We need more information about Project Lincoln and Air Defense.

Once the Air Defense structure is in place. Air Defense would have an interest in minimizing UFO accounts. UFOs become "politically incorrect." "If it flies, it dies," is meaningless if you admit that you have things running around that you can't explain. The public loses confidence in the Air Defense and the military in general.

Best regards,

SPACE PIONEERS RECALL FIRST U.S. SATELLITE LAUNCH UPON 40TH ANNIVERSARY

Forty years ago this week, a team of scientists and engineers successfully launched Explorer 1, the first U.S. satellite to orbit the Earth. This historic accomplishment marked the nation's debut in the Cold War-era space race and set the stage for the establishment of the civilian space agency that would become NASA.

NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL), Pasadena, CA, was still operated as a research laboratory for the U.S. Army when it was selected in November 1957 to develop the first U.S. satellite, including its science package, its communications system, and the high-speed upper stages for the Army's Redstone rocket that would guide the tiny, 20-pound Explorer 1 into the great unknown. JPL and the Army completed the assignment and successfully launched the satellite in less than three months. JPL and the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, based in Huntsville, AL, joined in firing the satellite toward space from the missile test center at Cape Canaveral, FL, on Jan. 31, 1958.

The scientific experiment onboard, a cosmic ray detector built by Dr. James Van Allen of the University of Iowa, soon returned one of the most important findings of the space program: the discovery of what are now known as the Van Allen Radiation Belts around the Earth. Explorer 1 went on to operate for three months.

Following the Soviet Union's launch of Sputnik on Oct. 4, 1957, "there was a lot of pressure to get a satellite in orbit as quickly as possible," said Dr. William Pickering, then JPL's director and the orchestrator of the Explorer 1 effort at JPL.

The intensive effort was accomplished by a team of experts from U.S. academia and the military, along with top World War II German rocket scientists such as

Dr. Wernher von Braun, who emigrated to the United States in the post-war years to help lead the development of American rocket capabilities. A globally linked telecommunications system developed by JPL tracked Explorer 1 and received its scientific data as it circled Earth. Amateur radio operators around the world were invited to listen in on Explorer 1's radio communications, including one key amateur radio shack operated largely by JPL ham radio operators at the Los Angeles County Sheriff's substation in Temple City, near JPL.

The most difficult technical challenge, said Pickering, "was getting the three rocket stages to work consistently, to get it all to go in the right direction, with no guidance system." Considering the telecommunications and computing capability of the Explorer 1 era versus that available for last summer's Mars Pathfinder mission, Pickering said, "it's astonishing to think what has happened over 40 years."

Van Allen, still an active planetary and space physics researcher, recalled that, the morning after the historic Explorer 1 launch, "a big press conference had been called at the Great Hall of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, DC, and although it was 1:30 in the morning, there was still a huge crowd of reporters waiting around."

Donna Shirley, Mars Exploration program manager at JPL, was in high school when the news hit that Explorer 1 had been launched. "It was a terrific emotional moment," she recalled. "It seemed like a scary thing that the Soviet Union was so powerful that they could launch Sputnik. When Explorer went up, it was, 'Rah, rah, our team!'" she said. "It seemed to be framed in 'us versus them' rather than focused on the real technical and scientific achievement. But the dawn of the Space Age affected my life a lot."

"I don't think the 'right stuff' to work in the space program has really changed all that much" since the days of Explorer 1, said Shirley. "You don't have cigar-smoking guys with slide rules anymore, but I think the 'right stuff' is still the same: dedication and competence."

In late 1958, JPL was reassigned from the U.S. Army to NASA when the civilian space agency was created, and has helped lead the world's exploration of space with robotic spacecraft since then. Operated as a division of the California Institute of Technology, JPL has sent spacecraft to all of the known planets except Pluto, and this year will launch major astronomy and planetary exploration missions to comets, asteroids and Mars, along with many Earth-observing efforts.

As the size of NASA's space missions takes advantage of miniaturized electronics to shrink to fit the new "faster, better, cheaper" mold, some complete space science instrument packages are about the size of that on tiny Explorer 1, Shirley said.

"Miniaturization is allowing us to shrink down the brains of our spacecraft but still allow us to do more with them than we used to. The challenge now is to shrink the rest of the spacecraft down."

Considering the future of space science, Van Allen observed that "there is no shortage of great ideas on what we'd like to do. 'Faster, better, cheaper' is NASA's mantra, and the recent successful launch of the Lunar Prospector spacecraft is the best example of that. But the Hubble Space Telescope is a good example of big projects that will continue to be conducted. I think we have a very bright future in space science in all areas. There is good public support," he said. "There is virtually no limit to what can be investigated in interplanetary science and astronomy."

Harry Webb?

Subject: Harry Webb?

Dear Friends,

After my search about the UFO/Nazi myth I came across with an unreferenced quotation of a given Harry Webb, seemingly a US ufologist, who claimed in 1950 the "flying saucers" were one of the wonder weapons developed by Nazi scientists escaped at the end of the war to underground bases in Artarctica and in the middle of the Gran Chaco jungle (I don't know where it is, sorry!). A few years later both scientists and SS troops guarding the bases flew to the hidden face of the Moon, in permanent bases (!!!!).

Do anyone know anything about such a Harry Webb ? Never heard about his claims and the original source(s) reporting them ? Do you know any other story of such a kind from the same period ?

Please get in touch with me directly to my e-mail address:

Hi everyone,

Some time ago and I am pretty sure it was on this list there was a post about NASA having trouble getting R&D funding for an engine for their proposed space plane.

As I recall it, the Air Force said something like "No problem, you can use ours." This blew everybody at NASA away because it revealed that the Air Force already had such an engine, and maybe even such a plane.

I can't find that exchange now, and I wonder if anyone here recalls it or saved it.

Thanks in advance.

Larry,

I would expect night sightings to outnumber day sightings by a large margin. First, because UFOs are easier to see at night, and secondly because misidentifications would be much more common at night.

There is an account and a photo (which is rather hard to interpret) in Peter Brookesmith's "UFO: The Complete Sightings" from Barnes and Noble.

I realize your cases are those most likely to be unexplained,
i.e. you have not put ALL sightings into your data base.
HOWEVER, I would still like to see this with a selection included, such as the upper half of the strangeness/credibility index. Also, you might see if the sightings fall off in the latter half of the night, as you define it (as suggested by Vallee years ago).

REASONS FOR MORE NIGHT SIGHTINGS:

- 1) people aren't as likely to look up in the day as at night
- 2) at night, these sightings are mostly night lights; moving lights against a dark background catch the attention more easily than distant objects moving through the bright sky background
- 3) True UFOS (TRUFOS) fly around mostly at night
- 4) (for the skeptics) people are more likely to make observational errors at night
- 5) reasons I haven't thought of

I guess your point here is that it shoudl have bearn (i.e., it was) obvious to the AF that UFOs played a role in Air Defense, even if UFOs turned out to be natural electric phenomena, so the Robertson Panel should have recommended an effort to understand these phenomena at least from the scientific point of view if not from the pont of view of needing to be able to identify things immediately to separate out the "natural phenomena" from th "bad boys" coming over the horizon from the north.

I, too, think that th Robertson Panel people did not get the best evidence or the best presentation to look at. I think the presenters took an apologetic attitude for seeming to seriously consider the sightings which obviously could not be natural phenomena (observations and film/photos of structured objects). However, your suggestion that there was a hidden agenda pressuring the Panel to conclude there was nothing to these sightings is a good one. However, as evidence of just poor preparation on th aprt of the Blue book staff I am reminded of Ruppelts recitation of the Newhouse film case as presented to the Robertson panel. They showed the film several times and the Navy presented the results of its 1,000 hours of work on it.... and then the panel said "probably birds." HOverver, Ruppelt points out that the panel was not told Newhouse's verbal testimony. The reason that the panel was not told Newhouse's testimony is that Ruppelt didn't know what that was ! Ruppelt says several years later he met Newhouse and Newhouse described his wife calling his attention to a group of circular objects flying through the sky. He immediately stopped the car but it took several minutes for him to get his camera going and by that time the objects were farther away (a repeat of the Great Falls, Montana/Marianna film situation). Ruppelt asked "How did you know they were round?" Newhouse answered "I saw them ...they were a lot closer," or words to that effect. Then Ruppelt points out in his book that this information was not known to Blue Book/Ruppelt at the time of the Newhouse investigation/ analysis because Ruppelt had not asked the local field investigator to ask Newhouse about his visual sighting.. Ruppelt justified this by saying..."why ask what something looks like when you've got a movie of it.." or words to that effect.

One can only speculate what the Robertson Panel would have done with the film had Dewey Fournet (the presenter?) or Ruppelt been able to recite the testimony of Newhouse and his wife BEFORE showing the film (better yet, get Newhouse there; he was, after all, an official Navy photographer).

I suspect the truth is a combination of the above: there WAS an agenda to minimize UFO sightings, but also there were slip-ups in presenting the evidence to the scientists.

On another matter, regarding the Air defense Command and radar: I have been trying to locate records related to the radar inspired national alert on December 6, 1950 at about 10:30 AM when radar picked up a number of objects approaching the northeastern United States. I have a chapter on this in my book THE UFO-FBI CONNECTION because two days later, according to a message found in the FBI file, the counter-intelligence corps was put on immediate high alert for any information related to flying saucers (Dec. 8). There appear to be NO RECORDS OF THIS EVENT in the files of the Secretary of Defense, other than one document which provides a few details that could only have come from other documents .

Furthermore, it is clear that the SECDEF office was involved in this event which resulted in planes being scrambled AND THE PRESIDENT AND SECRETARY OF STATE BEING ALERTED!.

Could this be a real radar detection of a group of UFOs that was effectively covered up by the defense department?

I must have missed the post - thanks.

However, you'll note I mentioned that this sort of research might be being done by the government but was not being done by private researchers, which was my focus in the paragraph you reference.

Since we don't know what the frequencies are that might be used by such a weapon, it is hard to interpret the observable side effects of such a weapon. If in normal frequency ranges, however, we might expect extensive and long-range interference with the frequency in question, due to the proclivity of radio waves to travel long distances in the atmosphere, at least within line of sight.

