FILER'S FILES #44 MUFON Skywatch Investigations
George A. Filer, Director, Mutual UFO Network Eastern
October 31, 2001, Majorstar@AOL.COM.
Webmaster Chuck Warren <http://www.filersfiles.com>,

UFO SIGHTINGS HAVE BEEN OBSERVED AROUND THE WORLD.
UFOs were spotted in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri, Iowa, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado, Canada, United Kingdom, Hungary, Lebanon, and Australia.

DISCLOSURE PROJECT IN TORONTO WAS HUGE SUCCESS. Dr. Stephen Greer's Disclosure video tapes were presented to an audience of around 700 people at the prestigious University of Toronto Convocation Hall. Commander Graham Bethune, Dr. Greer and myself spoke to an appreciative audience. Several local television and radio programs covered the event. Allan Jaggard the well-known motorcycle-racing star was the master of ceremonies and is responsible for production of a great conference. The city of Toronto is a beautiful city with an excellent high-speed road system. I'm not surprised many UFOs are seen in the area with traffic moving at 80 + mph (140 klm). Some highways are 20 lanes wide. Allan Jaggard, Cindy Preville, Mike and many others helped in putting on a great presentation. The University of Toronto staff were brilliant and I wish to thank everyone.

The Disclosure Project reveals the best UFO evidence anywhere.
All those giving information have worked for the government in responsible positions and have in depth knowledge of the subject. Each report reveals a piece of the UFO puzzle.
Essentially, they report we are being visited by alien life forms that have bases on our Moon and Mars. Their UFOs are intelligently manned and carry out reconnaissance of our planet.
They apparently forage for food, conduct mining operations, and make contact with some of us.

Among the 300 to 400 UFO reports received in the US each month, there are many cases that may not be alien. Some reports are simply mistaken identity, such as secret military aircraft.
However, the Disclosure Project assures us that many UFOs are real alien craft as the high-ranking FAA, military and intelligence witnesses testify. Witnesses who send in reports generally know the difference between an aircraft, balloon, or Venus. Most reports are from multiple witnesses who watch the UFOs for an extended period. Generally, it takes the witness at least a half hour to type and E-mail the report, so they are serious about what they saw. General Le May is quoted as claiming thirty per cent of Air Force sightings were real UFOs.
Most of these reports in Filer's Files have not been investigated, where possible they will be. After investigation it often turns out that a planet, balloons, flares or mundane aircraft are in the sky. The Air Force is conducting numerous training exercises and anti terrorist operations that can be confused with UFOs.

However, we have strong indications that the UFO aircrews like this flight activity, because it provides excellent cover for their operations. We have many high quality witnesses who report the UFOs are operating at low level in close proximity to airports. When aircraft fly over they hide in the trees or simply disappear until the normal aircraft traffic passes over. There are generally 300 to 400 E-mail reports received each month. Many reports are probably mistaken identity, but does it make much difference if there are 400, 40, or 4 real alien craft? The fact is there are real UFOs in our skies. The real question is why are they here and what are they doing? The new "Disclosure Project" Book answers some of these questions and is well worth reading. The Web cast of the May 9, 2001; Disclosure Project News Conference at the National Press Club can be seen on <http://www.disclosureproject.org/npcwebcast.htm>

MASSACHUSETTS CIRCLE OF LIGHT

WILMINGTON -- The witness says, "I was out on my lawn viewing the near full moon, when a bright object caught my eye at 8:15 PM, on October 3, 2001. It had a bluish hue and I thought it was fireworks and expected to see little pieces break off, and it would disappear. The object was four times bigger than Mars or a very reddish star there that crosses the sky. The object faded away quickly, traveling northwest. It appeared to be very high in the sky when I lost sight of it. It seemed, maybe within 10,000 feet when I first saw it. The object made no noise. I am a veteran sky watcher and I have seen satellites travel through the night sky, reflecting the sun. They usually, I believe, have a yellowish hue, and are never close to being this vivid. It did travel in a straight line away from me as a satellite would. I live on the approach to Logan Airport. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC.

CONNECTICUT UFO DISTORTION

Joe Trainor reports that Karen and her husband were sitting in their hot tub on October 20, 2001, on a beautiful, clear, starry, cloudless night. Karen said, "We watched a plane go overhead and a few minutes later at 10:30 PM I noticed a distortion appear coming out of the west. You could tell there was an object there because the distortion made a circular shape. There was a ring of small lights on what I will call the front, the portion moving towards the east." I immediately said to my husband, "What is that?" As it passed over our heads he noticed the distortion as it headed away. I lost it trying to turn around. He did not see any ring of lights above the distortion the way I did. It moved quickly almost gliding through the sky. It was completely silent. If it hadn't been for the distortion you would not have noticed it at all because it seemed to be camouflaged with the night sky. I hate to use this analogy but in the movie Predator you can tell the creature is there by the distortion, but you can't see any other type of identifying marks. That's the best way I know how to describe it. We are still asking ourselves, what was that. There were small lights in a row on the "top" front only. The 'Distortion' was just like the night sky. Our best guess is that it was 500 feet high and going roughly 500 miles per hour. It was faster than a plane and glided in total silence. Thanks to Joe Trainor FIFO Masinaigan@aol.com

NEW YORK FLYING DISC

BROOKLYN -- Gil Rodriguez writes I was in the kitchen on October 24 or 25, 2000, at about 9:00 p.m. when my 15 year old daughter came running downstairs yelling and crying that she saw something strange and large flying across the sky outside her window. I ran upstairs, looked to the west, and saw this well lit object moving across the sky. It looked like a huge disk (hamburger shaped) floating slowly across the sky without any sound. My daughter was very scared and still crying. She didn't sleep that night and didn't sleep much for about a week. The object had a flashing or strobe light on the top; below that there was a row of windows with yellowish light shining out all the way around to the left and right. Below the windows was a row of lights of different colors around the middle that went on and off in sequence very quickly (blue, green, yellow, white but not exactly in this order). The bottom half was sort of dark with no lighting. I was in complete awe of this ! huge object that was bigger than I had ever seen in the sky. It seemed almost as wide as two 747 aircraft. I would guess it was at least 75 to 100 yards wide. I then remembered my loaded cameras, but when I returned to the back yard it had gone out of sight. This was the third sighting for my daughter and me. She had seen a similar huge hamburger shaped craft with her niece Latoya in late 1999. Thanks to grodriguez@windelsmarx.com

MICHIGAN SIGHTING COMPLETE WITH "LASERS."

STANTON -- Becky reports that on October 15, 2001, a lighted object appeared to be standing still in the northeastern sky as she drove on the country roads a mile out of town at 12:30 AM. Becky noticed a few planes in the sky, but this was much larger and much lower than a star. The light was not a brilliant light but it appeared to be bright, however, it had a misty haze to it. It just stood still; it did not blink like a plane. It was about the size of a dime, or at least five times the size of either a plane or star. When I had looked up again at the object all of the sudden flashes of what looked like red laser beam lines appeared. Red laser beams did not shoot across the sky, but they were contained within an area surrounding this object. The only way I can describe it is to say a circle within a circle. The hazed light was the center of this circular area. Several red laser lines - extended out away from this object in all directions and abruptly came to a halt.! All the red lines halted, and gave the appearance of a jagged circular pattern surrounding a white hazed object. These red lines were all straight lines, some of which crossed over each other, creating some triangles within this area. The size of this circular area in comparison to the object would be like putting a dime in the center of a silver dollar. I was frightened and turned around and immediately headed back to town. Once in town I gathered my senses. I stopped and watched this object for at least another five minutes before I went home. The object slowly ascended vertically and the light became less hazy and clearer. I watched the object for a while, because if any more red lines were to appear I was definitely not going to go any further. Once home I looked in the mirror and noticed that I had a red circular patch on my throat. Thanks to Becky and Jim Hickman thehickmanreport@prodigy.net.

WISCONSIN MOVING LIGHTS

FLORENCE, SPREAD EAGLE COUNTY -- Jenny Hoppe UFOWisconsin reports that on October 20, 2001, Kris N was outdoors looking east towards Gemini at 11:00 PM. Kris says, "I noticed a small "star" rising over the trees across the lake. It kept rising and falling below the tree line. It rose higher and moved to my right. After a while, it was joined by another object. These both moved closer to my location. They were both moving left to right and would sometimes disappear. They kept getting closer, and higher. After 20 minutes, they were quite close to my location and a third "star like" object appeared about 1000 feet in front of me at about 40 degrees. This last object was pulsating like a "dimmer" switch. It also grew larger and smaller. The three objects hovered in a triangle formation. I left the scene, as I was a little "spooked" by all this. I didn't sleep well and have had some very "funny" dreams." Thanks to~ Jenny Hoppe ICQ #950705 UFOWisconsin - http://www.ufow!

MISSOURI THREE LIGHTS SHAPED LIKE A PYRAMID

KENNETT -- The witness reports, "We didn't see it close up, but it had three lights on it on October 7, 2001. One was at the top and two were on the bottom. The right bottom light and the top light disappeared first, and finally the left bottom one at 1:30 AM. We were outside talking when one of my friends said, "Ooh look, and pointed." One of my friends thought that it was a missile and ran away, my other friend started to run. He saw I couldn't move and came back. We both watched it for a while and then the object disappeared. Loud music was blasting so we didn't hear it. We were only able to discern its lights. It was low, seemed to hover in one spot for a while, and then went away. I believe it was something strange. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

IOWA RECTANGLE

OTTUMWA -- The witnesses reported seeing a square shaped object on October 10, 2001, at 9:15 PM that had two blue corners to the left as you look at it and two red lights on the two corners on the right. There was a white or yellow light in the center. The sky was pitch black so you only saw the lights on the formation of the square. I slowed the car down to a stop, but it was too far away to see details, just the shape, and the lights. It didn't appear to be moving and we couldn't take our eyes off of it. When my passenger rolled the window down to see even better, it took off heading west for a split second and was completely gone from the sky. It wasn't a helicopter; there wasn't any noise. It was square and planes don't hover in one spot above the trees. The witnesses contacted the local law enforcement offices about the sighting. The case has been forwarded to Beverly Trout, MUFON SD of IA, for investigation. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC

LOUISIANA TRANSPARENT DISTORTION BLOB

Billie Brinkley reports I had a weird sighting October 21, 2001, about 11:30 PM when I went outside to smoke and look at the expected meteor shower. Instead I saw a transparent blob like 'Distortion'. It looked like the "Predator" did in the movie. You could see the stars through it, but it definitely had edges. It lasted for just a few seconds and then just disappeared. It looked fairly close and pretty low in the sky. I've seen these things before, but not usually so close. My son works late hours and came in late. This morning he got up and told me that he also saw something weird about 3:30 AM, when he went out to smoke. He said, "It was like a big ball of light that dimmed out and became transparent, but looked like the "Predator"...his words. He said he watched it for several minutes and then it disappeared. I had not told him about my earlier sighting until this morning. There was weird stuff going on in the skies of Louisiana last night. Thanks to Louise A! . Lowry SHnSASSY1 and Billie bbrink@startelco.net (discuss@yahoogroups.com. Editor's Note: A Connecticut couple had a similar sighting on October 20, 2001.

TEXAS WINGLESS SIGHTING REPORT

ARLINGTON -- Mike Harman reports a UFO flew right over a densely populated area of Arlington on October 25, 2001. I stepped outside with my brother-in-law at 8:05 PM to take out the trash after a group dinner at my mother-in-laws apartment. We noticed this gray round wingless object moving rapidly and steadily across the sky. The object had no standard aircraft lighting, no strobing, or other lights visible on the object. It moved straight across the sky on a southwest heading. My brother-in-law was with me at the time and we both observed the silent gray spherical object from directly above and slightly south of our position until it went out of sight in about 20 seconds. It crossed Pioneer Parkway heading across I-20. It looked about ten feet across, 1000 feet up and round in shape. I seriously doubt that it was a balloon because of the high steady speed, and the fact that there was no wind at the time. No wings were visible on this object and it made no sound as it! moved across the sky in 15 to 20 seconds at an estimated 80 to 100 MPH. There was only reflected light from streetlights below. Thanks to Mike\_Harman@rocketmail.com, <http://ufopi.freehomepage.com/Mike.html>

OKLAHOMA ANGEL HAIR

ELK CITY -- Jim Hickman says the witness states, "It was around 3:30 PM on Saturday October 13, 2001, and I was northbound on US Highway 6 when I saw a strange thing in the sky. There were contrails in the sky from the local jets that fly around. However, I noticed that "angel hair" was falling instead of disappearing or staying in a consistent path with the jet. About 10 minutes later I was heading southbound back toward the object, but the object was no longer visible. I went ahead and went down the road about 10 to 12 miles to see if I could locate the object. At that time the object was no longer visible. I had noticed that there were about 6 or so other jets in the sky, but the contrails that they were making were staying in the sky like bunch of X's. Thanks to the Hickman Report thehickmanreport@prodigy.net

COLORADO HOVERING CRAFT

DENVER -- At about 5:15 AM, I awoke suddenly and was immediately compelled to look outside in the southeastern sky on October 11, 2001. The sky was clear and many stars were evident. I first saw what appeared to be a military aircraft flying from south to north - a white light with a red light and a blue light on it, and was flying rather fast. Not an odd occurrence given that there are several military bases in the Front Range area here in Colorado. However, I knew it was not a military craft when it stopped in midair and the red and blue lights disappeared. The single white light, which was now a little brighter (like a very bright star), started to bob up and down and around in the air, almost like a flying insect or a moth. I knew that since I was seeing this against the fixed backdrop of the stars that this one object was indeed moving, and it wasn't just my eyes. It became stationary, and while I was watching for additional movements, I fell asleep. The total time I watched this event was about 15 minutes. I heard the rumble of military jets crossing the airspace during this time but did not see them. Thanks to NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

CANADA FLOATING AND FLYING LIGHTS

CRANBROOK, BRITISH COLUMBIA -- Brian Vike reports that on October 2, 2001, about 9:30 PM, a 52-year-old journalist looked out his bedroom window and flying above Fort Steele about ten kilometers north was an object that grabbed his attention. "The hovering object was glowing red, green and then slowly moved away before vanishing. The witness says, "I regularly see Bighorn Helicopters coming in to land at night and this was not a chopper. I've never seen anything like it in the clear night sky." The object was also sighted by a native elder and the story of his sighting was reported as a UFO story in the Friday edition of the Cranbrook Daily Townsman that week. Thanks to Brian Vike, Geoff (Yogi) Independent UFO Field Investigator/Researcher HBCC UFO Research Box 1091 Houston, B.C. MISSION, BC -- On October 12, 2001. In the morning I opened my blinds and there was a bright blue light in a car parked outside my house. It was pointed at my house. I thought maybe it was a light from something recharging in the car, but it seemed to move in the car as the day went on eventually it went away although no one went to the car to turn anything off. Last night the same blue light was in my neighbors (directly across the street from me) bush for about twenty minutes. Then I looked out the window and it was on the basketball hoop for about half an hour. I am a sane person I have never seen anything before.

ABBOTSFORD BC -- On October 27, 2001, about 7:30 PM, we were walking the dogs in a nearby park when both of us saw something go across the sky in a northerly heading. This made the trajectory northwest of Mission B.C. It was white to orange in color and had three distinct hot spots. The tail could be seen for at least 5 to 8 seconds and then after the tail went out I could still see the object for a second or two. I have seen a lot of meteors but this one was definitely the brightest and the longest duration, I have ever seen. We were facing west at the time of entry. Perhaps the thing landed around Pemberton, or somewhere up there. Thanks to Brian Vike (Yogi) UFO Field Investigator, HBCC UFO Research and Thanks to Louise A. Lowry SHnSASSY1 <http://www.ufofiles.com/WorldOfTheStrange/default.asp>

UNITED KINGDOM YELLOW LIGHTS

WARWICKSHIRE -- Kevin Yates reports that on October 29, 2001, "My wife and I had pulled off our drive in Bishops Itchington at 6:45 PM, when we both looked up and saw a diamond formation of four bright yellow lights in the shape of a diamond with a red one on the top to the left. It moved very slowly emitting no noise, we followed it for about 10 miles to Leamington Spa. Other people along the way appeared to have seen it as well as cars had stopped by the side of the road. In the time we witnessed it, for 25 minutes it changed shape to two bright yellow lights. They also changed shape from being vertical to horizontal. When we got off the main road in Leamington Spa by the police building, I noticed another collection of the same diamond shaped lights coming from Leamington and heading towards Stratford Upon Avon. It was truly a memorable day. Thanks to Joe Trainor Masinaigan@aol.com Kevin.Yates@btinternet.com (Kevin Yates)

LEBANON UFO SPOTTED

ZALKA -- The witness has been an artist, US Marine, Forest Supervisor, and a spokesman for conservation exchange and fuel-less technology efforts. He writes, "I saw a red circle appearing suddenly in the sky on October 8, 2001. It looked like two circles inside each other at 11:55 PM. The inner one has nothing inside it but between it and the outer circle there are linking lines (linking the 2 circles) appearing as the edges of a diamond. As I saw it from the first place it looked like a star far away yet somehow describable. It moved very fast in a straight line direction southwest then stopped quickly to do a semi circle then irregular movement south north then disappeared behind a next by building. We went to the roof and nothing happened for a couple of minutes. Then it appeared again moving quickly, then stopping suddenly and doing circular movements. It lasted for a couple of minutes then become dimmer and disappeared.

HUNGARY MILITARY PILOT VIDEOS SAUCER

BUDAPEST -- Jeff Rense has received a spectacular video of a silver disk shaped object. On September 29, 2001, the pilot reports that a strange craft was flying to his left side and then moved very fast past him in the clouds as can be seen in the video. To my left I saw a bright metal aircraft that was the shape of a perfect disk. I was careful to film the object, not to try and chase it since it I could not match its speed. As I was flying a reconnaissance aircraft, I got the idea to film it and used our equipment." The pilot considers the video he made to be his property and not the Hungarian governments as he was flying the plane while not on duty and was transporting it as a favor to save the government money. He has now hired an attorney and wants the video to be released to the public. He hopes the release of a few frames will make this happen. These spectacular photos can be seen at <http://www.rense.com/general15/pilotufo.htm>. Thanks to Jeff Rense. Editor's Notes: This appears to be a verified disc shaped UFO of 25 to 30 feet in diameter. These have been filmed by numerous Air Forces of the world and have speeds greater than most jet fighter aircraft.

AUSTRALIA UFO SIGHTING

BUNDABERG, QLD -- Steve Evans was in his backyard in the outer suburb of Avoca on October 21, 2001, when his partner and he observed a string of five bright orange lights traveling north at treeline height for 5 to 10 minutes. A singular bright orange light was observed first before other's appeared behind it at close intervals at 9:20 PM. A line of five bright orange lights were visible over about half the southern sky. They moved slowly north in a uniform line until the third object dropped in altitude, but not in speed. They passed just below the Moon (quarter) except for the fourth object, which went through the Moon's light. They continued moving north slowly and became less bright before disappearing. The objects were much brighter and larger than the closest star and traveled without any audible sound. The night was clear and fine. The objects displayed no characteristic similarities to any aircraft. Each light, being the whole entity, and remained a constant bright orange light with no flashing observed. They were traveling in a rising angle. The Moon and stars were clearly seen. A vague oval shape was observed from a side view when the fourth object passed through the light of the Moon. Before this, all five objects appeared round in shape. After sighting the objects, we accessed some information on the Internet where we found information and photographs of orange orbs and orange ball phenomenon closely matching what we had observed. Thanks to Steve Evans srevans2@dingoblue.net.au and Joe Trainor Masinaigan@aol.com

SMART METALS

COSMIC CONSPIRACIES has uncovered evidence that proves that the US Military are using smart metals similar to those found at the Roswell Crash In 1947 "Time is ripe for the insertion of smart structures and materials into space systems." Dr. Keith Denoger Air Force Research Laboratories "Imagine seeing a bullet shot through a sheet of material, only to have the material instantly "heal" behind the bullet! Remember, this is not science fiction. Self-healing materials actually exist, and LaRC scientists are working to unravel their secrets. What we did at NASA-Langley was basically dissect that material to answer the question, 'how does it do that?'" McGowan said. "By doing so, we can actually get down to computational modeling of these materials at the molecular level. Once we understand the material's behavior at that level, then we can create designer 'smart' materials," Anna McGowan, program manager for the Morphing Project at NASA's Langley Research Center. Does the above quote sound familiar? Metal that is cut, only to 'heal' itself? We have all become accustomed to hearing about technological advances that were initially spearheaded by secret military research projects.

The Atom Bomb was developed during the Second World War amid incredibly tight security, and the first most people knew about Stealth technology was when the bat-like fighter-bombers were being rolled out of the hangers to attack the military apparatus of Iraq. Many of us are expecting a new dawn of technological wizardry to make its debut appearance during the current 'war on terrorism'. Cosmic Conspiracies would like to share with you some remarkable information relating to current cutting-edge technological research being conducted on behalf of the U.S. military that we believe could be connected to the materials found from the Roswell crash. We are stunned by it, not least because of how freely available much of the data is on the Internet. Finding this freely available material, however, is extremely difficult unless you are aware of the specific keywords being utilized, or, as in our case, you have a researcher of the caliber of Martin Cosnette. This is not common knowledge, despite the amazing jump in technology implied by the rapid advances being made right now. Thanks to Cosmic Conspiracies at <http://www.ufos-aliens.co.uk/morphingmetals.html>

Ambiguous Roswell Document?

Subject: Ambiguous Roswell Document?

List,

I'm reading Jim Marrs' 'Alien Agenda'. In the obligatory chapter about Roswell, he cites a memo (supposedly drafted by Gen. Schulgen, if I remember correctly) that goes to great lengths to emphasize that the AF wished a saucer would crash, etc.

Schulgen (?) goes on to report characteristics expected from UFOs, including construction materials such as foils, plastics, and balsa wood (!).

Is this memo for real or a doctored version of a real one? Or has Marrs simply taken quotes out of context? If the memo's author actually wrote the bit about foils, plastics and balsa, then it's pretty obvious he had inside knowledge of whatever happened at Roswell.

What gives?

Reported by: Anna
Nearest State Director: Emma Derdak

Report

Anna reports seeing a number of sightings over the ridge at Wallow Road, Kennilworth.

The latest was observed to be shaped like an eagle with flapping wings.

She stated that it was flying too fast to be an eagle and that she was sure the object was a metallic pewter colour with armoured feather/plates. The object came out from a cloud and was travelling west.

2 years ago she observed a "bobbing thing" travelling over the top of the same ridge. The object was a semi circle and emitted an orange light.

Anna reported also finding an 8 foot circle at the time, on the ground, that had a strong smell but deteriorated after two days.

She also stated that local farmers had found their cows to be covered in excrement in the morning and that the dogs kept sniffing it. She that the cows were used to dingoes etc. and thought that something had terrified them and was thinking along the lines of a big cat. She was quite open to having anyone pay her a visit, etc.

Reported by: Sean Location: Central Coast (The Entrance)
Report:

Sean couldn't sleep in the early hours of Friday morning and decided to go outside for a smoke. It was approximately 3.40 a.m. when a very bright light, moving "quite fast", caught his eye. The object described as a "shooting-star going upwards" came from the south east and seemed to travel past the moon where it faded from sight.

It was a clear night, little wind and the object made no sound. The incident lasted about 1 to 2 seconds and fascinated Sean so much he immediately scanned the InterNet for UFO related sites, to report his sighting.

Reported by: Graham

Nearest State Director: Doug Moffett

Graham had a three UFO incidents to mention, they are as follows:

Recent Report:

On the 14th September between 6:30 pm and 7:00 pm Graham and his wife and two children were outside having a cuppa after dinner when his youngest son said, "Look Dadda there's a plane."

Both parents looked and noticed that there were 4 orange lights, each one about the size of a one cent piece at arms length. They were traveling South to North horizontally one behind the other, at what appeared to be around 100 feet apart from each other, evenly spaced. They were not flickering or pulsating, no smoke trails could be seen, but they were traveling very slowly.

Graham estimated they were around 2,000 feet off the ground. He came to the height estimate as he had lived near the Richmond Air Force base for 10 years previously and therefore had quite a bit of exposure to aircraft. He stated at no time was there any indications of erratic flying tactics.

A few minutes later another two appeared traveling horizontally side by side at around 100 feet apart once again. A few minutes later, again, another two appeared one behind the other.

Graham stated they all ascended on a 30 degree climb when they reached the same area in the sky. He watched them climb for 10 minutes until they were nothing more than pin points in the sky.

It was a very clear night he said, there was no cloud cover, not even periodic. No noise was apparent.

Incident 1970 - 71:

Graham wanted to mention that he'd observed a white cigar-shaped object around 30 years ago, which was only around 1200 feet off the ground over Pennant Hills Area.

He stated it happened within an hour of the first Concord Plane landing in Sydney way back then. The family were outside hoping to catch a glimpse of the plane, but observed something else instead.

He stated it was clearly not a blimp and did not have the same shape at all. He said the UFO seemed almost transparent and just hovered there.

Note: If anyone knows when the first Concord landed in Sydney, Australia, that will provide the timeline within an hour.

Disc Shaped Object:

He also mentioned a disc-shaped object he and his father observed at Narabri when he was young, his father was out hunting or something. He stated the disc was a yellowish hazy white, his father was so scared he took his son home.

Report:

Ita and her daughter Sue E live on the north side of the Williams Town RAAF Base.

At approximately 8.30pm on Monday 15 October on a clear night Ita decided to retrieve some washing from the line when she noticed an object to the south of the base.

The object was stationary, larger than a star, reddish in colour and "long" in shape.

She watched it for 10 to 15 minutes and then decided to call her daughter, Sue E. Together they continued to watch the object that periodically moved up and down and sideways.

After about 15 minutes Sue E became frightened and they both decided to go inside. Ita said the object was still in the same position when they went to bed.

The witnesses have lived near the base for quite a while and both are used to seeing various types of aircraft. They agreed they had never observed anything like this near the base, before.

Although, after chatting to me for a while Ita confided that several years ago she saw a huge cylinder-shaped object glide over, leaving a trail behind it.

Her other daughter was terrified one night when, on the way home from Nelsons Bay, she was buzzed by a disc-shaped object.

An interesting report and another family touched by the UFO phenomena.

Reported by: Snr. Constable G and John C

Report:

I responded to Snr. Constable G's call and was informed a John C had reported what looked like a plane burning up in the sky. Snr. Constable G gave me the number to contact John C.

John and his wife were travelling from Blayney to Bathurst at approx 7:50pm when they noticed a bright white/silver light travelling from East to West accross the horizon.

The object then exploded, giving off debris of yellow and later red in colour. The object appeared very low in the atmosphere and at first did not appear to have a trace but later observation showed a trace or tail.

Duration of the event approx 5 seconds. Appears to have been a Ferric-based [iron] meteor with perhaps traces of magnesium, given the very white glow and the low altitude in the atmosphere it achieved.

Ferric based meteors tend to last longer in the atmosphere and thus get lower than carbonaceous meteors and are probably more likely to have trace elements such as magnesium, than carbonaceous meteors. To add brilliance to the sighting, the Moon was a small crescent and the skies in that part of the world are inky black, a great place for a sky watch!

The Gundiah Mackay Abduction Milieu

A preliminary report by Bill Chalker and Diane Harrison AUFORN Director

An extraordinary and controversial milieu has developed around events that reportedly began late on the evening of Thursday, October 4th, 2001, at a Gundiah property near Tiaro, culminating in the early hours of Friday, October 5th, 2001, and then played out in the glare of rapidly escalating media coverage.

Three people were directly involved in these alleged events. Keith Rylance (40), his wife Amy (22), and their business partner, Petra Heller (39) were on their property, which was being developed as "Whispering Winds" winery. Other potential activities were also being developed at the location. The following account comes from interviews conducted by us with them, along with primary source material such as TV interviews.

Keith Rylance told us that he had gone to sleep in the caravan bedroom at about 9.30 pm. Petra retired to her bedroom in the caravan annex. Amy stayed on a couch watching TV in the caravan annex "lounge room". Each of these locations were in close proximity, separated by a window and wall respectively from the lounge room. Petra's room had a door leading to the lounge room, which was left ajar. The door to the bedroom, where Keith was, apparently was open to the lounge room. Amy apparently fell asleep on the couch. A storm was in the area.

Around 11.15 pm, Petra was reportedly woken up and when she entered the adjacent lounge was confronted by an extraordinary sight, that allegedly quickly overwhelmed her. A rectangular beam of light was being projected through the open window of the caravan lounge room. This light beam appeared to be truncated at the end. Inside the beam Petra claims to have seen Amy in a sleep prone position, being carried out head first through the window. Underneath her, also within the beam were the items that had been on the coffee table adjacent to the couch Amy had been on. Before apparently fainting in shock Petra saw that the beam was coming from a disc shaped UFO hovering just above the ground a short distance away, near a tree at the rear of the clear section, immediately behind the annex caravan house.

Petra reports she believes she was only in a faint for a very short period of time. Regaining consciousness, she began screaming. Keith reports that he was awoken by the commotion coming from Petra. As he came from the caravan bedroom and stepped down into the lounge room annex Keith claims he was confronted by the sight of a highly agitated Petra and the contents of the coffee table on the floor in front of the window. He told us that he soon realised that the window screen was torn in both a vertical fashion and along the bottom of the window frame. Keith indicated that initially he couldn't get any sense out of Petra who was crying and very agitated, so he rushed outside trying to locate Amy. She was reportedly nowhere to be found. Keith states when he started to be less agitated himself he was eventually able to get from Petra an idea of what happened. Keith claims he initially refused to believe what Petra was telling him. He said he rushed outside again trying to find his wife. Eventually as the situation became clearer, Keith indicates he decided to call the police.

Keith call the Tiaro police around 11.40 pm reporting that his wife had been abducted and imploring that the police should come out. The marning status at that time meant there were some delays in the police coming out, but about hour and a half after the initial call Senior Constable Robert Maragna from Tiaro and an officer from Maryborough arrived at the site. Initially police thought they might have been walking into a situation involving foul play, even perhaps a murder scene, but then the bizarre circumstances of the alleged events came into focus. The two people, Keith and Petra, at the Gundiah property were claiming that Amy Rylance had been abducted by a "spaceship"! The officers were struggling to keep an open mind. They were joined later by Sgt. John Bosnjak, the officer in charge of the Tiaro police. He had been asleep when the police called him to assist in the investigation. The three officers continued their investigations at the site. They confirmed that Keith Rylance and Petra Heller appeared to be in an agitated state and that there was no sign of Amy Rylance. The torn screen was examined. A flowering bush, commonly known as "yesterday, today, tomorrow" was located immediately outside the left side of window, had indications of possibly being affected by heat or another mechanism along its right side. Oddly another flowering bush, a hibiscus, located immediately on the right hand side of the window area was not affected in the same way. The police took samples for possible later testing.

While the police were at the property, a phone call came through, which was taken by Keith Rylance. A woman was calling from Mackay indicating that she had taken a somewhat distressed and apparently dehydrated young woman from a BP petrol service station on the northern outskirts of central Queensland city of Mackay, some 790 kilometres to the north of the Gundiah - Tiaro area. The young woman turned out to be Amy Rylance, and the female caller was ringing to advise that Amy was apparently all right and was at the Mackay hospital, where she had been examined by a doctor. Keith handed the phone to Snr. Constable Maragna.

Given these extraordinary circumstances Mackay police were called in, making a total of three police stations involved in the investigation - Tiaro, on outskirts of central Queensland, Maryborough on the coast and Mackay, some 790 kilometres to the north of the Gundiah - Tiaro area.

A statement was notarised by the Mackay police with a Justice Act acknowledgement, that required Amy to acknowledge that she had stated was true to the best of her knowledge and belief, and that if it is admitted as evidence, that she may be liable to prosecution if she had indicated anything in it that she knew was false.

This statement indicated that she last only recollected lying on the couch at the Gundiah property. She had no recollection of the events that Petra described, but claimed she then next remembered waking up lying on a bench in a strange rectangular room. Illumination came from the walls and the ceiling. She was alone. She indicated she called out and heard what seemed to be a male voice, asking her to be calm and that everything would be alright and that she would not be harmed. Soon an opening appeared in the wall and "a guy" about 6 feet tall walked into the room. The man appeared to be slender in build but in perfect proportion, covered head to foot in a full body suit. He had what seemed to be a black covering mask on his face, with a hole for his eyes, nose and mouth. He repeated his calming assurances. Amy felt she had been there a while. The guy told her they were returning her to a place not far from where they took her from, because the lights were wrong at the property and it wasn't safe. She then indicates she found herself lying on the bed and falling asleep. The next thing she recollects is that she woke up on the ground with trees around her. She felt disorientated, could smell the ocean, and indicated she was not sure how long she tumbled through bushland, but seemingly it was for a long time, but she felt she wasn't making much progress. She then came out onto a road that looked like a highway and saw a light from a petrol station. She walked into the station, where staff seeing her state, tried to offer some assistance. She accepted some water, as she felt somewhat dehydrated. Initially she was not able to answer identifying questions, and didn't know where she was. She was also asked if she had been drinking or was on drugs, to which she said no. Amy indicated she felt tired, sore, drained and lethargic. She asked a woman at the service station to take her to the hospital, as she didn't know of where else to go. The woman and her friend took Amy to the hospital. Later Amy spoke with two police officers and also spoke with her husband Keith from the hospital. She then went to Mackay police station where she gave the statement of events. Amy also indicated that this sort of thing had never happened to her before, but when she was in 5th year school she had seen a large UFO surrounded by smaller objects.

The police arranged to put Amy in a motel pending the arrival of her husband. He and Petra arrived during the day and indicated they spent considerable time with Amy discussing what happen. Extensive notes were apparently made and photographs were taken of a triangular arrangement of marks on her inner right thigh, marks on each heel and the growing out of her hair which she had dyed earlier in the week. Her hair had apparently started to show her former colour, suggestive that some considerable time had passed for her, apparently indicative of rather more than a few hours. Body hair had allegedly also become somewhat more pronounced that would otherwise would be apparent for the short time involved.

Via a Newsagent's a copy of the Australian Ufologist magazine was purchased, Keith, Petra and Amy started to learn more about UFOs. Keith Rylance contacted the Australian UFO Research Network office number mentioned in the magazine. Diane Harrison took the call Date: Fri, 5 Oct 2001 15:20 p.m. and for the next hour or so listened to the story that Keith and Amy told. Petra was apparently sleeping at the time.

Given the nature of the story, its complexity and the fact it apparently featured the alleged use of "solid light", Diane decide to bring Bill Chalker into the investigation, making contact with him during the evening of Friday, October 5th. Paradoxically Bill was scheduled to talk at a Brisbane UFO conference on October 13th, and his topics included "solid light" cases and the application of science to alien abduction cases. Bill put a call through to them at the motel, securing permission to record the conversation. Once again Petra was not available to talk about her part in the alleged events. Keith Rylance went into considerable detail about the events, referring often to the notes they had apparently been compiling during the day. The details described covered the events Petra had witnessed, what Keith had experienced, and what Amy told them had happened to her during her experience. Finally Bill spoke with Amy, focusing mainly on the events before and after the claimed onboard experiences, because Keith had already gone into considerable detail about the latter. Bill discussed with Amy her general responses and her physical state and her current state of thought on her experiences. Keith Rylance seemed to what to control how both media and investigators would get involved. His desire to contact the media promptly drew from both Diane and Bill the suggestion that he should think very carefully about the possible ramifications of doing so. Keith seemed to feel that it was important to get the story out, as it would come out anyway and this way he could control the way it did. He was also trying to restrict the way the investigators could or should look into their experience. He claimed they didn't need to prove the experience. While he didn't directly witness the experiences, he believed both Amy and Petra.

Given the possible nature of the event, and that irrespective of the ultimate resolution of the affair, it seemed destined to be a big story, Diane and Bill decided to undertake an investigation. They had been given an indication from Keith Rylance that the three would wait for the investigators to come to Mackay. The claimants were in no apparent hurry to return to Gundiah. They gave permission for Bill and Diane to visit the property on the way. Bill arrived in the Brisbane area on Tuesday afternoon, October 9th.

Diane and Bill then travelled to Gundiah, arriving at the Whispering Winds winery property, just after 10 pm. Because of the lateness of the hour, we got the witnesses permission to stay there overnight and to conduct whatever investigation we needed to do. Keith had arranged for a neighbour to regularly check on the two pets left behind, namely a parrot and a kelpie dog. He indicated to us that it would be okay to let the dog off for a run, but warned us it was very friendly but inclined to jump all over people.

We let the dog off at some point and observed its behaviour. At one point it did jump up on the window where the damaged screen was located. This gave some support to the possibility that at least some, if not all of the damage, could have been caused by the dog. Some of the damage on closer inspection seemed suggestive of possible dog damage. Our inspection of the plant damage also suggested possible prosaic causes, such as heat stress. A plant at the front of the house had similar damage and a healthy flowering bush of the same species that was at the window, was examined by us at Mount Basset lawn cemetery has similar damage. A gardener there we spoke to indicated that the species often had random or more extensive damage of a heat stress nature from hot sunlight. The prosaic possibilities for both the screen and the plant damage are only suggestive at this point and further investigation is required.

We undertook extensive investigations at the property and the area. Police were very helpful. Our investigation generated many issues and questions, which we feel need resolution, in order to assist interpretations of these events. Further extensive investigations were undertaken in Mackay, focusing in particular at the area where Amy Rylance returned. These included attempts to reconstruct the circumstances of Amy's return, through onsite research. The BP petrol service station staff were spoken with and surveillance videotape that may contain Amy's visit there was provided to us by the station owner. This part of our investigation also generated many issues and questions that need resolution if we are to approach any measure of certainty about the real nature of the events alleged.

Keith Rylance indicated to us he would be available to us when we got to Mackay, but it was made clear to us early on the first day of our investigations there that this wasn't probably going to be the case. When we contacted the motel where they had been the night before, their third motel in Mackay, we learned they had apparently already checked out that morning. We left messages on their phone but didn't hear from Keith until early on the afternoon of our second day, as we were leaving Mackay. In his mobile call, Keith apologised for not being available, but was indicating they had relocated to an unspecified location after having fled the area. The primary reason for this Keith indicated was that they claimed they had a kind of "men-in-black" experience. In this case, Keith was reporting a pursuit of their vehicle by a high-powered dark brown 4-wheel truck. The nature of this event apparently frightened Keith, Amy and Petra, prompting Keith to attempt to loose the vehicle and eventually leave the area.

Before the completion of this preliminary report (14th October) we have heard from Keith again. We remain hopeful that they will get into more direct contact with us.

This affair is both extraordinary and controversial. Many have rushed to judgement, but given its complex and evolving dynamics, caution and patience is necessary. We have many issues and questions we would like to try to resolve. Further contact with the Rylances and Petra Heller may help this process. The case is far from closed and requires an objective, open-minded investigation. Only time will give us the possibility of resolution and certainty about this intriguing but controversial affair.

Still under investigation

Hiya Ron,

I hope you don't mind if I get 'lazy' but I'm just going to do a cut/paste from a note I wrote to someone else privately recently. I hope it will answer your question.

Before I went to Hopkins I subjected myself to a complete psychological evaluation. I did that for two reasons.

1. I honestly believed that I might be losing my mind because I was 'seriously' entertaining the idea that the experiences/events were based in physical reality. That thought was so repugnant to me (on many levels) that I chose to question my own sanity before accepting something so outrageous as being fact.

Just a note:

I 'passed' with flying colors. In fact, the shrink was so complimentary of me during my evaluation that I felt embarrassed at times. The point is, other than some 'normal range' neurosis, (doesn't interfere with my ability to function in the world) I checked out just fine. In all candor there were some issues with 'anger' and which is something I've kinda had all my life, and some unresolved anxieties, but no 'major' glitches. I'm generally stable, in good touch with my feelings and the people around me, and my intellectual faculties are functional and intact.

2. I didn't 'know' Hopkins and therefore I did not 'trust' him to give me a completely objective/unbiased evaluation. He -earned- that trust from me over time. A period of about six years.

Briefly, about Budd:

I don't know what your opinion of him is Ron. There is a lot of BS out there about Budd and his character. All I can tell you from my own fist hand experience is that he is an intelligent and honorable person who conducts his 'business' (work with abductees) in a completely straight, professional, and above board manner. No 'leading', no 'contaminating' no none of the things that he is accused of (usually) by people who have never spent any time studying him live, in-person, and close-up. Negative comments always seem to come from folks who really do not know him at all. If you'll notice, the folks that tend to 'defend' Budd when such attacks occur are people that know him personally.

The bottom line is; I was very careful and thorough about how I looked into my own 'case'. I went to the very best people I could find. With all sincerity, I have come by my opinions and beliefs honestly. It hasn't been easy.

That is why I react to certain "abductees" the way I do. Keeping the noise level down in an environment like the Internet is just mission impossible. It's like a public toilet. Anybody can walk in and drop a stinking load. But there is a 'core' of solid people with solid cases that cry out for further investigation. The din created by a certain faction (mostly over the Internet) makes it all the harder for folks to focus on these more 'tangible' cases.

Beyond all that, to fairly describe all the psychological, emotional and intellectual ins-and-outs of the process of 'coming to grips' with the situation, it would literally take a book to do it. No BS.

>Just curious, but have you had x-rays taken?

Only when my physician deemed it necessary Ron, and only on the part of my body that he was trying to 'check out.' Funny you should ask, one of the first things I volunteered to do for the producers of the NOVA segment on abduction (when she first invited me to participate) was, that I would be willing to take any kind of medical exam i.e.; MRI, X-rays, blood tests etc. (anything short of intrusive surgery actually) but they never performed any of those tests. And for the same reason my own doctor won't do 'em... they do not want to subject anyone to tests that they cannot justify on medical grounds. They'd catch all kinds of hell from their insurance outfits and medical review boards. As much as I'd like to get 'head shots' and scans of one or two other parts of my body, unless I break something in the general area, it's no dice. Besides, an MRI scan of the head alone costs $1000.00 + US funds. I'm a working stiff - I don't have that kind of scratch to burn.

I do have an interesting story though. I had a chest picture taken about 25 years ago that freaked the doctor out. There appeared to be a solid looking metal tube inside one of my coronary arteries! I've never had a 'stent' or any kind of heart surgery. He took two more shots and the thing appeared in all of them. I never went back to him so there was no follow-up to the story. But 'curious' nonetheless. I have also been told by doctors that there are 'signs' of "surgical procedures" (their choice of words, not mine) having been performed inside my head. (Sinuses) I've never had any of that either. My body is also living in complete stasis (no damage being done) with Hepatitis C. Something my gastroenterologist (who specializes in diseases of the liver) tells me makes me "one in many million." Who knows, could be my genes and metabolism. But, it could also represent a genuine physical anomaly. I'll never know until someone actually checks it out.

From the ASP angle I had no difficulty getting a CAT scan. I told my doctor about my incredibly weird dreams that could be more 'real' than 'real' and she referred me to a neurologist. I wanted to find out if a tumor or epilepsy was causing the dreams. I came away with a clean bill of health, much to my relief.

But it seems to me that your doctors would be negligent for not checking you out completely - because there is an off-chance that there could be some underlying physical cause.

For instance, I know a woman who has temporal lobe epilepsy and was having visions of the Virgin Mary, etc. Her doctors discovered the TLE and put her on medication. Now, not every visionary has TLE.

So, I find it astonishing that your doctors wouldn't perform EEGs, CAT scans or MIRs to rule out a physical cause.

I don't like lumping alien abduction, TLE and ASP together - but they all can and do offer a different version of standard reality and it only makes good medical sense to rule out an underlying physical cause.

On a personal note, I think it is important to say a few words on the subject of hypnosis as relates to two men, Budd Hopkins and Dr. David Jacobs. I know Budd and respect and love the man.
He is that kind of guy. You meet him and he just imposes a sense of well being and conveys a warm and wonderful impression of a desire to help. His is a passionate and devoted work. Dr. Jacobs I do not know, except by his writings and what others say about him, others whose opinion I respect. Highly. And his is an equally passionate and focused desire to determine a truth.

Having said all that, I find it fascinating that those regressed
by each, each group, Budd's and Dave's, seem to share the same reasoning regarding the intentions of the alien abductors. Dr.
Dave's clients share the opinion, generally, that the aliens are evil in their intent. Budd's groups shares another less benign view over the alien abductors.

Interesting if not telling. And I said, "If Not Telling!" For this is another datum and nothing more. Whether to draw conclusions from the datum is the pervue of the skeptibunker, not the researcher.