However, it seems to me that a) most static from UFO events is localized to within a few hundred feet of the object. b) the effects associated with EM include causing batteries to boil, component burn out, etc, but these only happen within extremely close range, c) RF weapons might be expected to have effects similar to microwave, including induced core heating, etc.

The brief mentions of HPRF in your referenced document mention effective ranges on the order of tens of kilometers, which seems to be in conflict with most UFO EM cases. Also, at least one case indicates that a diesel generator was interfered with in such a way as to imply that the induction of current in generator windings or other wiring was occurring, which is not an obvious side effect (to me, anyway) of HPRF.

The presence of heat in some cases may well be a signature of HPRF, but there are a myriad of others where no such effect occurs.

It is also not clear how to account for the well-known restarting of auto engines in the presence of HPRF. The AF document is unclear as to the persistence of HPRF effects, but there is some implication that the effects are permanent, and not just present during HPRF focus.

However, there is no question that close proximity to RF seems to be able to cause problems with power. Here's one example:

"A cellular provider in the Midwest encountered a hair-pulling problem. From time to time, for no apparent reason a key cell site would go off-line. Each time it was a hard crash requiring a maintenance visit and at least an hour of downtime. The troublesome crashes continued frequently and jeopardized the customer's overall system quality perception. After investigating possible causes it was discovered that a 2-way radio repair shop was located in the same business complex. A correlation was established between tests on 47MHz State Forestry Department radios and the cellular system crashes. RF signals from those radios were strong enough to bring the cellular system to its knees when they overloaded the DC power system controllers. The solution was to install an RF shielding system around the cellular equipment room =97 completely eliminating the problem."

<http://www.lbagroup.com/associates/emi.htm>

What's interesting here is the effect of the powerful 47MHz signal on DC power system controllers.

There is more on symptoms of RF EMI in cellular systems which may be of interest Unusual test equipment malfunctions.

Intermittent power supply regulator problems.
Transient, undesirable audio, digital or video noise superimposed on signals.
High rate of unexplainable signal outages.
Poor or unreliable coverage from certain sites.

<http://www.lbagroup.com/associates/lbatn109.htm>

Also

"Sites located near AM broadcast stations that have effective radiated powers up to 250,000W may be subjected to intense electrical and magnetic fields, which couple into equipment through coaxial cables, telco lines, and grounding and power lines. Fundamental and harmonic frequencies of AM stations and their modulation components overlay common audio, data, T-carrier and clock spectra. The potential for system disturbance is enormous. Towers commonly associated with wireless sites actually =93concentrate=94 the AM broadcast signal to local values far in excess of free-space predictions."

While these effects may be of interest, again, the implication is that such effects are within a wide range and require significant power. We do have UFO visible light emission levels in the MW power range, so output similar to that cited above is certainly no problem. More information is needed, however on side effects, and especially biological effects of such radiation, so that we can look for similar effects in our EM cases.

However, it is also clear that a UFO releasing a quarter of a million watts of radio energy into the atmosphere would be as observable and trackable as a nova. There is no real evidence of this.

FRIENDS & COLLEAGUES --

As many of you know, my wife Mary's boss, Cong. Steve Schiff, has been fighting skin cancer for more than a year. He has just decided he will be physically unable to run for re-election. This was made public earlier today. He is NOT resigning and will remain in office until whoever's elected to replace him is sworn in next January. Needless to say, life will be "interesting" around here for the next 12 months.

Does General Relativity specifically forbid negative curvature of space? I really should bone up on GR, it's been like ten years.

Actually I recall seeing about six months ago, on CNN, film where a mouse was levitated using a strong magnetic field (although I think there was more to it than that), and evidently they've figured out how to do that to anything, not just ferromagnetic things. The mouse seemed fine, although quite confused.

Although as far as trucks go, I can levitate a truck myself, given a good junkyard magnet and appropriate control hardware. ;)

True; assuming you just want to resist G, you'd be talking about an awful lot of ions at extremely high velocity.

If you can create localized curvature in space you can probably handle that problem as well.

I'm not familiar with SRI ... can you give me a little bit more information on this? In particular keep in mind that faraday cages have to be constructed very carefully if you want to block out everything.

I'm also assuming we're talking about experiments in which the sender does not in any way select the information to be sent.

I don't accept the validity of anything beyond a "shadow" of a doubt. But I will say that although some of the initial Psi experiments had some huge statistical problems, more recent ones do seem to show the phenomenon is valid.

That's nothing new; most scientists of a particular era think their science is complete.

Greetings all -

For a column I'm writing, I took a look at the UPN web site. They are going to rebroadcast their delightful special on February 24.

From the press release, dated December 31, they make no claim that this is entertainment, but leave the impression this is an authentic abduction report.

They do "weasel" word it reporting, "a one hour special around an alleged videotaped account... The recently acquired videotape is the sole testament to the fate of the McPherson family... During the special, several people who claim to have had similar experiences relate their ordeals, plus experts on aliens discuss the authenticity of the videotape."

As we now know, no experts discussed the authenticity of the tape, just the reality of the abduction phenomenon. Their who promotion is misleading. This certainly isn't like Star Trek or the X-Files because no one is hinting that those programs are real.

Exactly ... EM pulse will stop a car engine unless it's specifically shielded (especially nowadays where there's so much computer control). And I saw on a TV show about unconventional weapons that the cops were considering using EMP, but it had too much "collateral damage", i.e., it tended to stop the other nearby vehicles as well. But I figure it's only a matter of time before they get better directional output (the military probably already has that, as your post suggests).

I wonder how long it'll be before drug-runners start buying large quantities of mu-metal. ;)

BUSINESS

CRASH CASE
MAYBE, UM, AN ALIEN LANDING WOULD DO IT
BY DANIEL KADLEC

What could cause a stock market crash? it's an intriguing question with no real answer, other than some kind of surprise. My bet is that it would take a whopper. The bull market is so strong that to send the Dow careening would take something truly out of this world. Here's how it might unfold one day:

8:30 a.m. E.T.: The government reports record low unemployment. On CNBC economist Stephen Roach at Morgan Stanley declares that everyone who wants a job has one. He expects an inflationary spiral in wages.

9:30 a.m.: The market opens; inflation-wary traders send the Dow plunging 160 points as interest rates soar.

10:51 a.m.: Individual investors begin buying the hardest-hit stocks, and the market stabilizes; Coca-Cola schedules a press conference for 1 p.m.

11:01 a.m.: Ed Yardeni at Deutsche Morgan Grenfell and other economists hit the wires saying that rising wages will not lead to inflation in this new era. Institutions, recalling that folks like Roach have been yelling "fire!" for more than a year, start buying. The Dow recovers.

11:37 a.m.: A radio station near Sedona, Ariz., reports a 20-mile UFO--unconfirmed, as usual; the Dow is rallying, as usual.

12:49 p.m.: President Clinton refuses to sign a tax-reform bill, and Newt Gingrich proclaims the capital-gains tax-rate cut dead, raising the specter of government gridlock. The Dow surges 200 points because, well, gridlock has been very profitable in the '90s, and now there's no incentive to sell so, heck, buy!

12:56 p.m.: Saddam Hussein offers proof that he has nukes, and says, by the way, he'd really like to rule Kuwait. Oil prices soar. No one thinks about inflation; it's dead. The Dow jumps to a 265-point gain, led by Chevron and Exxon.

1 p.m.: Coke discloses that a pair of garage scientists has duplicated its famous syrup and is selling the formula worldwide. Warren Buffett, proclaiming that the company is without intrinsic value, dumps his stake. Coke shares rise anyway as the company, one of the biggest in the major-stock indexes, benefits from the mindless buying of stock-index funds. The Dow is up 400 points.

1:15 p.m.: Arizona state police confirm the presence of a UFO. It has landed, and aliens are trying to communicate. The rally pauses briefly.

1:23 p.m.: cnn airs the first photos. A gauntlet of exterior ray guns is visible, and the UFO is presumed hostile. The Dow is up 500, led by defense contractors, security and firearms companies, and any that bottle or can food and drink.

2:17 p.m.: The aliens are now speaking fluent English. They aren't hostile after all. They're here to cut a deal: if we leave their ancient burial grounds on Mars alone, they'll give us technology that is 15 centuries ahead of our time. It will enable us to eliminate world illness and suffering instantly and to make society so productive that everyone will enjoy peace and prosperity. On Wall Street the bottom falls out. The Pentium chip might as well be a buggy whip; Windows 98 a manual typewriter. As sky-high tech stocks become worthless, everything follows, and from the elite on Wall Street to the masses in mutual funds, they begin to think maybe, just maybe, they ought not take the deal.

Well obviously ... it's speculation to say "it was a hoax", and equally speculation to say "it was real". All we know for sure is that the piece exists.

A question -- do we know for sure that this was shot on film and not video? If not, this makes a big difference in budget.

Yes, but there were plenty of skeptics (not to mention medical examiners) who pounced on flaws in the Santilli film as well. So again it comes down to opinion.

> I believe there are more important issues to discuss, and until Quite right. If I had the resources to spend on this WOMBAT I'd throw some at the local film school here and see what comes out of it, but I don't. So until then I think we can agree that there's much better evidence out there to rely on.

I am, however, worried that in 20 years we'll be totally unable to rely upon video, just as we are now unable to rely upon still photos.

Hi Larry Hi all

One could venture that the reason for this that most people are to "involved" in their normal everyday lives during the day to notice anything unusual going on around them, thus at night they have less to distract them so they are more likely to notice other more extraneous things.

This hypothesis could be bourne out in part by:

- 1) some night-time sightings were barely visible "lights".
- 2) some of the daylight sightings were the more "unusual" ufo's.

But of course we would need more data on this and a more intensive study on it.

Barry Greenwood's CAUS Resignation Statement

From: jan@cyberzone.net (Jan Aldrich)
Date: Fri, 30 Jan 1998 16:35:13 -0800
Fwd Date: Fri, 30 Jan 1998 21:25:45 -0500
Subject: Barry Greenwood's CAUS Resignation Statement

JUST CAUSE

Address: Box 176
Stoneham, MA 02180

Editor: Barry Greenwood

CITIZENS AGAINST UFO SECRECY

January 25, 1998

This will be my last statement for CAUS, Citizens Against UFO Secrecy. Effective January 18, 1998, I have resigned as editor of its newsletter Just Cause.

In 1984, after CAUS was essentially a defunct organization, Larry Fawcett and I thought it would be a good idea to have a vehicle to publish updates following the publication of "Clear Intent," now called "The UFO Cover Up." We asked Peter Gersten, who had previously taken out papers incorporating an earlier version of CAUS with himself as director, if it was all right to revive CAUS and its newsletter, Just Cause, since no one was doing anything with the organization. CAUS had become a recognizable name after several national news stories a few years before, and Fawcett and I were working on the kind of research that CAUS had represented.

Gersten gave permission and we began a new version of Just Cause in September 1984, with Fawcett as publisher and Greenwood as editor. On occasion we would publish along with Just Cause a CAUS Washington Report by Larry Bryant, giving his views on government UFO matters. It was essentially an independent publication by a previous editor of Just Cause. There was no editor crossover influence between the two publications. CWR stopped around 1992 after about a dozen issues.

From 1984 to date, a period of more than 13 years, all CAUS policy decisions and opinions were basically my constructions since Director Gersten had left the organization to do other things. Several years ago Larry Fawcett retired to Florida, leaving me with the entire operation, i.e., the newsletter and a group of supporters/subscribers/members around the world.

In early January 1998, I was informed by Project 1947 head, Jan Aldrich, that a site on the Internet contained a rambling open letter on UFOs for a group called CSETI, run by Steven Greer. The statement concluded with a list of contact organizations for the letter, CAUS was one of the listed with my address but with a phone number I did not recognize. I never saw this letter, did not endorse its contents or CSETI, and did not authorize any use of the CAUS name and address. The phone number, I discovered later, belonged to Robert Bletchman of Connecticut, public relations head of the Mutual UFO Network. That a MUFON official is listing himself as a CAUS contact is beyond me since he was neither a CAUS representative or on my mailing list. Why is MUFON interfering in my business anyway?

I asked Aldrich to act as intermediary on the net for me as I am not on-line. I insisted that the operator of the web site with the CSETI letter, Steven Bassett of Washington, D.C., remove CAUS from the list of contacts for the letter immediately.

On January 18th, I was advised by Aldrich of an E-mail message from Peter Gersten to him announcing that Gersten was reasserting his control of CAUS retroactive to January 1 to "make CAUS an effective and viable activist organization dedicated to ending all secrecy about extraterrestrial contact..." He added that, "I hope to pick up where Barry left off," and that he (Gersten) be consulted prior to making any statements on behalf of CAUS.

I was thunderstruck that after 13 years of setting policy for CAUS to protect its reputation as a careful, credible outlet for research on the federal government's interest in aerial phenomena (apparently something few of its other "officials" cared about as they never showed up!), my position was being summarily usurped in the flash of a keystroke. I had left off nothing, and suddenly any CAUS statements had to be cleared through Gersten, someone who hadn't overseen the operation or issued any policy directives for over a decade!

After having asked Steven Bassett, through Aldrich, to remove the CAUS info from the CSETI letter, I discovered that the new director Gersten had consulted with Bassett and had accepted him as a CAUS consultant, again without my knowledge, thoroughly undermining my position through a blind sided strike.

It became quickly clear that staying with CAUS was untenable,...unacceptable. The "new" CAUS officials, who were popping up like prairie dog heads in the desert, were beginning to forge unpleasant connections, CSETI/Greer for one. On Gersten's on-line chat room, one of his recent workshops is titled, "Healing Your Inner Alien." This is precisely the kind of thing that I had spent much of my publishing time against: the dumbing-down of UFO research, getting off onto silly tangents. Pardon me for offending any personal beliefs but this is not science, it is not even common sense, not even close.

With the advent of a collection of new CAUS loose cannons, I asked Jan Aldrich to E-mail my immediate resignation to Gersten. For me the rapid escalation of double-dealing and duplicity was over. Upon acknowledging my resignation, Gersten immediately announced the debut of Just Cause as his own on-line publication, wasting no time completing the assault.

One point needs to be made clear. Peter Gersten was director of CAUS when we took over the newsletter in 1984. He did not resign the position, he abandoned it, though, legally he still held the title. In essence, Fawcett and I were forced to be the de facto directors in that no one else was issuing reports or statements in that capacity. I was in no position to change Gersten's status without tearing down the organization and titles and renaming everything. At the time there was no need. He has the right to take that title again. I don't have to accept the "coup d'etat" method in which it was done, or the new alliances which I feel will ultimately destroy CAUS' credibility.

Since this is my last CAUS publication, from here on anything attributed to CAUS is not my responsibility. I have no connection to it.

I will replace Just Cause with a new publication called "UFO Historical Review." If any of my existing subscribers want to continue with CAUS, I will refund their remaining issues and they can find CAUS on-line somewhere. If any want to stay, do nothing. The next mailing will contain UHR, which will be similar in format to Just Cause. Available from Box 176, Stoneham, MA 02180. Quarterly at $15 per years, and $20 foreign. Payable on renewal to me, not UHR, for the present. I want to thank Larry Fawcett and Robert Todd for their contributions during the CAUS era, and more recently Jan Aldrich and Edward Stewart of Project 1947 for alerting me to the back room maneuvers.

Reactions to Barry Greenwood's Resignation

Subject: Reactions to Barry Greenwood's Resignation

Below are a few reactions to Barry Greenwood's resignation from CAUS

Barry Greenwood has provided a cautious and conservative check on the excesses in the UFO field. In this era of wild unfounded claims his service was very important to serious UFO research.
His new publication will be a welcome addition to the field.

---Richard Hall

I regret the need for Barry Greenwood to resign from CAUS but having known Barry by his efforts over the last 10 years
I support him 100%.

Hopefully some good will come from it all and I would like to receive his new newsletter.

Perhaps it could cover both historical UFO reports (which would naturally include some Project-1947 material) as well as any future release of material under FOIA which I hope both Barry and yourself will continue.

Please assure Barry of my continued support for the future

Regards

++++

For as long as I've known of CAUS, Barry was always the "human face" of the group. Whenever I wrote to CAUS, Barry was the one to reply. When I needed information from CAUS, Barry was the one who sent it to me. When _JUST CAUS_ subs had to be renewed, they went to Barry.

Barry wrote, co-ordinated, and edited the information obtained from CAUS and virtually single-handedly kept the organization afloat.

Barry _was_ CAUS, and whatever the future may bring, I will always associate the spirit, dedication and unfailing generosity of Barry with the man who _was_ CAUS for so long, and who will no doubt imbue any future projects with those same qualities.

Barry, your peers and your admirers wish you all the best.

Kindest regards,
John Stepkowski,
Melbourne, Australia.

As for myself, I wholeheartedly support Barry.... Please feel free to quote me about that subject.

I've been accustomed to think of CAUS as of Barry, in the last 15 years or so. He's been a rare voice of sanity and prudence in as delicate a place as the center of official documents releases, where the much too numerous and vociferous paranoids might well have taken over.

What a pity he's leaving now!

My first reaction was that he should not have surrendered, but he was there, I was not (and I did the same myself in 1985, when I had to take the painful decision to leave a CUN I had worked for and believed in for years, but which had gone to unacceptable positions).

Edoard Russo, CISU
Torino, Italy

Several years ago, for a reason I don't remember, French UFO researcher Yves Bosson sent me copies of several articles that had appeared in Just Cause. For me, at that time, Just Cause was the bulletin of a group championing the "UFO community vs the government" battle on UFOs. I had read Greenwood and Fawcett's book and didn't share some of their conclusions and I also remembered the first years of CAUS with Gersten's fights against government agencies. The CAUS I knew was another group, the group that started before Greenwood became editor of Just Cause.

I was very surprised when I read the articles from Just Cause sent to me by Bosson. No wild claims. Only carefully checked facts. I asked Bosson to send me all his copies of the newsletter and sent $20 to Barry Greenwood to subscribe. I discovered that the European ufology was not the center of the world and that even in the country of coverups, Roswell fans, MJ-12 and Stan Friedman, there was a voice for high quality information on government involvement on UFOs.

When the GAO investigation and the Air Force investigation on Roswell started I called Greenwood several times "to know the truth" about what was happening. I discovered a man who is in fact very strange when compared to many other UFO researchers: Greenwood has no extraordinary revelations to make, no rumors to spread on other researchers, it's possible to disagree with him without losing him as a friend (and of course without being accused of being a CIA agent or a debunker). Greenwood is something like a UFO experience: as long as you haven't talk to him, you cannot imagine the person he is or believe that he exists: the tone of his voice, the way he replies to questions or criticism etc. In a community where insults, gossips and rumors replace scientific discussions, Greenwood is a real anomaly.

One last anecdote: some time ago, the French cultural TV channel Arte (French equivalent to PBS) asked me who to invite to speak about the US situation re UFOs. Of course I mentioned Greenwood's name and told them something similar to what is written above. Unfortunately I forgot that Greenwood lacks something, the something that stops TV producers when they decide who they should or should not invite. Greenwood doesn't have a PhD in nuclear physics, in astronomy, or he is not a former MJ-12 member, never worked at Area 51 on crashed saucers or this kind of thing. As a result, Arte didn't invite him and instead, they invited Stanton Friedman, who of course has all the necessary credentials to speak about UFOs!! And the French public learned all those terrifying secrets that the US government is hiding. We can easily understand that a serious TV channel like Arte cannot compromise itself in inviting someone who is not a scientist and therefore who could go off the rail during the interview!

What can I add? Nothing except that I sincerely wish for all of us that Barry will continue to publish his newsletter (he told me the other day that he will) and that thanks to him and to a few other sane people in this field, we'll be able to maintain something that really looks like UFO research. It's too bad that people who consider ufology as just a pseudo-science full of cranks don't know that people like Greenwood exist.

Sorry for my Frenghish. I hope you'll understand from what I say above that Barry Greenwood is one of the few people in this field that I really appreciate. But contrary to what I often read or hear, I don't think that the UFO community is in such a bad situation because even if there are more and more nuts, there are also more and more serious investigators who follow the "Greenwood policy". The only thing that is really happening is that there is a divide that is getting greater each day between the sane UFO researchers/historians and the true believers who accepts every wild UFO claims.