Here is an interesting point. What you consider noise may not be noise but another point of view, which often brings out a level of angst from you John. Noise. In general, and in business, noise is a positive thing. The more noise, the more people pay attention. There can be a parallel in this situation.

I would have you define noise. Specifically what is this noise? Is it that you do not agree or do not believe what is being said by those guilty of noise? Or, is it that you just do not like the tone or direction of attitude of these noisey people?

<snip>

Anger is something which must be controlled or properly directed.

Otherwise it may flare at the wrong times. Angst diminishes one's credibility. It demeans those whom it is directed and makes the group look as if it is devious. It ain't. Largely. So there.

Flying Creatures Terrify Chilean Driver

Unidentified Flying Creatures Terrify Chilean Driver

A woman and her daughter lived moments of true anguish and fear as they witnessed what appeared to be a flock of oval-shape creatures flying over their vehicle. The eyewitnesses were traveling in a van from Calama to the coastal city of Antofagasta. The incident took place last Saturday, October 27, 2001 at approximately 8:30 PM. According to one of the eyewitnesses, the sighting lasted about 15 seconds.

The mother, one of the eyewitnesses, contacted Calama UFO Center to report the sighting but did not want us to reveal her name. She is a prominent business manager at a computer firm in the city of Calama.

Both mother and daughter were planning to spend the weekend in their Antofagasta residence. The 16-year-old daughter goes to school in Antofagasta, so they wanted to spend some time together.

According to them, the flying creatures they saw were oval in shape and grayish in color. Our investigative center had never before received reports describing these types of entities, until now.

EYEWITNESS TESTIMONY

We were driving to Antofagasta. As we got to the slope on the road I knew we were almost there. The road in that area has many curves; therefore, I was very alert because it can be dangerous to drive at night on that part of the highway.

My daughter reclined her seat. It had been a long day so she began to relax, as it got dark. Suddenly, she jumped out of the seat yelling and screaming. "Look mother!" Her tone of voice frightened me, so I asked her what was wrong. "Can you see that?" She asked me. I held on to the steering wheel tightly and began looking up. I knew it was a dangerous section of the road and I could not afford to get distracted.

I finally saw what she was talking about. It was a flock of flying creatures. There must have been about 20 of them. It was too dark to distinguish any physical aspects. They looked like shadows. All I could tell by looking up from the vehicle was that they were oval in shape and grayish in color. They were very fast and did not appear to fly a straight course; they were making wobbling movements in all directions.

I thought to myself, 'if those things were UFOs but they appeared to be living creatures'. I tilted my head toward the windshield and I noticed that they were traveling in a straight line. They were heading towards Calama. My daughter noticed that one of them got closer to our van. "I think it is looking at me, mother", she said.

We have never been so scared. I finally told my daughter to stop looking at them. She went into the back seat and began praying.

I thank God for not loosing control of the vehicle.

I have to admit that I was reluctant to come forward with this. One of my drivers told me before that he saw similar beings crossing the road in that area. At first, I did not believe him. However, now that it happened to us, I definitely do. I still cannot believe that I am doing this, but I know what I saw.

End of testimony

Let me ask you something Ron; years ago, maybe when you were a kid, did you ever fall out of a tree and break a bone, or maybe you had an operation, or someone close to you died? Do you recall the circumstances of those traumas clearly? As if it happened yesterday? Well, that is precisely the same kind of clear and unambiguous recollections I have of certain events in my own life. The 'UFO' experiences being predominant among them. You don't forget something like that - ever. It burns itself indelibly into your brain. I remember those events as clearly as I recall the time I shattered a bone in my hand thirteen years ago. No difference between that memory and the ones involving 'UFOs'.

Yet, for reasons that I cannot fathom, the UFO memories because of their out of the ordinary nature must be something other than that, and only because others cannot accept that they happened. No one would question that my recollections of having been badly injured 13 years ago, but memories of UFO-encounters are not. I do not separate my UFO memories from other clearly recalled events in my life simply because they do not fit-in with accepted models of 'what is possible' and 'what is not'. Those kinds of judgements are imposed from the outside by others. I recall them simply as things that happened to me.

That's one area where we disagree. I think there is objective and verifiable proof. I've been bitching because no one has taken the time to do the necessary work to determine whether there is or there isn't any. Without careful and definitive studies being performed, the opinion you express above is just that - an unfounded opinion. How can you know that there is no proof if no one has ever taken the time to systematically look for it?

>For what it's worth, it has been due very largely to your mostly

Maybe not "satisfaction" Ron, I'm not out here feeding personal needs. But I am gratified that folks I like and have some intellectual respect for are taking me seriously and at my word. That means a lot to me. I work hard to earn it.

>Finally, I think maybe that temper caused you to say a few

1. No it wasn't an outburst of temper. I meant every letter of every word I said to him. I think the man needs serious psychological help and he makes the job that many of us are trying to do that much harder.

2. Since when does it "take guts" to admit that you're not sure of anything? To the contrary, I think it takes guts to tell everyone that even though you are not certain, you still 'think' you're an abductee! There's something bass-ackwards about it. I would rather think that I'm clean out of my mind if I had an 'opening' of doubt like that. Entertaining doubt is a luxury that myself and many others, who have clear recollection of events that happened to us, cannot indulge in. I would have to deny and negate my own life's memories to selectively doubt them.

My problem with it is; that people who report without being certain of their own facts, only serve to muddy the water for those who are certain and are trying to report the facts of those encounters. To distract much needed attention from cases where reports are coming from credible people, who are sure of their facts, is wrong. If he's "not sure" then he shouldn't be mouthing-off as if he knows what he's talking about. What is so anger based about comments like that? I'm just telling it like it is.

>>And it doesn't make us, (those of us who are confident we know

I am not lying. And, it doesn't matter much to me whether you or anyone else believes me or not. I have to answer only to my own mind/conscience. I stand up to be counted because I feel it is a social obligation/duty to do so. What people do with my report in their own head afterwards is up to them. I reported. I did what I felt I had to do and damn the torpedoes. I will also continue to campaign for a serious, and hopefully multi-disciplinary, investigation into our claims.

>>You and many others like you are a category all unto yourselves.

>He's a Dylan nut and I'm a Springsteen nut, so we kinda are our Yeah, and I love Jimmy Hendrix, Charlie Parker and Thelonius Monk but that's not what I meant. ;) I was talking about the many 'abductees' who have diagnosed themselves as such because they may have had a bad dream or two along the way. There are many like that. That is the sub-category that I was referring to.

Hi, Mac,

See Chapter 15 of my book, Roswell: Inconvenient Facts and the Will to Believe and the corresponding Appendix I, where all is made clear and, in the appendix, the real Schulgen document and the bogus one are reproduced in their entirety. The latter had everyone in ufology, Roswell believers and skeptics alike (including Yrs Trly) fooled for years.

Aliens Are Out There!

From the Hendon Times
By Sarah Warden

Beckenham, October 31st: A Beckenham author claims to have answered one of the major questions troubling humanity. We are not alone.

And the truth from out there was brought to Bromley when Timothy Good, of The Avenue, Beckenham, visited The Glades to discuss his research, which shows aliens are here on Earth already, with bases beneath the sea and on land.

The 59-year-old's interest in aliens was sparked from a childhood desire to be a pilot which made him think about UFOs.

Since then the ex-violinist has spent years travelling the world to find out more.

His expertise has been displayed in lectures all over the world and he was invited to the Pentagon for discussions in 1998.

America, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Spain and Italy were all research sites for the latest book.

But he claims aliens can be found closer to home, too, and believes he saw a UFO hovering over Orpington back in December 1980.

He has gleaned much of his information from high-ranking military sources and sees his work as a battle against scepticism.

Mr Good said: "I certainly don't enjoy preaching to the converted. I want people to learn the truth about what is going on. From what I have learnt, I know there are alien bases under the sea and underground in various points of the world. Contact has been made between aliens and military forces.

I don't believe all of these aliens are hostile, I think we have different races on Earth and they have different intentions.

One thing which might give a ray of hope is they seem to have some sort of vested interest in the Earth and I certainly don't think they would stand by and let us blow the planet to smithereens.

"I think governments have a calculated campaign of disinformation to make sure people don't get too interested."

The Glades marketing executive Andy McLean was at Mr Good's talk in Ottakar's book shop.

He said: "The talk was stirring stuff and the audience was gripped from start to finish. His theories are very convincing and, as conspiracy theories go, this one takes some beating."

The new book, called Unearthly Disclosure, is currently out in paperback.

UFO Studies Take Off At MTSU: Claims Of Alien Encounters Evolve To Fit The Times

Jessica Carter
Staff Reporter of The Daily News Journal
(Murfreesboro, Tenn.)

On a dark, cloudless night, a man driving down a rural road looks up at the clear sky. Suddenly, a large glowing object emerges among the stars. Although it's hundreds of feet above, the object appears close enough that the man can see details of its construction.

It makes no sound as it hurtles across the sky, darting from one place to another impossibly fast and suddenly disappearing.

Although many people discount the idea that unidentified flying objects exist, the topic remains a source of intrigue for many, including MTSU English professor Angela Hague.

Hague will teach an honors interdisciplinary seminar during the spring semester on 'The UFO Debate'.

"I've always had an interest in things paranormal, especially abductions," Hague explains of her curiosity about the topic. "It's similar to near-death experiences and out-of-body experiences ... One seems to be related to the other."

The class will study the UFO phenomenon from a variety of perspectives, including a historical overview from 1896 to the present day.

Throughout history, Hague says, claims of UFO sightings generally have correlated with political and military pressures around the world.

In the 1950s, when the world was in turmoil over tensions between the Soviet Union and the United States, people known as "contactees" came forward to say they had been contacted by beings from Venus and Mars seeking to protect them from nuclear war.

Claims of alien encounters were less prevalent in the 1960s and '70s. But in 1987 and 1988, the notion of "grays" coming to Earth once again became popular in media and society, Hague says.

That flood of attention to UFO and alien activity "corresponds with the fall of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union," she says. "It's as if somebody has to be coming after you.

"My theory is (UFOs became popular) because we had no external enemies."

In addition, Hague's students will examine psychological interpretations of UFO sightings and the treatment of aliens in popular culture, including television and film.

From 1947 to the present, there have been many UFO sightings that have yet to be explained, Hague says.

According to the Mutual UFO Network (MUFON), more than 10 million American adults claim to have seen what they thought was a UFO.

"I think there are UFOs - all that means is they are unidentified flying objects", Hague says.

Encounters with aliens have been even more difficult to substantiate, although stories of extraterrestrial experiences range from harmless to horrifying.

The image of a typical alien has evolved from a huge monster to a creature with a tiny body, big head and huge eyes.

Depictions of aliens in human form, as in the television series 'Third Rock From The Sun' and the new film 'K-PAX', have become increasingly popular in recent years.

These "domesticated aliens", as Hague refers to them, reflect people's desire to explain something they don't understand.

"They look like us, a lot of the time they act like us," she says. "We want to take something that we don't understand and domesticate it and make it like us... in fact, maybe even better."

Hague says the idea that beings other than humans exist somewhere in the universe leads many people to speculate about the differences between 'us' and 'them'.

What intrigues most people is "not so much a technological difference, although they are more technologically advanced than us," Hague says. "They are beings with no emotion who exist only in terms of consciousness.

"They reflect a refinement of the way we view ourselves without being clogged up with fear and love and other emotions. They are a projection of how we wish we could be sometimes."

AACC hosts conference on UFOs
By Noi Mahoney, Staff Writer

Annapolis resident Anthony Chesto and his brother, Larry both sat entranced.

Larry, who says he knows a thing or two about conspiracy theories, drove from Connecticut to Arnold to join his brother and about 40 other people at Anne Arundel Community College for "A 2001 Space Odyssey: Explorations into the ET Question."

What drew him to the conference to discuss subjects like the "Face on Mars" and abduction by aliens?

"Because I'm crazy," joked Larry, a retired typewriter repairman. "I'm very interested in telepathic communication. If you listen to a lot of the alien abduction stories ... the aliens always communicate non-verbally."

For Anthony, an electronics engineer who wrote a research paper in college on UFOs, the conference Saturday was a chance to see people speaking on subjects he's followed most of his life.

"I've seen a lot of pictures of Mars. I've worked on satellites ... I was interested in hearing what people had to say," Anthony said.

Organized by Arnold psychologist Peter Resta, the conference featured a series of lectures on "Artificial Surface Features on Mars" and "1952: ETs Over D.C.?"

"What motivates me is the kind of information that is being disseminated," Mr. Resta said. "There are things going on that are worthy of scientific study."

But not always worth being associated with publicly.

"Oh no, I can't give my name. I don't want anyone to know I'm here," said a retired engineer from Crofton. "I've followed it all my life. I don't believe everything I hear ... but you can't just dismiss everything."

The first lecture of the day, "Artificial Surface Features on Mars," could have made even hardened skeptics wonder.

Thomas Van Flandern, a NASA consultant specializing in celestial mechanics, showed the latest satellite images from the Mars Surveyor now in orbit around the Red Planet.

Mr. Van Flandern showed picture after picture of possible artificially constructed structures, canals and faces on Mars.

"There's no possible scientific explanation for many of the things we're seeing on Mars," Mr. Flandern said. "Like triangles -- a triangle shape very rarely occurs in nature. It is just impossible for wind or gravity to construct triangles ... yet on Mars we're getting back dozens and dozens of perfect triangle shapes on the surface."

Another lecturer talked about the second most famous UFO case in history (behind Roswell, N.M.) called the "Washington Merry-go-round."

In 1952, unexplained lights appeared over Washington for several days, reported by radar operators and Air Force fighters who chased the lights over restricted air space near National Airport.

"The government's official explanation was temperature inversion," said Robert P. Swiatek, a physics patent examiner and secretary-treasurer of the Fund for UFO Research.

Mr. Resta had his first local UFO conference three years ago at the Arnold campus, and hopes to have another one in a few years.

"The fact that we could not be alone is pretty doggone important," Mr. Resta said.

If the youngest conference attendee had his way, there would be a UFO conference every year.

"This is my first real conference and I love it. I hope for a lot more," said Adam Clark, 16, who drove from Northern Virginia with his parents.

"I love talking about UFOs and aliens. You never know what you're going to get."

Hmmm... may I make a correction?

Dear Robert, List and Errol,

Skeptics are not such bad guys. I do not believe, in general, that skeptics are those who believe that there is an explanation for everything other than the abduction. I do believe that skeptics are those who believe that there may be another explanation, and follow up with that until a dead end is reached.

I do believe you refer to the skeptibunker and wonder if you agree? Class, the Philly, is one such.

And for the record I think you are correct, with that one caveat. Any person should question every aspect of his or her perceived experiences on the basis of finding absolutetruth. And for the record as well, in my mind, I firmly believe that what I remember experiencing, did occur. It's just that I can't believe it.

Just kidding. I can't "understand" it and therefore I cannot accept it as absolute truth. See? What a terrible conundrum. An oxymoron. To know within that one has had terrorizing experiences and to know within that such is not possible within accepted science. Such is the life of a man who questions. I question.

>Skeptics say all cases are explainable; gullible believers say >everything is a UFO. Other than a difference of opinion, they >are on the same sheet of belief music.

Robert, the time has come for truth. But truth as I've said so often, can be unstable. For truth turns out to be individual, based on so many variables which impact on logic. Sometimes truth is mixed too richly with emotion, which when presented with logic, almost always wins.

My truth, mine... is such that from age about three I was taken from my home, indeed, from the bed of my parents between whom I slept on those bad nights of expectation. I was taken by them. I was transported somehow on a solid blue light (beam?) I was examined. I was taught stuff. I was abused, physically and et al. I have triangular marks on my arm and leg. Three solid circles about 1/4 inch in diameter in a perfect equilateral triangle of about 3/4 inch per side.

I have the same mark on my leg, left arm, right leg. On the left arm, there is no way I could have made the marks myself. No way. I am not ambidextrous. Although I believe I could have had a lot more fun with my clothes on had I been. These are examined by a more than competent dermatologist and a matter of record. Photographed and biopsied. Many times. No answer. Not made by anything which is in his text books. "His" words.

Lights go out on me. Clocks (digital mostly) don't work. I have the classical illnesses which many abductees share. I have memories. Memories which have not changed for 55 years. Verifiable too. As mom and dad have heard the stroy that long. Mom and dad celebrated their 63rd wedding anniversary on October 30. Dad still drives. His memories of poor me and mom's too, are burned into their minds because my experiences were so traumatic for the entire family.

I've experienced missing time, which cannot be explained (read the book).

But throughout all that, I still believe that there MAY be another explanation. In my mind, highly impossible that this may be so. But intellectually, it is possible.

Go figger.

Such is not siding with the enema .... enemy, the skeptibunker, such is siding with logic and reason. Which when mixed in with emotion, usually lose big time.

One last thing... Trust no one. Promise nothing. Believe what is your truth and get on with life. And if you can, tell the world, because there are many confused and helpless people out there. Sharing if you can is a good thing not a bad thing. Then, all who wish may decided for themselves. Who knows, one may help someone in the process by telling of something which they too, have experienced. It's too damned easy to perceive that you are quite crazy. But when you think you are nuts, you usually are not. This was the case with me. Phobic. But on the three plus psychological profiles I've had, there is no illness or other flag.

As for hypnosis, I still believe that one's own recall is much more strong and believable (by the experiencer) than hypnosis. Although I accept the possibility that I am wrong on that count.

Jim Mortellaro

Hi John.

At the Royal York Hotel for dinner during your visit to Toronto with your son and Budd Hopkins, you mentioned about a knee problem that your son had which was mysteriously corrected. When your physician asked when the corrective knee surgery was done, you told him that your son didn't have surgery even though now your son had such scar marks (you attempted to lift your son's pants to show us these mysterious scars as proof).

Apart from scoop marks, which suggest that tissue samples were taken, have others experiencers reported similar alien(?) surgeries, to correct various medical conditions? Experienced surgeons should be able to say something about the surgical techniques used by examining the scars and tell if internal stitches or other foreign material are present.

It would appear that MUFON has become more meaningless, less active members and can't get anybody out to vote. Because of this, they are now attempting to 'fix' the problem by making the vote totals look much higher than they really are.

That way, when the vote totals are announced, instead of saying
"20 people voted in favor, 2 against, and 2000 did not cast any ballot", they can now say something like "2020 voted in favor and 2 against."

Who knows, if the tactic is successful and the member 'mice' sit around and do nothing, other political leaders of both parties might look to MUFON as the great example of how to make the vote totals higher than they really are. Hmm, wonder what would happen if they changed it around, meaning if a person didn't vote, it counted as a 'NO' vote? Nah, they would never do it...

Cheers,

Robert

Hi Larry,

I am a little confused. My questions are:

1. Does MUFON wish to change the bylaws?
2. Can they just change the by-laws without getting approval from the people MUFON represents? If so, sounds kinda fishy to me...
3. Why do they say they want to change the by-laws?
4. Why do you think they may wish to change the by-laws?

5. What could their motives be?

6. Have they responded to you, or attempted to dialogue with you as to their motives and so on?

Those were my thoughts...

Also, I think your request to have your letter published in the newsletter sounds like a good idea.

Take care,

Lara

Morning Errol,

I was actually at the talk mentioned in this briefing.

I spoke to Tim afterwards and he is keen to "get the word out".

I asked him if he would come online again and talk to people through IRC, he is keen to do so. I am currently making arrangements with him, so watch this space <g>

Do you remember the name of the band?

Random anecdote, but after a club night last winter, I had 'breakfast' at an afterhours diner in Boston with the members of a local (I think) band called "Allagash 4". I asked, and apparently they did get permission from the Wiener brothers (who they thank on their CD).

Hi All,

You wroye:

>reasoning regarding the intentions of the alien abductors. Dr.

>not the researcher.

The kinds of negative things that your 'off-the-top' comments imply is an insult to the intelligence and individuality of anyone of the bright, and decent individuals that attend those meetings.

Do you know Harold EgeIn? Harold was among the first group of people that Budd ever investigated and worked with. Harold, along with many others, is of a decidedly 'New Age' - benevolent space brothers bent. Several of the people who regularly attend Budd's groups are also members of Harold's S.P.A.C.E. group here in New York. Although Harold and Budd each hold vastly divergent views/ideas about the nature of the 'abductors' they get along famously and Harold and the members of S.P.A.C.E. have always been a welcome addition to any meetings at Budd's place.

In fact, one of the things I always liked most about the people who attended those groups was their diversity of views on the subject. The differences of opinion was what served to fuel many of the interesting and enjoyable discussions we conducted.

For those who know nothing about what is being discussed in terms of the meetings that Budd hosted, and the folks who attended them, I offer the following:

A majority of the people would only get to attend maybe one meeting per year. Budd went out of his way to invite different people each time. He wanted to give everyone a chance to attend and he seemed to enjoy mixing and matching personalities that might make the proceedings more interesting.

One of the regulars is a Manhattan psychologist who is a hard core skeptic. He was usually around to question just about anything that came up during the discussions.

Ole Jimbo fails to mention that.

The only reason I attended almost all of them (about four such meetings a year) was because Budd invited me so that I could fill everybody in on what we had been up to lately in terms of developing IF, any media; TV, radio, etc. that we had participated in, or any interesting new cases or developments that may have come along.

Usually Budd would start things off by asking the group a question and then giving each person an opportunity to answer or comment on it. The discussions would open up from there and off we'd go.

I'm here to tell you that in spite of Mortellaro's purely imagined generalizations, there were as many differing points of view as there were attendees at those meetings.

See Jimbo, I can say stuff like that because I actually got to know those folks personally. And unlike yourself, over a year-long period of time.

Mortellaro's unfounded comment suggests 'consensus' of some kind. Nothing could ever be farther from the truth. He presumes to make this outrageous and unfounded statement about "group philosophy" as if we were all 'Hopkins cultists' or mindless drones that shared the same beliefs. And, as if he actually knew what the hell he was talking about.

News-flash Mr. M!

There is no 'consensus', either real - or as in this case - 'imagined' among those who attend Budd's groups. Period.

BTW Docca, some 'puppies' are hard to house-break. Keep a lot of toweling and plastic garbage bags in stock.

Happy pooper-scooping. ;)

The Visitors

by James Coburn

Nothing was ordinary about what Wes Pitchford saw hovering over Edmond 36 years ago.

He and his wife, Wilma, were sipping iced tea while sitting on top of their little watch tower on top of their former home located near Interstate 35 and Highway 66. They were not watching for unidentified flying objects - simply enjoying the warm August night as their five children were tucked in bed.

The 68-year-old pawn shop owner said he can't be certain what he saw above his home in 1965, but the object appeared to be "a flying saucer." "It wasn't scary - you know - but astonishing to see (a UFO) that close out here," Wes Pitchford said.

He and three other witnesses of the UFO were quoted Aug. 3, 1965 on the front page of The Sun for haven seen the flying object. "Several city policemen reported seeing mysterious objects in the skies Sunday night and early Monday morning," the story stated.

The object was brightly lighted and frequently changed color, reported now-retired Edmond police officer Joel Cobb. He described the UFO as briefly being above his north central Edmond neighborhood before it hovering again for a few minutes over Gracelawn Cemetery.

The article reported that Jack Cook and his daughter spotted a "brightly lighted" UFO diving downward. Cook was traveling west of Luther when he spotted the object. Cook has since retired from owning an Edmond hardware business.

Neither he or Cobb could be reached for comment about the UFO sighting. Pitchford recalls the UFO having several illuminated portholes. "It did hover between our house and (Highway) 66. It hovered out there - it stopped," he said while glancing over an Aug. 3, 1965 Edmond Sun news article about the UFO sightings.

"It (states) here that it 'whooshed on by, going west by southwest,' which is about right."

He doesn't recall telling The Edmond Sun the UFO was 28 to 30 feet in diameter, as stated in the article. But it was "a good size," he recalls. "It was kind of round with a hump on top and then porthole windows around that," he said.

Since then, Pitchford has not spotted another one in town. He said a lot of people scoffed at the reported UFO sightings and talk of the incident became has since become a nearly forgotten topic. "I think a lot of them think you're kooks," he said while referring with a laugh to other people's reactions of disbelief to UFO's.

The Edmond UFO sighting is explored in the newly published book, "More Mysterious Oklahoma" by author David A. Farris.

Tinker Air Force Base reported four UFOs on radar at an altitude of 22,000 feet, according to Farris, who lives near the outskirts of southwest Edmond. They were also tracked the previous evening by Tinker as well as a Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth, Texas, he said.

After the sightings were the lead stories in many state newspapers, the U.S. Department of Defense concluded the UFOs were the result of scintillating stars, Farris said.

His book is not conclusive but anecdotal in content. It is intended for readers to come to their own conclusions about UFO sightings. But certainly there are cases of flying objects which remain unidentified, he said.

Are Mysterious Goat-Suckers Killing Sheep?

Associated Press
Oct. 31, 2001 10:48:00

MEXICO CITY - A family of farmers in northern Chihuahua state say mysterious vampire-like creatures have killed and sucked the blood of more than 60 sheep in the weeks leading up to Halloween.

The state news agency Notimex reported that farmer Ramiro Parra Gonzalez was headed to his field outside the city of Bocoyna on Wednesday when stumbled upon 35 dead sheep, all of which were found without a drop of blood in their bodies and with two small bite marks on their necks.

Parra Gonzalez told police that the slayings were the work of the "chupacabras," or "goat-suckers," a group of legendary beasts that have terrorized his family, Notimex reported.

Parra Gonzalez said he heard dogs who normally sleep in his fields begin to howl exactly at midnight on Wednesday. A few minutes later he heard the dogs running for their lives.

"I thought it was probably a fox," Parra Gonzalez told Notimex, adding that he might not have liked what he would have seen had he ventured outside to investigate.

Parra Gonzalez said Wednesday's attack marked the third time the goat-suckers have struck his family, Notimex reported.

The attacks started on Oct. 10 when Parra Gonzalez's brother, Francisco, said he returned to his fields after lunch to find the lifeless, bloodless bodies of 12 sheep and one pig.

Then on the morning of Oct. 25, another relative, Martin Parra Orpinel, said he found 16 of his sheep dead and another 14 gravely injured. All had been bitten on the neck and mysteriously lost a lot of blood, Parra Orpinel told authorities.

A local police spokesman said authorities were investigating all three incidents.

Rumors of goat-suckers spread across Latin America several years ago, though many officials dismissed the reports, saying animals were being killed by wolves, dogs or coyotes.

The rumors spawned folk songs, t-shirts and even little rubber goat-sucker figures.

Reports were common in Puerto Rico and there were some in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

Mystery Space Blast 'Solved'

By BBC News Online science editor
Dr David Whitehouse

Astronomers may have solved the puzzle of what it was that brought so much devastation to a remote region of Siberia almost a century ago.

In the early morning of 30 June, 1908, witnesses told of a gigantic explosion and blinding flash. Thousands of square kilometres of trees were burned and flattened.

Scientists have always suspected that an incoming comet or asteroid lay behind the event - but no impact crater was ever discovered and no expedition to the area has ever found any large fragments of an extraterrestrial object.

Now, a team of Italian researchers believe they may have the definitive answer. After combining never-before translated eyewitness accounts with seismic data and a new survey of the impact zone, the scientists say the evidence points strongly to the object being a low-density asteroid.

They even think they know from where in the sky the object came.

Completely disintegrated

"We now have a good picture of what happened," Dr Luigi Foschini, one of the expedition's leaders, told BBC News Online.

The explosion, equivalent to 10-15 million tonnes of TNT, occurred over the Siberian forest, near a place known as Tunguska.

Only a few hunters and trappers lived in the sparsely populated region, so it is likely that nobody was killed. Had the impact occurred over a European capital, hundreds of thousands would have perished.

A flash fire burned thousands of trees near the impact site. An atmospheric shock wave circled the Earth twice. And, for two days afterwards, there was so much fine dust in the atmosphere that newspapers could be read at night by scattered light in the streets of London, 10,000 km (6,213 miles) away.

But nobody was dispatched to see what had happened as the Czars had little interest in what befell the backward Tungus people in remote central Siberia.

Soil samples

The first expedition to reach the site arrived in 1930, led by Soviet geologist L A Kulik, who was amazed at the scale of the devastation and the absence of any impact crater. Whatever the object was that came from space, it had blown up in the atmosphere and completely disintegrated.

Nearly a century later, scientists are still debating what happened at that remote spot. Was it a comet or an asteroid? Some have even speculated that it was a mini-black hole, though there is no evidence of it emerging from the other side of the Earth, as it would have done.

What is more, none of the samples of soil, wood or water recovered from the impact zone have been able to cast any light on what the Tunguska object actually was.

Researchers from several Italian universities have visited Tunguska many times in the past few years. Now, in a pulling together of their data and information from several hitherto unused sources, the scientists offer an explanation about what happened in 1908.

Possible orbits

They analysed seismic records from several Siberian monitoring stations, which combined with data on the directions of flattened trees gives information about the object's trajectory. So far, over 60,000 fallen trees have been surveyed to determine the site of the blast wave.

"We performed a detailed analysis of all the available scientific literature, including unpublished eye-witness accounts that have never been translated from the Russian," said Dr Foschini. "This allowed us to calculate the orbit of the cosmic body that crashed."

The object appears to have approached Tunguska from the southeast at about 11 km per second (7 miles a second). Using this data, the researchers were able to plot a series of possible orbits for the object.

Of the 886 valid orbits that they calculated, over 80% of them were asteroid orbits with only a minority being orbits that are associated with comets. But if it was an asteroid why did it break up completely?

"Possibly because the object was like asteroid Mathilde, which was photographed by the passing Near-Shoemaker spaceprobe in 1997. Mathilde is a rubble pile with a density very close to that of water. This would mean it could explode and fragment in the atmosphere with only the shock wave reaching the ground."

The research will be published in a forthcoming edition of the journal Astronomy and Astrophysics.

Dear John, List, Errol,

Nope. Missed the point entirely. I wrote not about Budd's Group meetings. Nothing. I wrote about those regressed by Budd and by David. David's regressed abductees generally concur with David's view of the evil nature of the alien. Of course, the other view is possible. That David's regressed clients are those who generally are of that view.

Budd's group are abductees who are more benign, in their view of their abductors.

I attended two such of Budd's meetings at his home and was indeed impressed with the diversity and the help rendered there. But I was not speaking of those meetings at all.

There is a consensus. But not of Budd's Group meetings. Of Budd's regressed clients. And of David's regressed clients. And of Mack's regressed clients. Each group of _regressed_ abductees appears to conform to the views of the regressor... or the other way around. Simply an observation. And a true one as well.

I repeat, for it appears necessary. Budd's group meetings are nowhere mentioned in my post. Didn't even think about them. It was those who underwent hypnosis.

The reason I prefer my own recall is that I wish not to be accused later of having someone point me in a specific direction. Although I am certain that there will be other accusations once the information is released in the book. Such is life.

I have stopped paying much attention MUFON, as they don't seem to have their rudder in the water most of the time (IMO). They're lack of a solid direction has a number of long time researchers looking to other sources for information, and I really don't see any effort to improve the situation.

I haven't seen the proposed change to the By-Laws, but suspect that the comment that they're embarrassed by the low vote totals is probably accurate. The question of whether or not they can make global changes would likely depend on the wording of their original Charter (assuming that one exists). But most organizations are actually run by a small group (i.e. Board of Directors) and usually that Board has the ability to speak for all Members. If the Charter indicates the Board can change the By-Laws without membership input, then they can do whatever they want. The only penalty for a bad decision is a loss of membership, and that's already a problem.

Karl,

Why do you make everything so confusing?

From your Schulgen documents:

3.Items of Construction

- a. type of material,whether metal, ferrous, non-ferrous, or non metallic.
- b. Composite or sandwich construction utilizing various combinations of metals, plastics, and perhaps balsa wood.
- c. Unusual fabrication methods to achieve extreme light weight and structural stability particularly in connection with great capacity for fuel storage."

It seems to me that the "balsa wood" mention is a clear connection to Roswell debris descriptions.

Hmmm, 'sounds like' it might be the same case, only Russ's band consisted of four or five members (not sure which) all of which were in the room at the time. At least that is my understanding of it. I 'could be' wrong about that detail.

When the Trade center went down, schmoes like me who don't watch much TV, or subscribe to cable service, lost all our channels except for CBS, our channel 2. Out of necessity I have subscribed to a digital satellite service that carries all or most of the cable channels. Now that I'm able to; I'll have to keep an eye out for program you mentioned.

>Do you remember the name of the band?

I haven't seen Russ in more than three years. He told me the story almost six years ago. He may have mentioned the name of the band to me but I don't recall it. Sorry. I 'think' all this stuff happened while he was in college. The 'band' was composed of his school buddies.

Yeah, it all started I think with the band UFO. They talked about the subject in the lyrics to several of their songs. I wonder if the "Allagash 4" have written/recorded any tunes about their 'name-sake' case or about the abduction phenomenon. ;)

No doubt about it, UFOs, aliens, and abduction has entrenched itself, and made its mark, in the popular media.

I'm sorry that you've mentioned this in public Nick. Although I do mention my family members from time to time, I try to keep them out of it and in the background as much as I can. My son is a 26 year-old young man with whole life in front of him and a mind of his own. I don't know if he would want this kind of information broadcast and discussed in a public forum. I am the 'activist' in the family. They have not chosen to be as 'public' or 'proactive' as I am. I will be happy to discuss this with you privately if you wish. But not on-list. You are free to ask me anything you wish in terms of myself, but please ask me privately if it's ok before bringing my family members into the discussion.

Yes, others have reported the same kind of thing and some have even reported 'spontaneous remission' from different life threatening disorders. I have absolutely no idea how true any of those claims may be. But that they are reported, I must answer in the affirmative.

>Experienced

Yes, they should. Only I didn't know at the time that UFOs or abduction may have had anything to do with it. We made the discovery of the identical (twin) scars, one over each knee when my son was 15. That was years before I made any connection between the 'strangeness' in my life and UFOs/ alien intervention.

Dear Listers,

I am enclosing a copy of my mail to Jeff Westover, illustrator for the children's book 'Almanac of Alien Encounters' (2001), authored by Eric Elfman, as well as my current opinions of the book, as requested by Dwight Connelly, an editor with MUFON. In writing this "review," I have taken the liberty to extract quoted excerpts from the book to illustrate my opinions.

As you will see, I am not unbiased about how the UFO and abduction scenarios should be presented to children. I do believe there are positive outcomes possible, in that some children may be encouraged to learn more about all aspects of these phenomena and our place in the cosmos based on our past, current and future scientific theories and goals. This little book does not address this need sufficiently. Historically speaking, and as this little book illustrates, we have proven ourselves unable to master our fear, paranoia and disbelief in something that has remained a mystery far beyond our control for hundreds of years. We are just now beginning to take the initiative to do so. Therefore, it serves no positive purpose to terrify children with specific ET medical procedures which they may or may not experience during an abduction.

It might be advantageous for all those interested to buy a copy and study it. It is $5.00 (U.S) in paperback, and well spent to decide for yourselves how this book might be improved upon in the future. It has potential.

Sue

Dear Jeff,

October 28th (2 days after receiving your note to me about the book), I received an email from Dwight Connelly, an editor at MUFON, requesting that I do a review of the Almanac of Alien Encounters. I wrote him back saying that after I received the book, studied it and had more than 2 sentences to say about it, I would write such a review. I've read the book twice and studied it. I have a number of concerns about it, speaking from an abductee's point of view, and thought you and Eric Elfman should be made aware of these concerns. I doubt that MUFON will choose to publish the letter, simply because I have made some very pointed and negative remarks about their organization's stance on involvement in the abduction issues, which are part and parcel of the total UFO phenomena.

I was hopeful, Jeff, after receiving your letter, that the book would be an insightful, impartial history of all aspects of the UFO/ET mystery. What is presented is the reality of the smallness of human-kind's mindset, from the past to the present in our failed attempts to deal with the issues. It does not leave the reader (especially a child experiencing abduction) to have much hope for his/her future in solving the issues within his/her lifetime. Nor does the book expand the child's scientific understanding of the universe.

It might be wise to include a chapter on our newly and daily expanding knowledge of our solar system (i.e., the addition of 9 new planets, as well as 1 planet just discovered, beyond Pluto, as well as information on the new Lifter3 anti-gravity technology, which you can find at www.tdimension.com . By adding a couple of semi-scientific books, along with those already included in the "Far Out: A UFO Reading List" chapter, the Almanac may provide a more positive, forward-looking, scientific and hopeful approach to finding answers to some of the UFO/ET related questions. Two books which are age appropriate (10-12 year olds), and though their titles sound intellectually intimidating, are actually easily read and understood. They are: Hyperspace: A Scientific Odyssey Through Parallel Universes, Time Warps, and the 10th Dimension (1994) by Michio Kaku and Beyond Einstein: The Cosmic Quest for the Theory of the Universe (1995), by Michio Kaku and Jennifer Thompson.

Jeff, the illustrations are marvelous, especially of the various "beings" depicted. I have seen all of the various beings, and enjoyed making "mental corrections" to the illustrations shown. However, it is too bad that the publisher recommended the pulpy, "comic book" paper on which it was printed. It was probably suggested as a means to counter printing costs, especially since there are so many illustrations. The paper definitely detracts from the serious nature of the contents of the book.

I know how hard you and Eric have worked on this book. I know what it takes to research, write, illustrate and coordinate publication. I have not written any books, only helped others in editing and publication. I am hopeful that with corrections, The Almanac of Alien Encounters will get at least an Honorable Mention in both the Caldecot and Newberry Awards for 2003. Please don't give up. Your publisher would also be foolish to give up on this book. It could be a viable addition to children's literature, and mark the way for future such books.

With that in mind, please read the attached copy of the review I wrote to Dwight Connelly at MUFON. There is hope for this book, despite my current scathing opinions. I reserve the right to change my opinion in the future, should you decide to pursue and implement said needed improvements. And, remember, these are only my opinions...one reader, one ex-abductee. Though I know you will be offended, try not to take it personally. It is not meant to be a denigration of your's and Eric's abilities. Try another recipe, is all.

Very sincerely,

Sue

Dear Dwight,

I have several comments to make about Eric Elfman's Almanac of Alien Encounters. I was going to list the positive and negatives, but upon closer examination have found counter reasoning for inclusion of every one of my original suggestions for improvement. I may contact Jeff Westover and Eric Elfman on these issues below. These are only my personal opinions.

Overall the book is an informative, concise little history of our lack of understanding about the UFO phenomena (mystery) and to date illustrates well our inability to deal with it in a mature, open-minded, scientific manner. It is age-appropriate reading material (in most instances) for children 12 and above, but only for those children who have not experienced abduction. Familial reoccurrence of UFO/ET experiences is not addressed in any format in this book.

It is further evident that the author and illustrator have chosen to treat the phenomena as a generalized mystery, no further along toward answers to the phenomena than when they were first investigated. The author attempts to present both the "True Believer's" and "Skeptic's" viewpoint in an apparent effort to avoid "contamination" of the child's mind. But, by "leaving out" specific quotes made by important persons and/or place names, specific dates, newspaper photographs of specific incidents corroborating the reality of the events (1942 Los Angeles Air Raid, 1947 Roswell aerial view of debris field; 1952 Washington, D.C. fly-overs), the child is left with making possibly erroneous deductions and generalizations as to whether or not the "UFO Flaps" actually occurred as reported.

The book may be easily read by an 8 or 9 year old, but the material in some cases, is too mature (e.g., p. 60, description of amniocentesis procedure done on Betty Hill: "A needle was inserted into Betty Hill's navel"; and, p. 105, description of an implant procedure during abduction: "The ball is on the end of a long, thin needle, which is inserted up your nostril until it breaks through the membrane of your nasal cavity. The pain will be intense.") Sorry. This is not appropriate reading for a 9 year old, whether an abductee or not. This is not a medical book.

For a child who may already be experiencing "visits" without total conscious recall, having only vague "dream-like" recollections, unsure of whether or not their "dreams" are real or fantasy, this kind of description of the implant procedure is exactly what I do not wish my children or grandchildren to have to fear before they experience it. It's bad enough when it happens without knowing what's going to happen. If I had read this before the implant was placed in my ear, my terror would have been compounded 100 fold.

Furthermore, the common events which many people have claimed to experience are under-emphasized (apart from an in-passing mention of "missing time," the terror with physical examinations). What is missing is the common description of: the "stare," the "scanning," the "environmental warnings," nor is the fact that upon being "dropped off," the ETs give a hypnotizing command using the "stare" technique that instructs the abductee that he/she "will not talk to anyone nor remember anything that has happened." That command is always given to all abductees before being returned to our reality, be it bedroom, playground or boonies. I think it is more appropriate to teach "blocking techniques" for these kinds of mental commands than it is to discuss amniocentesis to 9-12 year olds.

The illustrations and accompanying descriptions may trigger memories the abducted child is not emotionally ready to handle, and the "reality" of those experiences may strike home after reading corroborating evidence to support those memories. The illustrations are "just enough off-kilter" to force the abducted child to make "corrections" to those illustrations. I found myself doing just exactly that.

Subtle leads are given to the reader throughout the book as to what may be considered by others (family, friends, community members, investigators) as to what may be considered inappropriate behavior when reporting a sighting or an abduction experience. For the most part, these subtleties are distinctly negative. In only 1 case study presented was a "positive" (albeit skewed) role model provided the reader (e.g., p. 63, describing the 1964 Zamora encounter: "According to one official investigator, the Air Force was hoping to find flaws in Zamora's story, or to brand him an unreliable witness. They couldn't do either. Zamora, a longtime police officer, respected member of the community, and regular churchgoer, was interviewed for hours. All who spoke to Zamora were convinced of his sincerity." So, if you are 9 or 10 and you read this, you may interpret this to mean: If I see a UFO or have an ET experience, no one will believe me unless: 1) I have a very respected and steady job, 2) participate in community activities, 3) go to church regularly, 4) am known to be a sincere person. How's that for a defining "skewed bias" by the author?

Many of the people and incidents the author uses to illustrate possible UFO/ET sightings and/or experiences which were reported (some investigated) are viewed by researchers as "hoaxes" or presented in a negative light (e.g., "Miracle" at Fatima, "George Adamski and the Man from Venus," The Flatwoods Monster, "The Kelly, Kentucky Drunken Hillbillies," etc.) What is stressed is what the skeptics believe. "They maintained that people who reported seeing occupants were hoaxers (or the victims of hoaxers), mistaken, or deluded." Oftentimes, specific details as to dates, place names, specific quotes are not included. Where actual newspaper photographs could be used to illustrate the "reality" of a particular incident (as the 1952 Washington, D.C. fly-overs), a pencil illustration is used instead. BTW, the Roswell debris photo (not used) shows a much larger area than 1 sq. mile, as indicated in verbal statement only, in reference to the Mogul balloon incident. No mention of the latest USAF "dummy drop" explanation was made, verbally or photographically.

Therefore, critical thinking skills are not being encouraged. What is being "taught" to the child is that: 1) you better be careful who you report to or: a) no one will believe you; or b) the MIB's will come get you and may kill you [p. 36 describes Bender's and Barker's paranoia; p. 86 Condon's paranoia in his personal burning of all of the Condon Committee's thousands of reports, etc. in his home fireplace] or c) you'll be considered "delusional," or a liar, "seeking attention" if you report to the wrong people. 2) It is better to not to report anything to anyone. Therefore, negative contamination of the child's mind is not avoided, but encouraged throughout the book.

The fact that MUFON is listed as one of several organizations to contact in case of a sighting is slightly mis-leading. It is well-known that MUFON members have nothing to do with persons reporting abductions. Just how do your members address such questions? Do you pass the buck off onto local psychologists? That will do nothing to engender self-assurance nor confidence, nor advance the scientific investigation into this phenomena. I can assure you, if that is the way MUFON is prepared to handle such a call, the issue will go no farther.

No one likes being labeled a "crazy," whether you're 13, 33 or 53. That is the bottom line, as long as the government contends there are no UFOs, ETs. They are the liars, deluding only themselves. There are more and more children and adults be abducted daily world-wide, with accompanying videos of these alien spacecraft. How many more generations do you think it will take before "the light bulb comes on?" My children trust their senses and are teaching my grandchildren to trust theirs.

If we continue on the tact we have been taking for 50+ years, trying to delude the general public into non-belief of what is happening beneath our noses, knowing full-well we are only deceiving ourselves, life on this Earth will be more divisive, less harmonious, less peaceful. I do not sense that to be a positive outcome. This book, as it is presented, does nothing to help that process.