Pierre Lagrange

Count on me. You may definitely quote me. Joining Pierre, I support Barry's statement too.

Useless to add more.

Sincerely,

Maurizio Verga, CISU

Yes, I support him willingly.

Jakes,

Unless there's a specific problem with making a FOIA request from South Africa, it's otherwise not necessary to be a US citizen, or resident.

In recent times, Rob Irving and myself have received responses to requests from the UK.

Incidentally, last time I looked, ParaScope's 'FOIA help center' was offering some useful assistance at URL:

<http://www.parascope.com/foia.html>

The US FOIA does seem to be a genuine effort to provide a more open government, even though the good people there might sometimes give the impression they are oppressed. <g>

Rep. Steve Schiff Won't Run Again

.c The Associated Press

By REBECCA ROLWING

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - Rep. Steve Schiff said Friday he won't seek re-election in the fall because of his battle with skin cancer.

The five-term Republican, diagnosed a year ago, has been absent from Congress since April.

``Because I have not yet recovered from my illness as anticipated, I must regretfully announce that I will not be seeking re-election in 1998,'' he said.

Schiff, 50, is scheduled for a third round of chemotherapy next week to treat squamous-cell skin cancer, which spread from his ear to his face.

Squamous cell is considered one of the more treatable forms of cancer, but the congressman said he has a particularly aggressive case.

As one of two Republicans on the ethics subcommittee that investigated Newt Gingrich last year, Schiff signed a letter to fellow Republicans declaring they knew of no reason why he should not continue as House speaker.

The letter was instrumental in helping the GOP leadership build support for Gingrich's re-election.

In 1993, Schiff asked the General Accounting Office for information about the so-called UFO crash in Roswell in 1947, stirring up a new round of investigations of extraterrestrial visits.

Schiff was first elected to the House in 1988, succeeding Manuel Lujan Jr., who was appointed interior secretary under President Bush. Before that, Schiff was district attorney in Bernalillo County.

Index of Declassified Studies in Intelligence Articles

The Studies in Intelligence articles and book reviews cited in these indexes were declassified and are now available for review and reproduction at the National Archives in College Park, Maryland. The Center for the Study of Intelligence continues to work on declassifying other once highly sensitive intelligence literature. Our review is done in consultation with appropriate components of the Intelligence Community.

Readers of many of the declassified articles will discover that some excisions have been made to protect important intelligence sources and methods. But the redactions do not reduce the substantive value of this large and diverse collection. In almost all instances, the judgments, and full meaning of the articles and book reviews have been undiminished.

HOW TO ACCESS DECLASSIFIED ARTICLES FROM STUDIES IN INTELLIGENCE

Declassified articles from Studies in Intelligence are available to researchers at the National Archives as part of the Records of the Central Intelligence Agency (Record Group 263).

If you chose to do your research in College Park, the records are available for consultation without charge in the research room. The National Archives Building is at 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park, Md. 20740-6001. A shuttle bus runs between the National Archives at College Park and the National Archives Building on Pennsylvania Avenue at 8th Street, NW, Washington, DC on the hour from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. Researchers may use the bus on a space available basis. The R3 Metrobus, serving Greenbelt, Prince George's Plaza, and Ft. Totten Metrorail green line stations, stops at the College Park facility.

On a researcher's first visit to the National Archives at College Park a consultant archivist provides an orientation to the building and records and conducts the registration procedure.

Research hours at the National Archives are (except legal holidays) 8:45 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday and Wednesday; 8:45 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday; and 8:45 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. on Saturday.

Thanks for the mention, Mark.

There is a longer & more detailed account & evaluation in Chapter One of my "UFO: The Government Files" (B&N 1996), which also sets the LA "Battle" in the context of ufological history. Of course it has been pointed out that the paper of that book is worrisomely thicker than t'other, in the interests of giving beguiling elegance to shameless disinformation, so don't believe everything you read. (Especially, as I point out, notions of things whizzing around at 18,500 mph.)

Gary Alevy mentioned that only Gen. Marshall's letter to FDR on this debacle has been declassified. Is that still true, does anyone know? Has anyone actually attempted lately to get more info on this (e.g. papers from the AAA regiment) via FOIA?

First, may I respectfully suggest that increasing witness and/or investigator sophistication or caution could account for some of this shift. It's just easier to judge (as mundane) an apparent daylight anomaly than one seen in the dark.

Second, it's noteworthy that the "fringe" sightings outweigh the day and night ones combined in most decades from the Fifties. Twilight brings even greater ambiguity in perception? (I have seen Sirius dance all over the place when near the horizon at dusk.)

Third, it would be interesting to see a year-by-year breakdown of the Sixties to see if the shift took place consistently over the decade. After that, the pattern seems pretty set.

All the above is predicated on the notion that these really are UFOs, i.e. judged "unexplained" after investigation, and not just sightings or reports, i.e. claims, of UFOs. If they're the latter or a combination of both, I for one would be inclined to be much more cynical about the causes.

best wishes

For more information about the project at SRI, and the entire history of the military remote viewing program, I'd suggest you read Jim Schnabel's book, "Remote Viewers." It's in paperback at major booksellers. The faraday cages were already in place at Los Alamos and at SRI's physics lab, although they were constructed for other purposes... you'll have to read the details to satisfy your quest for detailed knowledge on this. But these weren't just hastily constructed by the psi researchers.

Also you may want to visit the extraordinary website:

<http://www.pardigm-sys.com/firedocs>

This site has links to the major research labs and a HUGE library of information about psi testing. There is also a mailing list about remote viewing which is attended by Russell Targ (formerly of SRI) as well as many of the ex-military remote viewers. You will get a very educated picture of this field...far more accurate than the kind of drama featured on Art Bell, for example.

Jeff Rense has also interviewed many of the psi researchers:
Spottiswoode, Radin, and May, as well as some of the military viewers. You can listen to those shows on Audionet by hopping a link from his site:

<http://www.sightings.com>

The existence of psi has been proven, but not explained. "Psi" in this case referring to perceptions aside from the normal five, perceptions transcending time and space considerations. What that really means is still up for grabs. But there are reproducible effects that are regularly duplicated in labs around the world. Even CSICOP has been unable to find fault with the methodology. (Not that they would admit that there's any VALIDITY.)

Filer's Files #4-1998=A0 MUFON Skywatch Investigations
From George A. Filer:=A0 MUFON Eastern Director,
Jan. 29, 1998=A0 Majorstar@aol.com=A0 (609) 654-0020

Many UFOs are actually rather mundane objects such as satellites, air ships and Black aircraft. Still 5 to 10% of UFOs remain unexplained.

FLORIDA

MUFON Investigator trainee Nancy Dunning writes: "I am a member of MUFON and= I am trying to learn to be an investigator. I am sending you a report that I wrote of a sighting that a friend of mine had. This person does not want her name revealed so I am referring to her just as the witness. The witness was staying with her son on Venice Beach. The house is not directly on the= beach,
there are trees in between. The object was first sighted at approximately 11:15 or 11:30p.m. on Friday, January 23, 1998. There is a small airport nearby and at first the witness thought that an airplane was crashing. She quickly changed her mind when after falling straight down the object stopped just above treetop level and hovered. She described the object as a bright= red ball of flames. As it came down out of the sky it left a flame trail behind it. Once it started to hover this trail disappeared. As the object hovered=
it also appeared to get wider. It changed to an elliptical shape. It hovered= for approximately one minute and then sped off to the SSW. The object hovered= over the Gulf of Mexico. The witness went into the house to go to bed. She awoke about 1 1/2 to 2 hours later. The cat wanted to go outside and she walked outside as well. She said that the object appeared again and did exactly the same thing it had the first time. The witness said that the sky conditions= at the time were very clear. She heard no noises while witnessing the object.=
The
only other person at the house did not witness the object. I have personally not been to the house where the sighting took place. I am planning to go= there within the next couple of weeks. If I find out anything else significant to the sighting I will e-mail you with the details." Thanks to Nancy Dunning

ZANESVILLE, OHIO

UFO investigator Jim Donohoe, publisher of the Equinox Newsletter, received= a call January 29, 1998 at 7:45 AM from a female resident of Bellville, Ohio= who reported a 'V' shaped object, which had a bright light at the front and= center of it.=A0 The rear of the object could not be seen clearly due to the= brightness of the main light.=A0 The witness also described a 'reddish glow' across a portion of the rear the would have been near the rear edge.=A0 The object hovered at a high altitude for 25 minutes.=A0 The sighting was reportedly= made at 7:07 a.m. in an area east of Zanesville, Ohio (Muskingum County).=A0 The witness then called a nearby resident, who had also been watching the object for a 'period of time,' using binoculars. Through the binoculars, she described many objects 'maneuvering' to the larger object, seemingly to= merge with it.=A0 A third witness, sister of the first reporter, was also= contacted and also observed the object.=A0 Its size was said to be at least one mile across the rear edge of the 'craft,' and said to be an estimated 6 or 7 thousand feet.=A0 This judgement was made from the estimated distance and altitude, by the 3 witnesses.=A0 The soundless object disappeared from sight= as clouds moved into the area, hiding it from view.=A0 The witness with= binoculars was the only one who reported 'other objects' attempting to merge with the 'craft'.=A0 Researcher Jim Donohoe will conduct additional witness= interviews and an on-site investigation of the report. COLORADO

On January 28, 1998=A0 Stephanie Sylvester's a writer for The Denver Post- reported that at noon yesterday several people saw a large fiery object trailed by a plume of smoke crash to the ground near in=A0 Breckenridge, Colorado.=A0 "It was a fairly large object that was on fire with smoke that= was spiraling off the back of it," said Blue River Marshal Steve Ford, who saw= it from his car near Blue River Road and Highway 9.=A0 "My first thought was= that it was a meteor." Fork watched the object plummet more than a thousand feet. He lost sight of it at tree level. "It was a vertical shot toward the= ground, and I'm sure it impacted the ground," Ford said. Leigh Pezzicara, a spokeswoman for the Breckenridge Ski Resort, said several guests reported seeing a flare in the area of Peaks 5 and 6. "However, we really can't= confirm what it was," she said. The Summit County sheriff's office received two= calls about the possible meteor. James Rickman, a spokesman at the Los Alamos National Laboratory, said the scientific term for an object like the one described by Breckenridge eyewitnesses is "daytime fireball."

On January=A0 27, 1998, Tim reports: "I'm getting a little escalation lately= of reports around Salida, Colorado and increased military activity. My 17 year old daughter Laray was sitting in the computer room at 9:00 PM, when she viewed a moon size ball of green light for a couple of seconds moving at= high speed and disappearing to the southwest. At the same time my wife's sister [Kathy Rauter] and her 4 kids were driving to our house and viewed it down= the road a half mile to the south of our home. They also reported the same description and said other people had to see it. No tail was observed by any of the witnesses. They were extremely excited and some were scared. I could tell by the reactions it was a major sighting. They said it did not appear= to be that far away. I just had got off the computer and was upstairs reading a book so I missed the action again." Jim Robert's called me last night and said he viewed a orange, salmon= colored globe from his house in the Cotapaxi area, 20 miles east of Salida on= January 23, 1998, at 9:00 PM sharp. Object was hovering, dimming and brightening to the west and he thought it might have been viewed in Salida. No feedback on anyone else seeing it except his wife down there. His description is very similar to the commercial pilot report that I just listened to on Art Bell from the Phoenix area last week. Seems like these things are everywhere. Jim also reported a triangular shaped object circling under the sun last week= with lights. He went in to get his camera and then couldn't pick it back up. This man has frequent sightings especially of orbs or globes at his house.=A0= Locals continue to come forward and relate sightings to me, especially older= ladies. Many I don't even document anymore as it seems so common place up here and takes too much of my personal time up.=A0 Thanks to Tim edwards@amigo.net= and Skywatch International Inc.=A0=A0

Tom King, the Arizona Skywatch Director reports: "Just a thought concerning last week's sightings in AZ. Exactly one week before last week's AZ=

sightings on Jan 14, (Jan=A0 7, 1998, 5:30 PM to around 3:00 AM), intense "UFO"= activity was=A0 reported in Huerfano County, in South Central Colorado.=A0 Right in=
the middle=A0 of the La Veta Military [low-level flight] Operations Area.=A0= Witnesses
near Farasita, and Gardner, CO, watched extensive aerial=A0 activity by= dozens of unknown objects, for hours, that did not appear=A0 to be conventional aircraft.=A0 Witnesses of this activity have been interviewed by= investigator
David Perkins.=A0 These craft sightings were described as large,=A0= "disco-ball"
appearing "motherships" which discharged small red=A0 lights/craft which appeared to criss-cross the Huerfano for many=A0 hours in a grid-type= pattern.
The following morning, (Thur Jan 8) two additional witnesses reported "20 to 30" fighter planes=A0 (coincidentally?) "criss-crossing the Huerfano".=A0=
This
conventional activity was described by the long-time residents as=A0 being highly unusual.=A0 (Remember, these folks see military flight=A0 activity= daily in the La Veta MOA).=A0 Later that same day,=A0 (January 8, 1998, at 5:20 PM.)= Two more=A0 witnesses, driving north on Highway 17 (25 miles west of the= Huerfano sightings), claim they watched a "150 foot [diameter] disc" at=A0 "between= 1500 to 2000 feet " in altitude, travel down the center of=A0 the SLV=A0 over the= Baca Ranch, 2 miles east of State Highway 17 mile=A0 marker 93. One of these witnesses (ex-military) estimated the=A0 disc's speed at between "500 and= 600 mph." I find it highly intriguing that last year's "AZ Mass Sighting" followed closely on the heels of an intense (little-publicized) wave=A0 of sightings in South Colorado. And what do you know?"

=A0 Last week's AZ=A0 sightings again appeared to follow intense activity= reported in South=A0 Colorado.=A0 (Let's not forget last spring's mysterious rogue=
A-10
flight from the AZ "mass" sighting area BACK to the Colorado sighting=A0= area)
Is it my imagination, or is there some sort of a synchronistic=A0 connection here? If (as some have suggested), "our" military is behind the AZ=A0= activity,
perhaps the fly-boyz w/ toyz are conducting dry-run sorties=A0 over the= sparsely populated South Colorado region to gauge the=A0 potential public's response before trotting out their toys over AZ=A0 for the inevitable big media= splash.
It appears to this=A0 investigator that someone is playing the unwitting= public in both=A0 regions like a fiddle. Thanks to Tom King and Skywatch= International.

Chris O'Brien reports, "Since 1994, Southern Colorado has had several= reports of 300-400 foo-sized=A0 triangle and rectangular craft flying at low= altitude in the middle of the La Veta Military (flight) Operations area.=A0 I assume a mundane explanation for a majority all sightings reported from this part of Colorado/New Mexico. Comment: I now assume that "our" military has= operational flight capabilities that could explain the AZ lights and other large craft reports, i.e., single-digit speeds, hovering capability, etc.=A0 There are= some
(in and out of government) that have a vested interest in promoting the "alien" visitation theory to explain away most large craft sightings, including March's AZ mini sighting wave.=A0 The wheat from the chaff= scenario gets even more complicated with every increase in operational/technological capability of "our" military.=A0 As diligent, objective investigators, we= should be able to explain over 90% of ALL reported sightings." Thanks to= Christopher
O'Brien, tmv@amigo.net.

Victor J. Kean reports that Flying Triangles (FT) continued visiting three nuclear power stations (NPS) in Southeastern England during the month of NOVEMBER 1997. There were a total of 137 Flying Triangle sightings over the three nuclear power stations. This is an increase of five over October when 132 sightings were reported..=A0 Sizewell NPS in Suffolk had 74 sightings averaging more=A0 than two a night for the month. There were 76 sightings in October.=A0 Bradwell NPS in Essex=A0 had 37 sightings in both October and November.=A0 Dungeness NPS in Kent sightings increased in November to 37,= almost double the 19 sightings in October.. The Flying Triangles are usually first observed in the North Sea off the Suffolk coast. It is thought the same= craft probably visit more than one nuclear power station during their almost= nightly routine. These three nuclear power stations are on or near the Eastern coast of England. Victor Kean writes: "I have started to look closer at the times= of the FT sightings in Project FT's database..=A0 Whilst analyzing the FT data which now runs into 1,000s of reports, I am always on the look out for any traces of 'human intervention' in the data which might indicate that the FT= is not alien For example:=A0 At 0200hrs on March 29th 1997, the good citizens= of the UK put their clocks and watches back by one hour at the beginning of 'Summer Time.' Now, unless the 'controllers' of the FT did the same, one= would expect that the sighting times in the next days would show a 'one hour'= step. Similarly, at the end of Summer Time at 02:00hrs on October 26th 1997 when= the clocks were turned forward by one hour, subsequent sighting times should reflect this one hour step backwards.=A0 Early indications confirm that= there are 'one hour steps' at these times.=A0 This is not proof of 'alien control'...lots of humans also forget to adjust their clocks.<smile>=A0= Perhaps others may suggest other possible checks along these lines... Victor J. Kean Project FT.

Editor's Note: In examining the data I tried to consider what could the purpose of these nightly visits.=A0 The craft may be taking samples of the= air over the nuclear power stations checking for radiation leaks. Also, an Airborne Warning and Control aircraft (AWACs) might fly the same route defending the UK from long range attack. Aereon Corporation in New Jersey developed a patent for a roughly triangular shaped craft known as the= Deltoid Pumpkin Seed.=A0 Although, the company attempted to get either the Air Force= or the Navy to develop the craft, none was put into production by Aereon.

RAF COSFORD, UK

Adam reports that he lives ten minutes drive from RAF Cosford, UK.=A0 I have been informed from a fairly reliable source that RAF Cosford - which is supposedly being quietly run down - has suddenly had it's security up-rated= by a phenomenal amount.=A0 This coincides with an increased number of strange sightings including the ubiquitous black triangles.=A0 My informant, who has= an RAF jet pilot as an acquaintance, tells me that this pilot has suddenly clammed up on the subject of strange sightings.=A0 Previously he was always ready to discuss the phenomena.=A0 The pilot is based at RAF Cosford.=A0 An interesting snippet of information is that apparently RAF pilots are not subject to the same 'gagging' when they have been based abroad. This particular pilot has in the past been based in Saudia Arabia and was always willing to talk about UFO's he and his colleagues had seen over there.= Thanks to the UK UFO Network and adam@adl.enta.net (Adam)

IRIDIUM SATELLITES CAUSING LIGHT FLARES

Ed Cannon writes that regarding the report quoted below regarding very= bright lights=A0 seen in the sky in or near Exeter, New Hampshire, on Dec. 28 and= about a month earlier. Given the description, it appears very possible to me that these people observed flares of reflected sunlight from Iridium satellites. I've seen several of these flares now (including once or twice with my=A0= family in San Antonio), and they are incredibly bright flashes of light with a= bluish cast to them, if you're near the centerline of the=A0 flare.=A0 The last two= I've seen were near the Moon, and one of them was=A0 more intense (brighter in= some sense) than the Moon, while the other=A0 rivaled the Moon in brightness.=A0=

 The brightest ones are visible in=A0 broad daylight, though I have not yet= really tried to see one of those.=A0 I ran Iridium flare predictions for the= Exeter,
 NH, area and found=A0 several very bright ones for Nov. 26-30, 1997, and two candidates for=A0 the morning of Dec. 28, 1997.=A0 Depending on exactly= where the man was and what time it was, better candidates might be confirmed for that date.=A0 The most brilliant part of these flares is very localized,=A0= within less than five miles or so of the centerline.