Sincerely,

Sue Strickland
ex-abductee

Jim, John, List, all -

I'll risk the wrath of all by stepping in here to point out that Jim's observation has been made by others, including John Mack himself. Although Mack now denies that he said it to us on video tape (us being Russ Estes, Bill Cone and me) he is also quoted in CDB Bryant's book, on page 270, Mack is quoted as saying, "And there's another interesting dimension to this... which is that I'm struck by the fact there seems to be a kind of matching of the investigator with the experiencer. So what may be the archetypal structure of an abduction to Dave Jacobs may not be the uniform experience of, say, Joe Nyman or someone else. And

Which, if we think about it, is ridiculous because they all make the claim that the experiencers come to them without having read in the field of abductions, or seen the documentaries, or watched any of the talk shows. They come in fresh and clean, and here is this matching of investigator to experiencer.

Then, on page 271, Mack makes an insightful statement that he doesn't seem to understand. He said to Bryant, "It seems to me that Jacobs, Hopkins, and Nyman may pull out of their experiencers what they want to see."

In other, more precise words, Mack is saying that those under the influence of hypnotic regression seem to be led to a specific point by those conducting the hypnotic session. That for all the suggestions and claims that they work hard not to lead the abductee, that they do it anyway, probably not consciously and probably not on purpose, but they do it. And Mack has seen it, spoken about it, and then failed to understand the significance of what he said.

And, please, remember here that I have quoted what Mack himself has said about this situation.

But I could go on and quote David Jacobs, who cautions that those with a New Age philosophy (read Mack here) may be leading their witnesses in that direction. He also claims that he doesn't lead the witnesses, yet in 'The Threat' he tells of the woman who believed her experiences were benign until he finished his hypnotic regression of her. Now she sees the real danger.

The real point is the abduction researchers know what is happening but they fail to understand the significance. And that, I believe, is the point that Jim is making.

There are very few published accounts of such spontaneous

John, on UFO UpDates you have mentioned about an experience your mother had which she understood as a religious one. You had a different interpretation of it. Did your mother's experience pre-date the strangeness in your life? Could it be that all such experiences are part of the same phenomena, and if so, cannot be studied in isolation if we hope to truly understand what is happening?

If Schulgen indeed wrote this in regards to UFOs, then I have to agree with Ed that the "balsa" reference is a bit suspicious. Metals, plastics, and something similar to balsa wood are exactly the materials described by witnesses to the debris field.

Hi, Ed & Fellow List Fiends

Compare para. 3(b) of the genuine enclosure to the genuine Schulgen draft collection memo (p. 300 of my book) and the subtly doctored version of same in the bogus Schulgen enclosure (p. 305), wherein the "clear connection to Roswell debris" is made by tagging on "or similar material" after "balsa wood." Then see footnote 14 (on p. 199), which explains why such construction was of great interest at the time, making it clear that nothing strange from Roswell or anywhere else was required for such interest on the part of USAAF intelligence.

Note, too, the highly significant deletion ("particularly in connection with great capacity for fuel storage") from the real para. 3(c) when the hoaxer created his bogus document.

Thanks for asking, Ed. Hope this helps.

Cheers,

Karl

Subject: Schulgen & Balsa Wood

Karl, Ed, List,

I checked out the appendix in Pflock's book and read both versions of the Schulgen memo in question. While one is a subtle forgery based on the original, the reference that caused my initial double-take is in the `_original_` as well as the fake!

Gen. Schulgen discusses UFO manufacture in terms of sandwiched foils, plastics, and `_balsa_wood_`. This last reference is patently bizarre, and would seem to represent an "insider's" knowledge of events at Roswell. One would hardly expect alien craft to be built from balsa wood, yet witnesses to the "debris field" consistently describe a balsa-like material among the foil, etc.

Secondly, as both versions of the memo are largely the same, it's a possible that the fake emerged from within the government in order to confuse Schulgen's fairly shocking description of alien materials - which happen to match descriptions of witnesses at Roswell.

Maybe I'm being paranoid and Schulgen was just brainstorming probable UFO construction materials.

But `_balsa_wood_`?

I can't help but feel there is a link with Roswell here.

I didn't miss a thing. Just who do you think attends those meetings, if not the people Budd is working with? Whether he has hypnotized them or not.

Let me ask you something. How many of "those hypnotized by Budd" have you actually surveyed in order to arrive at the absurd conclusion that they all "share the same point of view as the researcher?"

As I said in my original response; you are only "parroting" remarks made by others in the past. Others, who like yourself, have never polled or interviewed anyone "hypnotized" by Budd.

Much less enough of them to lend any real validity to your claim.

Show me the survey or the poll of those people that you conducted that substantiates your outrageous claim.

>Budd's group are abductees who are more benign, in their view of >their abductors.

You're talking through your hat. You have no way to ascertain if that is true unless you got to meet them all yourself (at Budd's meetings) and if that were true, and you really knew them, you wouldn't be making the ridiculous claim you make - because it isn't true! ;)

>I attended two such of Budd's meetings at his home and was >indeed impressed with the diversity and the help rendered >there. But I was not speaking of those meetings at all.

Those meetings are attended by the people Budd is working with! What the Hell are you talking about? You say that those who Budd has worked with have a more "benign" view of the abductors than those who David Jacobs has worked with. Then you turn around and say that the people at Budd's meeting demonstrate a "diversity" of viewpoints that you are impressed with! Jim, if the whole thing wasn't so very stupid on the surface I'd be laughing my ass off.

But your "off the top of you head" remarks are not funny. You are insulting the intelligence and individuality of all those who have worked with Budd Hopkins.

Your first, generalized, statement, that those hypnotized by Budd all share the same point of view as his, is in complete opposition to your statement that those of Budd's clients that you met at the (two) meetings you did attended, have an "impressive" diversity of points of view.

You are talking about the same people in both statements. So which is it, Jimbo? Are their views "diverse" (you say "impressively" so) according to the ones you actually met, or are they "all the same" based on information you are parroting from someone else?

>>Mortellaro's unfounded comment suggests 'consensus' of some >>kind. Nothing could ever be farther from the truth. He >>presumes to make this outrageous and unfounded statement about >>"group philosophy" as if we were all 'Hopkins cultists' or >>mindless drones that shared the same beliefs. And, as if he >>actually knew what the hell he was talking about.

>There is a consensus. But not of Budd's Group meetings. Of >Budd's regressed clients.

Six of one, half a dozen of the other. The people at Budd's meetings are the people he has regressed! And many that he hasn't. That's another misconception that you are spreading with this absurd comment. You give the impression that hypnotizing his clients is something that is generally performed on people who report to Budd. More unfounded BS on your part.

>And of David's regressed clients.

You don't know squat about Budd's clients - because Budd himself would have to reveal their names to you and I know he didn't do that - and you know even less about David's clients/cases. I'll bet you can't name one of David Jacobs clients that you have interviewed, much less fifty or a hundred who all share David's views and would be a number significant enough to add some validity to your statement. But you don't even know one do you? You have not ever asked any of Budd's people if their point of view is in complete agreement with Budd's but you don't even know one of David's cases personally.

So once again, just what the hell is your remark based on, other than pure conjecture and speculation on your part? As far as I'm concerned it's a case of you talking just to hear the sound of your own voice. There is no substance to any of what you say.

I challenge you and anyone else, to show me the interviews with Budd and David Jacobs clients where they all admit to sharing the same point of view as either of these gentlemen. Put up or shut up. I'm sick and tired of blow-hards making false blanket statements about people that they have never met or spoken to.

As I said, after five and-a-half years of attending meetings at Budd's, I got to know hundreds of these folks personally. Many of them by name and many of which I speak to from time to time. The statement that they all share the same or similar point of view as Budd Hopkins is a smear and has no basis in reality.

Ole Jimbo himself admits: that the few people he did actually meet demonstrated an "impressive" difference of opinion.

Gimme a break. Stop sounding off about things you know nothing about. You insult the intelligence of a large group of people as if it was alright to do so.

>And of Mack's regressed clients.

You know even less about John Mack's people than you do about Budd and David's combined! And as has been demonstrated, you know little or nothing about them. ;)

>Each group of regressed abductees >appears to conform to the views of the regressor...

BS. Talking just to make wind. No basis in fact. Show me the survey or the interviews. At least I attended meetings with these people for over five years. I got to know them personally. I'm telling you that there are as many divergent points of view among them as there are people.

>Simply an observation.

Observation of what? The inside of your eyelids? Certainly not "observation" of John or David or even Budd's clients. You only attended two meetings at Budd's, none at David Jacobs, and none at PEER. Yet you say they all - or most of them - share the same points of view as those who investigate them. And you don't even know any of them! <LOL> My Lord man, can't you see why I'm always jumping on you with both feet? You impugn the intelligence and individuality of a significantly large group of people, just to gratify some "need" you have.

>I repeat, for it appears necessary. Budd's group meetings are >nowhere mentioned in my post. Didn't even think about them. It >was those who underwent hypnosis.

Who are the ones who attend the meetings, that swallowed the cat that ate the bird, who swallowed the worm that started the fire?

>The reason I prefer my own recall is that I wish not to be >accused later of having someone point me in a specific >direction. Although I am certain that there will be other >accusations once the information is released in the book.

Enough, I've given your ridiculous statements much more time and attention than they ever deserved. I just didn't want your uninformed speculations to go unanswered. I was there. I know the people you are talking about. And I know for a fact that what you say of them of is untrue.

You know, the webmaster of PEER reads these posts! I can only speak for Budd's people because I know many of them. I hope that Will Beuche reads this and chews on you, himself.

This statement of yours is an insult to all of PEER's members, IF's members, and those who are a part of David Jacobs group of cases. Gee, I hope you don't expect any abductees to buy your book.

Get a new hobby man. You're not good at this one.

Hypnosis is the subject of this thread. Whether he has hypnotized them or not is therefor a silly statement of non fact. I was there and was not hypnotized. Cogito, ergo ...

>Let me ask you something. How many of "those hypnotized by Budd" >have you actually surveyed in order to arrive at the absurd >conclusion that they all "share the same point of view as the >researcher?"

Actually, that is a very good question. And the answer is "several" when I was associated with IF. How many have you surveyed? The reason I did so then, was to establish in my own mind, whether I should go through with Budd's suggestion that I be regressed. Based on my conversations with those who were undergoing treatment at the time, I decided against.

>As I said in my original response; you are only "parroting"
>remarks made by others in the past. Others, who like yourself, >have never polled or interviewed anyone "hypnotized" by Budd.

Perhaps I am. But I am parroting some pretty decent opinions out there, John. Yours excluded. As to those remarks, they are merely observations as I pointed out quite specifically. They may be telling. Probably are. That I do not agree with you is obvious. So?

>Show me the survey or the poll of those people that you >conducted that substantiates your outrageous claim.

It's not outrageous. Do your own research. Many researchers, including John Mack says the same observation. Does that make them wrong too? Or is it merely moi?

>>Budd's group are abductees who are more benign, in their view of >>their abductors.

It most certainly is true of those I've met. Now I suppose you want to know how many? Well, there is you. Then there is me. Then there are about six or seven with whom I interfaced, questioned thoroughly and asked quite pointed questions of. Enough of that. How about answering this question ...

How many of Budd's hypnosis clients have firm beliefs that their alien abductors have evil intent? For example, I do not ask if the intent of the alien entity is to hurt us but rather, to do evil against human kind? Is it a large percentage? Small. Fifty fifty? How about comparing that percentage (which is small from my experience there) with that of Dr. Jacobs regressed clients? Pretty telling eh? Now here, John, I can quote chapter and verse for I have interviewed quite a number more of his than Budd's clients by about 50%. And the difference is truly telling.

Now, having said that, I cannot tell you that Budd or David or Mack is right or wrong. Frankly, I can easily accept truth from all three. Which is what I would suggest in your case. I've tried hard to open my mind. It not only feels good, but one tends to learn somethings which would not ordinarily be learned.

>>I attended two such of Budd's meetings at his home and was >>indeed impressed with the diversity and the help rendered

>Those meetings are attended by the people Budd is working with!

>of viewpoints that you are impressed with! Jim, if the whole >thing wasn't so very stupid on the surface I'd be laughing my

I am quite surprised at you for not understanding English. The diversity at Budd's meetings have nothing to do with the fact that those he's hypnotised (whether at the meetings or not) share a more benign view of their abductors. Stupid? Who, me? Polish your speel cheeker.

>But your "off the top of you head" remarks are not funny. You >are insulting the intelligence and individuality of all those >who have worked with Budd Hopkins.

How indeed is the intelligence of those whom Budd has worked been insulted? That statement alone is insulting to those you seek to support. Let those who would, speak for themselves. You are not their representative. As an activist, you should portray a more open state of mind.

<snip>

Not so, John. There were a number, myself included, who were not then regressed. That's not BS. It's a fact. And, I gave NO such opinion as you mentioned above. That was strictly from your mind.

You wrote, "where they all..." Utter nonsense. I refer you to the use of the words, "in general" in order to help you understand.

First I am not a blowhard. And second, I do not appreciate being called names on this or any List. Try calling me names in neither false nor blanket statements as are yours.

I've come quite a long way since I stopped supporting AIC. Stop

Not entirely your fault Nick. I want you to know (publicly) that I really like you on a personal level, and I have always admired and respected the work you do voluntarily and on your own time.
I have no bad feelings or anger over this 'fub.' As far as I'm concerned it is a non-issue. I just needed to say it just in case 'somebody else' gets it into their head to drag my family members into any of these discussions. It's ok for me to do it if I choose to, but not for anyone else to presume that's it ok to do so. I needed to 'draw a line' in the sand. :) Nothing personal Nick. I think the world of you and I know that you would never intentionally cross those (personal) lines.

I hope I didn't give the impression that there are "many" such cases. In fact, they are rare if you go by the hundreds of reports I have received from people over the years. Only two or three such cases that I can think of as opposed to literally hundreds of written reports I have received/archived in my own files.

That was in the 50's sometime. I was about 8 or 9 when my mom had that experience with the sphere of light that came through the wall. She "interpreted" the "light" as a manifestation of Jesus coming to comfort her at a time of great grief and worry for her.

Those kinds of "lights" are reported by "abductees" all the time. Either the "abductees" are all having 'religious' experiences, or my mom had an "abduction" related experience. Or, some 'other' explanation that we just haven't thought of yet. That she did see something is beyond question for me though. My mother was one of the most honest, sober, and sincere people that I have ever known. She saw "something." Something that she described as a floating sphere of very bright light.

>Could it be that all such >experiences are part of the same phenomena, and if so, cannot be >studied in isolation if we hope to truly understand what is >happening?

Your guess is as good as mine or anybody else's Nick. I'd much rather think that "Jesus" is responsible than some "alien force" from Tralfamador or some such place.

Warmest regards, your friend always,

Hello Kevin,

You write:

>The real point is the abduction researchers know what is >happening but they fail to understand the significance. And >that, I believe, is the point that Jim is making.

I find it amusing that Jim made his point so 'clearly' that everybody else has to (interpret) "guess" as to what he may have meant. I'm going to ask you the same thing as I asked Mortellarro;

Show me the poll or the interviews with a substantial group of either Budd, David, or John Mack's clients that substantiates these outrageous claims that they 'uniformly' all share the same point of view as the individual researchers in question?

As opposed to Mortellaro or even yourself, I actually know these folks personally. I'm telling you that you're both dead wrong in your statements. Please tell me how many of Budd, David's or John's clients you polled or interviewed.

Regards,

John Velez

American Journal of Psychotherapy

Reflections Understanding Empathy and Related Phenomena
C. Shamasundar, M.R.C. Psych.

"Over a period of time, the author has arrived at a few tentative postulates concerning empathy and related processes based on some of his experiences and observations. The central theme of these postulates is, firstly, that interpersonal interaction is an interaction of the personal-space fields. Secondly, empathy, therapeutic benefit, and the professional stress are all related to the same process of interpersonal interaction. This interaction takes place as an enmeshment of personal spaces of the interacting individuals, and involves transfer of a wide range of information in the affective, cognitive, and other areas. This is because the personal spaces have fieldlike qualities analogous to what Kurt Lewin described. Thus, such phenomena as empathy, therapeutic benefit, professional stress are all consequences of the same process. It is possible to substantiate these postulates by diverse evidences in the published literature. The natural consequences of such an interpersonal interaction are empathic understanding, transfer of mood states (like hope, distress or expectancy), affective states (like anxiety, sadness, anger or hostility), ideas, images and even attitudes and values, etc. This phenomenon of transfer can explain such processes as therapeutic benefit in individual and group settings, professional stress, shared delusions, and even experimenter bias. Whether one becomes aware of such transferred information or not depends upon the intent and sensitivity of the participants."

Your reflections are politically incorrect. Still, you (and Jim) simply report the reality of the human nature. I am pondering on whether you deserve a cookie for stating the evidence, a medal for posting it, or a kick in the butt for doing so reluctantly.

The inevitable next line of reasoning is a given for any candidate to crucifixion:

The effect of hypnosis must compound the transfer phenomena. Coupled with the extreme strangeness of the abduction experience, and the underlying desperate need to make it fit into a personal reality, we should get a very explosive mixture that will affect both the perceived abductee and the researcher.

The use of hypnosis in abduction cases only confirms the state of abduction research. A couple of years ago, it would have been fashionable to call it a Goulag. Today, let's settle for the expression: a Desert.

Don't shoot the messenger.

Joe,

You are of course absolutely correct that those 'radiation readings' were comprehensively unreliable in the first place.

However, although that's now established, they did find their way into Halt's memo to the Ministry of Defence, where it's now evident he mistakenly reported the "peak readings" as ten times higher than had actually been recorded.

Halt's claim subsequently led to Nick Pope, who believed it to be accurate, proclaiming this was the most significant basis for Britain's 'Roswell' having involved a 'UFO' - aka 'alien spaceship' - landing.

As Ian Ridpath wrote: "In his book 'Open Skies, Closed Minds', Nick Pope described the radiation readings as 'the most tangible proof that something extraordinary happened there'. Hence it is essential that the readings are shown to be beyond reproach".

Reiterating his conclusions, on 23rd May 1998, Pope participated in a 'United Kingdom UFO Network' IRC [Internet relay chat] and when asked, "What in your opinion is the most credible of all UK ufo related cases and why?", replied: "I'd say it was the Rendlesham Forest incident, and it's the radiation readings that clinched it for me. I checked them out with the Defence Radiological Protection Service, who told me they were ten times normal for the area".

The facts we're now aware of have further confirmed a number of issues in their true perspective.

This is surely a somewhat devastating discovery and realisation for 'UFO radiation' proponents.

The KH-9 [KH7?] theory is an interesting possibility and for those not familiar with this background, see:

<http://dialspace.dial.pipex.com/town/close/kca07/refint.htm>

However, I've discussed the scenario with a number of contemporary, December 1980 base personnel who were involved with the 67th Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Squadron [ARRS] and they have refuted any connection. There were statedly no helicopters from the 67th ARRS in operation during our late December 1980 'UFO' incidents.

Indeed, Halt commented on this during one of those pivotal 1997
'on-line' interviews with Salley Rayl:

RAYL: Okay. Another question from Nels. "What type of aircraft were at the base at that time and were there any in the air at that time?"

HALT: Yes.

RAYL: ...In other words...

HALT: There were approximately 120 to 125 A-10s. There were I'm trying to think, about 12, 14 C-130s, several H-3s it was in a rescue squadron, plus the A-10 squadrons. The A-10 squadrons were done for the holidays. Not flying, doing any night flying.
The rescue squadron was done. In fact, the rescue commander at that time, a good personal friend of mine, really chastised me for not calling him immediately, cause he said I could have gotten a chopper in the air within an hour or two. I kind of don't believe that because, you know, you'd have trouble finding a crew and get one free-flighted, but there was no aircraft activity. In fact, the tower at Woodbridge was down.

RAYL: Well, it was Christmas time, too.

HALT: Yeah. It was Christmas time. In fact, the tower at Bentwaters was manned only for an emergency. In other words, there was a standby crew up there, but it was not active.

RAYL: So, there were no jets, helicopters or any other aircraft,
American aircraft, that were scrambled at that time.

HALT: There were none that were scrambled from Bentwaters, and I knew of nothing in the air at that time.
[END]

It was pointed out to myself by Chuck Dalldorf:

I was an aircraft maintenance technician with the 81st TFW working on A-10A and prior to that F-4D's during my tour which lasted from December 1977 through July 1981. I had also been assigned several times to the 67th ARRS on temporary duty to work on both the HC-130N/P's and the HH-53's as well.

There were no alerts anytime during the week between Christmas, 1980 and New Years Day 1981 at RAF Bentwaters or RAF Woodbridge. No alerts for the 81st Tactical Fighter Wing (A-10A) or for the 67th ARRS (HC-130 and HH-53).

As a matter of fact, traditionally we had always been able to get a few extra, non-leave days off over the holiday week, at least in aircraft maintenance. We would split the time off between the married people who generally wanted the period including Christmas off to be with family, and then the single GI's who generally wanted the period including New Years off. I don't have a 1980 calendar available, however, depending on when Christmas Day and New Years Day fell, it would have been something like this:

Let's say Christmas Day and New Years Day fell on a Saturday. People who wanted to be off for Christmas would start their unofficial vacation on Friday morning and be off with no obligation through to the following Wednesday morning (coming back to work that day). People opting for New Years would then take Wednesday through to the following Monday off (coming back to work that Monday morning). While you were off, you were not on call and had no obligations. Unless the base was called on alert, then all deals were off and everyone reports.

There was a trip that I helped run with my landlord, Joe Haninia of Woodbridge Town who ran a travel service for the base called Big Ben Travel. The trip went from RAF Bentwaters to Edinburgh to celebrate Hogmanay in Scotland. We left the base and were not recalled. There were 28 people on the trip from both the 81st TFW and the 67th ARRS.

The week I worked I was at the RAF Woodbridge shop and it was a very quiet week. Some delayed maintenance (there were few if any flying hours going on). It was a good time to take care of paperwork, make sure there was training going on, etc. I was an E-5, Staff Sgt. at the time.
[END]

Aside from anything else, a recovered film capsule hypothesis doesn't equate with what was the essence of those 'UFO' perceptions.

Comparative 'sightings' occurred over three nights/early mornings and in the same vicinity - which might just be a clue to their origins.

We know about those documented incidents in the early hours of 26th December [Burroughs, Cabansag and Penniston] and the night/morning of 27/28 December [Halt and co.], however, there has been some disagreement about whether we had an 'intervening' night.

In 'Left at East Gate', Larry Warren claimed that there was and Halt disputed this.

I conclude that Warren is correct - we should of course expect further sightings if the 'UFO' had a mundane, local origin - and in recent discussions John Burroughs noted, "they had an incident on the night of the 26th".

Consequently, it doesn't seem likely that we're dealing with any 67th ARRS operations in search of reconnaissance data.

What seems crucial and may have been a catalyst for all which transpired is that documented astronomical occurrence - the 'fireball' which would have apparently been visible from East Anglia and is timed at 2:50 a.m. on the morning of 26 December.

Confirmed in those early January 1981 statements requested by Halt [he explained the delay in obtaining same was due to the holiday period], we find how at almost the exact same time, - "at around 0300" [Burroughs] or "at approx. 0300 hours, 26 December 1980" [Chandler], or "at approximately 0300 hrs, 26 December 1980" [Buran], the 'UFO' sightings were first observed.

In search of a 'UFO', we can perhaps surmise what the 'strange lights' were that everyone - Burroughs, Cabansag, Penniston, Halt et al - found to be in the direction of Orfordness [Orford Ness] lighthouse, plus the nearby and similar Shipwash lightship and why Halt ultimately discovered and recorded on his microcassette [thought never mentions] the 'UFO' was found to be "clear off to the coast" and "right on the horizon".

Perhaps worth keeping in mind Chris Arnold's insight:

EASTON: Significantly, in July 1997, you mentioned there were 'some strange lights' in the distance, whose origin could not be determined. Can you recall what those lights looked like - indeed, anything about them at all - colour, size, whether they were flashing or moved, etc.

ARMOLD: Yes, there were what we initially interpreted as 'strange lights' and in my opinion and contrary to what some people assert, at the time almost none of us knew there was a lighthouse at Orford Ness. Remember, the vast majority of folks involved were young people, 19, 20, 25 years old. Consequently it wasn't something most of the troops were cognizant of. That's one reason the lights appeared interesting or out of the ordinary to some people.

After it was discovered that a lighthouse was out there the 'strangeness' of the lights evaporated.
[END]

The full interview with Arnold can be read at:

<http://www.rendlesham.com/v15.txt>

How familiar were those coastal lights, deceptive as viewed from within the forest and appearing to be at eye-level...

Burroughs was asked to reconcile the admission in those statements - that Cabansag, Penniston and himself pursued an unfamiliar light source for two miles in the darkness, before, as he wrote: "Once we reached the farmer's house we could see a beacon going around so we went towards it. We followed it for about 2 miles before we could see it was coming from a lighthouse".

He acknowledged to myself - and in absolute contradiction to what he had previously told Jenny Randles - "As far as the part about Penniston saying he examined it [the 'UFO' - James] at his leisure i beleive that came out when he went under hypnotic regression. As far as the lighthouse goes the statement's that everybody made such a big deal about were first made available by Col Holt [sic] during the filming of unsolved mys and if you stop and think about it nobody asked us if we ever followed the lighthouse beam. What i mean by that is we did follow a light not knowing what it was...and wanted to see what the flashing light in the distance was".

There's more to Burrough's story than this, to be published in due course. However, it's now proven that the lighthouse and lightship were not, contrary to some assertions - notably excluding Chris Arnold's - familiar local landmarks when 'encountered' within Rendlesham forest.

If you were looking for 'UFOs', it was an extraordinary environment where evidently you would find them on any one, or more, nights.

Joe, thank you for the most informative and helpful resolution of this associated 'ten times background radiation', as now also seen in a factual 'best UFO evidence ever' context.

Greetings to the UFO UpDates List.

I just saw Mr. Gildas Bourdais' email on my Phil Corso article

For those who may not have seen this article, I include it here

I also would recommend reading Dwight Schultz's book review on

Honor Restored: The "De-Pflocked" Facts About Philip Corso

by Don Ecker

In the newest Roswell book by Karl Pflock, 'Roswell:
'Inconvenient Facts And The Will To Believe' published by Prometheus Books (see review, p. 75) author Pflock takes a strong swipe at the late Lt. Colonel Phil Corso. Of course, this is nothing new. Corso, now deceased, has been roundly savaged for several years since the publication of his book 'The Day After Roswell', co-authored by William J. Birnes.

Starting on page 207, Pflock alleges that Corso, among his many other failings, is guilty of a failing of honor by deceiving Sen. Thurmond about the nature of the book. Pflock is referring to the foreword by Senator Strom

Thurmond that appeared in the first edition of 'The Day After Roswell'. Pflock called the senator's press secretary Chris Cimko and informed him about the foreword. Cimko, according to Pflock, was "horrified" and acted quickly. A press release was put out by the senator's office, attributed to Thurmond. "I did not, and would not, pen the foreword to a book about, or containing a suggestion that the success of the United States in the Cold War is attributable to the technology found on a crashed UFO....." and goes on to state "I do not believe in UFOs, do not believe that the U.S. is in possession of such a vehicle, and do not believe that there has been any government cover-up of a UFO crash." So it would appear Sen. Thurmond disavowed having written the foreword. In response, the publisher pulled the foreword before more copies were printed. End of story?

According to co-author William J. Birnes, here is the correct sequence of events: When Corso traveled to Washington to visit Thurmond and John Glenn, he had been asked by his editor at Pocket Books to see whether Senator Thurmond would agree either to write a foreword to 'The Day After Roswell' (at the time they were calling it "The Roswell Book") or allow Corso to use Thurmond's existing foreword originally written for another book Corso had written, called 'I Walked With Giants'. Corso spoke to Thurmond about it, told Thurmond he was writing a book about his days in Army R&D with General Arthur Trudeau and the Roswell file they had at the Pentagon. Thurmond agreed to allow Corso to use the existing foreword for the Roswell book. Sen. Thurmond signed a release (See Fig. 1). Pflock could have found out the exact same thing, had he contacted Birnes and asked about this in the course of writing his book. Could it be that Pflock was working on another agenda, the personal destruction of an honorable man?

Pflock goes on to commit another attack upon Colonel Corso by pointing out a reference in Corso's FBI file, a purported comment by then FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. As explained by Pflock in his book on page 208, [Corso was] continually trying to advance his personal agenda and extreme right-wing politics through lies and exploitation of members of Congress and the FBI.

One of the documents in Corso's file includes this comment from his dear friend J. Edgar Hoover: "Corso is a rat."

The obvious question is what would Hoover have meant by that?

J. Edgar Hoover is remembered for many things these days. During his tenure as Director of the FBI, the agency had a stellar reputation, second to nothing else in existence, not even the U.S. Marine Corps! It was only after Hoover's death that we learned of the many dirty little secrets that Hoover would have killed to keep under wraps. Hoover's secret files on politicians and celebrities is legendary, as is his skill at getting even. In 'The Day After Roswell', Corso stated he was good friends with J. Edgar Hoover. What, then, would cause Hoover to turn on Corso? As it turns out, it was testimony that Corso gave before the Senate's Internal Security Subcommittee on August 28, 1961, and April 3, 1962. During the time Corso gave his testimony, he cited instances where he believed the Soviet KGB penetrated various American intelligence agencies and the U.S. State Department, subverting policy to accommodate Soviet aims. In Corso's testimony, he cites a number of instances where members of the CIA and officers in the State Department were following Moscow's policies in making recommendations to Eisenhower, not what 'should be America's policies. Corso explained that American policy, especially how the U.S. CIA assessed what the Soviet Union was doing, was distorted by KGB agents planted inside the American intelligence services. The Army was aware of this, Corso told the Senate, but the penetration of U.S. intelligence was so deep that it went largely unnoticed by the FBI. This angered Hoover, who believed that he and Corso had a private agreement not to go public about the KGB's penetration of American intelligence because it would have made everybody look bad. When Corso testified about how deeply U.S. intelligence, particularly the CIA, had been penetrated, Hoover went off the wall, believing that Corso had broken some unwritten agreement. Hence the nasty reference in Corso's FBI file. (See Fig. 2)

Information on people and events in this field cannot be taken at face value. Careful reading of debunkery and comparing to other sources of information clears the picture about UFO-connected people and events. In Corso's case, Karl Pflock did a great disservice to a very honorable man and patriot.

Don Ecker is UFO Magazine's director of research. More information from the Corso Files will be published in future issues of UFO Magazine. Stay tuned.

ALIEN AGENDA Jim Marrs

Jim Marrs' 'Alien Agenda' is a compulsive overview of all things ufological: contacts and sightings, crop circles, cattle mutilations, saucer crashes, remote viewing and government coverups. While 'Alien Agenda' is an extremely fun literary expedition, most of the stories related by Marrs can be found elsewhere; 'students' of ufology are likely to be disappointed in the scattered nature of the author's original insights. Regardless, Marrs creates a panoramic look at the turn-of-the-millennium UFO scene that entertains and fascinates. For readers unfamiliar with the subject of UFOs, 'Alien Agenda' is likely to be an unexpected treat, brimming with perspectives and surprises.

I can't speak for Jim, but it seems pretty obvious to me why you're always jumping on him. You insult the intelligence of the rest of the List when you try to disguise your personal problem with Mr. Mortellaro in the cloak of abductee self-righteousness.

I think Kevin Randle was right. You totally missed the point of Jim's posts.

(UPDATE) FORMATION REPORTS 2001 #18, 19

The latest reported formations this year, found September 26 about 80 miles northeast of Midale, Saskatchewan, were two formations, not three as previously reported. Both single circles, approximately 6.1 meters (20 feet) diameter each, and about 1/2 mile apart. Further details still pending (the location was not able to be visited).

These are the 18th and 19th formations reported for this year.

Ernest R. Hilgard, Leader in Study of Hypnosis, Dies at 97

By WOLFGANG SAXON

Dr. Ernest R. Hilgard, a highly acclaimed experimental psychologist and a pioneer in the scientific study of hypnosis, died on Oct. 22 in Palo Alto, Calif., where he was a professor emeritus at Stanford University. He was 97.

Dr. Hilgard was also known as a primary author of a classic psychology text, "Introduction to Psychology," widely familiar to college students in entry level courses. First published in 1953, the book was issued in a 13th edition two years ago.

An expert in learning and memory, Dr. Hilgard began his career studying classical conditioning in the Pavlovian tradition. But it was his work on hypnosis that brought him to national prominence.

"Hypnosis had been off to the side of mainstream psychology," said Dr. Gordon H. Bower, a professor of psychology at Stanford. Dr. Hilgard "moved into it and tried to put it on a more scientific basis," Dr. Bower said.

With another researcher, Dr. Andre Weitzenhoffer, Dr. Hilgard developed a scale to measure a person's susceptibility to hypnotic induction, allowing scientists to compare the technique's effectiveness in different studies.

He was also among the first to study the use of hypnosis to control pain.

Dr. Hilgard's time at Stanford, which began in 1933, coincided with "the big growth spurt" in the psychology department's national reputation, Dr. Bower said. He credited Dr. Hilgard with bringing to the university many of the field's brightest scholars, including Dr. Leon Festinger and Dr. Eleanor Maccoby.

Adept at reviewing and synthesizing many different theoretical perspectives, Dr. Hilgard was known for his catholic and objective approach to the field.

In 1940, he published "Theories of Learning" in collaboration with Dr. Donald G. Marquis. Its fifth edition, for which Dr. Bower was a collaborator, remains in print.

Dr. Hilgard's introductory text was translated into several languages and continues widely in use, although his name eventually dropped behind those of his younger co-authors. It branched into various editions for teacher and students, and the latest, with Rita L. Atkinson as the lead author, was issued by Harcourt in 1999.

Dr. Hilgard's wife, Dr. Josephine Rohrs Hilgard, a psychiatrist, was also a collaborator, particularly in his work with hypnotism. Together they wrote "Hypnosis in the Relief of Pain," published in 1983 with a revised edition in 1994. Also in print, at Harcourt, is his "The Experience of Hypnosis" (1968).

Ernest Ropiequet Hilgard, who was known as Jack, was born in Belleville, Ill., and graduated from the University of Illinois in 1924. He received his Ph.D. at Yale in 1930. He took emeritus status at Stanford in 1969.

In 1957, he and his wife founded the Laboratory of Hypnosis Research at Stanford, which he directed until 1979. The purpose was to shore up the scientific underpinnings of hypnotism.

In medical practice, the phenomenon was introduced by Dr. Franz Anton Mesmer (1734-1815), a Viennese forerunner of modern psychotherapy and analysis. Spurned by Freud and most practitioners, it remained largely confined to vaudeville and the drawing room until Dr. Hilgard's generation.

While Dr. Hilgard's scale of susceptibility gave scientists a standard tool for studying hypnotism, his neodissociation theory of 1977 helped to explain it.

Dr. Hilgard proposed that several distinct states of consciousness can be present during hypnosis. Thus, certain actions may become dissociated from the conscious mind.

In recent years, hypnosis has been used to manage otherwise intractable pain or fear of pain in the dentist's chair, and as an aide in psychotherapy. It has also been used in criminal investigations to restore lapsed memories.

Dr. Hilgard was a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the American Philosophical Society. He was a past president of the American Psychological Association.

Dr. Hilgard's wife, whom he met at Yale, died in 1989, after 58 years of marriage. He is survived by a son, Henry R., of Santa Cruz, Calif.; a daughter, Elizabeth H. Jecker of San Luis Obispo, Calif; five grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

In awarding him its Gold Medal in 1978, the American Psychological Foundation singled him out for having made "scientific contributions to nearly every field of psychology, most notably in learning and states of consciousness."

A Bad Smell Around Science

Subject: A Bad Smell Around Science

<http://www.newscientist.com/opinion/opinterview.jsp?id=ns23155>

Mary, Mary Quite Contrary

Mary Midgley is a woman on a mission. For two decades, Britain's most visible moral philosopher has laid into scientists who have tried to turn science into a religion. The big problem, says Midgley, is that it seduces people into believing in certainties and taking imperfect scientific metaphors as literal, revealed truth. Is it time to rethink science? Should we rename it? In her latest book, Midgley puts her money on Gaia as a guide. As she told Liz Else, Gaia might turn out to be that rare thing--both good science and good metaphor Scientists with a strongly reductionist bent will resent you, as a moral philosopher, straying onto their patch. What are you doing there?

People think of philosophy as a special and rather grand subject cut off from others, something you could put on the mantelpiece. I think it is much more like plumbing--the sort of thinking that people do even in the most prudent, practical areas always has a whole system of thought under the surface which we are not aware of. Then suddenly we become aware of some bad smells, and we have to take up the floorboards and look at the concepts of even the most ordinary piece of thinking. The great philosophers of the past didn't spend their time looking at entities in the sky. They noticed how badly things were going wrong, and made suggestions about how they could be dealt with.

So is there a bad smell around science that we should be looking into?

Yes. I think it goes back to Descartes. He hoped that there would be one way of knowing which would solve all problems. It was a noble hope, and well worth having. Because physics was so successful at that time, he thought that physics was the model and that other difficult problems could eventually be dealt with by reducing them to physics. That doesn't work because physics is only one way of thinking, a tremendously abstract way of thinking, and we need many other ways of thinking about human problems. The effect has been that people think either you know things or you don't, that total certainty is what you ought to go for. But what always appears to emerge is that, in that sense, there is nothing that you "know", nothing that you couldn't possibly raise some kind of question about.

What should we do instead?

The real aim is to get what guidance and probability you can about the questions that are important to you. If you don't have the kind of mathematical proof that Descartes hoped for, this is not terribly important. One only needs proof if there is some real doubt. These days we are much more inclined to think about different ways of understanding things and to consider understanding as the main goal. We will never have a final answer. We are always being confronted by new issues, so it's much more about the cultivation of a garden where there have to be many plants. I like organic metaphors because I think they are much more helpful than Descartes' metaphor of building, which insists on foundations.

Has the word "science" become confusing?

I think it has, because it is partly a descriptive word, a name for knowledge of the physical world, and partly a word of praise--if it's not science it's no good! So that would mean that history was no good--or music. But nobody thinks that, do they?

What could we call it instead?

Perhaps rational enquiry would do for the term of praise. Of course, the physical sciences are indeed "sciences", but that doesn't mean that history and the social sciences are "unscientific".

How did you end up in this tricky area?

When I went to Oxford in 1938 to read classics and philosophy I had hardly any scientific input in my background. My family were not anti-science, but they didn't know much about it. At college I got to know a number of medical students, zoologists, biologists of various kinds, and became rather interested. It was wartime, and my contemporaries were mainly women--Iris Murdoch, Mary Warnock and so on.

You chose moral philosophy, which seems less connected to science than other kinds of philosophy...

The value of science is a very important question morally. As are questions about the place of science in our lives, too.

When did you get really stuck into science?

I took time off when I was looking after my small children. I read what I wanted and picked up books on ethology by authors such as Jane Goodall. It was a terrific revelation because what those ethologists showed was that many other creatures are quite like us. At the same time, I had a lot of good animal behaviour going on around me with my boys, and I was deeply struck by the way sentences came out of them spontaneously, by the way they knew how to play in ways that nobody had taught them. I suppose I had imbibed the behaviourist idea that human behaviour is all conditioned. I was delighted to find that that was wrong. I was taken by the debate that was already going on between the ethologists and social scientists--who dismissed the whole idea of human nature as eugenic and fascist. This seemed to me pretty odd so I started Beast and Man.

What happened then?

When I sent it to the publishers they told me to read some sociobiology, so I bought the books and I found them odd. They seemed not so much wrong as terribly one-sided. And I thought: why did we have to choose at all between mere conditioning and this rather narrow set of natural motives? So I did my best in Beast and Man to ask those questions. Of course I got shot at from both ends, but people did welcome the book a bit, I think, because by the time it came out a lot of people were as tired of fighting as I was.

Why did you stay with the battle?

I was increasingly struck by the strange things that turned up sometimes in scientific books--particularly in the last chapter, where there would be passages of prophecy, really, that seemed to be quite unrelated to science. Particularly prophecies about how evolution was a great sort of escalator moving upwards, and humans were this wonderful passenger on it, and they would arrive at perfection. It seemed to be an idea which Darwin very much didn't have, and the glorification of the human race seemed extremely un-Darwinian, and I hated it. At first, I thought these passages couldn't really matter, but then I realised that what people were going to remember was this purple stuff.

Increasingly, I began to feel the pictures we use are not just paint on the surface of our thoughts but are very important.

So you couldn't just leave it there...

No. It seems to me extraordinary the extent to which people today who don't have any confidence in religion put much the same kind of faith in this aspect of science. When I mentioned this at conferences, that became very clear. The scientists, particularly the psychologists, used to say, surely, all these metaphors are harmless, either it's just a joke, or it's something rather sacred that you're not licensed to take up. I was made to feel boorish. What I wanted to do was show what brings together the different aspects of the writer so everyone can see he's one person and he's accountable. I think this dream of an omega point, of a predestined safety for the human race is corrupting. I think that producing this confident euphoria about the future is actually bad, dangerous.

Why?

It's dangerous when somebody with authority, which scientists have, says the human race is absolutely booked to be alright, to get better and better, grander and grander, to go to outer space, to turn ourselves into machines, to get all the information there is and in the end to become a kind of god. When people are also hearing that the planet is in some danger, that they are not so terribly secure after all, they will naturally tend to think that this warning must be mistaken. I'm a naturally optimistic person, but optimism which amounts to telling people that they are safe when they are not is something that I consider to be wicked.

That's a strong word. Irrational maybe, but wicked?

Suppose you had a set of people on an island and they were wasting resources and heading for a disastrous situation. Suppose that you're an authority on that island, and you go about telling the inhabitants that they have a wonderful celestial destiny. You would be deluding people, keeping them in a very dangerous condition. Any scientist today has a responsibility to know what great authority he or she has and a responsibility to use it in a wise and rational way.

Does science examine itself enough?

Scientists are not trained to do this so they often find it hard.

When you published the Gaia book this year, did you feel that, after all the attacks, you ought to offer some alternative vision?

Yes indeed. Mind you, over the years I have mentioned quite a lot of other visions that I thought were pretty good visions. But I thought Gaia was needed immediately in order to correct the individualism in the vision of the selfish gene. That was a powerful, attractive and colourful vision--and it is never easy to shift people from any picture without putting one in its place. It's hard for the scientists to see those detailed bits of science as part of the larger vision because atomism--the reductive notion that chopping things will get you to an ultimate explanation of everything--is so powerful in today's science. I think this reductivism has been carried so far that a lot of people are beginning to feel unhappy with it. Which made me feel that putting forward Gaia wasn't absolutely doomed. Also, in recent decades the scientific aspects of Gaia theory have been shown to be possible, really quite respectable.

How would the world look in, say, 50 years, if we adopted a Gaian viewpoint?

For one thing, science would be much less broken up into separate bits. For example, geology and biology have been treated as separate, but it turns out that they are not. The big idea in biology lately has been the dog-eat-dog competition of evolution, where organisms adapted themselves to circumstances. But if, in fact, organisms could improve those circumstances, or interact with them, then it opens up all sorts of other possibilities. I guess that the same thing would happen at other frontiers of specialisms.

Would Gaian science deal a death blow to what you see as science's delusions of grandeur and the power of reductionism?

Yes. I think those two became related in the 17th century. At that time, finding the ultimate explanation through a single science was very closely linked with God. It was a matter of discovering God's ultimate intention. Now, although God is officially removed from the story, people do still think in that way. If they grasped how the full plurality of sciences is needed to comprehend a complex system like the Earth, I think they would be less tempted by that sort of grand simplification.

Dear All, Errol,

Somehow, John, I think you do this on porpoise. I mean, avoid the huge door in your mind which I know is there. I've seen glimpses of it when we were... uh... the rage. Before the rage.
I would aks a question of your question... you wrote:

Uh, just who is "everybody," you excepted? Now you speak for this List as well as yourself and the abductees? I guess your guess is not as good as mine... ours. Whatever. See? I am now reverting to the voice in my head called, "Gesundt!" Which happens whenever the sum total of human knowledge is detracted from by the lack of sense common. Which is to say... a closed mind is the devil's ... uh... I forgot.

I cannot do that, Johnny, I would be exposing several confidences. And you know how you get whenever that happens.