I suggest that reports of simple but intensely bright flashes in the=A0 sky= be immediately checked out as possible Iridium flares.=A0 There are now 46 of=
 the satellites orbiting, with 5 more due to be launched this=A0 Saturday and the final total to be 66 operational with several spares=A0 as well.=A0 They are= in near polar orbits and so can flare anywhere on=A0 Earth.=A0 There is an= online prediction site that gives predictions 5=A0 days in advance of the current= date
 for any selected location.=A0 The=A0 URL is:=A0= <http://www.gsoc.dlr.de/satvis/>=A0 (It also gives one day's predictions for other satellites, as well as two weeks' predictions for the Mir Space Station.)=A0 For checking in the past, one=
 would need to run a flare program such=A0 as Iridflar.exe, the one I use, which= was written by Rob Matson, a=A0 satellite observer who lives in California.=A0=
 The
 first Iridiums were launched on May 5, 1997.=A0 There's a good site with= more information about Iridium flares at:
<http://www2.satellite.eu.org/sat/vsohp/iridium.html>=A0 Recently there was a= very nice story regarding them in the Salt Lake=A0 City "Desert News":
<http://www.desnews.com/newtdy/rg0kul4t.htm>=A0

I publish Iridium flare predictions for the Austin, Texas, area:
<http://www.ms.utexas.edu/~ecannon/iridium.htm>=A0 I'm not trying to debunk= here,
 I'm just pointing out a potential source of extremely bright flashes in the sky that should be among the possibilities considered when such reports are received.=A0 I've seen them, as have quite a few other people now (including= a field full of amateur astronomers at a star party southwest of Austin a few months ago).=A0 They can be fairly reliably predicted, watched=A0 for, and observed -- and they can be REALLY BRIGHT! The Iridium satellites are fairly small and so are visible to the=A0 unaided eye only when they flare.) Thanks=

SPACE SHUTTLE AND UFO

On January 14, we reported the Space Shuttle Endeavor narrowly avoided the collision with a UFO during its 12-day mission in September.=A0 We are= unable to confirm this story through our sources and NASA firmly denies the event occurred. Generally, the NASA tapes have become available a few months after the sighting. However, the audio tape from the Endeavor report has not been obtainable or confirmed. The report was published on the web from several reliable sources and appeared=A0 real. The report stated:
 "The word from author William Kliner, who claims to have obtained a=A0 copy= of the tape from highly placed NASA sources and flatly calls the incident,=A0=
 "the most dramatic close encounter in history. However, I have been unable to obtain a copy of this tape, and therefore feel this report is at least= suspect
 and warn that the story may be a hoax.

In other Filer's Files, I have reported on two shuttle missions (STS-48 and STS-80), where UFOs were in fact video taped. I have this evidence in my possession and I feel it is genuine. The STS 80 video revealed hours of empty skies beneath the shuttle. When the shuttle approaches a line of thunderstorms a group of UFOs appear. The disc-shaped craft move to intercept the thunderstorms and then appear to hover over the thunderstorms. The STS-80 cameraman apparently saw the UFOs moving in over the huge thunderstorms and zooms in on the scene. One particularly good close up shows a disc craft with a dark area in the center.

Also the December sighting of a large UFO in the Gulf of Mexico near an oil rig thus far has not been confirmed. A large craft only thirty miles from Corpus Christy should have been sighted by other the observers along the Texas coast. Jeremy Clark Packer the alleged witness and person responsible for the e-mail posting has not been located for verification of his story.

"INCIDENT IN LAKE COUNTY" TELEVISION SHOW

UPN presented a one-hour special on January 20, claiming that the McPherson family, missing since last Thanksgiving Day had left a videotape account of a family's purported encounter with aliens. The show claimed that the videotape was the sole testament to the fate of the family who have a series of strange occurrences, that culminates in a frightening encounter with alien creatures. During the special, several people who claim to have had similar experiences relate their ordeals. Stan Friedman was the key expert for the show.

Ufologist, Dr. Bruce Cornet reviewed the show and sent this evaluation to UPN. "There is no doubt in my mind that UPN in airing the "Incident in Lake County: Alien Abduction" hit many nerves among those sensitive to how the alien abduction phenomenon, UFOs, and the paranormal are portrayed by the media. As a serious UFO investigator, who has had hundreds of personal sightings (most of them photographed and/or videotaped), and who is working with Sam Sherman, President of Independent International Pictures (Old Bridge, NJ) on a film documentary entitled, "From Beyond This Earth", which contains some of the best documented film of unidentified flying objects over Clear Lake in California (witnessed and documented by government scientists), I consider the reactions to your show as evidence that a major affront has occurred to the advancement of scientific knowledge and understanding of these phenomena. If any individuals employed by your company are of the opinion that this is all nonsense and should be ridiculed, I would like the opportunity to educate them. What we don't need are producers and editors who think that TV ratings are so much more important than presenting the truth (presented in an objective and neutral environment) that they will intentionally frighten for entertainment TV audiences. An analogous situation would be making a production about rape where the authorities and family of the victim couldn't believe that anything like that could ever happen without the consent of the victim. I have been approached by people who saw the show, and who are upset by it, thinking that it might be real. I told them that it was a hoax, made by a bunch of amateurs with a perverted and fraternity sense of humor derived from intimidation. These people seemed genuinely relieved to hear me say that. Most of them can handle the abduction phenomenon, but not when it is portrayed as a swat-team-like attack on innocent people in their homes at night. It is one thing to portray horror as science fiction, but entirely another when a real phenomenon is perverted into fiction. I hope you take the time to read the letters I have received, and learn from this experience. The show came across like the Clinton scandal to those of us who have experienced the real thing. A few clarifying comments regarding the statement below:

1) the statement/ad referred to below was not by or for CSETI. It was written by me and a number of suggestions from organizations I work with (including CSETI) were incorporated into the document. This statement has been modified and is now (or soon) available for review once more at: www.anagramvideo.com and forums.msn.com/ufo. It will be published in the Washington Post in due course when appropriate signatures have been obtained and funding secured.

2) a number of other issues raised relating to me were addressed and clarified in earlier posts by me as well as private e-mail to Jan Aldrich in early January. These earlier responses to this matter can be viewed at:

<http://www.ufomind.com/people/b/bassett/>

3) I have now stated several times that I regret very much these developments, acknowledge some errors on my part, have apologized for such, have not been involved in any premeditated effort to disrupt CAUS, admire the work of CAUS very much, would much prefer CAUS to keep all executives for the coming demands of disclosure.

4) This was basically a complex misunderstanding. The UFO research community has suffered greatly from misunderstandings in its 50 year history. I certainly was party to this one, and am resolved to be more careful as this difficult and complex process moves forward.

Hard to know. Truman comments briefly about this event in his memoirs (Chapt. 25, Vol. II). To provide a little background, Truman from Dec. 4 - Dec. 6 was in meetings with the British Prime Minister Clement Attlee, who flew to Washington to calm serious war jitters in Britain. Truman wrote that the British were extremely worried about the Soviet Union getting into the Korean War after the Allies had been bombing extremely close to the Soviet border in northern Korea. British anxiety was heightened by a highly secret report received from Peiping on Nov. 15, stating that a top Russian diplomat said that Soviet Force would strike back in force if Manchurian air fields were bombed.

On Nov. 30, Truman held a press conference, where the subject of using A-bombs came up. Truman denied that there were plans to use A-bombs, though they had been considered along with any other weaponry. Truman stated in his memoirs that he had no plans to use the A-bomb, but news reports persisted that he threatened to use it. The British were dead scared that Russia (who now had an A-bomb) would get into this, and the world would again be consumed in war, this time an atomic one.

So on Dec. 6, there were no doubt fears of a surprise Soviet air attack. Truman wrote:

"Shortly before we went into that morning meeting, Under Secretary Lovett called from the Pentagon, reporting that the radar screens of some air defense installations in the Far North were reporting large formations of unidentified planes approaching. Fighter planes were sent up to reconnoiter and alerts were flashed to air centers in New England and beyond. But about an hour later -- while I was meeting with Attlee -- Lovett notified me that the report had been in error. Some unusual disturbance in the Arctic atmosphere had thrown the radar off."

If the Dec. 6 event was indeed caused by an "atmospheric disturbance," then why the CIC high alert two days later for any information on flying saucers? Was Truman really told it was atmospheric, or was he really told that it wasn't Soviet bombers (the primary concern), but flying saucers instead? It's impossible to know from the scant information that we have.

Or maybe something else was happening to trigger the Dec. 8 alert. Dec. 6 is also the day of the rumored flying saucer crash in northern Mexico with retrieval by the U.S. military. A Blue Book unknown case also occurred that day in Fort Meyer, Florida where a 75 foot saucer was seen through binoculars by a former aircraft purchasing agent. Ruppelt wrote of the first UFO/radiation detection case at Los Alamos in Dec. 1950. From Dec. 14-20, FBI memos mention three more UFO reports by radar operators and employees at Oak Ridge. Two jet intercepts were attempted and on 12/14, "a group of objects blanketed the Radar Scopes..." for 3 hours. These incidents had been preceded by a flurry of 15 such UFO reports back in Oct. over Oak Ridge, also investigated by the FBI. The one that occurred on Oct. 23 is also mentioned by Ruppelt in his UFO radiation chapter. One FBI memo stated "geiger counters in the vicinity [had] unexplainable readings at about this time."

For all we know, this may only represent a fraction of UFO activity at the time. The UFOs over our atomic installations like Los Alamos and Oak Ridge must have been the most alarming. Maybe the Dec. 6 incident really was a false alarm, but the military in conjunction with the other UFO incidents were concerned that we might not be able to distinguish a genuine Soviet attack from the UFOs that were flying around. Perhaps this triggered the alert on Dec. 8 for any additional information on the UFOs. It could have been fears of an accidental nuclear war with the Soviets at the height of the Korean War.

Hi Kevin,

What we ought to do is sue 'em for equal time! If it was possible to get you and Stan on the same podium I would do it with you.

I know that you are not a proponent of the abduction scenario, but you're an -honest- guy Kevin. I have always considered the honest skeptics to be my best friends.

They (unfortunately) are the only ones asking the 'hard questions.' It is partly because I am that way myself, (question everything) that I am able to keep my butt on the stool and not go floating off into deep space like so many of my peers.

If you ever want to Kevin, I'll share a podium with you or Stan Friedman or any number of -intellectually honest- people that are also a part of this field.

Honest to God, I'm only interested in getting at the truth of it all. Not in selling any particular take over another. As I have said time and again,

MY wife and kids are involved in this! I need serious, no BS answers, and I need 'em now! Not when everyone else decides it's time to come around a have a look see.

If the opportunity should arise you have only to let me know. With -you- guys I'll be there with Bells on!

You can ask all the "hard questions" you want!

Peace,

John Velez

"Carefully extracting the massive volume Gravitation, by Misner, et. al, lovingly, but carefully, placing it on the strongest desk in the house, donning his welding goggles to protect himself from stray tensors, he opens to the index..."

Oh, well, no "negative curvature". Or "curvature, negative".

Still, let's think about it by recalling how GR does gravity. It isn't an "attraction", but the tendency of objects to follow the shortest path through curved spacetime (the "geodesic"). So it's not that you're being pulled toward the center of the earth by a force, but that when you stand, the curvature of spacetime leads down to the center of the earth, and if nothing stops you, your path through spacetime must, by its geometry, lead toward the center of the spacetime-deforming mass.

In this context, what's negative curvature? I suspect, given the Einsteinian abhorrence of privilege, such as between gravity and acceleration (inertia being the property of trying to follow the spacetime geodesic), that negative curvature is just gravity from somewhere else. For instance, that when you are standing with the moon or the sun right over your head, you are experiencing the slight addition of a negative value to the positive curvature caused by the earth. Or, negative curvature is the universe inside-out. (Oops! What a mess.)

Assuming this worked, I would expect that it would leave a massive magnetic signature. Most magnetic remnants from UFOs seem to be relatively small. So if UFOs generate strong magnetic fields, I expect they would need to use alternating polarity fields, such as are used in industrial degaussing.

I asked Jan Aldrich about the document that was released in the place. I haven't been able to locate this, nor can I remember

Hope I've been vague enough for you.%^>

Subject: Re: Underground Bases

Alien underground bases are just that. They are in control of the bases and have their own agenda.

No one has quite figured out what yet. Also involved are military and intelligence personel. There is a list of 125 confirmed underground bases out there, with more to be added when confirmed.

Bases.... Fort Stockton, Texas... Tulsa Oklahoma Riverton Wyoming, Fort Mcoy, Sparta Wisc.

I have been working on underground bases for over 20 years. Chronological order of my investigations is meaningless. My hunting of joint Ufo-military underground bases intensified after working on a hostile abduction case. During this investigation I aquired a list of 5 underground bases that proved to be true.

Fort Mcoy is one of the projects I am on at the moment. Things that have happened to me while working on Fort Mcoy

1. I was working to get into what I feel is an under ground entrance, when all of a sudden it sounded like there was an intence magnetic field surrounding me. It sounded like thousands of bee,s all around me. I did a 360 degree check at ground level also over myhead and could find nothing. Also at same time I got out of the car with a loaded camera and with out touching anything, the camera rewound it self.

2. I have been followed down there

3. missing time

4. A squad of soldiers with M-16s faced me 20 yards off public hi-way. The only day I was not armed.

5. 6000 acres added to the N.E. end of base, and could not get info from land management. This area off limits to regular base personel.

6. Black helicopter gunship chased hunter out of area.

7. Unexplained deaths in the area and disapparences 2 found shot in the back of the head in the wooded area. Other unexplained deaths.

8. 1 plane- 1 helicopter disappeared with out a trace .

9. After a trip into the area I went to northern Wisc.

2 days later. After a boat trip out on the Apostile Islands for 4 hours, I came back to move my car, and it was dusted with a chemical that got all over my hands. My fingure tips had a blue dye type chemical oozing out of them. I could wash my hands clean, and a few minutes later the blue stuff would start coming through the finger tips again. Went on for 4-5 days.

This should give you something to think about.....

This is to some extent supported by demographic studies, such as Hynek's UFO Evidence demographics which I profile at my (currently down due to a geocities problem) website under:

<http://www.geocities.com/~mcashman/uhyndem.htm>

In those statistics, one can see that youths, housewives and aviation personnel represent very close to half of all reporters in Hynek's book. As one crosses the strangeness categories to higher strangeness cases, this sample shows a decrease in technical personnel, and the aviators are nearly winnowed out by the time CE-II are reached, while housewives and the young alone represent nearly 50% of the reporters.

These figures, I think represent fairly faithfully a number of things, one of which is that people who spend more time under the sky tend to report UFOs more often, and secondly that, as UFOs come within closer range, the demographics of UFO reporters approaches more closely the typical US demographic profile.

Subject: Material for new TV show - A grovelling beg of the

[I've known Mike Woods for several years. We've worked together both in front of and behind cameras. He's been a hard-nosed newswriter for more years than he wants to remember. He's good at what he does and is an asset to ufology. If you can, help him with whatever you can. Did I mention he was a military boxing champion? <VBG> -- ebk]

Dear List,

Some of you know me, some of you don't, but I'm asking all of you for a favour.

My name is Mike Woods and some of you might have met me at Roswell last summer as my wife Kathy and I were down there, keeping company with our esteemed moderator Errol and the lovely and talented Sue. (Hey John, Rebecca, all the rest of you desert mad-women and men.)

I was a news writer for a Toronto TV station then. Now I'm a producer for a regional 24 hour cable news channel (same place) ...and because of the weird nature of my employer CITY-TV, I've got an opportunity for a couple of minutes a week (to start) to provide topical UFO-related reports on Canada's nation wide sci-fi channel, SPACE, the imagination station. CITY-TV is Canada's largest and easily most influential independent television station. We also own and produce the national cable channel MuchMusic, BRAVO! a national arts and entertainment channel, and the SPACE channel, all housed in an enormous, extensively renovated former multi-floor warehouse. (Enough of the commercial, I'm making me sick. I'd genuflect, but my arm's too sore.)

As Errol can testify, I've given lectures, done TV and radio programs, etc supporting a simple message. While concentrating on UFOs and the media, relating the changing approach to media UFO reporting over the years as it reflects the changing attitudes of the public. I also push the message that there is something real to the UFO phenomena. That it should be investigated properly, including opening any classified files on the subject, no matter how much or little they may contain. What UFOs are, or are from, is entirely up for grabs. There's plenty of evidence, but no rock solid proof.

So, because of my UFO work, I was approached to fill a couple of minutes per week on the topic. It's TV....so I'm begging for video, as much of it and as recent as I can get. (Hello, Tom, Phoenix, can you help?)

Figuring on retiring on the payment for the tape? Don't.

I'm doing the gig for nada, but after some hair pulling, eye gouging and various and sundry fighting I did manage to get them to spring for shipping costs! (Perhaps Errol can explain the legendary cheapness of CITY-TV, a well known fact-of-life in the Toronto media scene.) If the show grows as I hope it does, money then WILL become an issue. Right now, I'm just trying to get this puppy off the ground.

The only reason I can give you for helping me with this project is that it's a thin wedge into the broadcast stream, of getting something to air within days, at worst weeks, of the event. It's of heightening the profile of the topic, creating even more awareness with an advocate controlling the admittedly small production. And the broadcaster is well known for going out on a limb and creating leading edge programs....(and in all fairness some mind-numbingly bad stuff, too.) Yes, yes, only in Canada. And on satellite, I think. pity. (Hello, Chris, there's a window of opportunity here to get the message out)

So if you can help, with videotape or sighting reports or anything else you might think of to send along, including works-in-progress ie. (field investigations, books, extended videos or CD's) contact me through this amazing reference resource we call UFO UpDates, or directly at mike.woods@sympatico.ca

Hopefully, Errol will back me up on the statements I've made here. Or he might post a never-heard-of-him, in which case point me to a bridge.

Thanks for your time. Please return to your normal reading habits. You may now return to UFO UpDates. And if all this really annoyed you, I apologise. I've been a member of the List for a couple of years now and I'd really rather not endure a flaming for many points around the globe. If you MUST flame, please keep it to a short * You....okay, eh?

Thanks again,
Mike Woods.

Gersten and Bassett discuss Government Disclosure

Subject: Gersten and Bassett discuss Government Disclosure

The Politics of UFOs-Paths to Disclosure

What does the U.S. Government know about UFOs and what is the best method to get that information out into the open?

Peter Gersten, who has sued the government with mixed success, now has Col. Phillip Corso as a key witness. Gersten is currently preparing to bring the U.S. Government back into the courtroom for another battle over disclosing what it knows about UFOs.

Steve Bassett on the other hand, is gathering names on a petition. His goal is to obtain congressional immunity from prosecution for those that have sworn secrecy oaths and are ready to testify before Congress in regards to what they saw while working for the government.

Hear their opening statements via Netshow Audio and then join us Sunday February 1 at 5pm, PT, in the Briefing Room where these two will each make a case for their approach. This chat is available at <http://forums.msn.com/UFO>

The Briefing Room chat can be accessed by any IRC client. The chat server name is publicchat.msn.com and the room or channel name is #briefing.

Bruce: These are all fine explanations, especially # 5.

I cannot argue with the logic. My question is: Why should the 1940s and 50s (especially the 40s) be so different from the 1960s, 70s, 80s....??

What changed? Did the UFOs themselves change priorities, methods or means?... or is this simply some subjective (i.e. observer oriented) bias which crept in? Were people less likely to look up at night in 1947 for some reason... like UFO ignorance in an era before they became B-movie material?

The AAA Regt. after action report was released. Basically, they were probably firing at their own meteorological balloon. The incident is more complex than just one met balloon. Some documents are still not available. The Navy is mentioned as early on in the incident as giving the initial warning. However, the Navy's part in this incident is not documented, or the documents are not yet available to the public.

Ruppelt, in his catchall file, had an alledged sighting report from an individual who claimed to have seen something before all the firing started.

In Feb 1942, the Japanese launched a submarine based plane to drop firebombs in the forests of Oregon. It was unsuccessful. The bombs were dropped but caused no fires.

In the 1960's a men's magazine alledged that the same thing happened in Los Angeles in 1942.

Officially, only the Oregon attack is recognized as true.

Alfred's Odd Ode #219

Subject: Alfred's Odd Ode #219

Apology to MW #219 (For January 31, 1998)

It's time to grab the keys to my ship "Imagination," and fly out to the darkest, deepest space. Outside our solar system -- I look back on, and can listen to the futile little ravings of my squalid little race. Oh, we hold ourselves so grandly in pretended understanding, and we think that we're the bee's knees of creation. Complacent, lost in dreams, and ignoring righteous screams, we wallow in a mire quite fallacious.