I told you in another post. However I am certain you will get to that. I would be interested in another poll. How many on this List agree with Mack, Kevin and myself as opposed to your opine? Not that I invite others in to this frayed loop, or is it a thread? Whatever. But I'd be darned interested in a poll of UpDates.

Hey, out there... in the void? Whaddya say? Takers?

>either Budd, David, or John Mack's clients that substantiates >these outrageous claims that they 'uniformly' all share the >_same_ point of view as the individual researchers in question?

Actually, this is something of a red herring. I quoted from both Mack and Jacobs, making the same point that Jim had made. It was Mack who suggested that Hopkins, Jacobs, and Nyman pull from their experiencers what they want to see. Mack said it to us during a video taped interview and he said it to Bryant in his book... as I mentioned before.

See, the claim is not outrageous because the researchers you quote are the same that I quote and those researchers have suggested the matching of abductees to researchers.

>As opposed to Mortellaro or even yourself, I actually know >these folks personally. I'm telling you that you're both dead >wrong in your statements. Please tell me how many of Budd, >David's or John's clients you polled or interviewed.

In our research we used abductees who had been regressed by all three... and those regressed by Yvonne Smith, John Carpenter and several others including "He Who Shall Remain Nameless."

But once again, if you have an argument with the observation, then please take it up with John Mack and David Jacobs as well.

Well Hello again Ms. Felder,

This 'thread' between Mr. Mortellaro and myself is about his "claim" that all of the abductees that Hopkins, Jacobs, & Mack have hypnotized, collectively agree with the individual researchers viewpoints on the phenomenon.

I contend that he doesn't know what he's talking about because he has never known or interviewed enough of them to make such an outrageous and unfounded statement. Not just Mortellaro, no one has taken such a poll.

In point of fact, because I attended meetings with literally hundreds of Budd's "people/cases" for so many years, and because I know many of them personally, that maybe he should consider my opinions on the subject. I am telling him that I have not seen any evidence that would uphold his claim. He has agreed with me that the 'few' people he did meet, "impressed" him, with the diversity of their views and thoughts on the subject.

My question to you is:

What does your very (personal) "diagnosis" of me (See quote below) have to do with the subject of this thread? "What" is your "contribution" to the subject of this discussion Bobby? Is it this 'personal' and 'bile tinged' comment that is based on your own personal feelings toward me?

You write:

>you try to disguise your personal problem with Mr. Mortellaro >in the cloak of abductee self-righteousness.

BTW, just what the hell is "abductee self-righteousness" anyway? Some 'new' psychological disorder that you discovered while writing a thesis for your psychology degree? Oh, I forgot, you don't have a degree in psychology. Practicing on me without a license eh? <LOL> I ask you only because it's all just a tad 'convoluted' for me. Never mind. I didn't ask for your personal opinion of me anyway, so I'm not really terribly curious about how you 'arrived there.'

Solely for the edification of the List members:

My "personal" problem with Mortellaro does not exist. As there is nothing "personal" in it. Strictly business. If you'll take note at the archives, I always "respond" to whatever it happens to be that he is putting out publicly regarding UFO abduction or abductees that has no proven basis in fact. My posts to him are all a matter of public record. Everything I have ever said to him, is located for inspection at the UFO UpDates archive. Go there. Read. You'll get an eyeful!

For Mz. Felder:

Bobbie, you are completely free to think any old twisted thing about me that you can conjure up, or that makes you feel good. There's nothing any of us can do about what anybody, (much less 'everybody') may choose to think of us personally. Just the way it is. I have learned from experience that I am the kind of person that people either love, or they curse the day I entered the world. Not too many in-betweeners with me. :)

A 'true-ism' if I may:

"Control" over anything in Life, much less control over the thoughts of others, is all 'Maya' Bobbie. (An 'illusion') All we really need be concerned about, and responsible for, is; the quality of the energy behind our expressed thoughts.

It's ok. Your 'contribution' to the thread has been logged and duly noted. By the by, do you have anything in the way of a 'useful' or 'informative' contribution to make to the current discussion? If not, maybe you want to start another thread! You can title it:

"John Velez's many colored cloak of abductee self-righteousness!"

Mortellaro refers to me as; the "Egotistical and Paranoid King of the abductees" to complete strangers behind my back. So I may as well have a "cloak" too! Maybe he's right! My own dad always wanted to "crown" me! <LOL>

As always, really great to hear from you Bobbie. A fine contribution from you once again. ;)

Spies Admit It: There Are No Aliens Out There

Paul Harris
Sunday November 4, 2001
The Observer

Britain's spies have given up looking for aliens after more than half a century of fruitless monitoring of thousands of UFO reports.

Ever since the early 1950s reports of sightings of unidentified flying objects by members of the public and military personnel have been logged by the Ministry of Defence and passed on to its intelligence branch.

But the Directorate of Intelligence, Scientific and Technical, has now abandoned the quest for ET. The directorate specialises in scientific espionage and analysis of advanced technologies but documents seen by The Observer show it asked last year that it be sent no further reports of UFO sightings. 'These records, whether from members of the public or service sources, have not proved valuable,' the department concluded.

The decision ends five decades of army intelligence experts investigating UFO sightings from all over Britain, including many from Royal Air Force pilots. 'They are essentially saying they have wasted their time for 50 years and they want nothing more to do with it,' said Dave Clark of the National Centre for Folklore Studies at Sheffield University and a leading UFO researcher.

Britain's official search for UFOs began in the late 1940s and peaked with a top-secret government study into the 'flying saucer' phenomenon, commissioned in 1951. That study, details of which were published for the first time in The Observer two weeks ago, concluded that no UFO sightings were genuine but attempted to hush up the reports to avoid creating panic at the height of the Cold War.

Clark believes the Government is finally willing to admit that studying UFO sightings is pointless. He said modern radar systems have become sophisticated enough to explain the vast majority of sightings as being aircraft or atmospheric conditions. 'They have looked at the subject and they have simply decided there is nothing in it,' he said.

However, the Ministry of Defence will maintain its small internal UFO desk, which logs and reports all sightings reported to it by members of the public. 'They are not shutting down entirely, but their intelligence experts don't want to know any more. The operation is now just a PR stunt to keep the public happy,' said Clark.

UFO enthusiasts are not likely to be satisfied at the lack of interest shown in the possibility that aliens might be visiting Earth. Graham Birdsall, editor of UFO Magazine, said: 'I find this decision extraordinary. If people are seeing unusual things in the skies of Britain, I am sure the intelligence officials will still want to know about it.'

There has been media speculation that the UFO phenomenon is on the wane. But Birdsall said UFOs were still being seen in their hundreds and that it would be a mistake for the Government to stop investigating sightings.

'The phenomenon is still as intense and busy as ever. The fact remains that UFOs continue to be seen, continue to be reported and continue to be videotaped,' he said.

Dear All, Errol,

Actually, this thread is not at all about any claim that all the abductees that Budd, John and David have hypnotised collectively agree with the individual researchers' view points.
That is your contention. My contention is that as three groups, they have differing viewpoints, generally. You've already been asked pointed questions about this matter in another post. I await your response withall.

>I contend that he doesn't know what he's talking about because >he has never known or interviewed enough of them to make such an >outrageous and unfounded statement. Not just Mortellaro, >no one has taken such a poll.

Wonderful then, as I have interviewed a large enough sampling of each for my book. And of course, I don't tell you everything. I hope you don't mind. There is no poll. Read David's book. Then speak with his clients. Then do the same with John and Budd's clients. A pattern will emerge. Clearly so.

Further, it is not necessary to take a poll in order to have an opinion. Shoot, if we had to do that, we'd be Japanese doing consensus management and bowing low. I don't do bows. Domo arrigato, Johnny San.

>In point of fact, because I attended meetings with literally >hundreds of Budd's "people/cases" for so many years, and because >I know many of them personally, that maybe he should consider >my opinions on the subject. At the meeting, yes. But not all these were regressed. Don't you read my posts?

Rather an earful.

I have never referred to you as the "Egotistical and Paranoid King of the J.... uh, Abductees." Never. Behind your back or otherwise. Produce the juice. Royalty never impressed me anyway. Divine right and all that snuff.

Actually it is personal. I've heard you say and write on this List, that you would "welcome" any legitimate causation for this phenom, other than alien interdiction in our lives. That you too, are looking for an answer to the conundrum. But when I voice the opinion that I do not have the absolute truth, you climb on me like a monkey on a rope.

Hmmm. Not personal? I doubt that. But again, I speak my truth. I am entitled to opinions. Which I describe as such. In this thread as well. Read it again. Opinion!

That this opine is in consort with others of repute, is yet again, a demonstration that whilst I am not royalty, I am at least a Prince with portfolio. Muchabellie is my name. Prince is my game. And I shall never allow lies to steal my name. Lies may be twisted meaning. And my arms are way too short to box with you when you do that.

>Uh, just who is "everybody," you excepted? Now you speak for

Nope, I was referring to Kevin. And I never claim to speak for anyone but myself. Check all past e-mails. :)

>I guess your guess is not as good as mine... ours. Whatever.

See that's my "point" Docca. I'm not "guessing." The comments I have made in this thread regarding the people Budd has worked with are based on first hand knowledge. Unlike your own. Do the math "Docca."

I attended four, sometimes as many as six, of Budd's meetings each year for five-and-a-half years. An average of twenty to thirty of his clients attended each meeting. Budd went out of his way to invite -different- folks each time so that they could _all_ get a chance to attend one of his get together's at least once. Because of my _work_ relationship with Budd, and because I was the webmaster of IF, they would all go out of their way to catch me after meetings to meet me and ask questions or engage me in what were mostly very lively conversations.

You conveniently forget that I worked very closely with Budd for all that time. Don't take _my_ word for it, call Budd, ask him. Call Greg Sandow, ask him. I was the guy that _developed_ IF into what it eventually became, a broad-based service organization for those who seek help or information about UFO abduction. Because of the nature of my position/function as webmaster of the Intruders Foundation I, (of necessity) came into _direct_contact_ with almost _all_ of the 'local' clients that Budd acquired.

It was _Budd_ who asked me to call them and to talk to them. So you see, I actually worked and socialized with the group of people whose intelligence and individuality you are insulting. It is the sole reason I am 'on you like white on rice' over this _public_lie_ you have told about them. (That they all agree with the respective researchers 'take' on the subject.) BS!

In a slip, or a moment of lucidity you yourself have stated that the 'few' of these individuals that you have met all "impressed" you with the diversity of their views. Which is in direct contradiction to the claim you make about all of them "sharing" a "point of view". You make them sound like mindless drones that are incapable of having an original thought on their own.

I'm not only 'calling' you on it, I publicly challenge you to substantiate it. Something that after three or four of these posts you have yet to do.

Mucho talk-o, no proof-o! ;)

>>Show me the poll or the interviews with a substantial group of >>either Budd, David, or John Mack's clients that substantiates >>these outrageous claims that they 'uniformly' all share the >>_same_ point of view as the individual researchers in question?

>I cannot do that, Johnny, I would be exposing several >confidences. And you know how you get whenever that happens.

Not true. Because you can't. How many is "several" three? Four? I want to know how many - not their names - of either Hopkins', Jacobs', or Mack's case studies you polled or interviewed in order to _substantiate_ your insulting and outrageous claim that they all agree with the viewpoints of the researchers in question.

You can't do that, so you dance and dance as fast as you can and still you do not _answer_ my simple but relevant question. Substantiate your claim that all of the abductees that any of the aforementioned gentlemen have hypnotized, all agree with their respective points of view.

It's simple Jimbo, either you admit that you have absolutely nothing to back up the claim, or provide the total number of Budd, David, and John's clients that you interviewed _before_ you publicly posted this _blatant_ and insulting lie about them. Well can you? I don't want to hear all the extraneous crap you are throwing at me. Just the answer to that one simple question.

>>As opposed to Mortellaro or even yourself, I actually _know_ >>these folks personally. I'm telling you that you're both dead >>wrong in your statements. Please tell me _how many_ of Budd, >>David's or John's clients you polled or interviewed.

>I told you in another post. However I am certain you will get to >that. I would be interested in another poll. How many on this >List agree with Mack, Kevin and myself as opposed to your opine? >Not that I invite others in to this frayed loop, or is it a >thread? Whatever. But I'd be darned interested in a poll of >UpDates.

>Hey, out there... in the void? Whaddya say? Takers?

Yeah "Void", are you listening? Jim's in trouble here, he cannot possibly substantiate the outrageous claim that he has made and now his shoe is firmly stuck in his mouth. Can any of you help him to dislodge it please? Just point to the poll or study that was made of Hopkins', Jacobs', and Mack's clients that substantiates Jim's insulting claim about all these folks. A collective group of individuals that represents many hundreds of people.

Help Jim, he really needs it.

Popcorn. In a microwavable bag. Buttery and delicious. A stark contrast to the 'moments' which often lurk on UpDates. 'Moments' cannot be ascribed to all, or even to most, but to a few die-hard souls who perceive themselves to be experts on the subject of UFOs and the abduction phenomenon. Some for, some against.

An absolute truth is an indefectable truth. One which is purely simple, so simple that anyone may comprehend. So sayeth my friend Merriam. Uh, we are just friends. So, having said that, having defined the word, can anyone say that his or her truth about the abduction experience is absolute?

Allow me the luxury of giving the complete definition, again, as explained by (we're just friends) Merriam:

ab-so-lute (adjective)

- 2 : having no restriction, exception, or qualification <an ~ requirement> <~ freedom>
- 5 : POSITIVE, UNQUESTIONABLE <~ proof>
- 8 : perfectly embodying the nature of a thing <~ truth>

Fascinating that this definition by (we're just friends) Merriam should be so... so... absolute, eh? Now if I apply the dictionary definition of absolute truth to my experiences as a perceived abductee, I shall not be able to truthfully admit to my memory being so correct as to be absolute. And had I been regressed by hypnosis, I would have had further doubts beyond that of the truth of them being absolute. I would have been concerned over the possibility that I would have been led into the memory.

So, John... whilst my memory is absolute (read: perfect) to my mind, it is not so to my intellect. Whilst my memories ring true to my own personal truthsense, they do not to my common sense. That is to say, the truth of my experiences is not absolute.

Can anyone naysay me? May anyone not contest the possibility that his or her memories are not absolute? That maybe, just maybe, there is another explanation? May you, John? I ask you! Absolutely true (beyond any shadow of doubt)?

I interviewed about 30 abductees who were regressed and about twice that number who were not regressed. I asked each one what their opinion was concerning the nature of the alien agenda. That is nearly 100 people. Not quite half were regressed. Some by Budd. Some by David and some by Mack. A number were regressed by therapists who had no formal opinion regarding the nature of the alien agenda. Here is a preview... a general breakdown of the results.

In your opinion, is the alien agenda good or evil?

Jacobs regressed clients = 95% say "evil"

Hopkins' regressed clients = 95% not evil

Mack (too few to include here)

Balance of regressed abductees = 95% said they were not strongly committed either way to good or evil intent.

Those whom I interviewed who were not regressed largely were just plain angry at the alien, no matter their agenda, which was largely unknown anyway. Which is the category I occupy. I hate them and what they've done. But I do not have any preconceived notions about what the heck they are getting out of all this.

Now to my feeble, uneducated mind, this small sample survey has great meaning. Statistically, the sampling is correct enough to draw the conclusions I came upon.

On the matter of how strongly the abductees felt about their memories, there was a definite bias in favor of those whose memories were retrieved through recall. Those who were regressed as a rule, felt that while their memories were real enough, there was some concern over being led.

Draw you own conclusions. I've drawn mine.

Jim Mortellaro

Hi Kevin, hi All,

Kevin opines:

>Actually, this is something of a red herring. I quoted from both >Mack and Jacobs, making the same point that Jim had made. It was >Mack who suggested that Hopkins, Jacobs, and Nyman pull from >their experiencers what they want to see. Mack said it to us

"Pulling from their experiencers what they want to see" has to do with "leading" or "suggestion" Kevin. The "Docca" claims that the experiencers themselves all share the same "take" (point of view) as the researchers in question. Two different subjects.
You are talking about a "before" situation (where someone is lead in some way) and the "Docca" is talking about an "after" effect (people who have adopted or share the same point of view/take) on the phenom as the researchers they consulted.

So,

...are we discussing Hopkins', Jacobs', and Mack's alleged 'leading' of their clients, or are we discussing Mortellaro's unfounded claim that they are all de facto in agreement with the researchers in question "points of view?"

If anyone is introducing "red Herrings" it is the Randle Fish Market! The Docca and myself are debating one thing, and you are introducing another. Fish anyone? ;)

>In our research we used abductees who had been regressed by all >three... and those regressed by Yvonne Smith, John Carpenter and >several others including "He Who Shall Remain Nameless."

>But once again, if you have an argument with the observation, >then please take it up with John Mack and David Jacobs as well.

I don't have any 'argument' with them. It is Mortellaro who is making unfounded claims and insulting a large group of really nice, bright, individuals with his insinuations. Now you chime in with "they lead their clients." Yet neither one of you has answered my simple and very straightforward question:

Show me the poll or study that shows that the clients of Hopkins, Jacobs and Mack all share the same point of view as the researchers in question.

Simple question. But try getting a straight answer around here! You guys picked a bad time to mess with me. I'm in between web jobs and I have a little time for the List. Bring it on! <screeching maniacal laughter>

Until I get a relevant response from either of you on the question at hand,

Another Auroral Light Show?

From: Nick Balaskas <nikolaos@yorku.ca>

Subject: Another Auroral Light Show?

Hi everyone!

Thanks to another major eruption on the Sun which is sending charged particles towards the Earth, observers of the night sky who live in the mid-latitudes (eg. New York, Toronto, etc.) will get yet another chance to see the aurora - nature's evening light show - tonight and/or tomorrow night. The aurora or "northern lights" ("southern lights" for those living in the southern hemisphere) are frequently seen only in much more northern (or southern) latitudes.

Although the phase of the Moon is past full and rises in the east late in the evening, it will brighten the sky enough to bleach out the light show after midnight.

If you are going out to have a look, find a dark place to observe from and allow a few minutes for your eyes to get dark adapted. Don't forget to let us know if you noticed something out of the ordinary up there too. One reason, I believe, that more UFO sightings are not made from urban areas is that people do not frequently step out from their homes and look up to the sky.

Hold the phone there, cowboy. "proven basis in fact" when talking about UFO abduction? Excuse me, I must have missed something somewhere. Last time I checked, the question of UFO abduction of humans as a physical, actually occurring reality has not been proven. If you have irrefutable evidence that proves beyond the shadow of a doubt that UFO abduction of humans is a physically occurring reality, please do whip it out. Show me your evidence that proves the factual basis for your claims of being a UFO abduction victim, and I will publicly and profusely apologize to you, this List, and the UFO community as a whole.

Whip out the evidence, Mr. Velez, that what you spout has a proven basis in fact as opposed to Mr. Mortellaro's statements being made up BS or whatever you think they are. Put it on the table, let's all take a good look at it, and I will publicly apologize for ever doubting your claims. Until you do that, however, your claims, and your interpretations of your claims, are no more valid than any other's.

Oh, and the ever-tiring "I am an abductee, I know I am an abductee, and I don't have to prove anything but you have to believe me anyway" attitude don't cut the mustard.

As for the "abductee matching to the researcher", again I have to agree with Mr. Randle. You got a problem with the observation, take it up with those who made the observation - Mack, Jacobs, etc.

>If not, maybe you want to start another thread! You >can title it:

>"John Velez's many colored cloak of abductee self-righteousness!"

I think "John Velez is Whining Again" would be more fitting :)

You might consider working on those people skills a bit, too.

Just a suggestion...

Karl,

I've read footnote 14 and have a hard time understanding your reasoning. I believe your point is the following: Metalite and Fabrilite were being used experimentally by the US aircraft industry, therefore this was what Schulgen was inferring and thinking about when he requested information about "sandwich construction & balsa wood".

What is your evidence that this is what he was referring to? Your footnote needs more elaboration to be convincing. And why is this information just a footnote if it's so important?

Also I have serious doubts about the authenticity of the Schulgen memorandum that you've determined genuine. Do you realize that the introduction to the memorandum and the enclosure were typed on two different typewriters?

I agree with Mac. Who's to really say which document is authentic; maybe neither one for that matter.

Could you reproduce the documents for the List? They are very important!

Ed

P.S. I also think folks should buy 'Roswell: Inconvenient Facts And The Will To Believe' and read it carefully. You certainly have done some wonderful research.

Considering it took humankind hundreds of thousands of years just to recognize that the Earth orbited Sol and that unseen microbes brought illness, is 50 years long enough to definitively state that Earth is not being observed or studied from afar?

As Hubble, etc. scan the universe are we not, in effect, an alien species observing other solar systems or galaxies that may harbor intelligent life?

As our newest Mars probe orbits, takes digital images, etc., are we not an alien species visiting and observing? If there are microbe life forms on Mars, are we not intelligent life observing lesser life forms? If microbe life exists on Mars, does it recognize the wreckage of our earlier "craft" scattered among it?

Descartes stated, "I think, therefore I am." Rumor states that God told Moses, "I am, that I am." Methinks that lack or refusal of vision as to possibility and probability are as destructive as political correctness taken to the extreme.

For "spies" to categorically state that "there are no aliens out there" after only 50 years, shows failure to think, reason and rationalize, because the methodologies used may not have been the correct ones to ascertain the truth. Besides, when does just reading the "reports" give cause to solve?

William Cooper Killed In SWAT Raid

11-6-1

"...God bless my family. I love my wife & children more than life itself. Everything I do is for the future of all my children. They may not understand why I have sacrificed so much, why I am so dedicated to this work; but someday they will. I want them to know they are the most important People in my life, and how very, very much I love them..." - William Cooper

EAGER, AZ - William Cooper has been killed and an Apache County sheriff's deputy wounded in a shootout, authorities said.

William Milton Cooper, 58, of Eager, had hosted a talk show broadcast on the Worldwide Christian Radio out of Nashville, which receives it via phone from his home in St. Johns.

The deputy, whose name was being withheld by authorities, was shot twice in the head while trying to arrest Cooper, a state Department of Public Safety spokesman said today. Cooper was killed by another officer.

Several deputies were attempting to arrest Cooper, who was armed with a handgun, said Officer Steve Volden, a spokesman for the DPS, which was investigating the shooting.

He said details of the shooting would be released later today.

The deputy was in critical condition at a Phoenix hospital early today, Volden said.

Cooper was one of the most widely known Shortwave radio broadcast, "the Hour of the Time", heard worldwide and on the Internet. "William Cooper may be one of America's greatest heroes and this story may be the biggest story in the history of the world." said Mills Crenshaw, KTALK, Salt Lake City.

William Cooper was reared in an Air Force family. As a child he lived in many different countries, graduating from Yamato High School in Japan. Since he has traveled through or lived in many different foreign countries Mr. Cooper has a world view much different than most Americans.

William served with the Strategic Air Command, United States Air Force. He held a secret clearance working on B-52 bombers, KC-135 refueling aircraft, and Minuteman missiles. William received his Honorable Discharge from the United States Air Force in 1965.

William joined the United States Navy fulfilling a dream previously frustrated by chronic motion sickness. He served aboard the submarine USS Tiru (SS-416), USS Tombigbee (AOG-11), Naval Support Activity Danang RVN, Naval Security and Intelligence Camp Carter RVN, Danang Harbor Patrol RVN, Dong Ha River Security Group RVN, USS Charles Berry (DE-1035), Headquarters Commander in Chief Pacific Fleet, USS Oriskany (CVA-34).

Cooper was a member of the Office of Naval Security and Intelligence serving as a Harbor and River Patrol Boat Captain at Danang and the Dong Ha River Security Group, Cua Viet, Republic of Vietnam. William Cooper was awarded several medals for his leadership and heroism during combat including two with "V" for Valor.

He served on the Intelligence Briefing Team for the Commander In Chief of the Pacific Fleet. William was the Petty Officer of the Watch and designated KL-47 SPECAT operator in the CINCPACFLT Command Center at Makalapa Hawaii. There he held a Top Secret, Q, SI, security clearance.

William Cooper achieved the rank of First Class Petty Officer, QM1, E- 6 after only 8 years of Naval service, a difficult task in any branch of the United States military. William Cooper received an Honorable Discharge from the United States Navy on December 11, 1975.

William attended Long Beach City College where he picked up an Associate of Science Degree in Photography. He founded the Absolute Image Studio and Gallery of Fine Art Photography in Long Beach, California.

William held the position of Executive Director of Adelphi Business College, Pacific Coast Technical Institute, and National Technical College. Mr. Cooper was the National Marketing Coordinator for National Education and Software.

He produced several documentaries covering subjects such as the Kennedy assassination and secret black projects that have built flying disk shaped craft. William is an internationally acclaimed radio personality broadcasting the Hour Of The Time on WBCQ worldwide short-wave 7.415 MHz from 10 PM until 11 PM Eastern Standard Time (0300 to 0400 UTC) Monday through Thursday nights.

William Cooper is the author of Behold A Pale Horse. The book has become the best selling underground book of all time. It is read and promoted by word of mouth by People of all races, religions, and nationalities.

Mr. Cooper is a world class lecturer, one of the few other than superstars, monarchs, and Popes who have appeared at Wembly in London. William Cooper has lectured for 10 years in every State.

William Cooper, Trustee, has founded for Harvest Trust, the CAJI News Service, VERITAS national full size newspaper, The Intelligence Service, Harvest Publications, and has helped over 700 low power FM affiliate stations get equipped and on the air... including the station he managed as Trustee for the Independence Foundation Trust, 101.1 FM Eagar, Arizona, broadcasting to 7,000 people.

Under his leadership Harvest Trust ventured into the publishing trade. The first book under the Harvest Trust imprint was Oklahoma City: Day One by Michele Marie Moore... the definitive classic on the Oklahoma City bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building on April 19, 1995.

Shortly after the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah federal building Rush Limbaugh read a White House memo on the air during his broadcast which named William Cooper, "...the most dangerous radio host in America". Mr. Cooper considers William Clinton's pronouncement the greatest compliment that he has ever received.

William Cooper's FBI file, promulgated by the investigation required by his security clearances while in military service, was one of those unlawfully in possession of the White House in what has become known as, "Filegate". Shortly after this discovery President Clinton ordered all federal agencies to begin investigation, persecution, and prosecution of Mr. Cooper to shut him up.

After years of filing FOIA requests and researching the IRS William Cooper brought suit against the IRS in Federal District Court in Phoenix Arizona to force the IRS to produce proof of jurisdiction and delegation of authority which the IRS was unable to do. To short circuit Mr. Cooper's attempt to reveal the true nature of the criminal IRS, and to carry out the orders of the White House, the agency lied to a Grand Jury, not allowing William Cooper to testify, and secured indictments against Mr. Cooper and his wife Annie. This ploy successfully stopped Mr. Cooper from continuing his suit against the criminal IRS for fear of being arrested.

In 1998 VERITAS and Harvest Publications was sold to Hallmark Creative Corporation along with the copyright and all rights to all written material produced or ever to be produced by William Cooper including Behold A Pale Horse and Oklahoma City: Day one. Hallmark Creative Corporation has contracted to insure this material is always available to the public.

In 1998 copyrights and all rights to all audio and video material produced or ever to be produced by William Cooper was sold to Excel Studios Corporation including the Hour Of The Time broadcast. Excel Studios has contracted to insure this material is always available to the public.

In March of 1999, Cooper William Sent his family out of the United States for their security. He lived and worked alone with his two dogs, one rooster, and one chicken.

William Cooper Update

Sierra Times 11.06.01

Details are still sketchy on what caused the Cooper shootout on November 5, 2001, but a fax sent from the Apache County Sheriff's office sheds some more light on the subject. William Cooper was fatally wounded during a late night gunfight. Contrary to what was reported earlier, it was not a SWAT raid, but a simple confrontation between police and Cooper. One Apache County deputy, Robert Martinez was critically wounded in the exchange. Here's what we know so far:

According to the Sheriff's report, several deputies were positioned outside the Cooper residence to serve a warrant for Aggravated Assault and two counts of endangerment. Cooper had stated numerous times in the past that he would not surrender to law enforcement via his website and shortwave radio. Obviously, law enforcement took him seriously. The showdown began at approximately 12:15 pm local time.

After leaving his residence in his vehicle, the report states that Cooper confronted plain clothed deputies a short distance away. "As Cooper drove back to his residence, deputies attempted to stop him using a fully marked patrol vehicle to block the driveway. Cooper refused to stop or comply with verbal orders by the deputies", according to the report.

Cooper then drove around the patrol car to evade the arrest, and the report stated that he tried to run over one of the deputies en route back to his residence. Cooper was then followed a short distance to his residence where this time he was confronted by uniformed deputies. "After refusing once again to comply with the deputies orders, Cooper exited his vehicle and began running toward the house, firing shots with a handgun toward the deputies", the report said. No where in the report did it mention that Cooper only had one leg - the other lost in combat long ago. Cooper died on the scene.

When Deputy Martinez took a head shot, officers returned fire, the report said. According to the Sheriff's office, "the surgery on Martinez went well" , but the condition is still critical. There was a positive history written up about Martinez in the report, but nothing positive about Cooper, of course.

Cooper had made it known that he would take action against law enforcement from years back stating, "trespassers will be shot on discovery." He also denied violating any laws during that period as well. Cooper has a history of harassing and threatening local residents with deadly force, according to the report. He was recently charge with aggravated assault and endangerment, as well as wanted by the U.S. Marshall's Service on unrelated felony charges. Cooper had spent the last month challenging the government's claims about what caused the destruction of the World Trade Center on September 11.

Most who knew of Cooper all state that he was a hard man to get along with - if at all. His demeanor and attitude was "unfriendly" at best. Although state-sponsored media called Cooper a "national militia leader", no one has yet to come forward who was under his command, nor has anyone to this point come forward to claim his 'militia rank'. None of those who knew Cooper and spoke to Sierra Times wanted to go on the record, but the best statement was, "he was a son-of-a bitch, but he was our son-of-a bitch". The new Patriot Act of 2001 has many wondering if the Cooper take down was just the beginning in silencing the voices on opposition in the Country. "Are they just starting in alphabetical order?" one person asked. Cooper was best known for being the first to provide evidence of explosives being found inside the Murrah Building in Oklahoma City on April 19, 1995, including the type of explosive used.

According to his webmaster, "It appears at this time to be totally unrelated to the disputes he had with the federal government." There were no federal agents involved with the gunfight.

Angel Shamaya and Shonda M. Ponder contributed to this story.

Hello Errol and List,

Actually John, you failed again to read my posts on this thread, taking only what you wanted to make your point. Which is not the point. Above you refer to before and after. I wrote, quite clearly, that I was not certain which came first. Whether indeed the researchers led or that their charges were of the same mind.
But I also wrote that I thought they were being led. Which was your argument with me. Now you assume one side of the argument only. Kevin and I are on the exact same frequency John.

Nothing is unfounded as you may have already read. I have my

Using SYSTRAN, the internet translator (which is imperfect), the caption below the UFO drawing reads:

"The book IV cuts strangely (and remarkably) from the books I to III, as it begins in such a way with a UFO sifting, how the Canonen is geloestet uninterrupted and how at the end new Age wisdom heraufwabert. Whether I find time, that times to follow...? (with C G. Jung find I and andren thread, that the Ausspinnen to be worth could.)"

Maybe someone who knows German can tranlate this more exactly, but Systran gives the gist of it.

>'leading' of their clients, or are we discussing Mortellaro's >unfounded claim that they are all de facto in agreement with >the researchers in question "points of view?"

Actually, it is the same side of the coin. If they are leading their abductees, clients, subjects, experiencers, then we have the first step into the alignment of them with those conducting the research. I thought I had mentioned that CDB Bryan's interview with Mack (page 270-71 hardback) in which Mack said, "And there's another interesting dimension to this... which Budd Hopkins and Dave Jacobs and I argue about all the time, which is that I'm struck by the fact there seems to be a kind of matching of the investigator with the experiencer. So what may be the archetypal structure of an abduction to Dave Jacobs may not be the uniform experience of, say, Joe Nyman or John Mack or someone else. And the experiencers seem to pick out the investigator who will fit their experience."

So, here is Mack saying, essentially, the same thing that Jim has said, and that we saw in our research. Mack has said that experiencers take on the archetypal structure of the investigator doing the regression. He is not saying, nor am I implying, that this is a universal, but it is an observation that apparently has been made by Mack, Hopkins, and Jacobs and is of enough importance that Mack has mentioned it to various individuals.

And there are two points to be made here. One, this implies, to some extent, leading the witness, and two, it implies that the views of the researcher are given to the subject.

On page 25 of 'The Threat' (hardback), Jacobs discusses his sessions with Pam, which, I think, makes the point once again. Jacobs wrote, "I had over thirty sessions with Pam, and during that time she has come to have a less romantic idea about what has been happening to her. She was initially disappointed that what she remembered under hypnosis were not the pleasant experiences she had imagined, but she now accepts the reality of what has been happening to her. She realized that neither guardian angles nor the Pleiades have anything to do with her experiences, and that she cannot manipulate time and reality."

In other words, Pam arrived at Jacobs' door believing that her experiences were pleasant and might reflect her interaction with what she saw as a guardian angel. After undergoing hypnosis with Jacobs, she now realizes the threat and that the experiences were not pleasant. She wasn't visited by New Age philosophers of John Mack or cold, calculating scientists of Budd Hopkins, but the alien invaders of David Jacobs... she came with one set of beliefs and left with a different set which, matches, more closely, the beliefs of David Jacobs.

So, through the interviews with Mack by Bryan, and by reading Jacobs' book, we find that the researchers are agreeing with what Jim has said here. That there is this matching of experiencers with researchers.

>If anyone is introducing "red Herrings" it is the Randle Fish >Market! The Docca and myself are debating one thing, and you

But you see, it's not necessary to give you poll numbers when the researchers you quote are saying the same thing. Mack has said it and Jacobs has said it. So the studies you request can be found in Bryan (in the chapter about Mack with the quotes on page 270) and throughout Jacobs' THE THREAT.

>Simple question. But try getting a straight answer around here!

><screeching maniacal laughter>

>Until I get a relevant response from either of you on the >question at hand,

So, rather than burden you with numbers from our study, I'll just point you at Mack and Jacobs. You could probably throw Nyman and Hopkins into the mix since the four of them discuss this and have differing points of view about it.

Or, another way of looking at this is that Jim has supplied you with the specific poll numbers of his research and I have supplied you with the studies from others. The question has been asked and answered, more than once.

I'd love to see a poll of abductees, as John outlines.

My unscientific opinion -- based just on hanging out with Budd's people over the years -- is that they don't at all necessarily share Budd's view. I've known several with pronounced aliens-are-friendly/new age leanings.

As someone mentioned here, Eddie Bullard did indeed do a study of investigator influence. He found that investigators didn't influence the specifics of what abductees reported, which surely is more important than whether abductees share the investigators' views of the phenomenon. I don't know where this can be found; very likely in a back issue of IUR. It's a great shame that there's no published collection of Eddie's papers.

This critique of abduction researchers -- that they influence the views of the abductees they work with -- is messed up, on several counts.

First, as John points out, it's never been substantiated with real data. It's purely an assumption, based (I'm guessing) on remarks by a few abductees who've appeared in public.

Second, as Eddie Bullard showed, investigators don't appear to have much influenced over the basic details of the experience, as reported by abductees. If critics are going to quote researchers about each other's influence -- Dave saying John Mack sways his people, John saying that about Budd -- critics also ought to quote the same researchers about the things their abductees share. Both Budd and John have stressed that their abductees report the same experiences (painful medical procedures from John's people, spiritual epiphanies, or the like, from Budd's). The investigators and abductees may simply interpret them differently.

Third, if investigators do have some influence, even a strong one, on how abductees think about abductions, why on earth would that be strange or discreditable? Violin teachers very famously have a very similar influence. So do singing teachers. If you're an advanced professional student, you normally find yourself studying with a very famous teacher, with pronounced views on violin or vocal technique. You end up sharing those views. Or else, if those views don't work for you, you leave -- which is exactly what happens with some abductees, who don't like the views of the investigator they work with. An investigator could easily influence the opinions of abductees, without manipulating the details of their reports.

Greg Sandow

It is my recollection that the enclosure (inclosure), the EEI (Essential Element of Information) was written/typed at Wright Field whereas the introduction was written/typed at the Pentagon.
Note that Twining, in his Sep 23 letter, said that Wright Field would supply the Essential Elements of Information.

BUSH ORDER IMPEDES RELEASE OF PRESIDENTIAL RECORDS

A new executive order could make it substantially more difficult for the public to gain access to historically valuable presidential records by requiring the consent of both the incumbent President and the former President whose Administration generated the records.

Earlier this year, the White House had blocked release of records from the Reagan Administration that were supposed to have become public under the Presidential Records Act.

Now the new executive order 13233, signed November 1, will significantly increase the obstacles to disclosure of such records, since it allows either the current President or the former President -- or even the former President's family after his death -- to veto disclosure.

The new order replaces the 1989 executive order 12667, which also permitted a former President to request that records be withheld, but reserved to the incumbent President the right to decide whether or not to honor that request.

It should be noted that the new restrictions will apply only to unclassified information, since classified records are exempt from disclosure anyway, as are a myriad of other categories of information that are protected by statute.

Since classified, privacy, proprietary and other forms of information are already off the table, the new executive order invites the suspicion that it is intended to shield embarrassing information, a category for which an explicit exemption does not exist.

But the actual import of the new order will not be fully clear until it is applied in the months to come to the Reagan records which still await processing.

The new executive order 13233 is posted here:

<http://www.fas.org/sgp/news/2001/11/eo-pra.html>

The order was the subject of a rather testy exchange at the White House press briefing on November 1. See:

<http://www.fas.org/sgp/news/2001/11/wh110101.html>

"I don't see this as anything other than setting a set of procedures that I believe is fair and reasonable," President Bush said at a press availability on November 2:

<http://www.fas.org/sgp/news/2001/11/wh110201.html>

Others disagree. "This decree is not about protecting troops or homeland security," the Los Angeles Times editorialized today. "Rather, the administration's sweeping refusal to release any documents from the Reagan era suggests a secrecy fetish." See:

<http://www.latimes.com/news/opinion/commentary/la-000088720nov06.story>

The House Government Reform Subcommittee on Government Efficiency will hold a hearing on presidential records today.

INFORMATION ON DETAINED SUSPECTS SOUGHT

A coalition of civil liberties and other groups filed a Freedom of Information Act request last week calling upon the Justice Department to disclose information concerning the identities and status of the more than 1,000 individuals who were arrested or detained in the aftermath of the September 11 terrorist attacks.

"While certain aspects of the FBI investigation into the terrorist attacks need to be secret, we do not live in a country where the government can keep secret who they arrest, where they are being held, or the charges against them," said Kate Martin of the Center for National Security Studies (CNSS), who prepared the request.

The October 29 FOIA request seeking disclosure of the information is posted here:

<http://www.aclu.org/congress/l102901a.html>

An independent analysis by the Washington Post identified 235 of the detainees and described the circumstances and purpose of their detention. See the November 4 article "A Deliberate Strategy of Disruption":

<http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A36356-2001Nov3.html>

Meanwhile, CNSS reports that the Justice Department has agreed to expedite the pending FOIA request under the provision relating to "matters of widespread and exceptional media interest in which there exist possible questions about the government's integrity which affect public confidence."

HOMELAND SECURITY PRESIDENTIAL DIRECTIVES

The Bush Administration has inaugurated a new series of Presidential Directives, designated Homeland Security Presidential Directives, or HSPDs, that will "record and communicate presidential decisions about the homeland security policies of the United States."

Though other Presidential Directives are almost reflexively withheld from disclosure, and released grudgingly if at all, the first two HSPDs were published last week without hesitation, although only in softcopy format. See:

<http://www.fas.org/irp/offdocs/nspd/index.html#hspd>

MY RED INDIAN ISN'T COMING

Toward the end of World War II, a young Jewish survivor named Marcel Reich found himself working as a military censor for the Polish army searching the mail for suspicious communications. As he recently recalled:

Dark formulations, calling for the censor, were found with particular frequency in the letters of female members of the army. For instance: "My Red Indian isn't coming" or "I am very worried because there is no sign of the Chinese" or "All my efforts are in vain. Have you no idea how to get the thing moving?" After much effort the mystery was solved: these letters always concerned a missed period. Anyone might have thought that the greatest secret of the Polish army was menstruation.

What I learned then was that institutions surrounded by a halo of secrecy owe their reputation to the legends spread about them or to those which they themselves have launched. Once one comes to know them from the inside they are invariably disappointing.... I soon came to the conclusion that censorship work was not only stupid and boring but also totally unnecessary.

These observations appear in the book "The Author of Himself" by Marcel Reich-Ranicki, newly translated from the German (p. 218). It is a memoir of Reich's boyhood in Berlin, his wartime experiences in the Warsaw ghetto (where as a music critic he once reviewed a performance by a young ghetto violinist named Edgar Aftergut) through his professional ascent to become perhaps the preeminent literary critic in Germany today.

Rich in anecdote and high literary gossip, the book will appeal to those with an affinity for German literature or an interest in the fateful encounter of Germans and Jews. See:

I'll respond with your own statement. Let's see 'who' is making
'what' "contentions" eh. "

>Having said all that, I find it fascinating that those regressed
>by each, each group, Budd's and Dave's, seem to share the same >reasoning regarding the intentions of the alien abductors. Dr.

>Dave's clients share the opinion, generally, that the aliens are

See Jim, as Alfalfa told Spanky; "You can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool Mom!" ;)

It was you not me that made those remarks.

I was "responding" to your inaccurate generalizations.
Generalizations that make the many -hundreds- of people/abductees that you are referring to sound like mindless drones without an original thought of their own among the lot.
"As if" they all shared the same point of view as the researcher they went to for help or information.

Just as it is always wrong to make sweeping generalizations like "all blacks are thus and so" or "All Latino's are thus and so" you are wrong to make the kind of broad-brush claim that you have made above about such a large group of individuals.

>>I contend that he doesn't know what he's talking about because >>he has never known or interviewed enough of them to make such an >>outrageous and unfounded statement. Not just Mortellaro, >>no one has taken such a poll.

>Wonderful then, as I have interviewed a large enough sampling of >hope you don't mind. There is no poll. Read David's book. Then >speak with his clients. Then do the same with John and Budd's >clients. A pattern will emerge. Clearly so.

You're kidding here right? Of course there is "no poll"! That's what I've been saying to you over and over in this thread. Yet in spite of the fact that a "poll" of Budd, David's and John's clients has never been conducted, you 'presume' to make the statement you've made about them anyway.

And I don't have to contact anybody Jim. I have known and spent years speaking privately with Budd, and David. I've got a little information for you: For years I was curious about what Budd himself actually thought of the phenomenon. Personal thoughts that he has never published or revealed. It wasn't until our relationship was three years old that he confided in me his own personal thoughts on the subject. If you knew what that 'opinion' really is; it would slam your pie hole shut. You have no clue as to how wrong you are about, a. What Budd's own thoughts are, and b. even less about what the abductees think. ;)

>Further, it is not necessary to take a poll in order to have an >opinion. Shoot, if we had to do that, we'd be Japanese doing >consensus management and bowing low. I don't do bows. Domo >arrigato, Johnny San.

Finally! It only took four e-mail exchanges to get you to cop to the fact that you are only expressing a personal opinion and not one that is based on either an actual "poll" of the people in question or first hand knowledge. Now was that so hard?

That there are no Polls and that you are expressing uninformed opinion is precisely the point I've been trying to make all along.

Look at all the arm twisting it took to get you to admit it! ;)

>I have never referred to you as the "Egotistical and Paranoid >King of the J.... uh, Abductees." Never. Behind your back or >otherwise. Produce the juice. Royalty never impressed me anyway.
>Divine right and all that snuff.

Not one but two of the people that you correspond with privately sent me copies of e-mails that you sent to them.
Tirades where you are going on about how "evil" I am, how I'm just a "raving paranoiac", and that I fancy myself to be the "King of the Abductees." Your words. Sound familiar? Gimme a break man.

I will not violate a confidence by publishing the names of the individuals that sent me those "heads-up" notes. Maybe you ought to "poll" the people that you make these kinds of "behind the back" statements to to find out 'which two' of them did it. I'm not going to rat them out in public. Shoot, they are the ones that keep me 'in the know.'

Here's another little 'jolt' for you:

I not only have the original copies of those communications, I sent copies of them to EBK when I first received them. <LOL>

See, it's a habit I have of sending him copies of the cowardly flames that some people send to me privately. It's just one of the ways I cover my own ass in case situations like this should arise where someone like you goes "huh, what are you talking about?" and tries to 'play dumb'. Although I don't think 'playing dumb' is that much of a stretch for you. More than once I have been glad that I share that kind of stuff with someone that I trust.

You're a coward for not having the cohonos to tell me to my face. And even worse for doing it behind my back with people I do not know personally. (And who do not really know me.) You only compound the offensiveness of it all by acting (in public) like you don't know exactly what I'm talking about.

Just to put a 'cap' on all this, we have established the following:

1. You made a statement that is not based on anything other than your personal "opinion."
2. Your "sampling" of all the people that have worked with Budd, David, and John consists of no more than thirty individuals. (And I'm only taking your word on that number.)
3. The clients (Budd's) that you did meet demonstrated what you yourself refer to as: an "impressive" diversity of points of view.
4. In spite of the fact that you insist on saying that there is a difference between the people Budd has hypnotized and the people that attend his meetings, they are one and the same. Like all the contradictory statements that you have made, it too is absurd. Budd's clients are Budd's clients, whether he has hypnotized them or not. His "clients" are the ones who attend the meetings.

You make sweeping statements about the personal beliefs of literally hundreds of individuals that you do not know and have never spoken to, and then you get annoyed when someone who knows better calls you on it. What a guy.

Where do I come off:

Forget that you are speaking to John Velez the individual for a moment. You're arguing with the former Webmaster of Budd's Intruders Foundation. As such, and with all that experience under my belt with the people you are referring to, I'm telling you that you couldn't be more wrong when you paint all these individuals with the same brush the way you do.

While you "may have" spoken to thirty of them, (I'll assume that 10 were Budd's 10 were David's and ten were John's.) Over a period of many years I have spoken to, spent hours on end with, and in some cases broken bread with, literally hundreds of the people in question. I dare say that my "opinion" which is based on first hand knowledge and gleaned from -hundreds- of Budd's clients, easily 'trumps' your thirty. If you think that thirty people is (as you say) a "significant" enough number to justify your outrageous claim, then how much more significant would my own experienced opinion be about the 'Hundreds' of these people I actually know?

In your estimation, and using your own yardstick, (that 30 people represents a "significant" sampling) would my opinion be more or less significant than the one you express?

Think before you speak in the future and we can avoid these little head-butting sessions. I'm just tired of having to 'clean-up' after some the 'messes' you make on this very public List. I lost all patience with you after your interference in the Carpenter business. Something that affected _all_ abductees. But then, you have established a pattern of saying things about abductees and researchers that ultimately turn out to be completely inaccurate, and just plain wrong. That book of yours is going to be a doozy I'm sure. And BTW, _my_name_ or any reference to me better not appear _anywhere_ in it. If you do, you can start packing your bags right now because the new house, that cannon of a gun that you carry, and that poopy and pishy puppy you talk about will all be mine. :)

Nuff said, point made.

Bravo 'UFO'!

I intended to post something to this List about the latest issue of 'UFO' long before now. I thoroughly enjoyed reading the two articles mentioned above - as well as the rest of this issue.

Dwight Schultz's book review on Karl Pflock's Roswell book, 'Roswell Inconvenient Facts And The Will To Believe', was GREAT!

Keep up the good work -

'Abduction In My Life' - A Review

From: Katharina Wilson <kwilson@alienjigsaw.com>
Date: Tue, 06 Nov 2001 17:19:36 -0500
Fwd Date: Wed, 07 Nov 2001 04:44:44 -0500
Subject: 'Abduction In My Life' - A Review

'Abduction In My Life'
by Bruce S. Maccabee, Ph.D. © 2001

Reviewed by Katharina Wilson

[This review was recently published in the MUFON UFO Journal, October 2001, Number 402.]

'Abduction In My Life' is a novel based on generally accepted facts derived from years of abduction research from various researchers. It is also a 'book within a book' and the book 'within' is definitely not fiction. 'Abduction In My Life' seems to cry out for its own category and perhaps Nonfiction / Fiction or 'Faction' might best describe it.

The novel is about a science fiction writer who is happily married with one son. He is the person telling the story and from here on, I will refer to him as the author. He is a 'virgin' to the UFO phenomenon and all that it encompasses. He is completely oblivious to the fact that anything remotely associated with the subject could ever be 'real.' As far as he is concerned, it is a subject for 'crackpots."

All of that slowly begins to change when a friend tells the author about a sighting of a red light he had. It occurred some 30 years prior on a cold Vermont night while he was working in a sugar maple orchard with another man. After their sighting, the men noticed that one of them was missing some clothing and, well, there were other odd things that just did not seem 'right.'

The author tells his friend he will try to help him figure out what happened. He decides that in order to help his friend, he needs to understand what it is he is getting involved with so he checks out a book at his local library. The book he checks out is actually the nonfiction book you will read while reading the novel - and - it is an extremely informative book!

He brings the book home, begins to read it and hides it from his family while trying to finish it. While he reads the book you get a clear picture of what this man thinks about the UFO phenomenon. He has to force himself to read it and slams it closed on occasion while cursing the author of the book, a man named Mac Sargent, Ph.D. (Those of us 'in the know' think we know who this man really is...)

This nonfiction book introduces the author (and the reader) to the history of the UFO phenomenon. It covers BMI's (Battelle Memorial Institute's) Special Report #14 and the preceding Status Reports of Project Stork. He learns about Projects Sign, Grudge and Blue Book, Kenneth Arnold's sighting, the Condon Report and much more. He learns about scientific skeptics like J. Allen Hynek and debunkers like Dr. Donald Menzel. In short, the nonfiction book he reads begins to slowly change his attitude about people who say they have seen a UFO, and it helps him to better help his friend who had the sighting nearly 30 years ago. It will be easy for a lot of people who have studied the UFO subject to look back and see themselves in this same position some 10, 20 or even 30 years ago.

The author eventually finds contacts to help his friend and the man who was with him when he saw the red light. He becomes more and more involved, but still tries to reject some of the information he feels forced to consider: The government and the (Army) Air Force hid the truth from the American public. He tries to rationalize this while he attempts to understand the implications of the many detailed reports he has read. Just when he thinks his mind has absorbed about all it can take; his wife drops a 'bombshell' on him.

Because she discovers the book her husband has been hiding from her, she feels it is 'okay' to mention a few things about her past. Doing so leads the author's family on a journey of self-discovery and forever changes their lives.

From the book:

"Whoa, baby," I said. "Things aren't that bad." And then I told a big lie. "It's not like the world is coming to an end." I knew it was a lie because the world, our world was coming, had come to an end. The future would not be like the past. I just sat there holding her to me. I couldn't think of anything else to do or anything profound to say so I just reassured her.

If the readers of this book choose it because they enjoy fiction, they are in for a really big surprise, because even the fictional portion of the book is based in fact. Speaking as someone who has experienced this phenomenon firsthand, Maccabee has definitely done his homework on the abduction aspects of the phenomenon.

I'm not sure which book I actually enjoyed the most. Because I have never reviewed fiction before and do not normally read fiction, I found myself leaning towards enjoying the nonfiction book more at times. When the nonfiction book ended however, the fictional book really took off and I found myself getting more into that part of the book.

The last two chapters of 'Abduction In My Life' are terrific. In 'Question Everything' Maccabee forces the reader to consider some interesting concepts relating to spirituality, religious beliefs, evolution and philosophy. There is also a discussion about 'societal infrastructure' and how the ET presence could affect human life one day. The Epilogue is a 'wrapping up' of the novel.

Maccabee weaves the 'abduction novel based in fact' in very well with the 'nonfiction history of the UFO phenomenon.' I learned a great deal from the nonfiction book within this novel. It is a great review for people interested in ufology and I came across a lot of information I normally would not have read had it been presented in another book that was only about UFO sightings.

This is probably what is most important about 'Abduction In My Life.' If marketed properly, it will introduce people to certain aspects of the UFO phenomenon who would not normally read a book about abductions or UFO sightings only. They don't have to know the novel is based in fact and they will learn a great deal about how our government, the (Army) Air Force and the media kept the public from learning the truth about UFOs for over fifty years.

My main criticism about the book rest with the publisher and editors. In my opinion, they did not do justice to Dr. Maccabee by leaving out his biography. For a scientist who has done so much for ufology, not to have his biography published in his book is something I do not understand. Perhaps there were reasons, but in this reviewer's opinion, it would have added a great deal more credibility for the reader who is new to the subject.

Maccabee, of course, has been active in UFO research since the late 1960s when he joined NICAP. He is the author of about three dozen technical articles and more than 100 UFO articles. He is co- author of "The Gulf Breeze Sightings," and is the author of "The UFO/FBI Connection." He is the MUFON State director for Maryland, and in 1979 led the establishment of the Fund for UFO Research.

I highly recommend 'Abduction In My Life.'

You will learn a great deal by reading this book and you will learn about a scientist who has been a friend to ufology for many years. 'Abduction In My Life' has an index, a great 'Bibliography and Footnotes' section and a great price at $15.00. It is a book you will enjoy even if you think you know it all and it is a book that will make a great gift for friends and family members who just aren't convinced that any of this is real. Boy - are they in for a surprise!

>this secret (referring to the UFO/ET phenomenon), something like >how it's "leaking out all over the place", etc.

I haven't said the secret is leaking out all over the place. People have asked me "why are there no leaks?" I have said there have been leaks. There have been bits and pieces put forth. General DuBose talked about what he knew, for example. But no transcript and no tape. Military witnesses almost never have copies of classified reports. Mr. Salas has talked at length about his fascinating experiences in Montana. These can be called leaks. So far we have two intelligence documents that were TOP SECRET. Yet, the FBI said Army and Air Force intelligence agencies consider the subject TOP SECRET. Where are the rest of the TS documents. The NSA, treating us like idiots has released, they say, 156 old UFO documents. But on almost all the pages White Out has been used to cover more than 90% of the words. This a leak.....

>So, the obvious question is:

>Which secrets can and cannot the government maintain?

>And if your answer is "knowledge of the existence of >extraterrestrial life visiting this planet", then why do you say >that, essentially, it's not a secret!?

I have not said it is essentially not a secret. I am saying that a great deal of US government information has been kept secret about ETs and of course many other subjects. It is really funny how people who should know better proclaim that statements made in Confidential or Secret documents i.e. the Twining Memo somehow prove the non-existence of something which was TOP SECRET. We know about many secrets because they were finally released such as the launch by the NRL of the first Elint satellite in 1960... first admitted in 1995. We don't know about those secrets which have not been released. There are leaks and there are secrets.

>Seriously, I'm confused...

I suggest you read what I have actually written or hear what I have actually said..... Paraphrasing won't do.

Subject: W. M. Cooper Killed

To UFO UpDates List:

Some of you will recall William Milton Cooper who came onto the UFO scene about 15 years ago and soon made himself one of the most unscrupulous conspiracy theorists in the UFO field.

After several years he was being invited to give lectures for considerable pay. He talked about the UFO/Kennedy/you-name-it conspiracy. Anyone who didn't agree with him... even when he changed his story... which he did (as it grew and grew)... was against him and part of the Conspiracy! He put it all into his book, 'Behold A Pale Horse'... which more accurately should be entitled 'Behind The Pale Horse'.

Militia leader killed, deputy wounded during attempted arrest

Associated Press/The Arizona Republic Nov. 06, 2001 12:20:00

EAGAR - A national leader of the militia movement has been killed and an Apache County sheriff's deputy wounded in a shootout, authorities said.

William Milton Cooper, 58, of Eager, had hosted a talk show broadcast on the Worldwide Christian Radio out of Nashville, which receives it via phone from his home in St. Johns. He had millions of listeners worldwide, including Timothy McVeigh.

The deputy, whose name was being withheld by authorities, was shot twice in the head while trying to arrest Cooper, a state Department of Publicafety spokesman said today. Cooper was killed by another officer.

Several deputies were attempting to arrest Cooper, who was armed with a handgun, said Officer Steve Volden, a spokesman for the DPS, which was investigating the shooting. He said details of the shooting would be released later today.

The deputy was in critical condition at a Phoenix hospital early today, Volden said.

Cooper was one of the most widely known prophets of the "patriot movement," railing at the federal government and talking of doomsday omens in his radio broadcast.

McVeigh, who was executed in May for the bombing of the federal building in Oklahoma City, listened to Cooper's broadcasts for inspiration, according to testimony by James Nichols, brother of Oklahoma bombing co-defendant Terry Nichols during a 1996 pretrial hearing.

Like some other patriot leaders, Cooper refused to get a driver's license or pay federal income taxes, saying he is willing to risk getting ticketed and has found a legal way to avoid the taxes.

The patriot movement grew during the 1990s, fed by a series of news events - the siege of Randy Weaver in Idaho, the raid on the Branch Davidians near Waco, Texas and the signing of gun-control laws.

Good point. I reason (after familiarizing myself with aircraft state-of-the-art c. 1947) that the balsa reference probably does in fact mean earthly, not Roswellian, technology.

When I thought the "balsa" reference was anomalous, I immediately assumed that the spurious document (with the phrase "or similar materials") might be a fake planted to muddy the true originals of the original.

But since balsa was indeed in use, why bother? Making a near-duplicate of the original would only serve to attract attention in the long run.

After an initial period of confusion, I'm tending toward Pflock's non-ET explanation. But I think both of these papers are quite important; their history and provenance deserve more attention.

Budd Hopkins' UFO Seminar Announcement - 11/17/01

Subject: Budd Hopkins' UFO Seminar Announcement - 11/17/01

Intruders Foundation Seminar Series Announcement

STRATEGIC AIR COMMAND, UFOs, AND THE PENTAGON A PRESENTATION BY EDWARD REYNOLDS

Saturday, November 17, 2001

Edward Reynolds, in a long and distinguished career, has been, among other things, a teacher, an engineer, and an Air Force officer. (Note: As he wishes to retain his anonymity, 'Edward Reynolds' is not his real name.)

Three decades ago Mr. Reynolds, then an Air Force Officer, experienced an extraordinary UFO encounter while on duty at a major Strategic Air Command (SAC) airbase. This was an incursion of several unusually shaped craft moving only a few feet above the ground in an area where SAC bombers were parked in full wartime readiness, some with nuclear bombs aboard. Weapons were fired at the UFOs, and major repercussions followed at the highest military level. Ed Reynolds was personally involved in the sighting, the gunfire, and the official investigation that ensued.

In the mid-1980s, Budd Hopkins was introduced to Ed Reynolds by Dr. J. Allen Hynek, director of the Center for UFO Studies, and former scientific consultant to the Air Force on Unidentified Flying Objects. Mr. Reynolds, whom both Hopkins and Dr. Hynek regarded as a witness of the highest credibility, reported a number of personal UFO experiences, of which this encounter at the SAC base was perhaps the most remarkable. Hopkins has continued his relationship with Ed Reynolds, exploring several UFO abductions that he experienced in childhood as well as in adulthood, and a warm friendship has followed.

The account that Mr. Reynolds will relate at the IF Seminar is certain to be among the most remarkable and significant that we have ever presented - especially as it demonstrates the methods of Air Force cover-up of UFO incursions at its own most secure airbases. Mr. Reynolds has never before discussed his experience at public forum, and IF is particularly honored that he has chosen to do so at our November seminar. He will show slides of drawings he made of the objects that he encountered that night, and, as time permits, will also discuss recent UFO abduction recollections.

REGISTRATION & INFORMATION

The seminar will be held on November 17th at the meeting rooms of A.R.E., on the 10th Floor of 150 W. 28th Street, New York, NY. The price of the seminar is $30 for non-members and $20 for members of IF, seniors, and students. Reservations must be made by telephone at 212-645-5278, and will be filled on a first come, first served basis. Payments must be made in advance to secure the reservation. Make checks payable to the Intruders Foundation, P.O. Box 30233, New York, NY 10011. Only 50 reservations will be accepted.

On-street parking is generally available in the neighborhood.

The seminar will begin at 7:30 PM and end at 10:30 PM. Doors open at 7:00 PM. There will be a half-hour intermission, during which light complimentary refreshments will be served. A book table will offer books, videotapes, and other material for sale to those interested. For additional information, call IF at 212-645-5278.

Hope to see you there!

William Cooper Dies In Gunfight

Subject: William Cooper Dies In Gunfight

Before his violent death in November, 2001, lecturer and self-proclaimed military insider William Cooper helped popularize a number of malignant myths centered on the notion of secret U.S. contact with aliens. Cooper believed extraterrestrials were involved in a quiet takeover of the world, and claimed to have seen briefing documents and photos of aliens while serving in the military. He famously attacked noted UFO personalities such as Whitley Strieber, Linda Moulton Howe and Stanton Friedman as being CIA operatives bent on keeping the truth from public knowledge. Later in his career, Cooper's worldview became increasingly oppressive and paranoid.

Dear Bill,

I find automatic translations of German and Dutch texts to be pretty bad. Anyway, thanks for trying.

I think the relevant text is in the document at the top, but you'd hav to be a German scholar to read that, I guess.

It seems to be dated 1728.

Anyone out there who can help?

Chris

Dear All, Errol,

Some day you will learn the truth about everything. A sort of Unified Field Theory of 'what it is'.

In the interim, I shall stay with the subject at hand and the debate on thread. To get down, dirty and personal on this List is not only counter-productive, it is a waste of good bandwidth.
Errol is not the fool. Or he would have canned one of us long ago.

The data which I've accumulalted is statistically correct according to the standards of the manual for statistics and quality control, a book which my father helped write. Whether one agrees with it or not is a matter not of one's openmindedness, but of one's ability to read and think.

Last, when all is said and done, and the debate has reached a level of "well, das is alles, ain't no more to say..." then only a child will go, "I'm gonna tell your daddy on you!" and stamp off with only personal invectives as the argument.

No one here or anywhere else on this planet, had the absolute truth. Not a one of us. And when it comes to matters of such import as those which inject personal trauma, such as the abduction phenomena, there is more reason to search for truth, whatever it might be. To close one's mind is counter to the integrity of the intellect.

And I presume that integrity is something you respect?

Good, then use it and can the personal juice. It tells only of children who have not as yet learned to interact with one the other.

Jim Mortellaro

I saw Cooper speak at Hollywood High School in Los Angeles in 1989.

Two highlights. One of them was his claim that aliens influenced the US to intervene militarily on the Communist side during the Russian revolution. There are two small problems with that.
First, the US intervened on the anti-communist side (to be precise, this was in the civil war that followed the revolution).
Second, Cooper himself said at another point in his talk that the aliens arrived here in 1947. The Russian revolution and the succeeding civil war were much earlier than that (1918 to 1921, I believe).

Second highlight: During the question period, someone rose from the audience to announce that the government was spying on the lecture! He pointed to video cameras set up onstage. Cooper -- for once seeming utterly baffled -- replied that those were his own cameras. A case of conspiracy thinking getting too crazy even for Cooper.

Cooper got an ovation when he said the aliens were responsible for gun control. It was quite an evening.

>Actually, it is the same side of the coin. If they are leading >their abductees, clients, subjects, experiencers, then we have >the first step into the alignment of them with those conducting >the research. I thought I had mentioned that CDB Bryan's >interview with Mack (page 270-71 hardback) in which Mack said,
>"And there's another interesting dimension to this... which Budd >Hopkins and Dave Jacobs and I argue about all the time, which is >that I'm struck by the fact there seems to be a kind of matching >of the investigator with the experiencer. So what may be the >archetypal structure of an abduction to Dave Jacobs may not be >the uniform experience of, say, Joe Nyman or John Mack or >someone else. And the experiencers seem to pick out the >investigator who will fit their experience."

Is Mack talking about the alleged facts reported by the abductees, or about the overall interpretation of the abduction?
What does he mean by "archetypal structure of an abduction"?

As I've already pointed out, Budd and John Mack - along with abductees they've both worked with - agree that the details of the reported experiences tend to be similar in both camps. What differs is the interpretation. (More precisely, similar experiences are reported in both camps.

I don't have Bryan's book with me as I write this, so I can't check the reference. But this quote - at least as Kevin reproduces it here - shows one problem that can arise when you write about abductions without spending a lot of time talking to the people you're studying. You might, no matter how careful you try to be, put your own spin on something you read. You might come to wrong conclusions, which could easily be corrected by the people you're writing about.

Here's an additional problem. How do we know what experiences Budd's and John Mack's abductees report? Both Budd and John have written books, so that's one source of this information. But it's not an adequate source for serious study. John, for instance, may accept reports from abductees who say that they have secret lives as aliens. So he puts things like that in his books. Budd doesn't accept those reports, so he doesn't put them in. But that doesn't mean he doesn't get them. I've long thought, and have often said, that this is a failing in both Budd's and Dave Jacobs's books. They don't show enough of the raw material they work with.

That, though, is another issue. I'll repeat my main point - that we can't learn what abductees actually report simply by reading books by John Mack, Dave Jacobs, and Budd Hopkins. John gets many reports of unpleasant medical procedures that he doesn't print. Budd and Dave get many reports of new-age stuff that they don't print. They don't try to hide this, at least in my experience. They acknowledge it very freely. So some of the differences you find in their writing are differences of interpretation - what they believe in abductee reports, or what they think is important. They're not necessarily differences in what the abductees report.

>And there are two points to be made here. One, this implies, to >some extent, leading the witness, and two, it implies that the >views of the researcher are given to the subject.

>On page 25 of 'The Threat' (hardback), Jacobs discusses his >sessions with Pam, which, I think, makes the point once again.
>Jacobs wrote, "I had over thirty sessions with Pam, and during >that time she has come to have a less romantic idea about what >has been happening to her. She was initially disappointed that >what she remembered under hypnosis were not the pleasant >experiences she had imagined, but she now accepts the reality of >what has been happening to her. She realized that neither >guardian angles nor the Pleiades have anything to do with her >experiences, and that she cannot manipulate time and reality."

>In other words, Pam arrived at Jacobs' door believing that her >experiences were pleasant and might reflect her interaction with >what she saw as a guardian angel. After undergoing hypnosis with >Jacobs, she now realizes the threat and that the experiences >were not pleasant. She wasn't visited by New Age philosophers of >John Mack or cold, calculating scientists of Budd Hopkins, but >the alien invaders of David Jacobs... she came with one set of >beliefs and left with a different set which, matches, more >closely, the beliefs of David Jacobs.

But this doesn't prove that Dave was leading her. What happens in this account is very common in other situations, where nobody questions it. For instance, suppose a woman whose husband abuses her goes into therapy. It's very common for abused women to defend their abusers. "He really loves me." "He means well; he just gets angry sometimes." "It's my own fault. I don't treat him well enough."

Then, in the course of therapy or counselling, these women may dramatically change their views. "That bastard abused me. I did nothing to deserve that. Nobody deserves to be treated that way." You could say that they're adopting their therapists' views here, but because the therapists' view seems sensible - and, above all, grounded in the facts - nobody objects.

Why is it different when Dave talks to an abductee about abductions? The truth is that we don't know whether it's different or not. Some of us just assume it is. Maybe the abductee ("Pam" in this case) had obvious conflicts sticking out all over her story - maybe she gave obvious indications that she felt hurt, used, and angry, with these feelings coexisting next to her belief that it was all for her own good. Maybe Dave just brought the conflict to her attention, and let her draw her own conclusions. That would be standard therapeutic practice in other situations (not, of course, that Dave pretends to be a therapist). I've seen Budd do exactly this with abductees he works with.

I'm not saying we can prove Dave doesn't lead his abductees. I'm only saying that the passage Kevin quotes doesn't prove that he does lead them.

Greg Sandow

SPECTACULAR AURORA BOREALIS DISPLAYS

GEOMAGNETIC STORM WARNINGS -- A powerful solar explosion and plasma hurricane on November 4th, sparked an X-class solar flare and hurled a bright coronal mass ejection toward Earth. The expanding cloud triggered strong geomagnetic activity with fluorescent red, blue, and green skies when it swept past our planet on November 6th at 8:50 PM. EST. Sky watchers everywhere, even at middle latitudes where auroras are rarely seen, should be alert for Northern Lights while geomagnetic storms are underway. Observers as far south as central California and Delaware have reported vivid shimmering Northern Lights. For detailed information visit Space Weather at <http://www.spaceweather.com>

NASA's MARS ODYSSEY SPACECRAFT

JPL -- The Odyssey Spacecraft has started taking dips into the Martian atmosphere to get into position to map our neighboring planet. The craft is aerobraking passing within 100 miles of the surface and hoping to detect the atmosphere of Mars. The Odyssey will move lower to about 60 miles from the surface by January and is expected to maintain a 2 1/2-hour circular orbit when the aerobraking is complete. New data is intended to map the distribution of minerals and chemicals across the surface and provide daily Martian weather reports. It also will seek out frozen deposits of water that might help determine if life ever existed on the Red Planet. Editor's Note: Insider data indicates they already know that life exists on Mars and they may start to reveal this data backed by the Odyssey findings.

CONNECTICUT BIZARRE MECHANICAL UFO OBSERVED

BRISTOL -- Resident reports UFO sighting - A Nicholas Drive resident reported to police Sunday that he saw an unidentified flying object about 1:00 AM Sunday, November 4, 2001, hovering near the Douglas A. Beals Senior-Community Center. The resident said that while he was walking his dog, he looked up and something that looked like a bird with flapping wings -- but it was the size of an ultra light airplane and produced "a whirring, almost mechanical sound." There were no other reports of anyone sighting the object. The Bristol Press / CT

NEW YORK FLYING TRIANGLE WITH FLAT EDGES

NEW YORK CITY -- It was a chrome like color, as big as a one story building, maybe about 250-500 feet in the air, and it glowed reddish black and left a whitish trail when it left on October 15, 2001, at 2:00 PM. During this event, the object changed colors three of four times, between reddish black, to a very dark red. It sounded like a whistle at first, but became silent and came on again. It was similar to Morse Code. I saw at least a dozen lights on it that were various colors. I was talking on my cell phone at the time to my wife, telling her about this, and it was coming in kind of fuzzy. Then I heard a noise coming from my cell phone, (Maybe a transmission) and then it went dead a couple of seconds later. The noises I heard from the phone could have been a language, but I could not understand a word of it. After my phone went dead, the UFO left a few seconds later.

POUGHKEEPSIE -- On October 13, 2001, this witness reports, "My wife, myself and two friends were driving back from a haunted hay ride at 12:45 PM saw a strange star. We were driving south on the NY State Thruway on a very clear night. I opened the sunroof and was looking at the stars when my wife said, "Look at that really bright star." It was in the east and low on the horizon and was moving. I asked my friend to pull over and got a good look at the moving light. It was moving in odd formations. So we thought it was a plane moving across the sky. But after a minute or two it was still in the same spot, but moving up then to the left, right, down, it would even dim then become very bright again. Then move in circular motions, and then dim out completely. Then BAM brighten up again. The shape of this thing was a triangle and very bright. I don't know what it was, but it was something and I hope I have the opportunity to see it again. Thanks to Peter Davenport Director of NUFORC

VIRGINIA SPHERE SHAPED UFO

HARRISONBURG -- On October 15, 2001, the witness was standing on his deck and noticed circular object off-white in color traveling at supersonic speed. At 5:25 PM it was still daylight, the circular object solid in appearance but without any distinct markings was seen. At first the witness thought it was a plane of some sort but then I noticed it didn't emit any sound. The witness estimates that it was 3500 to 4000 feet high, and 50 degrees off the horizon. It resembled the color of an off-white cloud. The object was going northeast at supersonic speed because it was out of sight in no time. When I first noticed the object, it was about the size of a nickel or quarter at arm's length. As it traveled, it rapidly decreased in size until I lost it over the horizon. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

FLORIDA WEIRD OBJECT FLIES ABOVE MIAMI SKIES.

HIALEAH -- NUFORC reports the witness says, "I saw the object over Miami on Saturday night, October 14, 2001, from 12:30 to 4:00 AM. The object appeared like a star but was zigzagging in the night sky. When I looked through my binoculars, I noticed that it appeared much like a jellyfish with two limbs and a light source inside. I contacted a friend who lives ten miles west of me and he confirmed seeing the object in the west. The object would disappear behind the clouds. My family also described it as "a jellyfish-like object with two legs and a light inside." I thought it looked more like a frog with two legs and with a light inside. We all agreed that it looked and moved much like a kite would and not a weather balloon. How could a kite fly well above the clouds? Thanks to NUFORC

TENNESSEE DAYLIGHT SILVER DISC.

NASHVILLE -- At 9:40 AM, on October 26, 2001, my wife and I were traveling on I 24 and noticed two jets that appeared to be heading toward each other (for a possible collision). One was heading east and one heading west. Out of bewilderment, we continued to observe the planes. After watching for approximately two minutes, suddenly, a bright silver appearing disc shaped object (the width of the jet stream itself) appeared between the two planes and swooped into the jet stream of the plane coming from the east and traveled the entire length of that plane's stream in approximately 2-3 seconds and disappeared. As soon as the object disappeared, both planes veered away from their flight paths and turned to go in opposite directions. Needless to say, in light of the attacks on Washington and the World Trade Center, we assumed the planes were military aircraft zeroing in on something picked up on radar. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com.

WISCONSIN LIGHT FALLS STRAIGHT DOWN

WISCONSIN RAPIDS -- UFOWisconsin reports that Tony E. was driving on Highway 13 on November 4, 2001, from Pittsville when he witnessed a bright light, bigger than a falling star. It moved faster than a falling star, coming straight down perpendicular to the horizon beyond or over the city of Wisconsin Rapids at 7:10 PM. I was so far away, that it appeared to disappear behind some woods. Thanks to Jenny Hoppe ICQ #950705 UFOWisconsin - <http://www.ufowisconsin.com> " Thanks to jenny@ufowisconsin.com (Jenny Hoppe), UFOWisconsin http://www.ufowisconsin.com/county/reports/r2001\_1104\_wood.html Jenny says, "Stop the planet, I wanna get off!"

MISSOURI STRANGE OBJECT ON TV

SAINT LOUIS -- Dave Arnold writes, "This morning, Nov. 6, 2001, while viewing the news on KTVI Channel 2 St. Louis between 7 to 8:00 AM, I saw the following when cutting to a weather segment? Behind the news anchor was a background video window (running at this point) showing the St. Louis downtown dawn sky, prerecorded as it was now 7:00 AM or later, looking east, which was a beautiful collage of colors, when an object came into view from the center-left of the screen and continued in a straight line horizontally across the picture reaching just beyond center of the screen left to right at which point the video froze. The object appeared to be an elliptically shaped ball of light, white in color, with trailing tail. It looked like a teardrop on it's side. It traveled seemingly slow as it took nearly two seconds to move from left to where it was stopped. Anyone viewing this newscast, if they chanced to look at this background video, could not have missed this. It seemed ! as though the video was frozen at just the moment I was thinking "what the hell is that?" The image remained frozen and onscreen for another 3 to 5 seconds before they moved on to the next segment. I thought maybe you could verify this (or not) with KTVI. #### NORTH DAKOTA STRANGE LIGHTS

Brian Vike reports that on October 31, 2001, he received a report from a witness who was out for a midnight drive with friends. Off to the east was the weirdest light at 12:02 AM. We all saw it at one time, like it just appeared at once, and that was why we noticed it together! It was going very slowly, almost hovering at times. It had three colors of lights on it, in a strange formation, not like regular airplane lights. It was so mesmerizing, so we stopped the vehicle and got out to stare at it. It kind of gave us the chills, but we couldn't take our eyes off it. It hovered for a while, and moved again slowly, up and down, then moved forward again. The lights seemed to brighten up. It wasn't like any planes that I have ever seen before. The sky was clear and we saw the full moon on the other side of the sky. It was a beautiful night, and freaky standing there watching this light formation with the Northern Lights dancing behind it. We kept asking each other. "Wh! at is it?" I prefer to think it was something NOT of this world. I kept saying, "Well beam us up and let's get on with it!" #### OKLAHOMA GLOWING BALL

LAWTON -- Kari a 24 year old reports this past June, she would sit outside her friend's house, because I love to look at the stars. Around 10:00 PM, and I noticed to my left a bright glowing ball of light, thinking it might be a flare from the army base I really did not become startled at first, but then I realized that the army base was to my right and no where near the ball of light. Then the ball of light started to move, but not falling down like a flare would but across the sky very slowly. Then it just disappeared into thin air. I ran inside, told my friend about it, and ran back outside. Fifteen minutes later, it looked as if one of the stars were moving in the sky, but it was not moving about like a satellite, but more random like, kind of darting about the sky. I know I saw something. Later my friend Moniqua, whose house I was staying at, said that she was not surprised because she and her husband had a weird experience. They were leaving late one night around! 10:00

PM, when they walked out the front door a flash of light covered them, like it scanned right over them and then disappeared. They said they walked back into the house and just sat there for ten minutes before talking to one another. They just did not know what to think. #### TEXAS DOZENS OF UFO SIGHTINGS IN THE LAST FEW WEEKS

HOUSTON -- Robert Thompson who lives in the Willowbrook area reports that on October 25, 2001, I was up at 1:30 AM and saw what I believe was a UFO. It didn't have any lights on it, but I was still able to see it very clearly traveling across the sky. It was traveling west very fast and was oval. It was very high in the sky. It was the size of a quarter held at arm's length. I would put my hand on the Holy Bible and swear to you that I saw what I said I saw. I don't know what it was. However, it was big enough to see in the dark night sky, and it truly frightened me. In addition "NO" it was not an airplane. Thanks to RJThompson2078@ev1.net

HOUSTON -- Beau writes, "I want to report sightings for the last four nights. I've seen unexplainable lights in the sky. Both my wife and I have seen them, also on two nights a friend saw them from another location five miles away. The first night there was one about 30 degrees in the sky, and to the east of me over Spring, Texas. We saw many light patterns from it with all colors. It appeared to "get tall" then return to its original size. Then it would hover from side to side and up and down. We saw it for 40 minutes then went to bed, at 11:00 PM. The second night we saw it again, 35 degrees up a little to the south from previous night. I called my friend who saw it too. Then he said he saw two and when I walked further away from trees I saw the second as well. We watched it for 2.5 hours, until 2:00 AM. The third night there was only one that I observed for thirty minutes from 12:00 to 12:30 AM. The fourth night there were three in a pattern like a check mark. ! They took turns being "active." We watched from 7:30 to 9:30 PM. My friend saw them and my neighbor too. She had binoculars so I could see the colors a little bit better. They were brilliant colors of every shade, but mostly blue, purple, and green. I went out again from 12:30 to 1:30 AM and the check mark shifted and inversed, meaning the low point of checkmark was now the high point. Last night was a full moon too, and these "devices" still were plainly visible when the stars were not. We called the local FOX weather desk; they reported no meteors or weather balloons etc. These sightings in my opinion are definitely mechanical in nature and not stars or planets. We were watching something bizarre. Thanks to BEAU beauknowz@yahoo.com.

ADKINS -- We were standing outside on my front porch on October 14, 2001, when one friend noticed a bright light moving. He first thought it was a star, but it began to move erratically at 6:00 AM. He pointed out that it was unusually bright and had an odd shape. We began to watch as the craft came closer towards us. It was moving slow and seemed to be dipping and rising. We grabbed our binoculars; we noticed it had a red light around a bright white light. I thought it was two red lights, one on top and bottom, while my friend saw red on bottom and blue trailing. Two of us saw a blue slow blinking light heading towards the main craft. When it got near the craft, it suddenly headed straight down, leaving a blue tail like that of a comet. We watched for about two hours until dawn, when we could no longer see it.

HUNTSVILLE -- I'm part of a marching band and we're from Houston. We went to a competition in Huntsville October 28, 2001, and for our lunch break we headed back to the bus from the stadium and we saw a whole bunch of flying white things. At first we thought they were birds but every 3 seconds they would disappear and then come back, and then disappear and come back, repeatedly. It looked like a school of fishes, but in the sky. There were two groups of them. The whole band saw it.

AUSTIN -- On October 25, 2001, there was a firework like flash with a lighted point hitting another and creating a short spark shower. It then disappears. NUFORC Note: We believe the date of the incident might be October 31, 2001.

BUNA AND DEWEYVILLE -- Several friends and I saw a slow or nonmoving object almost due east from my house on October 25, 2001, at 1:30 AM. It was flying at about 10 to 20,000 feet high, with a constant, very bright white light and alternating flashing blue, red, green, and maybe purple color flashing. Sometimes two or more colors could be seen at once. The object remained in its position for 30 to 40 minutes and seemed to move up in elevation very slowly. There was no lateral movement seen.

SAN ANTONIO -- Last Friday night, at October 18, 2001, my wife and I traveled back to San Antonio from Victoria, Texas after a High school game. My daughters are on the dance team and their buses were unloading at 1:30 AM. I was talking to a friend of mine as we were standing by his truck, there were low streak looking clouds above us. We were less than a 1/4-mile from downtown San Antonio. We happened to be looking up for a moment and saw a turquoise luminous cigar shaped object streak across the sky. It was as if a neon light has turned on for a moment and streaked across half the sky above us, then turns off then back on again. This object was cloud high and confounded the two of us. We both saw it at the same time but could not say what it was. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC

COLORADO LIGHTS

VAIL -- I hesitate to call what I saw a "UFO" but it is unidentified. This morning, October 31, 2001, at around 6:15 AM, I stepped outside of my condo located in Avon just outside of Vail. We are located on a small lake, and there are no real obstructions around me. The Sun had not yet broken the skyline, we are at 7500 feet altitude, surrounded by mountains that reach above 11,000 feet, but we are not "closed in." I saw a VERY bright light in the eastern sky that at first I thought was a morning star, except that the horizon was already lit up from the Sun. The bright light was brighter than any star or planet that I have observed in the morning sky before. It was located at approx. 60 degrees above horizon, if the horizon were flat. Above it and to the left was another light, with the intensity of perhaps a star or planet. They appeared to be far away, but not "far" as in the typical skyline. Reflections were ruled out because the objects reflected toward dark (west!) not toward the light source (Sun). Neither object moved, so I assumed they were stars. My husband can verify. Just about then the clouds from the west were moving in, and our view was obscured. For a moment or so I saw them again, about 5 minutes later, and the sky was already brightening up for sunrise. I have observed skies all my life. I was an air traffic controller in the military and use to seeing all kinds of lights, planes, and "spook" helicopters, (such as the Friday night right after the tragic events of Sept 11th when nothing else was flying).

Editor's Note: Mercury continues its fine appearance near Venus low in the East. Saturn is near the moon. They might have been too low for you to see.

ARIZONA FLYING TRIANGLE

PHOENIX -- On October 25, 2001, myself and another individual witnessed a flying triangular shaped craft flying about 1000 feet at a high rate of speed at 10:20 PM. It had no lights coming from it and it seemed that the ambient light from the city was all that made it visible. It quickly flew in and out of view, flying straight south and made no sound. It had 5 or 7 white orbs on the under side in an arrow head shape consistent with its direction of flight. One half of each of the orbs protruded from the crafts dark, hardly visible fuselage. It appeared translucent, 12 to 20 feet wide, and 15 to 23 feet long. There was nothing in the objects flight path to obtain a good perspective. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC

CANADA METALLURGY

TORONTO -- Nick Balaskas writes, "The metallurgy building just south of University of Toronto's Convocation Hall where you spoke at the Toronto engagement of 'The Disclosure Project' houses some very unusual metals known as shape memory alloys." These unusual metals can be severely deformed into various shapes and then when heated will return to their original shapes. These very specialized metals are now being studied at more metallurgy research labs. Some of these same metals and their properties were demonstrated to an amazed public at a recent University of Toronto open house. One application of such metal has already been used in eyeglass frames which return to their original shape (thanks to Roswell UFO crash technology)? After one sits on them by accident. Thanks to Nick Balaskas

P.S. The maximum speed limit on Toronto highways is 100 (or 160 for Americans at the current exchange rate).

HOW WINSTON CHURCHILL CHASED FLYING SAUCERS

LONDON -- The Observer By Paul Harris states, Scientists and generals drew up a top secret report on Unidentified Flying Objects and then decided to cover up a wave of rumors and sightings that swept Britain in the 1950s. The Ministry of Defense denied the existence of the UFO report, written in 1951 and later used to brief Prime Minister Winston Churchill, for almost 50 years. But UFO historians Andy Robert and David Clarke have recently unearthed the six-page document as they researched a book on UFOs and the Cold War. The report has been a 'Holy Grail' of British 'Ufology' and details the conclusions of a shadowy panel called the Working Party on Flying Saucers. This group was the idea of Sir Henry Tizard, one of Churchill's most trusted scientific advisers during World War II and a key figure behind the development of radar. But anyone looking for an elusive 'X-file' that confirms the existence of aliens will be disappointed. The report concludes that all sightings were explainable by natural events, such as the weather or meteors, or were of normal aircraft. But it does speak volumes about the scale of paranoia in Britain at the start of the Cold War. From 1950 onwards, hundreds of UFO sightings were reported across Britain and were regular front-page news. Leading public figures, including Lord Louis Mountbatten, came out with their belief that aliens were visiting Earth. The phenomenon terrified the top brass on both sides of the Atlantic. Generals were worried that reports of flying saucers could be used by the Soviet Union to disguise an earthly attack or that the sightings were giving the Russians a clue that Britain's radar network was faulty and easy to penetrate - which was actually true but unknown within the Soviet bloc. 'This was a time of great paranoia and fear. The Government took a decision to throw a blanket over the UFO scare and say as little as possible about it,' said Clarke. 'There certainly was a cover-up, but what was being covered up was Cold War paranoia and our fears over our radar system.

It was nothing to do with aliens. Despite the official silence, the UFO scares did not die down. In 1952, Churchill fired off a memo to his advisers in the wake of fresh UFO sightings in the United States. 'What does all this stuff about flying saucers amount to? What can it mean? What is the truth?' Churchill wrote. Tizard's report was then used to brief the Prime Minister on the perceived lack of real threat from UFOs in August of that year. A few months later an order went out expressly banning all RAF personnel from discussing sightings with anyone not from the military. In trying to underplay the sightings, Britain was following the lead of the United States, which had conducted several studies into its own UFO sightings and adopted a policy of official secrecy. When the British report was presented, a top CIA scientist traveled over to the meeting to make sure the conclusions of America's closest ally fitted in. #### THE LOS ALAMOS CONNECTION TO ROSWELL CRASH

James Parsons writes in the Star Beacon, "Comes now a story out of Roswell and Los Alamos which may explain the three flights made from Roswell Army Air Field to Los Alamos on July 9, 1947, a few days after the crash. This story is from Carol Syska, former director of the UFO Museum at Roswell during 1999 and most of 2000. Carol was a group secretary and division budget director at Los Alamos for almost 30 years. She retired in 1988 and moved to Roswell, N.M., not far from the town where she was born and raised. Carol first heard of UFOs when living in California in the early 1950s, resulting in an interest in UFOs in general. One day at Los Alamos, she read that a report containing information about UFOs was available in the Lab library. This sounded interesting to Carol. She ordered the report. She read this booklet titled, Project Blue Book, which contained some comments about wreckage from a crashed vehicle being sent for testing to Los Alamos. At the time (1962),! Carol worked at the Lab with the NonDestructive Test Group (NDT). Her boss, a senior scientist, was head of NDT and had been with the Lab since the beginning of the Manhattan Project. If testing had been done on crash debris, Carol's boss would know about the tests and the truth of the crash at Roswell. Carol went to the man's office and showed the report to him. She asked, "Is this true?" Carol's boss, in a business-like manner, replied, "What is the level of your security clearance?" Carol said, "Sir, you know as well as I do what it is." (Carol told me that at the time she held a Q clearance. A Q clearance is a very high National Security clearance.) Carol's boss, after a pause, said, "Well, do you have the need to know?" Carol said, "Guess not," and moved to the door. Carol's boss said, "Just a minute." After another pause, he added, "I would advise you to read everything you ever see about this subject." Subject: Re: William Cooper Killed In SWAT Raid - Maccabee

The following list of accomplishments of W. M. Cooper should be checked. I presume what follows is what Cooper told someone (before he died, obviously). I know from personal experience (and others can support my claim) that Cooper made up a lot of stuff regarding UFOs.

William Cooper was reared in an Air Force family. As a child he lived in many different countries, graduating from Yamato High School in Japan. Since he has traveled through or lived in many different foreign countries Mr. Cooper has a world view much different than most Americans.

William served with the Strategic Air Command, United States Air Force. He held a secret clearance working on B-52 bombers, KC-135 refueling aircraft, and Minuteman missiles. William received his Honorable Discharge from the United States Air Force in 1965.