I turn the key it's on, and we SHRINK down (almost gone) just to satisfy the physics of our punch to airless space. Then space (so quick) surrounds us and in awe we are confounded as the brightness of a trillion stars entreats us with their grace. Turning this'a way and that we see the planets, eyes like cats; Jupiter and Mar's approach like brothers. Quick as 'that' they're gone, so far out we are alone, adrift (without a phone) our ship for cover.

We think about our place in this everlasting space that goes without an end, the eggheads say. And it goes beyond the prayers that another takes for dares on a blue white living marble where we play. There're others out here with us, and they watch, but won't get with us, enigmatic and not coming when they're called. They sit, just out of view, and their contacts, just a few, make me wonder if they think our engine's stalled.

We are a messy puzzle, so our watchers watch their sleeves; compared to them we're still a'crawl, still down on calloused knees. They were old before our dirt had even crumbled from its rock, knew of planets in collision, they had science, walked the walk.

But, there's something else about us -- they think we're interesting -- think of that (though perhaps the way we're interested in a monkey or a cat)! I think they think we're beautiful, though when we're bad we're bad, it's when we're good we're really good they're gratified, astonished -- glad. Arts and loves and musics are the source of satisfaction, is it what they find so pleasant pulled from chaos and abstraction?

Could it be that they're surprised by our peculiar little antics; for them surprises few and far between? They thought they had it figured out, then heard from us -- what we're about? In many years of records -- oh=85 -- the things that they have seen.

They watched Titanics going down with the rabble locked belowdecks. They saw the workings of a just and honored Klan. They watched us filling up our prisons with what was culled from our society while we taught our trusting kids to understand. They watch us hate our sex glands with our strictures, codes, and rules. They watch us blaming kids for riot, them we bullshit in our schools! It's a madhouse they're perplexed by, it's a dance of fever dreams, a chaos we're presenting -- here we laugh and there we scream.

They see us give away our stuff -- effect a grander plan. They see us paint and write, and sculpt so white in mountains of our land. They see us slowly waking up to find that we were not alone -- getting over our embarrassment that will go right to the bone=85

They see us rescue our sad fallen when we think to lend a hand.
They see a teacher teaching truth, no axe to grind, and understand. They see compassion where it suits us and I think they know our curse, that we're only at our best when challenge takes a turn for worse.

=85Or maybe we're just useful -- as a common white lab rat, to help them with a problem that they're plagued with -- is it that?
We've got something going for us, of that I am assured, or they'd do like us and whack us <?> -- and they could not be deterred.

I'll sit out in the blackness of the dark between the stars=85 far brighter here than does appear as close to Earth as Mars. I'll teleport you back <it's pop and you're back home> I think I'd rather sit out here awhile, and be alone. I'll try to get the watchers to construct our ship for real; insulate us from the madness -- have a better, truer deal.

We better HOPE they're more ethical than we are.

I had not considered demographic changes. As a baby boomer, I was so busy with my keg-o-cyzer [a lifting, rolling and tapping exercise device] that the thought eluded me. There are several other explanations.

Seriously, can we take all these various (and sometimes self-cancelling) effects, and use them to explain a 20 to 25% drop in daytime sightings since the 1940-1950 era?

If so, fine. Otherwise, this is getting dull.

(Mark, please forgive my brevity and snips.
I appreciate your thoughtful responses. -LH)

PS: No matter what I do, all of that horrid wasteful junk re-appears at screen bottom. We all appreciate the good work out of Toronto. It is (however) a drag to remove all those slashes and stuff (below) only to have is slapped on again, like some Mexican election poster. -LH

Folks, I think there's one explanation that I haven't seen discussed yet. During the 1940's and 50's we were very involved in WWII, involved in the mindset of bombers coming from the skies. Even though we never had to deal with heavy bombing here domestically, it was never far from our minds I suspect. In the 50's that was transformed into a fear of nuclear attack. Perhaps on some level people were watching the skies for incoming Russian Nikes or something. By the 60's this effect might have faded and people turned their attention back to...TELEVISION!

It's a cultural thing...

Subject: South-Central Colorado Update

Hi All:

Seems the fireballs have returned to the mid-Rocky Mountain Region. The following was put together by Tim Edwards.

Following are the Salida Colo. report, articles from the Denver post and Rocky mountain news on the Jan. 27 events. As you can see objects were reported at numerous different times at multiple location ranging about 250 miles away and from noon Tues. and then at various times that night.

How can meteors or debris keep hitting the same general area over a 10 hour time-frame? A question I'm going to ask The Museum of Natural History in Denver when I make a report. These are a frequent event in Colorado

Getting a little escalation lately of reports and increased military activity. My 17 year old daughter Laray was sitting in the computer room tonight at 9:00 PM [1-27-98] when she viewed a moon size ball of green light out of the south window[lights were on in the room] for a couple of seconds moving at high speed and disappearing to the southwest.

At the same time my wife's sister [Kathy Rauter] and her 4 kids were driving to our house and viewed it down the road a half mile to the south of our home. They also reported the same description and said other people had to see it. No tail was observed by any of the witnesses. They were extremely excited and some were scared. I could tell by the reactions it was a major sighting. They said it did not appear to be that far away. I just had got off the computer and was upstairs reading a book so I missed the action again. Laray also had viewed a green globe hovering and then shooting down behind a ridge south of town this summer as well as multiple reports by locals of orbs hovering and moving at high speed in the area.

Several report seeing its blazing path

BRECKENRIDGE-Several people saw a large fiery object trailed by a plume of smoke crash to the ground near here about noon Tuesday.

"It was a fairly large object that was on fire with smoke that was spiraling off the back of it," said Blue River Marshal Steve Ford, who saw it from his car near Blue River Road and Highway 9.

My first thought was that it was a meteor."

Fork watched the object plummet more than a thousand feet. He lost sight of it at tree level.

"It was a vertical shot toward the ground, and I'm sure it impacted the ground," Ford said.

Leigh Pezzicara, a spokeswoman for the Breckenridge Ski Resort, said several guests reported seeing a flare in the area of Peaks 5 and 6. "However, we really can't confirm what it was," she said. The Summit County sheriff's office received two calls about the possible meteor.

James Rickman, a spokesman at the Los Alamos National Laboratory, said the scientific term for an object like the one described by Breckenridge eyewitnesses is "daytime fireball."

Alma resident John Fisher was in Breckenridge when he spotted the object.

According to Fisher, it created a visible trail that covered a quarter of the sky from his vantage point as he drove north on Highway 9 near the Breckenridge Building Center.

Although no one saw where the object landed, Ford believes it hit near Good Pasture Tarn, just south of Breckenridge. So far, no agencies have launched a search for the object.

Bill Steigerwald, spokesman for NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland, said the center has received a unusually high number of reported meteor sightings this year.

Steigerwald said if the Breckenridge sighting wasn't a meteor, it could have been "an airplane, a piece of space junk or some kind of rocket test that went astray." But most space junk burns up in the atmosphere, he said.

Rocky Mountain News-Denver Colo. 1-28-98
No Debrises found from "flame ball"

RAWLINS,WYO.-Carbon County investigators have been unable to find any debris associated with a "ball of flame" that reportedly crashed into the ground near Hanna.

The ball of flame was reported after noon Tuesday by the pilot of a passenger airline "He said he had seen a ball of flame, which we believe may have been a meteorite of space junk," said Jim Patton of the Federal Aviation Administration. " He reported he did get some turbulence from the object. He saw the debris and felt the shock wave from it."

[Tim Edwards Note-This must have been a big object hitting the ground there and in Breckenridge at the same time Tues. They are probably 200 miles apart. Object in Breckenridge was reported to be very large. See yesterdays post. Very similar to the Colo. Springs and front range report from Jan. 12 and numerous others along the front range in the last 2 years. Tuesday's fireball report was followed by the 9:00 PM sighting of the green globe by numerous witnesses in Salida Colo.]

Jan. 30- BRECKENRIDGE -

Hours after a "daytime fireball" was spotted streaking earthward near Breckenridge Tuesday, several people reported another flaming object south of town that night.

Breckenridge resident Jon Sperber was driving south on Main Street about 10:45 p.m. when he and a friend saw a bluish-green fireball streak east to west across the sky.

"It looked like an egg and was so bright that we could see smoke behind it," Sperber said.

The object was so close, Sperber said, he thought it must have landed up on Peak 9, near Beaver Run Resort.

He and his friend went to search for the apparent meteor, but to no avail

"It turned out to be not as close as we thought it was," he said. Mike Tukewicz was also heading south into Breckenridge on Colorado 9 when he and his wife spotted the fireball. His description of the fiery object was similar to Sperber's except that Tukewicz witnessed it at 8:45 p.m., roughly two hours earlier than Sperber. "It was blue and glowing, with a hint of orange Tukewicz said. "I must have seen it for a full three seconds before it either disappeared or burned out." John and Monique Berwyn also viewed the fireball around 9 p.m. from their home in Summit Cove

"I thought it might have been an airplane going down, but my husband said no, that's a meteorite," Monique Berwyn said.

All of those who say they witnessed the fiery object were facing almost due south and saw the fireball cross the sky from east to west.

Sightings of the nighttime fireball began about eight hours after several witnesses said they saw a fiery object plummet from the sky near Breckenridge around noon Tuesday.

Reports of the object, believed to be a meteor, have excited scientists around the country. "The key to this thing is the smoke," said Doug Revelle at Los Alamos National Laboratory. "That means it's very big."

Although Revelle did not pick up any signals from an instrument monitoring a broad range of frequencies in the air, he had not yet received results from more finely tuned instruments.

The geology department at the Denver Museum of Natural History also is investigating the apparent meteor. While the staff is still gathering information about the sightings, they are planning to search for the object, said Bart Weis of the department.

Weis urged anyone who spotted the daytime or nighttime fireballs Tuesday to contact the Denver Museum of Natural History at 370-6445.

Interesting the way these fireballs keep dropping out of the thin Rocky Mountain sky lately.

Anyone else think these report clusters are strange?

Thank you Tim for putting these articles and reports together...