William joined the United States Navy fulfilling a dream previously frustrated by chronic motion sickness. He served aboard the submarine USS Tiru (SS-416), USS Tombigbee (AOG-11), Naval Support Activity Danang RVN, Naval Security and Intelligence Camp Carter RVN, Danang Harbor Patrol RVN, Dong Ha River Security Group RVN, USS Charles Berry (DE-1035), Headquarters Commander in Chief Pacific Fleet, USS Oriskany (CVA-34).

Cooper was a member of the Office of Naval Security and Intelligence serving as a Harbor and River Patrol Boat Captain at Danang and the Dong Ha River Security Group, Cua Viet, Republic of Vietnam. William Cooper was awarded several medals for his leadership and heroism during combat including two with "V" for Valor.

He served on the Intelligence Briefing Team for the Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet. William was the Petty Officer of the Watch and designated KL-47 SPECAT operator in the CINCPACFLT Command Center at Makalapa Hawaii. There he held a Top Secret, Q, SI, security clearance.

William Cooper achieved the rank of First Class Petty Officer, QM1, E- 6 after only 8 years of Naval service, a difficult task in any branch of the United States military. William Cooper received an Honorable Discharge from the United States Navy on December 11, 1975.

William attended Long Beach City College where he picked up an Associate of Science Degree in Photography. He founded the Absolute Image Studio and Gallery of Fine Art Photography in Long Beach, California.

William held the position of Executive Director of Adelphi Business College, Pacific Coast Technical Institute, and National Technical College. Mr. Cooper was the National Marketing Coordinator for National Education and Software.

He produced several documentaries covering subjects such as the Kennedy assassination and secret black projects that have built flying disk shaped craft. William is an internationally acclaimed radio personality broadcasting the Hour Of The Time on WBCQ worldwide short-wave 7.415 MHz from 10 PM until 11 PM ights.

William Cooper is the author of Behold A Pale Horse. The book has become the best selling underground book of all time. It is read and promoted by word of mouth by People of all races, religions, and nationalities.

Mr. Cooper is a world class lecturer, one of the few other than superstars, monarchs, and Popes who have appeared at Wembly in London. William Cooper has lectured for 10 years in every State.

Hi Alfred,

There is a very real difference between honest and intelligent dissent and the lunacy (certifiable) that Cooper was responsible for spreading around. Let me share a little story with you, if I may, just to illustrate my point.

About four years ago Budd Hopkins, Greg Sandow and myself drove out to New Jersey to speak at an annual conference that is held there. It's a two + hour drive. On the way Budd played a tape for us that was taken from his phone messaging machine. It contained a series of long distance telephone messages that old 'Wild Bill' Cooper had left for Budd.

Alfred, the _threats_ and the language he used to issue those threats was enough to send Budd to the police to seek advice as to how to handle the situation. Cooper was a certified looney. And, as has been borne out by his shooting of this poor law enforcement officer (in the head - twice!) a very dangerous nut as well. I have to tell you that just sitting in the car listening to his voice as he ranted and raved at Budd sent chills up my spine. It was spooky to me even as a third party, witnessing the depth of his insanity.

I know you man. I know where you are coming from with your remark above. I happen to agree wholeheartedly with you that there is _plenty_ to be concerned about government-wise. But you are speaking 'out of turn' or more accurately, 'within the wrong context' by making your comment in any thread connected to this mad-man.

He was not only crazy, but he was dangerous Alfred. Maybe you ought to express your views in a separate thread. Within the context of this thread it only comes off as 'supportive' of this maniac's point of view. And I'm certain that was not your intention.

Warm regards,

John Velez

Hi Kat, hi Bruce, All,

Ok, you've got my nose open! I ordered and read Bruce's 'The Real X-files' (FBI files) book before it was published and I was not only impressed with it, I loved it. No question that Bruce is an informative (educational) and entertaining read on just about anything ufological.

I will order the new book immediately and give it a read. Bruce, you asked me if I had read it yet, and in the heat of trying to get out some bread & butter jobs and participating in a couple of threads, I never had the opportunity to respond. I promise that as soon as I finish reading your latest, I'll post my impressions to the List. Judging by Katharina's review (someone whose opinion I have always trusted and valued) I'm sure I'll not only enjoy it, but as with your FBI files book, learn a heap of new stuff along the way.

Thanks for the review Kat! ;)

Warmest regards to you both,

John Velez

BUSH ORDER ON PRESIDENTIAL RECORDS BLASTED

The new Bush Administration executive order that creates problematic new procedures for public access to presidential records was severely criticized at a congressional hearing yesterday and some members of Congress are now calling on the President to rescind it.

"I am concerned that the new procedures may create additional delays and barriers to releasing ... records," said Rep. Stephen Horn (R-Calif.), chairman of the House Government Reform Subcommittee on Government Efficiency which held a hearing on the matter.

A Justice Department witness demurred. "There is no reason to anticipate... greater withholding of records," said acting assistant attorney general M. Edward Whelan III.

The issue was examined at yesterday's hearing with impressive rigor from various points of view. Scott L. Nelson of Public Citizen Litigation Group provided a particularly acute analysis of the new executive order's legal and policy defects.

See the witnesses' prepared statements here:

<http://www.fas.org/sqp/congress/2001/index.html#pra>

"The Executive Order violates the intent of Congress and keeps the public in the dark," wrote Reps. Henry Waxman and Janice Schakowsky in a November 6 letter to President Bush. "We urge you to rescind that order." See:

<http://www.fas.org/sqp/news/2001/11/pral.html>

FBI REBUFFS REQUEST FOR DETAINEE INFORMATION

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has denied a Freedom of Information Act request seeking information on the identities and status of individuals detained in connection with the September 11 terrorist attacks.

Kate Martin of the Center for National Security Studies said an appeal was immediately filed. Related FOIA requests are still pending at the Department of Justice and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"The information sought is not that complicated," the Washington Post editorialized today. The government "could tell or try to tell a lot more about this seemingly massive law enforcement effort than it has." See:

<http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A51800-2001Nov6.html>

ODDS AND ENDS

** The Defense Department's personnel security system is clogged with people holding security clearances they no longer need. Some contractors possess multiple clearances they are no longer entitled to. One individual was recently found to hold 21 different clearances, said Rosalind Baybutt, Deputy Director for Industrial Security in the Office of Secretary of Defense. "If you're not using them," she told industry representatives at a meeting of the NISP Policy Advisory Committee today, "please get these people out of our inventory."

** The long-delayed FY 2000 annual report of the Information Security Oversight Office had to be trashed after it arrived back from the printer last Friday colored orange, white and blue. "Guess which color was wrong?" said an ISOO spokesman. A reprinted version should be released in a couple of days.

** As the Bush Administration considers amendments to the executive order on classification and declassification policy, the Central Intelligence Agency is pressing its own secrecy agenda. In particular, the CIA is seeking a new categorical exemption from disclosure for the President's Daily Brief, no matter how old or insensitive it might be. This self-serving proposal is viewed with weary contempt by at least some other agencies, since it would promote reflexive secrecy rather than a more discriminating approach to classification. But nothing has been ruled out.

Hello Listerions,

My epitaph:

This didn't surprise me at all. It took a lot longer than I thought, as Cooper was asking for this for years. He had the most dangerous twisted brain I ever saw on the UFO circuit. Since then he kept painting himself into the exitless corner of his own paranoid ravings, separated from his family and single handedly fighting the law to the death. He lost.

Since the term "balsa-like" appears in the apparently spurious version of the Schulgen memo, my understanding is that it is meant to convey a sense of alien otherness (i.e. "It looked sort of like balsa wood _but_...")

Whoever wrote this was obviously trying to draw a parallel to the Roswell debris, some of which was indeed balsa-like...or simply plain old balsa dunked in Elmer's glue. It depends on which expert you consult.

Rudy Rucker's 'Saucer Wisdom'

From: Mac Tonnies <macbot@yahoo.com>

Subject: Rudy Rucker's 'Saucer Wisdom'

List,

I was interested in the review of 'Abduction In My Life' and the narrative structure used by the author. Scientist Rudy Rucker has a similarly constructed book on alien contact called "Saucer Wisdom," which I can't imagine any intelligent ufologist not liking. (Rucker takes some pretty vicious stabs at the UFO research community, but who can blame him?)

If anyone's interested, "Saucer Wisdom" can be purchased via my site at the following URL:

<http://mactonnies.com/rudyrucker.html>

'Saucer Wisdom', Rucker's transrealist attempt to usher in a 'new style of ufology', succeeds as both a novel and as a handbook for the near and not-so-near future.

Describing the exploits of "Frank Shook", a likeable, slightly unhinged UFO contactee, Rucker addresses incipient technological breakthroughs with the same uncanny wit readers of the 'Ware' series have come to appreciate. Part speculation and part psycho-spiritual manifesto, 'Saucer Wisdom' is a genre-busting classic and a great introduction to Rucker's canon.

Sadly true. Cooper was the scariest man I've ever encountered in my long years in this field, representing the sickest end of the anti-gummint paranoia which so afflicted American politics over the past two decades, and which now, happily, is receding.

When I pointed out in an article that some of Cooper's UFO conspiracy theories had their roots in anti-Semitic literature, he took to threatening me from various public forums. His followers were frightening, too. Ten years ago, while lecturing in Sydney, Australia, on the Dark Side fantasies for which Cooper was largely responsible, I had my speech interrupted by an enraged audience member who started shouting at me. It was his view, as I understood it, that I was a CIA member; after all, only a CIA member would charge that Cooper's stuff was 100% horseradish.

I'm sorry that when he left this world, Cooper may have taken a deputy sheriff with him. I hope the man recovers and is able to resume his life without ever meeting a Cooper equivalent again. Cooper, a true sociopath, did damage to just about anybody who crossed his path. He will not be missed.

>Hi Alfred,

<snip>

>He was not only crazy, but he was dangerous Alfred.

That's the report, the party line, and the general understanding. I don't know that myself. All I know is that, even from my less than privileged vantage point, he had plenty to be paranoid about, right, wrong or indifferent. Our freedoms erode as we speak, fundamentalists on both sides of the ideological fence caper and leap to substantive gains, and individuality (culture's savior) is on the endangered species list. I'm agitated, worried and otherwise concerned about it... I imagine others might take it a little bit more seriously... might even be driven crazy, and _made_ dangerous about it. All of that gets lost in the smirks and sneers of many who discount the possibility of conspiracy made all the more likely by a preponderance of ubiquitous sociopaths and the huge profits that attract them like flies to turning meat. Three men and one woman in a hundred will cut you and laugh while you're bleeding if there is enough personal gain in it for them. And they hide, John... you never know they're there...

>Maybe you ought to express your views in a separate thread.

Perhaps - but remarking on a facet of the Cooper phenomenon in a thread named "Cooper" did seem abundantly appropriate.

>Within the

Will that make me less popular than I am presently? <g>.

I can't give a damn what other's think about me, John, not and continue to be true to an honorable self, a new sensibility, and a learned sensitivity... I'm going to continue to write my conscience, sometimes get honest feedback like I am from you right now... but live, learn, and grow.

>And I'm certain that was not your intention.

That's correct, I was just pointing out that Cooper had plenty to be excited about, forgetting for a moment that his expression of it might be something less than completely appealing... Consider the abolitionist John Brown. He was supposed to be dangerous and crazy too...

It's rather like you and me, John Ford, and Lara Johnstone... we have plenty to be angry about and can perhaps be criticized for our expressions regarding that anger. We have justification... it might be that he did, too. We'll likely never know for sure, and that's certainly more fuel for my anger. Yours too, perhaps, if you drew back from it a little.

John and all,

I met Bill Cooper through John Lear in 1988. I booked him to speak at a UFO conference that K. Duran and myself sponsored in the high desert of 29 Palms Calif years ago. This was one of his first public talks.

After Cooper told his story he embarrassed me by asking the audience to donate money for his rent. Later, I confronted him in the coffee shop about some of his outlandish claims like the Pleidians landing at Edwards AFB which he denied a month later. That is when I started to hear him change his story, even contradicting earlier statements he made. This became a normal part of his routine.

He was often soused and loved firearms. He advised me to go to a gun show and purchase a 'an engine block-busting gun' and I asked him why I should do a silly thing like that and he said 'to defend yourself against the government'.

With pugilistic obstinacy he got into a fist fight with Eric Beckjord at a San Diego UFO event. Things went downhill from there. Both of them should have been under care.

He threatened former friend John Lear while drinking by waving a gun in the air and said he could shoot him. He later accused Lear of being agent "Condor" (Moore's aviary). A real nut case!

He not only accused Budd but many others of disinformation and lies. He fabricated contents of MJ-12 (Operation Majority) documents that looked plagiarized from Bill Moore's and Bill English's publications. He kept changing and expanding the contents and accusing anyone who disagreed.

I have the dubious distinction of being one of the people he slighted in his book 'Behold a Pale Horse'. Most of this was also plagiarized material from conspiracy sources.

Then he had enough with alien conspiracies and declared there were no aliens (evil or otherwise), but plenty of evil government people. That is when he entrenched himself in upstate Arizona to carry out his war against the government as a so-called 'patriot'.

May he rest in peace.

Maybe. Maybe not.

There arises an a priori bias, if the person wishing help has already pre-conceived opinions about what may or may not have happened to him/her when arriving for whatever sort of counseling therapy that researcher is licensed to practice, be it psychotherapy, hypnosis or EMDR. The form of therapy is not in question at this point. It's the fact that the client may walk into a therapist's office with pre-conceived opinions about what has happened. Right? See if you agree or disagree, after reading the following.

Say I am the patient. I walk in knowing I've been abducted (1st possible bias), and I want help integrating those experiences into my daily life. The therapist, on the other hand, isn't sure at all that I'm sane, much less that what I just told him about a consciously-recalled abduction experience is "real." He needs to be able to measure, compare and weigh what I have just told him against other defining factors seen in schizophrenia, which are not evident or present in the abduction scenario, in order to eliminate any possible psychosis. Psychological testing is usually a standard required procedure to help with this analysis.

Unfortunately, several of the questions on the MMPR test may show bias, depending on whether the abductee is an informed, well-read person on the UFO phenomena, or whether the person is a child or an adult completely unfamiliar with the phenomena. This leads to another probable bias, unbeknownst to the therapist or researcher, and can determine whether the individual may be considered, "Normal," "Neurotic," or "Psychotic," depending on the number of times and ways the client responds to the following question.

The question asked on the MMPR is presented in several forms throughout the test. In essence, the question reads, "Do you see things [not defined] (or experience things) that other's (around you) do not see?" This question can be answered on the Lickert 5-point scale, "Never," "Not Often," "Sometimes," "Very Often," or "Always." If you believe you are an abductee, have had UFO sightings or ET experiences, how you answer this question will depend on whether or not there were others present to corroborate what you saw (or experienced). Most often, abductees are alone when they see or experience such "high strangeness." If you are a child, completely unfamiliar with the UFO/ET experience, you may answer "Sometimes," or "Very Often," depending on how frequently the ETs are "visiting" you, and whether family or friends were present. However, if you are well-read and are well-informed about the fact that thousands of others world-wide have seen, photographed and experienced the UFO phenomena, you will probably answer "Never." One answer places you in the category of a "good neurotic," the latter places you in the "normal" range. How's that for a priori bias?

Part of statistics research is to identify and count behaviors: to see if there is any correlation or pattern that emerges in those counted behaviors. In order to do that, variable behaviors may be defined by specific terminology identified by the researcher (2nd possible bias) through pre-interviews with the abductees.

It becomes nearly impossible to avoid such bias on the therapist's part, if the therapist is also the researcher. Therefore, an unbiased, computer programmer would be needed to write the programs required to count those behaviors, if the therapist is going to focus on the client's psychological trauma. If a pre-study were done with all of the interviewees just to identify and count specific terminology used by them to describe what they feel happened during 1 abduction scenario (much less a life-time of experiences). Then you are looking at massive computer programming time and expense. I dare say, none of the researchers have separated themselves from the data to that extent. I would bet a month's salary on that fact.

For example: out of a total sampling of 300 people, 150 male, 150 female, how many times were the terms "mind-reading" or "scanning" used by the interviewee when describing behaviors of the ETs during 1 abduction scenario? If you are the researcher and the therapist, the only unbiased way that you can sort through the entire dialogue is to record and later allow a super-computer to count said used terminology to define specific behaviors. The problem with that is that if the researcher and therapist are one-in-the-same, the computer program needs to be written to "find" such-and-such terminology (e.g., "mind-reading" or "scanning") in the first place (3rd possible bias). And, to top it all off, this would only be 1 variable measured.

Dr. Mack mentions several, as do Hopkins and Jacobs as common occurrence behaviors during abductions. The fact that these researchers and therapists have all "chosen" to "leave out" specific behaviors or descriptions of behaviors made by the interviewees is noteworthy. It provides for a possible 4th bias, as inclusion of such data might skew any correlation found in the other variables, as to make the ones being measured less than significant, when in fact, they may be very significant.

So, despite what may be a true desire on the therapist's part to "help" the client integrate abduction experiences into his/her life and move on, it seems almost at odds with the researcher's goals, to count variable behaviors exhibited by the ETs during the abduction scenario.

Am I all wet here? How can one person do both without bias? I, too, would like to see the raw data from Jacobs, Mack and Hopkins studies.

Sincerely asking,

Sue Strickland
ex-abductee

UFO ROUNDUP: Update on Joseph Trainor

Subject: UFO ROUNDUP: Update on Joseph Trainor

I am pleased to be able to give a progress report on Joseph Trainor, editor of UFO Roundup.

As most subscribers and readers of UFO Roundup will know, Joe has been offline due to cataracts in both eyes.

Joe reported that he had his first eye operation at the Miller-Dwan Unit of St. Mary's Duluth Clinic around the middle of August and since then he has been wearing dark Solar Shield glasses and taking continual eyedrop medication. He was on Ciloxan and Prednisolene the first week and after that he was taking Prednisolene in ever-decreasing doses.

He stated that he was still myopic but the vision in his "blind" right eye is much improved with the new lens, so much so that he was appalled at the vision in what he thought was his "good" left eye--everything was a total blur!

In his latest message Joe said that on Monday, October 29, 2001, he was at Miller-Dwan Hospital in Duluth, having his second cataract operation, this one on his left eye. It went pretty well. He has had two post-op exams and has to go back for a third on December 11th. After that, he will get new glasses and hopefully his vision will be pretty much restored. He finished taking the Ciloxan on Monday and now has to take the Prednisolene in increasingly small doses until the beginning of December.

Let's hope all goes well for Joe, not just with his eyes but also in the new job he has just started.

Hi Bill, List, Errol,

In defense of no one man, but rather, one man's paranoia against that which is counter to the American culture. And I do not refer to the mixed bag of cultures which we have become (not objecting, merely defining), but to the culture of the Constitution, the one with the Bill of Rights, all them freedoms and such?

A look at what we've become against the inconspicuous position of the the Constitutional Republic, which is our real heritage. Terribly unfortunate, in'it, that such is now background and not on the fore?

Having said that, I wish to convey to this list, to those who are Americans, to those who love us and those who hate us, that this nation is no longer the one it used to be. Is it a wonder then that some are driven to such lengths from a level of complete frustration with that which life could be like here? Should be?

Not to me.

Such frustration breeds a contempt for authority which is government's minister. It often makes some people crazy with the knowledge that it could be the way our Founders wanted it, but is the way it is today, thanks to secrecy, to the concept that citizens are not worthy and are not capable, of making their own decisions. Of dealing with concepts such as alien races.

The more laws a government administers and enforces, the less citizens will take upon themselves, personal responsibility, which is the hallmark of a free society.

And of all the secrets this and other governments take upon themselves to keep, the worst one is that we are likely not alone in this galaxy, and are not unique to life itself. Imagine what is known by others and should be known by us? Pelican sightings are not unique. The planet Venus is not a unique sighting. Neither is swamp gas.

But the UFO conundrum falls into a class all by itself. By it's very nature and uniqueness, is quite likely quite a real phenomena. It could make me crazy. In fact it does. And sometimes it takes all I can muster to be a law abiding citizen. There are people in law enforcement who feel similarly. They even have a noteworthy website. But they must maintain security within that site, so that they not lose their jobs. Funny, ain't it?

Not!

God bless Amurika and all the ships at sea.

Jim Mortellaro

It is interesting to note that the editor of the monthly interesting book 'Alien Encounters - The Secret Behind the UFO Phenomenon', Chuck Missler, has a briefing pack (two audio secret government agenda of population control, etc. - all very similar themes to those found in Bill Cooper's book and lectures, but better documented.

Even "crazy" and "dangerous" people like Bill Cooper can have true knowledge of and be correct about some things...

Subject: Re: William Cooper Killed In SWAT Raid - Chalker

I have to agree with Jerry Clark. Bill Cooper, who lead many conspiratorially minded enthusiasts on a merry ride of sordid UFO paranoia, shot dead in a police raid, should not be missed for his contribution to the UFO field.

Linda Moulton Howe gave some of Bill's wild stuff an airing in her book 'An Alien Harvest' (1989) and he himself gave such things fuller rein in his bizarre and trying opus 'Behold a Pale Horse'. I soon wished I hadn't wasted my money, but I felt I needed to be informed on even the most extreme UFO paranoia 'fodder'.

Jerry Clark places Cooper's contribution to the "dark side" of ufology in an appropriately entitled piece 'Dark Side' in his highly recommended encyclopedia series, which appeared in 3 different editions, each well worth getting as potent foundation stones for any reasonable ufological library - 3 volumes originally which appeared between 1990 - 1996 (Cooper is mentioned in Volumes 1 & 3), the 2 volume edition 'The UFO Encyclopedia' in 1998 and its abridged version 'The UFO Book' in 1998 (abridged to 705 pages!). The 'Dark Side' section in the last 2 manifestations of Jerry Clark's encyclopedia are well worth reading for their sanity and reality checking benefits.

The Bill Cooper I became aware of seemed to be a pretty dangerous and erratic guy. Anyone who sought to criticise Bill's UFO ravings, were suddenly remembered by Bill to be listed on MJ12 documents he claimed to see while in the navy. Probably explains why I used a pseudonym to try to get on his web site once. Can't understand why my ID bounced. After all, Wile.E. Coyote was about as serious as I thought Cooper intended us to take his stuff. He himself seemed to have repudiated all his UFO ramblings as misinformation from the "secret government" or some such thing.

A colourful character and I suspect my message here will be attacked by the Cooper faithful. A violent end to a wild card in ufology's dark under belly. A suprising number of people seem to have totally uncritically accepted Cooper's stories. Given the rising tide of uncritical thinking in this field over the last decade or so I really shouldn't be surprised I guess.

His life, his credo in all its varied forms & rebirths, and the manner of his passing will no doubt provide more fodder for the conspiracy rumour mill, but I suggest there is little point in revisiting his bizarre contribution to ufology. It unfortunately has lived on via the uncritical dimensions of the Internet. There nothing seems to die, no matter how excessive it seems.

As for the man, I hope he rests in peace, certainly more peacefully in death, than in the life he led.

Regards,

Bill Chalker

NEW UFO REPORTING CENTRE

A new UFO reporting centre was launched in Nottingham, UK at the end of August. The centre helps with inquiries regarding UFOs and accept UFO reports over the Internet. Anthony James, who founded the East Midlands UFO Research Association (EMUFORA) which ran from 1990 to 1998, is behind the project.

Mr James stated that since EMUFORA was disbanded, he has received many enquiries and reports each year which have just been filed away. The reason for the UFO reporting centre is to publish an 'on-line' newsletter of sightings and other UFO connected subjects, which will be sent to anyone who wants to be on my mailing list. I answer to no particular organisation and will send the information and reports to who ever decides to subscribe, and subscription is free!

Mr James stated: "This is strictly an E-mail newsletter and all UFO reports should be reported in good faith. This is the best way to keep an eye on our skies and to report anything unusual that might be seen. UFO reports have come in from all around the world and have been included in the newsletter. This is also a great way to publicise an event whatever country you are in. I have countless subscriptions from Australia, the USA and UK.

EMUFORA staff interviewed hundreds of witnesses and investigated many UFO sightings over the Nottinghamshire area during the 1990's, the group was disbanded in 1998. Mr James stated "I won't be going out and interviewing people or holding meetings for the public like we did with EMUFORA".

The first on-line newsletter was sent out at the end of August as E-mail, and is called 'UFO News UK'. Since the newsletter was first sent out, I have had subscribers from Finland, Italy, Australia, Canada, USA and the UK. The newsletter will be sent out every other week and is free.

Anyone who would like to receive the newsletter should E-mail their name and E-mail address to:-

AJames@emufora.freemove.co.uk

Hi Alfred, hi All,

>>He was not only crazy, but he was dangerous Alfred.

Which is why I shared the 'Budd Story' with you. Threatening someone's life repeatedly is not exactly 'sane' or 'socially acceptable' behavior, know what I mean Vern? ;)

I agree with all of the former but I draw the line at your latter statement. Going over the line is going over the line. No excuse. When that kind of extremism exists isolated from any ennobling humanitarian movements or causes, it becomes just plain dangerous to innocents.

The Sheriff's Deputy he shot in the head twice is a working stiff with a wife and four kiddies and people who loved him, and probably not a part of some dark federal conspiracy to 'take out' Bill Cooper.

Personally, I think that most of the expressions of outrage at Bill Cooper being expressed on the List are healthy ones.

>Three men and one woman in a hundred will cut you and laugh >while you're bleeding if there is enough personal gain in it for >them. And they hide, John... you never know they're there...

True enough. I grew up in an urban environment that allowed me to witness the whole spectrum of human expression. Both for good and for evil. One thing I did learn was; that a lot of 'wounded' human beings/souls are responsible for a lot of the sickness and insanity that is perpetrated. 'Purely Evil' people are rare.

Frightened, whimpering cowards hide.

>>Within the

You're a hit with me cowboy. Screw the rest. They have no idea what a genuine character you are, nor do they have the psychic equipment to appreciate it. You have always had all of the right, 'decadent' qualities that I look for in a person. :)

I feel the same way Alfred. And as long as we're alive I guess we'll be learning and growing. Most times in spite of our own ignorance.

>>And I'm certain that was not your intention.

Depends on which side the coin comes down I suppose. Calls like that have to be made on a case by case basis. Doesn't do to generalize too much when it comes to people. ;)

>It's rather like you and me, John Ford, and Lara Johnstone... we

Like the two 'Kirks' in that old Star Trek episode, I need my anger (along with my other panoply of emotions) in order to be/express 'who' I am, and to do what I have to do. My friends tell me that I "wear my heart on my sleeve." Apparently (to them anyway) all my emotions are always right there on the surface. Probably why I'm such a lousy Poker player.

Having strong/powerful emotions is not a liability if you can manage to balance the energies within yourself. It's a learning process that takes all of a lifetime. Draw back from my anger? Naw, don't have to. It's been a good friend on more than one occasion, and I'm sure it will be again in the future. Sure I make mistakes, we all do, but I could no more cut myself off from my own anger than I could from my equally strong love or any of the other emotions that echo from someplace within me.

One emotion cannot be isolated from the others. An emotion that is intentionally 'cut off' will also cut me off from the others. The pathway will become blocked for them all if I was to introduce an impediment to one. Like it or not, we all express who we are at all times. Some folks are going to love you, some will hate you, and still others will remain completely indifferent. Just the way it is. Me? I need both my 'Kirks'. ;)

God rest that poor crazy bastard's soul. May he rest in a Peace that he obviously lacked in life.

Regards,

John

>>investigator who will fit their experience."

>Is Mack talking about the alleged facts reported by the >abductees, or about the overall interpretation of the abduction?

In this context, it's the same thing. What we need to do, as researchers, is survey the field to see if there is a distinction. And, what we need to do is check the original report made by the abductee with that at the conclusion of the research, to learn if it has been changed, for whatever reason, between the time it was first reported and the time that the researcher has determined that he or she has completed the investigation. Such a survey would certainly provide clues about researcher influence in the overall abductee picture.

>What does he mean by "archetypal structure of an abduction"?

I believe this is just a fancy way of saying "the abduction experience."

>As I've already pointed out, Budd and John Mack - along with >abductees they've both worked with - agree that the details of >the reported experiences tend to be similar in both camps. What >differs is the interpretation. (More precisely, similar

>try to be, put your own spin on something you read. You might >come to wrong conclusions, which could easily be corrected by >the people you're writing about.

All true, but remember, contrary to what has been reported in other quarters, we did interview Hopkins and Mack on video tape.

Not to mention listening to their lectures, listening to their radio appearances, watching them on documentaries and reading their books. And while it is true that we all look at the material through our own filters and put our own spin on the material, it is also true that Mack and Jacobs, in their writings and lectures, have seen this "matching" of experimenter to researcher.

And, when Mack was asked, specifically about this, he denied that he had made the statements... though he conceded that he had thought about them. Yet, Bryan quoted the statements and we have him on video tape making the statements, so when the questions were asked, they were not adequately answered.

>Here's an additional problem. How do we know what experiences >Budd's and John Mack's abductees report? Both Budd and John have >written books, so that's one source of this information. But >it's not an adequate source for serious study. John, for >instance, may accept reports from abductees who say that they

>books. Budd doesn't accept those reports, so he doesn't put them >in. But that doesn't mean he doesn't get them. I've long >thought, and have often said, that this is a failing in both >Budd's and Dave Jacobs's books. They don't show enough of the >raw material they work with.

So, what you're suggesting is that we are getting the spin of the researchers and not necessarily what the abductees say during their sessions. That we need access to all the raw data so that we can learn what all has been said.

However, it has been my experience that abduction researchers are not as open with their records as we would like. When, for example, we attempted a survey to find out how many abductees reported a precipitating event that mirrored sleep paralysis, we didn't even receive the courtesy of a response to the question from the various researchers that we queried.

Yes, I know that some of these records must be protected, and that some of the data are gathered in confidence, but to understand the whole, we need to see the pieces. In the end, we're left drawing the information from their books, their lectures, their TV and radio appearances, and the video taped sessions that they provided for us.

But this is a question that could be answered fairly easily, as long as we could see the raw data in the order collected. That way we could determine if there is a researcher bias at work, if the researcher does influence the report, the extent to which that influence is implanted on the witness, or if the material is reported in a manner consistent throughout the research.

>That, though, is another issue. I'll repeat my main point -
>that we can't learn what abductees actually report simply by >reading books by John Mack, Dave Jacobs, and Budd Hopkins. John >gets many reports of unpleasant medical procedures that he >doesn't print. Budd and Dave get many reports of new-age stuff >that they don't print. They don't try to hide this, at least in >my experience. They acknowledge it very freely. So some of the >differences you find in their writing are differences of >interpretation - what they believe in abductee reports, or what >they think is important. They're not necessarily differences in >what the abductees report.

Which is all well and good, but doesn't answer the point that Mack and Jacobs have made... that there is a matching of experimenter with investigator. Instead, we are presented with a flawed argument for the reality of abduction rather than provided with all the data to make an informed decision.

And by flawed arguments, I mean that if the researcher is eliminating the information that doesn't conform to his or her beliefs, then any conclusion we draw from the published body of evidence, from the lectures and interviews will be flawed. Not that the abduction experience itself is flawed, only the conclusion drawn about the work of a specific research is flawed.

>>And there are two points to be made here. One, this implies, to >>some extent, leading the witness, and two, it implies that the >>views of the researcher are given to the subject.

>>On page 25 of 'The Threat' (hardback), Jacobs discusses his

>>Jacobs wrote, "I had over thirty sessions with Pam, and during >>that time she has come to have a less romantic idea about what

>>experiences she had imagined, but she now accepts the reality of >>what has been happening to her. She realized that neither

>>John Mack or cold, calculating scientists of Budd Hopkins, but >>the alien invaders of David Jacobs... she came with one set of >>beliefs and left with a different set which, matches, more >>closely, the beliefs of David Jacobs.

>But this doesn't prove that Dave was leading her. What happens >in this account is very common in other situations, where nobody >questions it. For instance, suppose a woman whose husband abuses >her goes into therapy. It's very common for abused women to >defend their abusers. "He really loves me." "He means well; he >just gets angry sometimes." "It's my own fault. I don't treat >him well enough."

>Then, in the course of therapy or counselling, these women may >dramatically change their views. "That bastard abused me. I did >nothing to deserve that. Nobody deserves to be treated that >way." You could say that they're adopting their therapists' >views here, but because the therapists' view seems sensible - >and, above all, grounded in the facts - nobody objects.

Actually, when we move into some of the therapeutic arenas, we do see that the therapists belief structures begin to take over and that allegations of abuse, for example, might be more consistent with the therapist's view of the world than the client's. That is not to say that all therapists implant their views on their clients, but to say that some do. The psychological literature is full of examples and both "He Who Shall Remain Nameless" and Edith Fiore lost their licenses because they did implant their belief structures on their clients.

And, yes, if the therapists conclusions are grounded in fact and supported by other evidence, then the view is accepted.
Unfortunately, too often, when there are no facts to support the allegations, when there is denial from others involved, the therapists views are still accepted as fact. Paul Ingram is in jail because of statements made by his daughters, in therapy, accusing him of all sorts of crimes, though there is not a shred of outside or corroborative evidence to justify the allegations made.

The point here, I guess, is that this is not a black and white issue. We have the statements made by the abduction researchers that suggest, and I stress this, suggest, that there is a matching of abductee to researcher, and that leads to one set of conclusions. If true, it means that we need to reassess that which we think we know. If not true, it means that we need to improve our investigative techniques and the reporting of the raw data so that proper and valid conclusions can be drawn.

Yes, I know that I have them coming and going here, but all that I'm really saying is that we need to take abduction research to the next level so that we can either validate the process, or find the answers to our questions. And yes, I understand that those who have experienced abduction aren't interested in our finding answers to our abstract questions. They already have the answers that satisfy them.

>Why is it different when Dave talks to an abductee about >abductions? The truth is that we don't know whether it's >different or not. Some of us just assume it is. Maybe the >abductee ("Pam" in this case) had obvious conflicts sticking out >all over her story - maybe she gave obvious indications that she >felt hurt, used, and angry, with these feelings coexisting next >to her belief that it was all for her own good. Maybe Dave just >brought the conflict to her attention, and let her draw her own >conclusions. That would be standard therapeutic practice in other >situations (not, of course, that Dave pretends to be a >therapist). I've seen Budd do exactly this with abductees he >works with.

I won't bore you with the conundrum that a good therapist can't be a good researcher and a good researcher can't be a good therapist because the two goals often become mutually exclusive. I will simply point out that, according to Jacobs, Pam arrived believing one thing and left believing another, which was that her experiences were not pleasant as she had thought. Her new set of beliefs more closely resembled those of Jacobs... which, of course, doesn't mean that he was wrong. It means to fully understand the situation, we need more evidence and more research, something, I fear won't happen in today's climate of mistrust, territorialism, and paranoia.

>I'm not saying we can prove Dave doesn't lead his abductees. I'm >only saying that the passage Kevin quotes doesn't prove that he >does lead them.

And I'm only saying that this passage suggests that Jacobs leads his subjects, not that it proves he does. Other, additional information is needed, but that passage does suggest that there might be an implantation of ideas from "therapist" (and I put it in quotes because Jacobs is acting in some respects as a therapist and in others as a researcher) to the subject. She had one set of beliefs when she arrived and left with another.

If I read Greg correctly here, then we are in the same pew and possibly on the same page. We have information supplied by the abduction researchers and more data supplied by the abductees, and even more that comes from lectures, interviews and TV documentaries, but we don't have enough to answer some of the basic questions such as researcher bias, and the efficacy of hypnotic regression, not to mention the hundreds of different facts that seem to fit into no pattern. What we must watch for is researcher bias, but also our own bias, which can color our way of interpreting the data.

This is the equivalent of saying, as barstool philosophers are wont to do from time to time, that "Hitler [or Stalin, or the Unabomber, or whoever; fill in the name of any maniac who comes to mind] had some good ideas." No, they didn't. They were just crazy, evil bastards, and they had the ideas of crazy, evil bastards.

The chance that Cooper was right about anything, beyond possibly the price of gas (a substance he expended in great quantity), is somewhere between virtual and absolute zero. The only right you can ascribe to him is far, far right.

Gentlemen and Errol,

Just one point which I need to inject in this thread. Kevin, as you wrote above, the assumption appeared to be that the experiencer had perceptions in the form of memory to begin with.
And whilst this is often the case, it is also not the case.
Sometimes people have vague memories. They suffer from various phobias and other post traumatic type illnesses, with some perception that it all might have something to do with the UFO abduction phenomena. Sometimes it is a book, story or picture from which a reaction occurs.

What of this scenario, where there are few specific memories to begin with. Then the regressing therapist, hypnotist or whatever, have little to go on. I cannot speak for others in this matter, only for me. But as you know, my original memories are single frame pictures. These expanded through recall, not of hypnosis. One thing I did not say to any of you, is that at one time I underwent hypnosis (light hypnosis) for other reasons... smoking cessation, stress, etc. I went so often to the therapist, that I went deeper and deeper into the relaxation sessions to the point where I was really under - but good!

Being in this relaxed state, and with no vectoring by the therapist, who knew nothing of my memories, he asked me to go to that special place, where I knew peace and was happy. Well there is such a place, physically. I went there. In the mountains of upper New York State. By a lake. In a pine cabin. With my family.

I was at peace and very happy, until the memory came rushing in of a perceived abduction. I wept profoundly for a good half hour, while still under... came out of it all by myself... and cried again for a long time. I refused to tell the therapist what had occurred. I told him a lie. I said that the place and time was so wonderful that I knew it could never be again. So I wept from the loss.

Seemed like a damned good idea at the time. But I never went back. I knew then, that my memories were quite real. That is to say, I knew them to be real before, but after that episode, my belief was reinforced. Many fold. After that time, my memories bagain flashing back until I can remember most of what happened during the snapshot memories.

This could have occured under formal regression, but having refused that, I can now be more certain of those memories as they occured "naturally," in a manner of speaking.

And now, back to your thread ....

Really. It kind of begs the question what he was into that whacked him out so bad? Seems to have gotten everybody into an

Nick,

I'm not sure what you mean by "true knowledge," but of course even insane, violent people like Cooper can occasionally be right about something entirely by accident. So can utter ignoramuses. So what? What does this prove? Certainly not that we should take the Bill Cooper's of the world and their utterly paranoid ideas seriously.

INTELLIGENCE MEETS THE PUBLIC

US intelligence agencies traditionally operate behind a wall of secrecy which quite deliberately excludes the public. The clear implication is that the public has nothing of value to contribute to the intelligence process, and that intelligence is none of the public's business anyway.

Remarkably, the National Intelligence Council (NIC) has been charting a different course. The NIC, the intelligence community component which is responsible for producing national intelligence estimates, has embarked on a series of joint studies with non-governmental research institutes and has produced an impressive set of unclassified publications on topics of broad general interest.

Last year, for example, the NIC published a report called Global Trends 2015, which was intended to present "an integrated picture of the world of 2015" in its various environmental, demographic and political dimensions. See:

<http://www.cia.gov/cia/publications/globaltrends2015/>

Lately, in a further departure from the above-the-fray posture characteristic of intelligence agencies, the NIC submitted this work to outside review by a number of scientists, non-governmental activists, and others, who found much to criticize in the Global Trends report.

The review was initiated by the Environmental Change and Security Project at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, and published in the Project's latest report, together with a response from NIC acting chairman Ellen Laipson.

NIC emerged from the experience buffeted but hardly bruised. If anything, the exercise proved beneficial all around and tended to validate the NIC's extraordinary openness to outside critique.

"We have been agreeably startled and pleased by the conversation that Global Trends 2015 has stimulated," Ms. Laipson wrote, "and the comments from this distinguished group introduce some new ideas and issues into the debate."

The full exchange concerning the Global Trends 2015 report is posted (in a 1.9 MB PDF file) here:

Information about requesting a hard copy edition of the complete text of the Environmental Change and Security Project Report, Issue Number 7, may be found here:

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT REORGANIZES

Declaring that "The fight against terrorism is now the first and overriding priority of the Department of Justice," Attorney General Ashcroft yesterday announced a reorganization of the Justice Department that will redirect funding and personnel to the counterterrorism mission.

In a November 8 memo, he identified ten goals that will guide the reorganization. See:

<http://www.fas.org/irp/news/2001/11/ag-reorg-110801.html>

In a related November 8 memo on "Prevention of Acts Threatening Public Safety and National Security," the Attorney General identified new initiatives in information sharing, analysis, and interagency coordination. See:

<http://www.fas.org/irp/news/2001/11/ag-memo-110801.html>

MONITORING ATTORNEY-CLIENT COMMUNICATIONS

The announcement that the Justice Department reserves the right to monitor certain attorney-client communications in order to prevent terrorist acts set off alarms among civil libertarians and others since it would appear to undermine a fundamental constitutional protection.

See "U.S. Will Monitor Calls to Lawyers" in the Washington Post here:

<http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A64663-2001Nov8.html>

The new policy was published in the Federal Register on October 31 and may be found here:

<http://cryptome.org/bop103101.txt>

SENATE APPROVES INTEL SPENDING

The Senate yesterday unanimously approved the intelligence authorization act for FY 2002, including a "substantial increase" in funding reported at around 7% over the current year. The floor debate from the Congressional Record may be viewed here:

http://www.fas.org/irp/congress/2001\_cr/s110801.html

BUSH ORDER DRAWS MORE CRITICISM

The Bush Administration continues to draw criticism for its November 1 executive order that impedes release of historical presidential records.

The new order "strikes the wrong balance," according to the Washington Post. "By forcing the current administration to defer to past presidents' wishes on secrecy, it could serve to encumber public access to important historical material...." See:

<http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A64939-2001Nov8.html>

"While secrecy is necessary to fight a war, it is not necessary to run the country," wrote former Nixon aide John Dean in a column published today.

"I can assure you from firsthand experience that a President acting secretly usually does not have the best interest of Americans in mind." See:

<http://writ.news.findlaw.com/dean/20011109.html>

>crazy, evil bastards, and they had the ideas of crazy, evil

Sorry Jerry, but I do not understand your analogy. Were you saying that when barstool philosophers (or any people) share the same ideas as the "crazy, evil bastards", then these ideas are bad ones? Or were you suggesting that people who share these ideas makes them crazy, evil bastards too? Do you at least allow for possibility that crazy, evil bastards can have good ideas?
Who decides who are or are not crazy, evil bastards anyway?

As for Chuck Missler (co-author of the very interesting book on UFOs/Aliens and producer of the 'Behold a Pale Horse' briefing pack), his stuff is certainly better documented and worth reading, although not much less controversial than Bill Cooper's. During his visit to Toronto Chuck told me how we came within minutes of the nuclear annihilation of two major cities earlier this year in addition to many other very disturbing things that have been suppressed or covered up for understandable reasons.

>The chance that Cooper was right about anything, beyond possibly >the price of gas (a substance he expended in great quantity), is >somewhere between virtual and absolute zero. The only right you >can ascribe to him is far, far right.

What can you present to justify this opinion you have about Bill Cooper? One can express similar opinions about Steven Greer, or George Bush or the Pope (or whoever else comes to your mind) but unless they can back it up with solid numbers or facts, why should I consider what you say any different to what debunkers and uninformed skeptics make against the so-called UFO believers and the alleged conspiracy mongers all the time?

I have never met Bill Cooper or took most of what he had to say seriously, but he did influence many researchers to ask more questions and to dig deeper into claims regarding UFOs which have brought us closer to the truth.

Hello all:

Most of you probably recall some news of a pilot sighting in Hungary recently: Source: Rense.com

<http://rense.com/general15/pilotufo.htm>

"World Exclusive! Stunning Daylight Disc Taped By Hungarian Military Pilot"

Dr. Richard F. Haines contacted a friend in Hungary for more details. He was kind enough to share the response with me and others, and gave permission for me to put this on the lists:

= = = = =

(From Richard Haines)

Hello one and all,

As soon as I looked at the beautiful in-flight color photos from J.Rense's website allegedly taken from a military jet on 29 Sept., 2001 in daylight I contacted an old friend who lives in Budapest and sent him this same set of text and data. I just received the following transmission from him and thought each of you should know about it:

1. We called the Hungarian Air force, had a good conversation then was switched to the guy on top of this, Mr Vissy. His comments included:

A. Military planes do not and are not allowed to "fly over Budapest."

B. No one flies a jet "on their free time" (This is not a big country)

So, official response, it is a fake. Also, nothing found on the internet in Hungarian regarding this.

Hello Sir Richard and all.

I should know better than to answer emails at this hour, but what the heck.

It occurs to me that UFOs and all matters connected attract psychotics like a porch lamp attracts moths.

Other paranormal studies, those I know much less about, have the same problem of course, but seem somehow partially immune.

"Heavens Gate" did not congregate around Loch Ness Monster matters. ESP has its believers and no lack of fuzz-brains, but not with the same intensity UFOs seem to evoke.

On the one hand, you have people who are curious if not enrapt in an apparent (UFO) mystery, and try to make some sense of it. I prefer to include myself in this group.

On the other hand, there are those who at least try to use UFOs as a way of validating their personal war on reality. (No need for names, they announce themselves.)

Perhaps is is some quasi-religious thread, the thought of a greater intelligence, which drives the moth-persons of the world to ufology.

I wish they would select some other Lumiere dans la Nuit. Cooper? I just feel sorry for the cop he shot, his family and friends.

Best wishes

- Larry Hatch [burp!]

EM Effects On Car Headlights?

Subject: EM Effects On Car Headlights?

Reading Jacques Vallee's 'Forbidden Science', I have come across the following commentary:

(p. 292)

Mary-Lou told us in so many words that the committee (Condon) was simply not interested in field investigations. They are still pursuing the theory proposed by Wertheimer, one of their psychologists, who has "discovered" that if the witnesses in a car report that their headlights fail when they are close to a UFO this is generally due to a perception phenomenon which is related to Gestalt psychology: these people have simply been blinded by globular lightning so that they don't realize that their headlights are still on...

<snip>

"How come the light bulbs in the headlights have to be replaced in so many such incidents?" I [Vallee] asked Levine sarcastically

-----

I do not recall so many incidents where the headlights have had to be replaced. Dry batteries yes, but no headlight bulbs. Can any of you give me some examples?

<snip>

Hi Richard.

I chose the expression "true knowledge" to distinguish it from accepted knowledge which one obtains through means such as reading common school textbooks or listening to Generals or other figures of authority giving press briefings on T.V. The facts we read or hear may not really be true but are never-the-less accepted as such. For example, we accept that Star Wars is not a defensive program against hostile E.T. aliens because people we trust tell us that it is so, but is this really true? I for one have reasons to think otherwise.

The problem is how does one distinguish true knowledge from accepted knowledge? Would it become true knowledge if some insider who works on Stars Wars tells us that it is intended to defend against E.T. threats? How would we know if this insider was actually telling the truth? Even if the insider was telling the truth, the E.T. threat may not be from some hostile aliens in UFOs as many of us would assume, but an E.T. threat from rogue asteroids instead.

Although you do agree that "even insane, violent people" can at times be right about some things, why must it be "entirely by accident"? Do you really believe that insane people having the same access to books, inside information, etc. as everyone else can never be right? We all, of course, have our own beliefs, agendas and different personalities but to dismiss outright what one said simply because he's an "insane, violent" person is wrong. In Bill Cooper's case, was it because he was an insane, violent person that allowed us to dismiss his claims or was he labeled an insane, violent person because his claims were not acceptable to certain people?

I suspect there may be some people who do not know me well (as I too did not know Bill Cooper) who may think I too am one of your "ignoramuses" or possibly a "paranoid" person because of what my views are regarding UFOs or world politics. Fortunately, all views no matter how weird are welcome where I work at the university and also on UFO UpDates where I sometimes share them too. These views can then (and are) be put to the test. If after much research, critical thinking and debate these views still have some merits or basis in fact, they may even further human "true knowledge". If they don't we can discard them.

Let us put Bill Cooper's claims regarding UFOs to the test ignoring any personality faults he may have had or later developed.

Nick Balaskas

Dear Larry (burp) Hatcher, List and EBK,

Due to the graphic nature of this post, it is suggested that all nuts, crazoids, reactionaries (oops, I may be one of them ...) leave the room. This includes anyone who abhors abhorrence and those who abhor abhorers and snorers even... beCAUSE this is gonna be a real tail twister.

That UFOs and related attract people who are maligned, laughed at and generally made the fool, makes some of them paranoid. 'Course, smokin dope don't help. Which is why I am writing this. I have decided to go back to beer, having left that wonderful elixir in order to sell Gripple. In my return to beer, I discovered... make that rediscovered, something called "Corona Extra." I suggest to all those nut cases who have been made so by people snickering at them - even before they came out of their closets, people laugh at the mere mention of Meunchen UFO's and the entitties what make 'em go... that they switch from swish (sorry Kevin Randel ..
Rattle, Randle... couldn't resist), I suggest they switch from substances galore to... BEER!

Since I have had to deal with much of late, too much in factoid, not to mention a pooping factory in the form of a small breed bulldog I have aptly renamed PeePee le Poop (having come from Pepe le Pew)... I stole a bottle from my painting contractor, who does his best work whilst under the affluence of Carona Extra.

It is wonderful. God made the faithful in order to enjoy Mexican beer. I drink the Cardinal Puff for the second time tonight.
Icey cold.

I see your (burb) and raise you one more.

Jim Mortellaro
Converted Fresh whine drinker (burpety burp)

So other than 'Chuck said', did he present any other so called

Kind of like "Well Cooper said..." and a favorite of some in

I never met Cooper and from the sounds of it from the people who gave a public speaking engagement.

Cheers,

Psychics Join The Manhunt
The Sunday Times, U.K.
November 11, 2001

US intelligence agencies are recruiting psychics to help predict future attacks and to find Osama Bin Laden. The recruits, known as "remote viewers", claim to be able to visualise happenings in distant places by using paranormal powers.

The US government established a remote viewing programme, known as Stargate, in the 1970s in an attempt to utilise the skills claimed by psychics to combat communism. The programme, at the Stanford Research Institute in California, was shut down in 1995 after the end of the cold war.

Now, however, US intelligence agencies are reactivating some of their old paranormal spies.

Prudence Calabrese, whose Transdimensional Systems employs 14 remote viewers, confirmed that the FBI had asked the company to predict likely targets of future terrorist attacks.

"Our reports suggest a sports stadium could be a likely target," she said.

The FBI and CIA refused to comment but confirmed investigators have been told to "think out of the box".

Angela Thompson-Smith and Lyn Buchanan, former members of Stargate, said that they, too, had been approached.

Nick,

No, I do not allow for the idea that crazy, evil bastards can have good ideas. Nor do I allow for the idea, as apparently you do, that crazy, evil bastards are only in the eye of the beholder.

>>The chance that Cooper was right about anything, beyond possibly >Cooper?

Oh, please. Read what the man said, and study his personal history. Read some actual post-World War II history, as opposed to the lunatic ranting Cooper was peddling (and making a lot of money from, it bears noting). You can also read the entry "Dark Side" in The UFO Encyclopedia, 2nd ed. (1998), for the dismal background of Cooper's journey into insanity. Peter Brookesmith has an excellent treatment in Chapter 6 of his UFO: The Government Files (1996).

>I have never met Bill Cooper or took most of what he had to say >seriously, but he did influence many researchers to ask more >questions and to dig deeper into claims regarding UFOs which >have brought us closer to the truth.

Quite the contrary. It's people like Cooper who lead the gullible and the frightened away from truth, not to mention sanity and common sense. Ufology has seen many of them over the course of its history, and Cooper was as bad as they come.

Crazy, evil bastards usually have crazy, evil ideas. While I tend to think that "evil" is a term that is bandied around a bit too much these days, I don't think "crazy" is a stretch of the imagination when talking about Cooper.

There's a panoply of different potentials for degraded sanity of all flavors when your society's perceived as hijacked, sir, and the expressions of individuals regarding that threat are likely to be creatively divergent. They always have been. Thank g_d for that. And one man's common sense can be another's privileged assumption, and still another's artful dodge. Some sociopaths can just ooze *common sense...*

Still... what is it that provided the validity for Cooper, that's the thing that slips off furtively into the unadmitted

Jerry & List,

I strongly second these comments and won't bother to reply to Nick's reply to me apparently embracing a very strange epistemology that would have us hang on the every word of Charles Manson, Squeaky Fromme, William Cooper, and other mentally challenged individuals instead of listening to sane, rational, well-informed people.

Hitler saved the German economy, put people to work (some against their will but so what). Mussolini made the Trains run on time and was an international hero for a while (Gershwin's "you're the Top" had a line You're top, you're the Mussolini!'). Stalin was popular too -on a plie of millions of skulls. Crazy,evil bastards-amen.

Cooper had lots of followers - I knew a few in my old home town of Port Orford, Oregon. However he had a gift of P.O.ing people that if Hitler had that he would have been reduced to a greasy spot on some beer hall floor by one of his former supporters.

Having read both "Mien Kanf" and "Behold a Pale Horse" Hitler was a better writer. But both belong in the same bag of horse ah, fertilizer.

Before I joined the list there was a small group of people in Port Orford who held Cooper almost at the level of Prophet, and his droolings and rantings level of Gospel. They were lost souls IMHO. One was a friend of ours that was driven into a drunken haze by Cooper's rantings - there was no reasoning with him about the truth. Including a living example of the truth of WW11 and beyond. My late father in-law who really was a part of the real thing. Thanks to Cooper, to him there was no hope.

I hate the very word "followers". It implies sheep who cannot think for themselves, and all that this might imply.

It took what? 500 million years, to find a human race capable of reason? Something like that.

And what is the result? Sanity, logic and reason?

Or, do you prefer lasagna? Myself, I like a good lasagna, if its done properly. [You don't have to marry the girl, but you're in deep-doo if you do some dirt.]

Lasagna, like other forms of pasta, neatly skirts around the issue of whether you belong with Lehmborg types, or can be set free without a leash.

Spaghetti allows one to disinvolve oneself from the squirming neurons, not to mention onions, garlic and even mushrooms which haunt all but the most dismal Mormons and Presbyterians.

Maybe its macaroni I like. My Mom used to stuff it with American cheese, but I suspect it has higher purpose.

I think it was to help the kids find normality, some sense of self and yet a good healthy socialization (Gawd I hate that word!) with some good hearted kids from some other families.

If it weren't for the Eye-talians there would be many more snots around here, and fewer good people.

Best wishes

- Larry

Dear Mr. Easton:

I have recently been selected for jury duty in this (San Mateo county, California) county.

No psychic predicted this, nor did any of them indicate which specie of malfeasant was caught malfeasing all over the place.

As a fellow skeptic, a little bit in any case, may I suggest that the likely criminal could have chosen a more profitable venue?

I hope you can help verify my predictions for the outcome of this legal matter.

Best wishes

Nick,

Back around 1990 when the Cooper - Lear activity was at a peak there was a newsletter put out by Cooper that gave a pretty clear look at his personality. I was pretty disgusted at the low levels he operated on. I don't have them but maybe you can find a copy that will show you what that man was really like. I don't know if it is worth the space on UpDates but if anyone has those newsletters they may want to post excerpts.

To me, the most disturbing thing would be when Cooper gave a raving talk of nonsense at a UFO convention and I would see the audience give a standing ovation. By the nature of Cooper's paranoid talk and the audience response, it creepily gave me the same disgust as if Adolph Hitler just gave a speech to the nascent Nazi party. By his antisemitism proclamations alone, Cooper would have made a good Nazi. I am sad that his paranoia led to the police injury.

Dear All,

The British UFO Studies Centre, in conjunction the Community Centre, Waterloo Rd, Runcorn, Cheshire, proudly presents the Dave Kelly Memorial Conference. All proceeds to the Cat's Protection League, Dave's chosen charity.

Speakers: Steve Jones, Britain's first Pagan Magistrate, on Hooded Entities, Carolyn Buckley, Psychic and Paranormalist, on Ghosts and Poltergeists in Cheshire, Eric Morris, BUFOSC, UFO Update and Tim Matthews on Rendlesham Forest and other mysteries.

A great line up and all for £5, supported by overhead and slide projection. New UFO documents revealed plus Rendlesham, what they never told you and what you never thought you'd find out. A completely new revelation on Rendlesham, quite remarkable and perhaps the British UFO story of the year.

Should be a good day, the first of a series of lecture days in Cheshire. BUFOSC holds regular events at the centre, many well attended.

The late Dave Kelly was a researcher of ancient mysteries, a friend of Eric Von Danicken and a great friend to BUFOSC. A regular attender at meetings and events for many years, members of BUFOSC supported Dave through the painful last moments of his battle against Cancer. Members of BUFOSC who attended his funeral, including his primary carer Eric Morris, vowed to continue and complete his work. Dave left BUFOSC considerable resources to continue his work, and we shall not let him down.

Dave's chosen charity was the Cat's Protection League. All profits from this and other BUFOSC events go straight to the charity.

We hope that you will support this unique event.

Hi Larry,

A couple of years ago I read a newspaper article about a group of psychics who were attending a convention in Las Vegas and during the the convention they went on a bus tour. The bus was involved in an accident. Several were killed and there were others injured. Shouldn't they have know this was going to happen and avoided the bus tour at the outset? Inquiring minds want to know.

Best,

Hi Wendy et al,

I found the word "admit" curious. Admit to whom. Their admission makes it look as if the gov's has been touting alien existance all along while science and not a few paranomalists have been refuting the possibility.

Tim,

Who are "they" in your above statement? And is this the new file releases from MoD on rendlesham?

Hasn't rendlesham been the UK UFO story for some years?

Greetings List,

I have been following the thread on the police shooting of Bill Cooper. Given Cooper's personality, alcohol abuse and his general skewed view of the world, it was inevitable.

I completed the very first expose on Cooper for UFO Magazine (USA) in early 1990. It was a two parter called the "Whistleblowers" series. Later for the British magazine, The ForteanTimes I completed a two part expose on Cooper and the JFK Assassination story. Some of you old timers will recall Cooper claiming the Secret Service Driver is alleged by Cooper to have fired the fatal head shot into President Kennedy. 10 years ago it was all the "conspiracy rage" of the moment.

The reason I write this message is to offer to send to anyone, via email, these stories. If you would like to read them please email at decker@ufomag.com and use for a header;

Cooper is Room Temperature.

I think you will find these exposes of interest.

Subject: More Sadness From New York :(

Hi All,

My son and daughter-in-law moved to their new apartment in Rockaway last week. The new digs (making room for a new baby!) is located just 20 blocks from where the jet crashed. Everyone is ok thank God. Phone lines have been jammed with calls from out of state. I can't begin to tell you how apprehensive I am about their choice of location in light of yesterday's tragedy.

An old friend of mine, a fellow I grew up with, (from my old neighborhood, Washington Heights in Manhattan) did not fare so well. His mother, sister, and his brother-in-law all perished in that accident. His sister and brother-in-law leave behind five children. Now parent-less.

So sad. Especially following so closely on the heels of the September 11th tragedy. Nerves are jangled and recently closed wounds reopened. Hope there's some light down at the end of the tunnel. This is all getting to be a bit much.

My heart-felt prayers go out to the families who have suffered the loss of a loved one. I'm still reeling from my own loss this year. Attending a three casket wake is not something I look forward to.

Pray for Peace.

Regards,

John Velez

...Not answering for Mr. Matthews, but that's a question always asked like it doesn't really have an answer. It does.

"They", are the privileged arbitrary, the unelected, and far too many of the elected. "They," are those that have, and having had, would keep on having despite an aggregate detriment to the common good of "have nots." "They," are in possession of information that would credit or be to the advantage of anyone who knew, specifically outlining why most know not. "They" are the secret keepers. "They" are the jealous manipulators of the mainstream, the covetous who encourage bland employees while they discourage critical thinkers. "They" are the ones with hidden agendas, duplicitous plans, and secret programs. "They" are the few willing to profit at the expense of the many. "They" are above the law, outside reasonable ethics, and hold the many beneath their privileged contempt...

Everyone knows what is meant by "they"; it requires no citation.
"They" are the ones having none of the concern for you that "they" would demand of you for them. I'd imagine that "they" would keep us from knowing all manners of interesting stuff...

Hi Alf,

To answer your question of "what made Cooper?":

Paranoid Schizophrenia. His imbalanced neurotransmitters made his brain go ///////////////i;l:l;æ'?'[]=:]l,'Å,, :

I don't remember if you saw him perform live or met him personally. If you did, then I fail to see how even you would try to defend him. I just posted that if you would just look at his newsletter and learn what he has done to other people you would not ask that question. I sure hope you don't harbor any illusions that he died as some sort of counter cultural hero in that police shootout. He was as crazed as a rabid dog and just baiting the police to get into a gunfight. The crazed Cooper was too cowardly to surrender and instead shot a good family man, his wife, and kids. All I want to do is forget about Cooper and I hope everyone else does.

Alf, sheepishly speaking, sometimes you just get my goat. That's in plain English with a direct and profound meaning.

You crack me up. Your positions on what is happening on this planet, in the cosmos, and its relationship to other humans is that most people have been manipulated by the controlled mass media propaganda machinery serving those who hijacked our society. They do not see things as do you and a handful of visionaries. You have created your own duality that all mass media are controlled together and you have kicked them all over to the dark side of the fence. On the white side of the fence are you and the alternative media to set the people and the planet free.

Alf, this is the information age, A great many people are on the internet and access just about any point of view on just about every subject, except government secrets. Thousands of book titles of all kinds are in print. A lot of people also look at both mass media and alternative media then do something miraculous, think for themselves and care for all else.

Just who are these hijackers of our society, in your opinion?

I never met John Ford. I just read a lot of things those years and saw some video, etc. My question to you is: Why do the courts and a lot of people in the UFO field think he has a mental problem? Does that add strong fuel to your fire against those "self serving entities" who have manipulated the people through the mass media?

Alf, maybe some people are gullible simply because they have not learned to think the things through on a deeper level before they are hooked. People who prey on gullible people have a well developed appeal to emotions and fears that can be overpowering to people who don't have a strong sense of self. They are looking for something and the emotional pull blots out reason, so now they feel they belong, empowered members of something that helps with their fears. They are too gullible to see it is a foolish path, one that usually ends up with its members having personally suffered from its demands.

Bye for now,

Josh

<sinp>

My Father in-law was a tank driver in the Third Army in WWII - he was one of the first in Dachau. Yes, the Holocaust did happen. history was real.

As there is an underlying, with 'lying' being the word here, anti-semitic tone with Cooper and, as I recall, he was also a Holocaust denier. This little group, after a falling out with Cooper - seems the Woman who was grand pooh-bah had gotten on Cooper's bad side. Easy to do. Kind of like breathing wrong in his prescence. She was told she was a CIA operative. This shattered her - if she was CIA, we are all in trouble - and the group disbanded.

From them sprang an even smaller group of five or so who formed a chapter of Aryan Nations. This was an example of Cooper's ability to spread his vitriol.

However this one didn't last - the fearless leader of this 'merry band' was exposed by his wife who, being a descendant of one of the local native chiefs and a Chinese miner, didn't hold with such crap. Not good when you are an Aryan wannabe.<g>

Cooper was not simply evil, IMHO, he was as diabolical as they come. He could have been another Hitler if the times were right.
He was clearly a classic megalomaniac if there ever was one.

We are better off without the likes of him

GT McCoy

STIMSON CENTER: CENSOR ENVIRO WEB SITES

In a startling plea for official censorship, Amy E. Smithson of the Henry L. Stimson Center last week urged the government to "close down" web sites run by environmental organizations if they publish information about hazardous materials in local communities around the country since such information could be used by terrorists.

"In this day and age, Washington can no longer afford to hand any interested individual a road map to the chemical calamities they could cause with the toxic materials located in communities nationwide," Smithson testified at a House Transportation subcommittee hearing last week on "Right to Know After September 11th." The hearing examined the policies governing public disclosure of chemical hazards at various industrial facilities.

In particular, Smithson said, the government must clamp down on those environmental organizations that have published information on hazardous material inventories and accident consequences, including information that has now been withdrawn from government web sites.

"Immediately, these interest groups must cease and desist activities that make data on hazardous materials facilities available to widespread public view, removing this data from their websites," she said.

"Failing their voluntary cooperation, the US government should take swift steps to close down the pertinent segments of these organizations' websites and take legal steps to prohibit them from distributing this data in the future on the Internet or by other means," Smithson instructed.

Dr. Smithson has been widely quoted for her expertise and opinions concerning chemical and biological weapons policy. The Henry L. Stimson Center is a mainstream policy research and advocacy organization whose declared motto is "Practical steps to ideal solutions." But the new censorship proposal hardly fits that description.

Smithson's testimony on this point invited disbelief because she blithely made several assumptions that are questionable or simply incorrect, including: (a) there is no countervailing benefit to the independent publication of information about hazardous materials; (b) it is possible for the government to effectively suppress information that has been privately published on the web; and (c) it would be legally and constitutionally permissible to attempt to do so.

An opposing view was presented at the hearing by environmentalist Jeremiah Baumann of the advocacy organization US PIRG.

"The right to know is a proven tool for increasing public safety," he argued. "Choosing restrictions on the public's right to know about hazards in communities, rather than actually reducing those hazards, can hurt safety rather than help it."

Speaking pragmatically, Elaine Stanley of the Environmental Protection Agency outlined the four criteria the EPA has developed for deciding what to publish and what to remove from the Agency's web site.

All of the prepared testimony from the November 8 hearing on Right to Know After September 11th may be found here:

<http://www.house.gov/transportation/water/11-08-01/11-08-01memo.html>

POGO TO DOE: WITHDRAW SENSITIVE DOCUMENTS

In something of a man-bites-dog story, a public interest group has called upon a government agency to remove certain information from the agency's web site.

The Project on Government Oversight (POGO) said it was "irresponsible" for the Department of Energy to publish "detailed maps and descriptions" of various nuclear weapons facilities on the web.

"Though POGO has worked tirelessly to promote public access to government information, in this instance we feel that access to this information serves no public good," said Danielle Brian, POGO's Executive Director.

Last week, the DOE removed the most sensitive of the cited documents, POGO said.

See "Energy pulls sensitive nuclear information from the Web" by Joshua Dean in Government Executive:

<http://www.govexec.com/dailyfed/1101/111201jl.htm>

CROUCH TO GARWIN: SHUT UP

As evidenced above, the debate over when public information becomes a threat is being enacted with increasing urgency since September 11 with no clear resolution in sight.

Recently, physicist and problem solver extraordinaire Richard L. Garwin authored an article in the New York Review of Books (11/01/01) on "The Many Threats of Terror," sketching out the potential scope of terrorism as a step towards identifying appropriate means of protection:

<http://www.nybooks.com/articles/14661>

For his trouble, he earned a scolding from jazz critic and essayist Stanley Crouch, who suggested that Garwin had carelessly provided a roadmap for future terrorists.

"It seems disgustingly remarkable that those enemies within our borders, when brainstorming in search of the best ways to murder as many civilians as possible, need only turn to ... articles like Garwin's to replenish their strategies of mass assassination," Mr. Crouch wrote in a letter to the editor of the New York Review (11/29/01, not currently online).

This is a harsh judgment, and there is no evidence that public discussion of potential threats has contributed to terrorism. But it is not unreasonable to worry that it could.

At the same time, it seems probable that most of the weaknesses that terrorists could hypothetically exploit will never be corrected if they cannot be publicly identified.

The basic dilemma was stated by Richard Garwin in his published reply to Stanley Crouch's complaint:

"If [Mr. Crouch] could find some way to solve such problems without alerting people to their existence," Garwin wrote, "I would certainly prefer that approach. But he is asking the impossible."

More UFO Books Reviewed

From: Mac Tonnies <macbot@yahoo.com>

Fwd Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2001 08:13:42 -0500
Subject: More UFO Books Reviewed

I'm in the process of expanding and updating my UFO book review page, located at <http://mactonnies.com/ufobooks.html>

The following reviews of Dr. David Jacobs' books are new. More will be added soon.

SECRET LIFE and THE THREAT David Jacobs

David Jacobs' "Secret Life" is the quintessential book on alien abduction. Jacobs is convinced that aliens are physically real and here on Earth to help perpetuate their species through genetic crossbreeding with human beings. "Secret Life" is a seemingly objective analysis of the raw abduction experience, which the author breaks down into several distinct phases. Jacobs' attempt to make the abduction phenomenon understandable is admirable but flawed by his certainty in the infallibility of hypnotic regression and desire to catalogue the experience as an entomologist might prepare a display of butterflies. Jacobs simplifies the experience and in doing so bypasses some of the more esoteric insights offered us by this elusive and misunderstood phenomenon.

In "The Threat," Jacobs presents a distinctly paranoid and malevolent interpretation of the UFO abduction experience. According to the author, a massive alien task force is here to wrest control of our biology and society, with humans ultimately becoming subservient to nasty "hybrids" and Gray overlords. The vast bulk of "evidence" for this chilling thesis consists of Jacobs' hypnotic investigations into accounts of selected "abductees."

Reading this text, I couldn't help suspect that the alien "threat" of the book's title is largely a subjective impression on part of the author, and not an external reality. By scavenging through vague reports (from witnesses already versed in Jacob's particular theoretical biases), Jacobs is able to slap together an ominous-enough hypothesis to explain the raison d'etre of the mass UFO sightings of the last fifty years. I suspect the validity of Jacobs' doomsday treatise rests in the hands of more capable researchers.

Alfred,

You raise a good question. I agree completely with G.T. and others, but why do 'we' follow Cooper types? Why do people follow Hitler types?

Having spent a number of years working for the American Psychological Association, I can suggest a few reasonable answers. Particularly when it comes to UFOs, 'we' are gullible and tend to believe what we want to believe. 'We' in the U.S. have become very paranoid about our Government (not without some legitimate reasons, but way overboard).

When a paranoid, megalomaniac like Cooper taps into 'our' paranoia, he becomes a sort of prophet to 'us'. Also as has been amply demonstrated, 'we' don't understand science very well and so fail to sift and sort through 'information' carefully. In addition, the world is full of people looking for quick answers who reason simplistically (if at all) and are born 'followers' looking for a charismatic leader, hence cults arise (e.g., CSETI) often masked in noble-sounding causes or rhetoric.

Antidote?

Clear thinking, careful data analysis, exposure of fraud and antisocial/paranoid behavior in individuals.

- Dick

[Non-Subscriber Post]

Dear all,

We are making a programme at the BBC called 'Weird Almanac'. This programme is about strange phenomena in 2001 and covers all type of odd-goings on; from Aliens to the Loch Ness Monster and UFOs.

For the piece on UFOs we require pictures, drawings, sketches of UFOs and anything that people think resembles a UFO! I have seen all your websites and am wondering whether you can help me out?

We require drawings/pictures/sketches of anything that is square, rectangular, oblong, cigar-shaped (any shape - the more the merrier) that resembles a UFO. We need about 100 to make a rostrum for the show and if anyone can help that would be great.

If anyone has any pictures please let me know and I would be extremely grateful. If anyone can help, either send me an email or give me a call. If you have a telephone number I can call you on, that would be useful too.

Thank you all for your help and I look forward to your responses.

Well see, you're talking about lower common denominator 'we' easily bamboozled by common fallacy and 'big' lies but believing finally what they're programmed to believe, and given legitimate reasons you admit, how far does one have to go to go 'overboard' with their paranoia regarding that admittedly suspect government. I think we've been restrained in our paranoia. Our institutions don't seem to make that any better.

You know, for my money, science has been remiss in making itself available to just the people you're talking about. It makes itself dry as dust, fit only for the rarified palate that can appreciate it, and has been quick to ridicule but slow to investigate. A 'Cooper' sure knows how to exploit that...

>In

This is forgetting the cult of science in general? Velikovski is still ridiculed and wasn't another one of his more astonishing contentions recently been given more validity?

<http://www.rense.com/general16/mete.htm>

People are looking for answers, period -- quick, slow, and in between. They go with what seems to be working with them. I'm one of those people.

>Antidote?

That's just one word Mr. Hall, with all respect.

>Clear thinking, careful data analysis, exposure of fraud and >antisocial/paranoid behavior in individuals.

I'd say creative thinking (so did Maxwell), comprehensive data analysis, and "judge not lest ye be judged." I'd also add 'Full Disclosure'. The truth though the heavens fall... I'm betting it won't fall too far for most of us.

Hi Dick,

Hope all is well with you. Haven't seen much of you on the List lately.

I hope you don't mind if I take this off on a non-William Cooper tangent, but you said something that started me thinking. You wrote:

>Antidote?

>Clear thinking, careful data analysis, exposure of fraud and >antisocial/paranoid behavior in individuals.

You also mentioned CSETI which made me think of Steve Bassett and what he had to say Saturday night on 'Strange Days... Indeed'.

He talked about George Bush reversing an order to make public all presidential documents after a twelve year period. Reagan administration documents/papers were due to be made public and Dubya just countermanded the order to release with a Presidential Executive Order.

Now here's the kicker;

Bassett (publicly) attributes Dubya's action as an act meant to contain any information relating to UFOs. He offered no hard evidence that there is even reason to suspect such a thing, much less to imply that there is any truth or validity to it. It makes much more sense that what Dubya is really trying to hide is anything that implicates his father in the Iran-Contra scandal. Never forget that George senior was the head of the CIA at one time and that the drugs for dollars scam could only have been executed by a combination of CIA and military operatives/operations.

Yet Steve Bassett, the one and only UFO lobbyist in Washington is running around in public trying to make it sound as if Bush's executive order has to do with UFO disclosure. A non-issue that only serves to act as dis-information. Not to mention making himself and those who support his beliefs on the existence of UFOs look like a bunch of un-critical conspiracy nuts.

Other than nebulous remarks like "it is believed" that Bush is trying to cover up UFO information with his executive order, he never tells us "who" it is that "believes" what he claims, nor does he offer any documentation or proof that UFOs have anything at all to do with President Bush's recent actions.

I just can't see how it 'helps' our cause to have a lobbyist running around 'making up' what amounts to non-issues. How does that help us?

We need to think very carefully about who and what we support before we actually go ahead and support it/them. If people don't become more thoughtful and critical in their thinking we're all doomed to ride this ufological merry-go-round that we've been on for over 50 years. Folks need to sober up, have a good look around at what's what, and then take some personal responsibility to correct the things that are wrong, or unproductive. If not, ufology will remain the butt of jokes and ridicule and deservedly so.

Strictly my opinion.

Warmest regards Dick,

John Velez

LEONID METEOR STORM!

The Leonid meteor shower is expected to be brighter and more violent than usual on Saturday, and Sunday, November 17 and 18. Space Shuttle flights are being canceled and astronauts in the International Space Station are bracing themselves. It's expected to be the most powerful meteor storm to hit in decades and 600 communications satellites orbiting Earth are at risk. NASA has already taken steps to protect the orbiting Hubble Space Telescope and other satellites. North America should see a spectacular light show if viewing conditions is good. Try to get to a dark area away from lights and if there are not any clouds you should have a great view this year. The cosmic fireworks will begin as the Earth begins to cut across the orbit of Comet Temple-Tuttle, and into the blizzard of 160,000 mph meteoroids. The comet jettisons tiny fragments of itself creating a shower known as the Leonids. This is an annual event, but this year Earth will cut across an especially dense part of the comet trail.

HEAVY SUNSPOT ACTIVITY CONTINUES, NUMBER NOW AT 258

Mitch Battros writes that, NASA has just released information announcing the sunspot count is now 258, which is a count of 108 over the predicted "apex" (or maximum) for "Cycle 23." NASA had predicted the "apex" of a 150-sunspot count would have occurred 11 months ago in January. Now we are in November with sunspot counts and solar flares as large as ever. It has become obvious to scientists, we are not in a normal eleven-year cycle. The question has to be asked, "Then what is going on?" The answer would suggest we must be in a much larger cycle than anticipated. I call this a "Mega Cycle" with perhaps thousands of years in-between. This 'Mega cycle' has indeed been announced in many of our ancient text documents. The Maya have stated, "This is the cycle of the sun. In this time, the sun will speak to us." The Hopi's stated, "This is the time of purification." The Third Letter of Fatima states, "The skies will turn red."

The Bible states "fire will come from the skies." All of the previous quotes indicate this very time the end of the 20th century or the beginning of the 21st century described as both "the end of time," or "the beginning of time." Of course, this as in all interpretations should and must be acknowledged as nothing more than one person's conjecture. However, over the years I can say ancient text has proven to be accurate and worthy of serious consideration. I assure you, there are many at NASA, NOAA, and Naval Observatory who are scratching their heads saying, "this isn't supposed to happen. The sunspot group that occurred on November 12, 2001, is so large you could fit fifteen Earth's from one end to the other. Watch for X-Class flares to begin soon. I would expect continued X and M-Class flares throughout this entire week. Watch for spectacular Northern Lights and "record breaking" weather to continue for an undetermined period; perhaps for the next thirty days. Equation: Sunspots = Solar Flares = Magnetic Shift = Shifting Ocean and Jet Stream Currents = Extreme Weather Thanks to Mitch Battros <http://www.earthchangestv.com>

UFO EVIDENCE

Stan Friedman writes, "Although the case for the flying saucer reality is far better than the case against most convicted criminals. If you do it on an evidential basis, you can look at things like Ted Phillips' collected information on over 4,400 physical trace cases from 66 countries. These are cases where the saucer is seen on or near the ground, and after it leaves, one finds clear physical changes such as burn circles and burn rings, landing gear marks, swirled vegetation, dried out soil, and so forth. People say there is no physical evidence. Well, if a footprint and a fingerprint are physical evidence, then the physical trace cases are certainly physical evidence. In addition, the same things keep happening all over the world. The problem is most people are unaware of the evidence, even though there is a preponderance of evidence. Given the physical trace cases, the radar sightings, the photographs and the eyewitness testimony from people all over the world, we have quite sufficient evidence to conclude that our planet is being visited by manufactured objects behaving in ways that we Earthlings cannot yet duplicate, and that therefore were produced someplace else." Thanks to Stanton Friedman

NEW JERSEY LIGHTS

PARAMUS -- I am a 16-year-old amateur astronomer. My mother who was the other witness is 45. She is a very serious person in the way that she isn't fooled. At about 23:00 hours on October 30, 2001, we went from Paramus to Hackensack to pick up my brother from the bowling alley. We saw four lights that moved around in oval orbits. They moved around as a group never changing their movements. We looked for a source of the lights but couldn't find any. You could tell they were moving as a group because you could see that when they crossed paths it was over a different spot then before. They had a bright narrow end and extended to a faded wide end. We watched each one move around and as they met in the middle the bright part of the light seemed to miss each other. When we got home I took out my telescope and aimed it at a fixed spot where the lights would move through my point of view. After about five minutes of consistently looking through the telescope I saw a little ! bright dot move just in front of the light. When I called my Mom to see, she saw that one of the lights stopped and became brighter. I quickly turned the telescope toward it, but just as I almost had it in my finder scope it faded away. Thanks to NUFORC Director Peter Davenport

PENNSYLVANIA FIREBALL

BUCKS COUNTY -- Bill D writes that, on November 6, 2001, was driving south on I-95 just past the Route 1 interchange at 5:36 PM, when I looked up and saw a white fireball traveling south parallel to the highway. It was brighter than Jupiter but not as bright as Venus. I saw it first at about 30 degrees above horizon. It went down to about 20 degrees and winked out suddenly. The total time of visibility was a bit less than one-second. It was pure white, no trail, and no fragments. I've seen about a half-dozen fireballs in my time, and this one seemed to travel faster than the rest. I turned on KYW News Radio Station for rest of ride home, but there were no reports. There seems to have been a high number of fireball sightings recently. Thanks to Bill D. wjdaed@prodigy.net and Joe Trainor Masinaigan

VIRGINIA FLYING RECTANGLE

WOODBRIDGE -- The witness reports two red lights, flying in a circular pattern with several repetitions over a period of at least a half hour. Two rectangular objects were flying in a semicircular pattern October 26, 2001, I was only able to distinguish them once they were going away from me at 12:30 AM.

I guess looking at the back end. I could see a bright red light, and only the light. The light didn't blink, but just faded in and out over time. I couldn't see the whole flight because trees behind my house blocked the whole view. However, I did see the back end of the pattern four times before I went inside my house. There were several minutes between sightings. I could also hear a low rumbling, almost like a jet engine, but it was constant, never really fading too much as the object went away, and didn't really get louder as it came close. I don't know if this was "alien" but I don't know what it is. Thanks to NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

FLORIDA DISK

MIAMI -- On October 12, 2001, the witness was working late and went out on the back porch for a smoke late at night. He saw a craft hovering high in the atmosphere that was changing colors or flashing lights. The witness states, "I noticed the disk shape in the south sky high above Miami." It changed colors, white, red, and green, with what looked like blue flashes in-between. I looked at it through binoculars, then tried to record it with a digital camera, but would not pick it up. I tried with the camcorder, but could not pick it up. I awoke my wife and daughter and we watched it for twenty minutes. It has moved west a small bit. It is not a star, not an aircraft. It appears very much to be in the atmosphere and therefore not a satellite. For the first time in my life, I do believe I have actually seen a craft, not of this world. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC

ALABAMA CIRCLE

FORT PAYNE -- I am a newspaper reporter who interviewed a man about video footage he shot while hunting a deer on Lookout Mountain on October 18, 2001. He said, The mystery object had a reflective glare like the metallic exterior of a passenger jet, but it did not move like one. AT 5:51 PM it maneuvered more like a helicopter, although he saw no rotor blades and it suddenly, abruptly went straight up and out of view. This gentleman had no idea what to do with the footage and contacted the local newspaper. He'd seen it 5 years ago and again before this, but this was the first time he had a video camera. We reported on numerous UFO sightings in Fyffe, Alabama and strange cattle mutilations that suddenly ended. I, myself, saw what the people were seeing back in 1993. I don't know if it's space aliens, but something freaky is going on here. NUFORC Note: Digitized image was forwarded to NUFORC for our inspection. It appears to be quite indistinct in the digitized version. ! Thanks to Peter Davenport.

WISCONSIN THREE UFO SIGHTINGS

WATERTOWN -- On November 10, 2001, John H. writes, "I was sitting in the back yard around a fire pit hoping that maybe I would catch a glimpse of the northern lights I missed earlier in the week. I happened to look up at 9:30 PM and from the east about 45 degrees I saw a very fast moving object about as bright as a meteor, move straight west and fade in the clouds. The whole incident lasted about 5 seconds so I had enough time to say to my wife, "Look at that, there, right there going over our neighbors house," so she also saw it. It was bright enough to see through the thin clouds. I was assuming it could be a meteor, but I saw no tail, neither did my wife. The light was a fuzzy light, not as sharp as a bright meteor might look.

NORTH FOND DU LAC -- My husband had just left to go hunting. It was about 5:30 AM, when we saw two stars, one brighter and one smaller in the southwestern sky. The smaller star started to move in a perfectly straight line slowly to the east. It traveled at the same speed as the space lab traveled that we viewed a few years ago. Then it disappeared. I know it did not go behind clouds.

OZAUKEE --Grafton County: Mark J. was taking out the garbage on October 31, 2001, when he saw a huge giant white light above him at 8:30 PM. Mark says, "I saw a flying dark triangular shape with a giant white light in the middle of the UFO traveling pretty fast." In addition, on the bottom left corner there were two smaller lights. Mark says, "It was raining and when I stared at it, I could see the rain coming off the back end of it." I have never seen anything like it. I called my friend and he told me to go to the UFO Wisconsin web site. After that call I went outside to see more but it was completely gone. Thanks to Jenny Hoppe jenny@ufowisconsin.com,

ARKANSAS CYLINDER

LITTLE ROCK -- My wife and I observed a cylindrical metal craft on October 28, 2001, that was flying a direct course from south to north at 5:05 PM. The craft appeared to be made of shiny metal and made no noise. We looked at the craft with binoculars, and both agreed that we could not tell what it was since there were no wings. The cylinder was flying at a relatively low altitude, 10,000 feet or under. Several airplanes were flying overhead, and all had contrails, but the craft we were seeing had no contrail. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC

TEXAS UFO SIGHTINGS CONTINUE

HOUSTON -- Beau Spikes writes, I would like to be contacted by MUFON. In addition, I have entered a report as you requested at the MUFON. We have seen these objects every night since November 2, 2001. We are trying to get closer and take photos with ASA 400 film as you suggested. The only camera I have is a regular 35 mm cannon. As far as detail, the lights appear every night in a different location. There is at least one, and as many as five per night, all appearing at same time. What I see is a spec of light that changes colors and shapes. Sometimes it is a dot, sometimes a vertical bar, sometimes, and a horizontal bar. Sometimes it is a vertical bar with a horizontally sweeping white dot in the middle that is very distinctive. Sometimes it has an umbrella shaped top with colored appendages underneath. The appendages rapidly change shape and colors. The lighted objects often move in an unpredictable manner. Usually they sit still, but sometimes they shift every few seconds, side to side and up and down. In addition, I know I saw a "string" coming from these things. I wondered if the recent mass coronal ejection's might be part of this sight? However, I saw the lights before and after the solar flares, (with no difference), so I completely disregard them as a part of my sightings. Thanks to beau spikes beauknowz@yahoo.com.

ARIZONA FLYING TRIANGLE

PHOENIX -- I was sitting out side of the shop I work at on October 19, 2001, and was having a smoke about 8:45 PM, watching the sky, which was hazy but clear enough to see stars. There was a light layer of clouds coming from the west out of California. I suddenly caught a glimpse of something flying over my head. I looked up to see a group of three reddish/orange, somewhat bright yet fuzzy looking lights flying at what seemed to be couple of hundred feet above my head but completely silent. It traveled at a very fast speed from east to west across the sky towards Luke Air Force Base. This took a total of about 6 to 8 seconds. Just as it was passing over the top of the roof of the house, my receptionist looked out the door and said, "What's that?" Then another person I work with ran out the back door and was asking what I saw. I was describing it to her and all of a sudden a boomerang shaped cloud traveling the same direction was moving across the sky at an extremely fast speed too. The other clouds that were in the sky never changed, they were in the same place as they were when the event started. Thanks to Peter Davenport www.ufocenter.com

WASHINGTON FLYING TRIANGULAR OBJECTS

BUCKLEY -- Two slow-moving flying triangle shaped objects with blue, white, and red lights, with very bright strobes in unison, along with bigger white lights at 3 points were spotted on October 24, 2001. The two craft were headed south, slightly above a low broken cloud cover at 8:05 PM. The craft were about one mile apart, with one trailing back about 60 degrees east of the other. As their strobes flashed, a faint outline appeared to reveal a solid triangle, rather than a conventional wing. Their altitude was about 1500 feet. There were distinct bright red, blue, and white lights in line on the trailing edge of both craft. There were no red or green strobes in conventional positions on the craft and no landing lights or a similar typical arrangement apparent. The witness states, "This was not at all the typical type of light arrangement, as I'm accustomed to light airplane traffic, commercial traffic to and from SeaTac, and military traffic to McCord Air Force Base. ! I'm not familiar with this light arrangement and there was no engine noise. Commercial flight from SeaTac at 2020 hours with takeoff lights and conventional configuration of lights flew over just west of my house, well above the other objects' with engine noise very clear. Thanks to Peter Davenport www.ufocenter.com

ARIZONA UFO FLIES AROUND MOUNTAIN

GLENDALE -- The witness reports that on November 2, 2001, "I witnessed the best thing ever. At 9:25 PM, I saw, what appeared to me as a UFO. I have never seen one before and the object I saw was lower than most aircraft in the area and shot across the sky at a high speed much faster than the aircraft here." The object was round, the bottom looked reddish gold, there were no lights and no sound and it departed to the west. I have become a believer. I'm very excited about the entire event and want to share this extraordinary night.

FOOTHILLS, AHWATUKEE -- Rick says, "I was looking up at the sky from my car on November 8, 2001, when suddenly I saw something hovering around the mountain in a circular way at 9:50 PM. It hovered around the mountain six times. At first all I could see was a white dot in the sky, but after a minute it approached more towards the mountain and seemed like a huge battleship with four lights in the sides. The color was metallic brown, and it hovered around oddly, nothing like any thing I've ever seen. After about 10 minutes, it headed of to the west. Thanks to Joe Trainor Masinaigan and Rick.

WYOMING DRAMATIC SIGHTING

EVANSTON -- A trucker driving through Wyoming observed an oblong green glassy object starting at 11:00 PM on October 24, 2001. The UFO hovered in front and above our vehicle. The truckers called 911 several times and were given an Air Force number to call. The object stayed near by until 4:00 AM, and he indicates that he misplaced 300 miles of this trip. Later the truckers were buzzed by a helicopter shortly after the last contact. ((NUFORC Note: The witness chooses to remain anonymous, but reported that the sighting was rather dramatic, and that other truckers on the same highway probably were witness to the event. We would welcome other reports from anyone who might have seen something unusual on this date in the Wyoming area.

CALIFORNIA BOLIDE

SANTA MONICA -- While driving west at 65 mph on the 10 Freeway on October 26, 2001, I saw a trail of bright white sparks coming from an object with three lights on it. At 8:45 PM, it was moving north across the freeway at maybe 5 to 10 thousand feet with a passenger jet high above it. It gave off sparks for maybe 20 seconds and then the lights in the nose went out. The sparks were like a fireworks rocket, but this had head lights. Therefore, it was not fireworks. I could not see any detail of a craft, just three lights and sparks. I called the Santa Monica police and asked if a plane had crashed in the area. They said no. NUFORC Note: There was a similar report from Los Angeles of object moving to southeast at 0130 hours on October 27.

BURBANK -- On October 26, 2001, I was looking westward over the San Fernando Valley at 8:45 PM when I saw a fireball or bolide coming in from the ocean shooting sparks out its tail. The fireball was only five seconds in duration, but quite bright. It was on the left of the Hercules constellation.

SKSEBASTOPOL -- A couple was driving home on October 27, 2001, when a UFO suddenly popped up above their car. The witnesses report, "Our car began to stall, when the craft showed up and was hovering over our car all the way home. It would disappear for a few seconds then hover over our car while we drove down the road that my girlfriend lives on. Once we got to her house at 10:00 PM, it popped up hovering at an angle over her house for around twenty seconds. It was the size of a house. I myself have never believed in flying saucers, but now I believe that I actually have had an encounter with one. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

UNITED KINGDOM UFO ON HALLOWEEN NIGHT AND FLYING TRIANGLE

CROMFORD -- The Matlock Mercury Newspaper reports, "A nervous Winster driver was just seconds away from photographing a UFO on Halloween." Derek Holmes (66) was driving home from Lea Croft Road when he spotted a strange bright light in the sky. Mr. Holmes said: "I thought to myself good God what is that? I could see this very big, bright, white object. I felt nervous, it was a peculiar feeling, and I had read before about UFOs thinking there must be some simple explanation." Mr. Holmes on Bonsall Moor first spotted the UFO near the Salter's Lane junction at 10:32 PM. As he drove nearer the light it was a round airborne object, with curved edges. Slowing down, Mr. Holmes searched for a safe place to stop on the narrow road, to capture the brilliant image on film. But despite having a camera in the back he was too slow. "The size of the light went down, it was as if someone had hit a dimmer switch and it went yellow," added Mr. Holmes. "It started to move into the distance and then disappeared." Thanks to Matlock Mercury via Matlock Today 11/8/01 and FarShores UFO News www.100megsfree4.com/farshores/index.htm

NORWICH -- On November 7, 2001, a single fighter aircraft that sounded like a NATO F-15 Eagle was escorting a triangular shaped craft over Norwich at 6:15 PM. The fighter was about six aircraft lengths behind and four widths to the left hand side of the Flying Triangle. The fighter could clearly be heard but there was no noise from the other craft. The fighter was displaying full navigation lights, while the only illumination from the triangular craft was three small green lights one at each point of the triangle. The shape of the Flying Triangle craft was clearly visible against the stars as it passed between them and the witness. A close friend also saw the two craft for ten seconds as they headed east and disappeared. The black triangle had three sides of equal length. They were flying at an estimated speed of 250 to 400 knots at an altitude of 1500 feet. Thanks to Joe Trainor Masinaigan and Mr. Davis (esoxathome@aol.com)

Editor's Note: Joseph Trainor is the former editor of UFO Roundup a great weekly report. As most subscribers and readers of UFO Roundup know, Joe has been offline due to cataracts in both eyes. Joe had his first eye operation in August and since then he has been wearing dark Solar Shield glasses. He stated that he was still myopic but the vision in his "blind" right eye is much improved with the new lens, while his left eye is a total blur! On October 29, Joe had his second cataract operation at in Duluth's Miller-Dwan Hospital. It apparently went pretty well because Joe was able to send in this report. Let's all pray for a quick recovery for Joe.

TURKEY UFO PHOTOGRAPHED

DENIZLI, SOGUT MOUNTAIN -- The Milliyet news reports a UFO was photographed recently. The person who took the picture was actually preparing an article about Denizli and he was talking to the farmers and village people. When they climbed to the Sogut Mountain, he decided to take pictures of the village people who were guiding him. At that time he accidentally took the picture of a UFO. His name is Okan Ilhan and he is a dentist. Sirius in Istanbul is investigating. Thanks to Leyla Degirmen vze2rq7z@verizon.net photo at <http://www.milliyet.com.tr/2001/11/14/yasam/yas02.html>,

AFGHANISTAN MAJOR VICTORY

KABUL -- Northern Alliance forces have closed in from three sides on a large concentration of Taliban troops in northern Afghanistan, threatening to destroy the last major Taliban Army in the north. Mazar-e Sharif, a northern crossroads city fell on Friday, Kabul the Afghan capital fell on Tuesday, other key towns were evacuated as Taliban forces retreated. Taliban forces are also fleeing Kabul in what appears as a rout with large numbers of Taliban forces surrendering.

The Northern Alliance has been reinforced with US Special Forces advisers and Forward Air Controllers who call in air strikes on key enemy positions. The B-52 and fighter strikes are very effective causing heavy casualties to the Taliban troops. Alliance commanders claimed that as many as 1,200 Pakistanis and Arabs fighting with the Taliban had been killed near Mazar-e Sharif. It is apparent the Taliban have suffered serious casualties and are demoralized. These victories are important to the United States in pursuing its goal of dismantling the ruling Islamic militia, which is harboring terrorist Osama bin Laden. The Northern Alliance has retaken Kabul, and roughly half the country. The Taliban have not only lost large geographic areas, but they have lost the main part of their fighting force. US bombing shattered the Taliban's command structure, and weakened its political grip: The Northern Alliance forces with a few US soldiers have been welcomed as liberators in Kabul.

However, the real key to the Taliban's rule is the south and the city of Kandahar. It is the real center of Taliban strength and al Qaeda influence; Kandahar must fall to mark the end of their rule. Taking the city could also pin down the Taliban to the countryside and keep Osama bin Laden from escaping. The Northern Alliance's successes have opened the door to Kandahar and the south, but the next step must come quickly to prevent the Taliban from reorganizing its defenses. And press reports suggest that Kandahar is already in chaos and may have been seized by deserters. This situation is ideal for U.S. military forces to launch a quick operation to take the city before Taliban forces can reorganize.

On The Rant Or Off

Subject: On The Rant Or Off

This forum is the one place in which List members should pull together, not tear apart. In one sense or another, most of us share one common trait, one philosophy, which permits sanity, civility and camaraderie. That single 'thing' is a search for truth. Whatever that truth may be. Pro or con our paradigm, truth, absolute truth, is what we seek.

Hynek, whose name I satirize through abuse when I call myself Dr. J. Jaime Gesundt (Gesundt in Yiddish means 'health') is a man who should not be satirized by me or anyone else. He was a man who sought truth and said truth, his truth, with impunity. And no one could naysay him by virtue of his dignity and science. A man who loves truth is a man who is unafraid to tell his truth.

How many of you have read his book? It should be required reading by Errol, for anyone to join this List. I digress. (Blame it on the Corona Extra, I am weaned off Gripple but don't tell Gsundt .. he'll kill me).

We should be debating one another. Just being here, being able to read posts, demonstrates a level of intellect higher than normal. And some of us have minds quite superior to what is 'normal'. But, we lose it. Too often.

Hynek was a master of expressing that which he imagined. He was a man whose words came as if from Verlain or Rembaud. Pure imagery. Hynek expressed without rancor, that which we often argue here on UpDates. It isn't the List. It's the List members. It isn't EBK, it is his guests. We are invited to his dinner table and there, we argue whilst partaking of his larder. The last time that happened to me, it was Thanksgiving Day some years back. It leaves a terrible taste in one's memory. And it is uncalled for.

I would apologize to anyone I may have offended on this List. Like Mr. Hatch, I've responded with angst. I shall try hard to amend my ways. This being my act of contrition.

Uh, I remember going to Catholic School, going to confession and saying all them sins by rote. Memorized them all. Same stuff. Same sins. Same ten Hail Mary's and Ten Our Fathers for penance. And same sins all over again. Today, I realize that sin is like truth. It is unstable and exists as sin or truth only in the mind of the man. In the mind of the Great Man, it may be anything, however I would vote for amusing.

Conference Visitor Says He Spent Time Aboard Alien Craft

11/10/01

By RHODA A. PICKETT
Staff Reporter

They came from all over the Gulf Coast and as far away as Vancouver, British Columbia to discuss the unusual, the unexplained, the unseen, bordering on the unknown.

Nearly 300 gathered Friday for the Journeys Beyond Conference at the start of the three-day event being held in downtown Mobile at the Adam's Mark Riverview Plaza Hotel. The conference continues through Sunday.

Tabbed as the UFParanormal event of the year, the conference is open to the public at a cost of $15 per lecture or $140 for 10 lectures. The workshops can range from $20 to $25 each. There is no cost to visit the vendor section.

The conference contains a little bit of everything: Astrological evaluation, psychic readings, alien-inspired jewelry, discussions of near-death experiences, entity influences, UFO crop circles and past-life regression.

"Our primary goal is to give the public as many opportunities to hear as many different varieties as possible and let them decide what they want to accept and believe," said Pat Crumbley of Spanish Fort, the conference director.

Some of the discussions can border on the religious. Bruce Moen, an engineer turned afterlife explorer, talked about his travels through the various levels of hell, and his discovery that continuing in that vein would take him further from "that place of pure unconditional love."

"Have you ever felt the sweetness of honey?" Moen said, describing a love that he says only the angels can bestow. "That's what it feels like. You hear of doctors who have given up on a sick child and the mother goes and starts praying."

Then the sick child makes a miraculous recovery.

"Someone in that land of angels was able to deliver such a tremendous amount of pure unconditional love that nothing could stand in the way of it," Moen said.

Percy Galloway tended a table covered with videos and loose-leaf books he had written about his experiences with the aliens. He still remembers the day at age 5 when he was invited by aliens to board their spaceship where he remained "for four Earth hours."

Since then, they have continued to communicate with him, sometimes visiting as many as 12 times a year, "depending on their schedule," he said.

"They were on a mission to educate, and they are in everyday life," Galloway said. "The aliens are just like us. Some are good and some are bad. They are just like humankind.

"There is a body of good aliens that are forming a confederation and a federation," he said. "Their main purpose is to keep the other aliens from interfering with the governing bodies of the planet's nations so that things won't become chaotic and start World War III.

If WWIIII does start, however, "they have a planet out in space somewhere that's safe for us," said Galloway, now 60.

It's usually in the middle of Saskatchewan that Paul Anderson and his fellow researchers find the Canadian crop circles. Pasted on boards arranged on a display table are some photographs of what he says are this year's 19 circles.

"I've walked in most of them," said Anderson, who will present a lecture on the crop circles today. "You almost never get any burn marks and the crop keeps growing. It's not dead. It's usually a complex thing. The stalks are woven together, like interlocking your fingers. It's interesting."

Anderson said he hasn't seen whatever or whoever is responsible for the phenomenon, but the graphic artist said he hopes to one day have a chance encounter with the creator of the crop circles.

Lele Maloney of Fairhope attended the conference with her mother. She stopped a few minutes to scan some published accounts of previous conferences.

"I think, 'why not?'" Maloney said. "I don't think life is confined to what we see."

Hello, all, Alfred.

You know, I think that, while I agree we can and are being treated like mushrooms by various entities, too numerous to mention, I saw the participants of the Cooper study group as people with drug and alcohol problems, (being part Indian myself I've had to lay off the firewater, while not a falling down drunk, it was controlling me) and they were, for lack of a better word, outcasts of their own making.

Victims of a greater society. they thought of themselves as victims, acted as if the whole world was plotting against them, and, quite frankly, through Cooper, that the Jews were behind it all, even to the point that aliens were supporting the Jews in world domination!

Oh, what a bunch of Horse S**t. There is not one shred of evidence to this. The local paper at that time (not the current one by the by) published the 'Protocols Of The Elders Of Zion' that was paid for by this group, the Editor never had a disclaimer, or a rebuttal. The article included commentary by Cooper ,as I think it was a standard press release form of 'Coopric' origins.

I've been the object of prejudice, I grew up in a community dominated by one religious group. Because of my "relativley" dark skin, and (at one time) dark, nearly kinky hair, I was accused of being 'Jewish' by these (rather inbred I might add) blonde blue-eyed (almost to a person) folks. My Father looked Hispanic (a blue-eyed Ramon Navarro) I didn't inherit his looks, by the way. He didn't see himself a victim nor do I. But I, like my father, fought back. He was never one to give up, neither am I. We chose not to be victims.

But, when you see yourself as a victim, quite frankly you are dead meat - a deer in the headlights, so to speak. I see folks on the fringe as that. Uncertain, quivering, unable to cope in some way. The folks who rebel against, or at least question authority are different. The way say a Nelson Mandela is different than, say an Idi Amin or one of his idols, Adolf Hitler. People of that ilk seek the victims, not IMHO, the Rebels, the Authority Questioners. Those are the folks that usually get hung or thrown in jail in a regime like the Third Riech. The disenfranchised, the victim mentality, (real or imagined) are the ones who put or give the Meglomanics the power they need.

The husband stood in front of the bathroom mirror, carefully flossing his teeth. "Ooh!" he would sigh every once in a while, or "Aaah!" as the little thread did its work.

Suddenly and seemingly without provocation, his wife stomped into the bathroom and gave him a swift kick.

Bewildered, the husband demanded, "What was that for?"

"I'm sorry," his wife replied stiffly... "but I just don't believe in sighing flossers."

[SB] Since 'Strange Days...Indeed' is archived, this can be checked, but I did not state categorically that Bush moved to block the Reagan papers for UFO reasons (EBK can perhaps verify this). Rather, I raised this possibility. Why? More than a few journalists have jumped on this issue and are generally perplexed why Bush would do this. There is enormous political risk in trying to overrule an act of Congress by Presidential decree. The 1978 Presidential Records Act was specifically passed because of the actions of the Nixon administration toward presidential papers and communications. Nixon's tenure was one giant cover-up, which as we are all coming to learn, sat on top of a host of other cover-ups, ad infinitum. The people were fed up .

It would be tempting to assume that Bush's decree, which was signed after 9/11, was a national security matter related to the prosecution of the "war on terrorism." But Bush began blocking the release of these papers as early as January of this year. Why? If, as some journalists have suggested, it was to protect his appointees from the Reagan administration with ties to his father, and looking ahead to 2005 when his father's papers also come under the aegis of the National Archivist, then he would be creating a political disaster, with the prospect of embarrassing information coming out down the line about Cheney, Powell, Rumsfeld, Armitage, Negroponte, Abrams, Reich - all suppressed by a sitting President for purely political, party-serving, self-serving, staff-serving reasons by OVERRULING CONGRESS. This could destroy the Republican Party for years.

Why on earth would a President who came to office in the closest election in U.S. history, not even winning the popular vote, move immediately to take such a political risk? Well, it is worth noting that:

If Reagan was briefed on the UFO/ET matter, regardless of the extent, if George H. W. Bush was also briefed and was in fact slated to be the "disclosure president," then the release of such papers would compromise the disclosure timeline of the sitting president. And whatever that timeline was, the 9/11 calamity could only have set it back, thus making the delay of the release of these presidential papers more essential, and thus the four page decree.

Why raise the point publicly? Easy. The journalists trying to understand Bush's actions are in no way considering the UFO/ET factor because it is not permitted or they don't know better. Raising the matter publicly is one way to prod these journalists to think outside the box of their "safe" protocols.

>Yet Steve Bassett, the one and only UFO lobbyist in Washington >is running around in public trying to make it sound as if Bush's >executive order has to do with UFO disclosure. >Strictly my opinion.

John's remaining comments are his opinion. I will respond to only one part. "Dis-information" is a loaded word in the world of UFO/ET research/activism. I made a decision to devote the remainder of my life to cutting through 50 years of dis-information and mis-information by our own government on a range of issues directly and indirectly related to UFO/ET phenomena, as well as helping others with the same goals.

Anyone who believes I am spreading "dis-information" is invited to debate this publicly in any reasonable forum straight up. Under such circumstances it can be readily ascertained who is and who is not capable of "critical thinking".

Regards,

Stephen Bassett

When you go back and review your own statements, listen carefully to the parts where you declare that, "It is believed" and "It is strongly believed" in reference to the "reason" for George Bush's action. You may not have "stated categorically" that hiding UFO information was the main reason for the Executive Order but you sure were 'selling it' pretty hard. I'm a born and raised New Yorker Stephen, I know a 'sucker pitch' when I hear one. I told someone else here recently that, "you can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool Mom!" ;) (Said Spanky to Alfalfa)

>Why? More than a few journalists have jumped on this issue and are >generally perplexed why Bush would do this.

Of course journalists have "jumped" on this issue. It represents an act of willful suppression on the Presidential level. Bush has taken it upon himself to wipe away with the stroke of a pen, the people's right to know, and to access presidential documents of historical importance. Dubya "probably" did it to protect his old man from being tied directly to the Iran-Contra scandal. (As Reagan's VP) And not as you suggest/sell that it has anything (at all) to do with UFOs.

Aside from yourself Stephen, how many of these interested journalists that you speak of are putting forth the 'theory' that Bush's questionable act had anything at all to do with UFOs?

"Where" did you get such a notion?

Do you have any documentary or other substantial evidence that clearly shows a connection between Bush's presidential order and repression of UFO information? Or are you the only one spreading this peanut butter around?

Or is it (as I suspect) your own personal 'interpretation'? An interpretation that maybe hopes to take advantage of all the current media interest in the topic? An act of opportunism as opposed to an act of contribution towards advancing the "cause" of UFO disclosure. I gotta tell you Stephen, from the side-lines it screams opportunistic motives.

So, just what kind of 'attention' do you hope to get by peddling such a far out and completely unsubstantiated (by you) theory?

How does your interjecting the 'UFO question', (your own personal and unfounded speculations) into an issue that threatens yet another one of our freedoms, (our right to access the documentation associated with the administrations of our elected officials) help to either; preserve our freedoms; or advance the pawn on the UFO disclosure issue? Don't you have better things to do (like compile and submit documentary evidence to congressmen) as opposed to 'spinning yarns'?

It seems to me Stephen (as an observer) your artificial "grafting" of the UFO question (without any documentation or substantive proof or testimony) onto the the very important issue of Bush's presumptive executive order does not help the cause of those fighting to maintain our freedoms, or of the UFO community in any positive fashion.

To the contrary:

You 'sound like' any other conspiracy advocate that sees a 'spook' in every closet. That is, unless you can substantiate that there is in fact a connection. You just haven't offered anything in the way of proof that would justify your outrageous 'theory'. Show me whatever it is that convinced you that there is a connection and I'll help you spread the word. If not, you have no business airing such theories in public - as the one and only 'UFO lobbyist'. As 'yourself' you can express any theory you wish.

That's what I meant when I said that you are making us all look like a bunch of uncritical, thoughtless conspiracy nuts. You have set yourself up as the 'UFO Lobbyist' in Washington. If you're going to presume to represent the interests of the UFO community, then you really ought to take into consideration how your actions and proclamations reflect on the rest of us. At least in the eyes of those people you speak to as; the 'UFO Lobbyist'.

Personally I'm not terribly choked up about your introduction of this red-herring issue into something with as much historical significance as this. I would really like to hear some specific answers to the questions I have raised, Stephen. I didn't vote for you, or hire you. If you're going to 'assume' to represent me - as a member of the UFO community - then you need to answer to me and 'The People'. You need to be more than a 'PR Man' for the likes of Dr. Greer - the videotape salesman.

Stephen responds:

>John's remaining comments are his opinion. I will respond to

What do you call it when someone, anyone, comes along and arbitrarily attaches a distracting and unrelated issue/set of theories onto an issue that is of tremendous and vital importance to all Americans? Someone who introduces un-related information at a time when people are gathering the basic info they will need to base their own conclusions and opinions on.
Someone who by their interjection of flotsam and jetsam only serves to confuse an already complicated issue even more.

I call stuff like that "Dis-information" Stephen. What do you call it?

>I made a decision to devote the

Yes, you decided. Nobody elected you to represent the UFO community before our elected officials. Which gives me the right
- as someone who is a part of the community you assume to rep for - to asses your actions/activities in relation to the UFO question.

>Anyone who believes I am spreading "dis-information" is invited >to debate this publicly in any reasonable forum straight up.
>Under such circumstances it can be readily ascertained who is >and who is not capable of "critical thinking".

The reason for my comments, in the first place, has to do with your public display of uncritical thinking in regard to the unfounded nonsense you alone are spreading about some connection between UFO disclosure and Dubya's recent actions.

Unless you have something to back it up, you really shouldn't be out there espousing such off the wall theories. You make us all look bad in the eyes of those we seek to secure open public hearings from.

Concerned ufologist,

John Velez

Dear All,

Thanks for the many encouraging e-mails I have received re; our Conference in Runcorn, Cheshire, UK, this Saturday, 17th November.

People have asked what the nature of the "revelation" is. They hear all kinds of claims about new material from time to time and are often let down. Let me quite clearly state that the stuff we have is entirely new and quite disturbing in many ways. We still haven't been able to fully comprehend the whole picture but we have new and significant parts of the Rendlesham case NEVER researched by Ufology.

Furthermore, we have spoken this week to several witnesses to the original incident not mentioned in either James Easton's interesting piece for Fortean Times or in Georgina's impressive You Can't Tell The People.

More on this and other mysteries over the weekend. I shall be posting an introduction to our new information on Monday but you should still try and get there for Saturday's event.

Phone (01606) 330567 or e-mail me for more.

Best wishes to all,

Cydonian Imperative: 11-16-01 - Another Unusual

Another Unusual Martian Crater
by Mac Tonnies

Keith Laney has located a Martian crater that features an interestingly geometric "stadium"-like formation near its center. The bracket-shaped enclosure (?) in the crater's center is atypical, if nothing else. I find the fact that it appears hard-edged (while the remainder of the crater is quite eroded and rounded) interesting. Also of interest is the precise semicircular feature near the crater's left-hand lip.

[image]

Many have theorized that if Mars is home to alien ruins, some of these might reveal themselves as underground enclosures. The strange "sunken" aspect of the Fort formation in Cydonia is evidence of this, and anomalies near (or overlapping) crater rims strengthen arguments that the always-hypothetical Martians relied on impact basins for unknown reasons. (I personally suspect that craters provided the hypothetical Martian civilization with "ready-made" habitats, perhaps allowing easy access to subsurface water ice.)

Interesting "plough marks" next to the Cliff (located adjacent to a "splash"-style impact crater) also argue for a practical architectural reason for building near, or within, meteor craters. Marshall Savage, in his book "The Millennial Project," specifically addresses the advantages of erecting domes over pre-existing craters for purposes of habitation; readers may remember the curiously "Epcot-like" sphere featured in an earlier installment.

U.S. Will Monitor Calls to Lawyers Rule on Detainees Called 'Terrifying'

By George Lardner Jr.
Washington Post Staff Writer
Friday, November 9, 2001; Page A01

The Justice Department has decided to listen in on the conversations of lawyers with clients in federal custody, including people who have been detained but not charged with any crime, whenever that is deemed necessary to prevent violence or terrorism.

Attorney General John D. Ashcroft approved the eavesdropping rule on an emergency basis last week, without the usual waiting period for public comment. It went into effect immediately, permitting the government to monitor conversations and intercept mail between people in custody and their attorneys for up to a year at a time.

The move, which the Justice Department said was necessary "in view of the immediacy of the dangers to the public," stunned defense lawyers and civil libertarians. They assailed it as an unconstitutional attack on the right to counsel and, in the words of American Civil Liberties Union official Laura W. Murphy, "a terrifying precedent."

The monitoring of attorney-client conversations is the latest in a series of extraordinary law enforcement measures the government has taken in response to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on New York and Washington.

<5 para snip>

The president of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, Irwin Schwartz of Seattle, denounced the eavesdropping as "an abomination" and said it would be challenged in court at the first opportunity.

"The Code of Professional Responsibility is quite clear: a lawyer must maintain confidentiality," Schwartz said. "If we can't speak with a client confidentially, we may not speak with him at all. And if we can't do that, the client is stripped of his Sixth Amendment right to have a lawyer."

<3 para snip>

Martin said monitoring of witnesses and others who have not been convicted would be "particularly outrageous." Murphy, who is director of the ACLU's Washington national office, agreed, saying, "the idea that this could be happening to innocent people is really disturbing." A lawyer's effectiveness, she added, can be dramatically diminished if the government is listening in, making a client fearful of disclosing all that the attorney needs to know to mount a forceful defense.

Earthgrazers

Leonid meteors will take their time arriving Saturday night. Wherever you are on Earth, you're viewing location has to rotate into the stream of space dust that causes the Leonids. The shooting stars will appear to emanate from a point in the sky known as the radiant, which for the Leonids happens to be in the constellation Leo (hence the name).

No knowledge of this is needed to find an earthgrazer. Just go out and look to the East. The timing depends on where you live. Figure mid-evening for high northern latitudes, such as Canada; late evening hours for mid-northern latitudes, as in most of the United States; and after midnight for equatorial regions and the Southern Hemisphere.

What might you see?

"When the radiant lies near the horizon the Leonid meteors cannot penetrate far into the Earth's atmosphere," explains Robert Lunsford of the American Meteor Society. "At this time they are only able to skim the upper atmosphere."

These earthgrazers, as scientists call them, often last several seconds and can span a great distance of the sky, Lunsford said.

To see an earthgrazer, you'll need an unobstructed view of the eastern horizon.

Later, as Earth continues rotating, the Leonid radiant moves higher into the sky, along with its host constellation and all the stars. Meteors will strike the atmosphere at a more direct angle, Lunsford explains, creating shorter paths. But the paths will still span much of the sky, so you don't need to face East. In fact, the best views will be everywhere but directly East.

Just go out, look up.

Fireballs

Most Leonid meteors are created by sand-sized grains of dust that vaporize about 60 miles up due to the friction caused by Earth's atmosphere. But Tempel-Tuttle, the comet that has left all this Leonid raw material in space, also deposits a few larger chunks of itself each time it swings around the Sun (which it does every 33 years).

A comet fragment the size of a marble can generate a glorious fireball of light as it burns up. Instead of slicing through the atmosphere like a small bit of dust, such a pebble sometimes goes splat upon meeting up with a certain density of air.

"The Leonids can have fireballs, but they're not especially noted for them," said Bill Cooke, a meteor researcher at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center. Cooke said the number of fireballs each year depends in part on which streams of cometary debris Earth plows through.

In 1998, observers noted several fireballs when the planet moved through a stream that comet Tempel-Tuttle had deposited in the 14th Century. The Sun's radiation had blown much of that ancient dust into a widely dispersed region of space, so the 1998 Leonids did not produce a great number of shooting stars.

But the larger material -- fireball material -- was still relatively concentrated. In fact, Cooke said, scientists are learning that gravity acts on these larger fragments, causing them to be huddled more closely together over time. They call the process "gravitational focusing."

So what are the chances for fireballs this year?

People in Asia will see shooting stars caused by material that has been waiting to be swallowed up by Earth since 1633, so there should be some fireballs there, Cooke said. The North American peak will be caused by material left by Tempel-Tuttle in the 1700s, however, and should provide fewer fireballs, but probably still some.

Cooke is quick to point out that the Leonids can surprise, however. There could be fewer meteors overall. Or there could be more fireballs. Meteor forecasting is a young profession. And, for now at least, meteor showers are still somewhat strange -- even to the scientists.

Decoding E.T.: Ancient Tongues Point Way To Learning Alien Languages

By Doug Vakoch
SETI Institute
posted: 07:01 am ET
15 November 2001

The modern Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence (SETI) is based on the premise that a systematic search of the cosmos may reveal artificial signals, transmitted either intentionally or, somewhat like the leakage of TV and radio signals from Earth today, as electromagnetic noise. But will these signals, if we ever detect them, be more than simple beacons telling us that we are not alone? What if the signals bear messages from an alien civilization, attempting to describe the universe from the perspective of an intelligent species evolved completely independently of humankind?

If an extraterrestrial radio or optical signal is packed with information, we might not know for sure until well after we have determined that the signal is artificial. The SETI programs currently underway focus their energies on finding strong artificial signals—not on detecting fluctuations of those signals that might convey additional information. But with the detection of a sign of intelligent life beyond Earth, stronger search systems would no doubt follow, possibly revealing encoded messages from extraterrestrials.

How would we go about deciphering such messages? SETI researchers have long contended that the content of messages intentionally beamed toward Earth would likely be heavy on math and science—at least in the early stages. These scientists reason that if extraterrestrials are intelligent enough to build radio telescopes or lasers capable of interstellar communication, they will also be familiar with many of the same principles of mathematics, physics, and chemistry that we use on Earth. And while that may be true for the initial steps in an interstellar codebook, how might extraterrestrials convey something about the more unique aspects of their world—such as their culture and history?

Anthropologists Ben Finney and Jerry Bentley of the University of Hawaii suggest that we might gain clues to decoding more complex extraterrestrial messages by examining past attempts to decode languages right here on Earth. But these scholars warn that we need to be cautious about which examples to use for our case studies.

Finney and Bentley note an oft-cited analogy for detecting a message-laden signal from space: the transmission of knowledge from ancient Greece to medieval Europe. Though any major bookstore today has a wide variety of classics available—often in paperback editions at bargain prices—during the Dark Ages, Plato and Aristotle weren't so easy to come by.

In fact, European scholars had lost vast numbers of Greek works on philosophy, literature, and science. But fortunately, copies of these works were well-protected by Islamic scholars, particularly in Spain and Sicily. Thus, as Europe entered the Renaissance, Western scholars were able to reclaim Greek classics from Islamic centers of learning, either directly from Greek editions or through Arabic translations. And thus, over decades and centuries, the "young" European civilization was able to learn from the older Greek civilization, although the two were separated by long expanses of time.

The analogy has natural affinities with contact between Earth and the much older extraterrestrial civilizations being sought by SETI. If we do detect information-rich signals, it is possible that they will come from civilizations long since dead. The impact, we expect, would be even more edifying than the influx of ancient thought was for early modern Europe. This reclaiming of ancient knowledge provided Europeans with alternative perspectives to some of their typical ways of viewing the world, in turn leading to new syntheses of modern European and ancient Greek insights. If some day we detect and decode messages from civilizations beyond Earth, we will have similar opportunities to juxtapose terrestrial and otherworldly views.

But, Finney and Bentley warn us, perhaps it won't be quite that easy. While the Greek comparison is informative, as with any analogy, it does not tell the whole story. For a more nuanced understanding, we can turn to other examples of decoding ancient scripts. In the next article in this series, we will follow Finney and Bentley's lead, and examine other analogues of decoding extraterrestrial messages, drawing on more recent attempts to translate ancient Maya and Etruscan texts.

Dear Tim and Listmembers

Congratulations Tim, on discovering some new information on the Rendlesham case. This has been a good year for Rendlesham, not only with the release of some of the MOD's files, but with new witnesses now willing to talk.

There are more Questions being tabled in the House of Lords and Lord Hill Norton is quietly working on Ministers in the hope that they will release more information. A senior minister at the MOD has now heard Halt's recording of the event and agrees it offers a graphic account but will still not admit that the incident offers clear evidence that the UK's Air Defence was compromised. Requests are being made to the USAF regarding their involvement.

A Birmingham UFO group will be running a series of talks on Rendlesham next year, which will help to keep the case open. I will be talking at the Ghost Club in London (weird) on 12 January, and in February in Birmingham. Other lecturers will be heard on different dates.

May I take this opportunity to apologise for not being able to talk at the Cornwall conference in October, or BUFORA in early November, due to illness. Nick Pope kindly appeared in my place for the BUFORA talk and gave an excellent presentation on Rendlesham.

I do hope that Tim's new information will indeed fill in some gaps, and I look forward to these new revelations. I will not be able to attend the talk on Saturday, but I hope it is a great success.

PS, Tim, you did not mention my article in Fortean Times, which summarised the case in one page following four pages of selective cutting and pasting on Easton's part, with countless quotes (which we've all had to endure many times here on Updates) from Halt's interviews with a radio presenter, along with wild theories of the UFO being, if I recall, a tractor!

May I also remind everybody that my paperback, 'You Can't Tell The People, The Definitive Account of the Rendlesham Forest UFO Mystery', was published on 9 November by Pan Books (Macmillan) and is available in all good book shops and on-line at:
www.amazon.co.uk Countries outside UK: www.netstoreusa.com

The paperback contains the following updates:

1. The Questions and Answers tabled in the House of Lords
2. The MOD's reaction to my book and the problems caused by my launch party in the basement at MOD Main Building
3. Former Prison officer reveals that pages went missing from Prison Log books during Rendlesham incident.
4. Why the MOD dropped an interview with their in house magazine
5. Witness from local fire brigade claims he was barred from entering the base because there was a UFO over Woodbridge.
6. New information from Colonel Halt including description of the UFO in the forest and other tapes that he has in his possession.
7. My own weird encounter in Rendlesham Forest with the case's biggest sceptic, Vince Thurkettle. Quite a remarkable event!
8. The truth about Larry Warren's alleged landing site
9. The Rendlesham incident during the 1800's
10. Weird happening going on now in the forest
11. A primary witness admits that Halt's patrol witnessed translucent human type entities at the landing site.
12. Summary of the MOD's Rendlesham file.

Best wishes

Georgina

While the above comments by John contain enough bait to fill a freezer full of trout, my intentions regarding this issue were clearly stated in my previous post.

However, intentions don't always match up with execution. I checked in with EBK and learned that past Strange Days....
Indeed programs are not yet (but soon) available in archive. So I am not able to review that program at this time. However, it was EBK's sense that I did, in fact, go beyond "raising the possibility" of a UFO/ET aspect to Bush's presidential records maneuver to "selling" the idea as "my explanation" for these actions. That's not appropriate.

Perhaps, my frustration at seeing the political efforts toward disclosure significantly set back by 9-11, was showing. I shall endeavor to be more careful.

Regards,

Steve Bassett

November 16, 2001

** THE SECRETIVE BUSH ADMINISTRATION
** NEW RESOURCES ON TERRORISM
** MORE CRITICISM OF PRESIDENTIAL RECORDS ORDER
** DECLASSIFICATION NEWS

THE SECRETIVE BUSH ADMINISTRATION

Taken individually, each of the new national security policies adopted by the Bush Administration in recent weeks has its pros and cons, its potential excesses and mitigating factors. But collectively, they represent a striking new concentration of power in the executive branch and a transformation of the national security landscape.

What common factors underlie diverse measures such as military tribunals for suspected foreign terrorists, the monitoring of certain attorney-client conversations, and new restrictions on disclosure of historical presidential records, among other recent policy excursions?

Each involves an expansion of the exercise of executive branch authority with diminished opportunity for independent oversight, and little or no provision for public accountability.

The new policies are being unilaterally adopted faster than they can be assessed by Congress. In effect, the Administration is altering the institutional balance that has been gradually honed over recent decades, and jettisoning the experience on which that balance was based.

It is not necessary to attribute any malicious intent to the Bush Administration in order to conclude that its new policies will make the abuse of government power more feasible, harder to detect, and much more difficult to correct.

Several of the new policies were surveyed in a November 15 Associated Press story, "U.S. More Tightlipped Since September 11," by Deb Riechmann. The story, with links to related documents, is posted here:

<http://www.fas.org/sgp/news/2001/11/ap111501.html>

NEW RESOURCES ON TERRORISM

The British Government this week published an updated version of its report on "Responsibility for the Terrorist Atrocities in the United States, 11 September 11 2001," which outlines on an unclassified basis the case against Usama bin Laden and Al Qaida. See:

<http://www.fas.org/irp/news/2001/11/ukreport.html>

The U.S. State Department belatedly published a comparable report of its own on "The Network of Terrorism" which is glossier but no more substantive than the UK report. See:

<http://usinfo.state.gov/products/pubs/terrornet/>

The Library of Congress has prepared a helpful compilation of "Legislation Related to the Attack of September 11, 2001" of which there has been quite a bit. See:

<http://rs9.loc.gov/home/terrorleg.htm>

MORE CRITICISM OF PRESIDENTIAL RECORDS ORDER

In an encouraging display of critical opposition, resistance to the recent Bush executive order that would impede public access to historical Presidential records continues to mount.

"Although the president may have hoped that this executive order might go unnoticed, the backlash is already fierce," according to the San Francisco Chronicle (11/11/01):

<http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2001/11/11/ED81976.DTL>

"The Bush order [is] entirely too restrictive," says the Christian Science Monitor (11/14/01):

<http://www.csmonitor.com/2001/1114/p8s3-comv.html>

"Since Mr. Bush is unlikely to rescind his own order, Congress must pass a law doing so," the New York Times editorialized (11/15/01):

<http://www.nytimes.com/2001/11/15/opinion/15THU4.html>

"With a stroke of the pen on Nov. 1, President Bush stabbed history in the back," wrote historian Richard Reeves today, hyperventilating a little for the New York Times op-ed page:

DECLASSIFICATION NEWS

On November 14, the United Kingdom Public Records Office announced "the eighth and largest Security Service release, consisting of just over 200 files, bringing the total number of MI5 records in the public domain to 1120." See:

<http://www.pro.gov.uk/releases/nov2001-MI5/introduction.htm>

Also on November 14, Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Wolfowitz disclosed the contents of two "declassified" situation reports from U.S. Special Forces units in Afghanistan.

The new disclosures include observations from the field such as: "everywhere I go the civilians and mujahadeen soldiers are always telling me they are glad the USA has come." See:

Stephen and others,

I am sure many will disagree with me on this, and many will say 'where is the evidence'? I don't have any 'evidence' except a gut feeling, and I don't expect anyone to agree with me on it, however I do wish to share it. Let all make up their own minds, as I no doubt they will. :-)

>[SB] Since 'Strange Days...Indeed' is archived, this can be >checked, but I did not state categorically that Bush moved to >block the Reagan papers for UFO reasons (EBK can perhaps verify >this). Rather, I raised this possibility.

Personally, my thoughts are this:

- President Bush realizes that for full UFO disclosure to occur, other related disclosures will need to occur first, since they are all related (Drug War, Foreign Policy, etc).

- In order to get UFO disclosure (which will require a huge amount of support, not only from the US public, and will need to be bipartisan, as well as include many religious leaders, as well as leaders from the rest of the world), other disclosures may need to occur before that. The issue is too big to just come out with on Larry King, as I have stated before (considering abductions etc, etc.) and the ramifications, as Dr. Greer has stated (and Grant Cameron explained to me) could be similar to ten WTC bombings on the same day (ie in how it would affect some persons 'beliefs' and so on).

Considering this, it would be wise for any president who wanted to come forward with disclosure, which I still think Pres. Bush wants to, and is working towards, to be able to have a public which was more aware, more responsible, and not running around with knee jerk violent reactions. It would be good to have a situation that could be monitored/contained so that those who felt the most threatened by such a 'belief shattering' event could feel 'safe'.

Before that could occur, other nations who also will be affected would need to be apprised, so that they could help the transition to occur. Especially nations which have strong fundamentalist roots.

Also before disclosure could occur, issues such as the drug war, and terrorism would need to be addressed. I don't think that America could deal with the issue of UFO disclosure, when issues such as foreign threats etc. were also a worry on their list of problems.

RE: the issue of blocking the Reagan papers, and requiring that all Presidents are given the opportunity to 'block' the release of their papers, I imagine Pres. Bush wants to give these Presidents the opportunity to feel that they are included in the decision, that he is not going to release their papers without giving them the opportunity to be part of such a decision. He needs all of their support, and I hope they will give it to him.

From the 'outside' for those of us who are bent on 'conspiracy minded ideas' it does look 'negative' but from his view (which is my interpretation) it is a very courageous thing to do, and he is in my opinion acting like a courageous statesman, being inclusive in this decision. Of course I could have it all wrong, but those are my thoughts.

>Why? More than a few >journalists have jumped on this issue and are generally >perplexed why Bush would do this.

I can understand their perplexity :-) I'm not sure many realize how and what it will take to get Disclosure, and since many journalists have been afraid to investigate the UFO issue, and even less are aware as to how it is so deeply involved and related to other black-ops issues, the funding of black-ops issues, etc. -- it is a big conundrum - to say the least. I am not even sure that many in the military involved in the UFO issue may have been aware of how the Drug War and other Foreign Policy related issues 'fitted in' with the UFO issue.

We cannot have disclosure of one without the others, as I have stated before, and which I am even more convinced of now. Then there is also the issue of how this would affect many businesses, and they need to be apprised before disclosure, the oil industry, the financial industry, the stock market, etc.

>There is enormous political >risk in trying to overrule an act of Congress by Presidential >decree. The 1978 Presidential Records Act was specifically >passed because of the actions of the Nixon administration toward >presidential papers and communications. Nixon's tenure was one >giant cover-up, which as we are all coming to learn, sat on top >of a host of other cover-ups, ad infinitum. The people were fed >up.

The people may be fed up, but I imagine that many who have been trying to maintain the coverup and who have suffered with bearing the load of these secrets, and receiving only blame for it, are probably as fed up, if not more. My thoughts are that they are working for disclosure, and the enormity of it does not make it any easier for them, and yet they also need the support of the public and especially as and when disclosure gets closer they are going to need those who REALLY want UFO disclosure to be willing to get over their petty differences and be ready to be support and voices of reason, responsibility and understanding to many who are going to be really stunned by such revelations.

My suggestions would be that people start the discussion of how to setup community support groups in all major cities and especially in places where 'strong religious beliefs' may be threatened to help people deal with these issues, especially the issue of abductions. I am pretty open-minded and when I heard about it -- well it shocked the living daylights out of me, I cannot imagine what or how it would affect some people in the Midwest, or those in the Christian fundamentalist movement. It will be one thing for them to read about it in the paper and think 'holy cow' and another to be able to go to a local community meeting or meet someone who can explain to them in calm terms their experiences.

>It would be tempting to assume that Bush's decree, which was >signed after 9/11, was a national security matter related to the >prosecution of the "war on terrorism."

Indeed the 'war on terrorism' needs to be dealt with, since the ufo cover-up disclosure will bring forth the information as to how the US has used reverse engineered technologies to subjugate the rest of the world. It is therefore imperative for Bush and the government to not have to deal with terrorist acts in the middle of disclosure. The Drug war needs to be dealt with, because one of the first things people will ask is: how was this financed? Well, it was financed by waging a war on drugs, and selling it to the people and making money to finance the black-ops projects. Then you have the issue of the african american and prison communities who suffered from the drug war

-- their anger and so on needs to be contained and they need to be supported, otherwise it will just be a civil war. Does anyone get the picture?

This, I imagine is some of the dialogue going on with other nations, requesting that they support Disclosure and not over-react, since in the end disclosure -- if it goes ahead calmly and responsibly -- will in effect benefit them as much as America, and will then lead to a world where less oppression and more justice, truth and forgiveness will occur.

As that crazy in Patch Adams said when he held up his four fingers and said "What do you see?" We have to look beyond the problem, we have to see how we are going to support one another to deal with the problem. If we cannot do that, the problem will consume us and we will sink in the quicksand of our own making...

>But Bush began blocking >the release of these papers as early as January of this year.

He did say that one of the first things he would do when coming into office would be to start the disclosure process. He seems to be more aware of exactly what a monumental task that is, than many in the disclosure movement do! :-)

>Why? If, as some journalists have suggested, it was to protect >his appointees from the Reagan administration with ties to his >father, and looking ahead to 2005 when his father's papers also >come under the aegis of the National Archivist, then he would be >Rumsfeld, Armitage, Negroponte, Abrams, Reich - all suppressed >by a sitting President for purely political, party-serving, >self-serving, staff-serving reasons by OVERRULING CONGRESS.

>This could destroy the Republican Party for years.

You may be right, but I see it from a total different point of view. We cannot expect these people to come forward if we are barking at them like a pack of hyena's, ready to tear them to shreds. If we are not willing to listen, to be calm, responsible, support them by supporting those who will be most seriously affected in their beliefs, then we should all forget about wanting disclosure.

This is not about party politics, it is about bringing out the truth, and being willing to let these people speak and trying to find it in ourselves to hear their stories, as to their motives, their knowledge and the evidence. The Republican party cannot do it on it's own, it needs not only the other parties support, but also the support of as many brave Americans who are willing to put truth before ideology, hate, religion, etc for the betterment of mankind, which in the end will be for the benefit of America, humanity and may lead to our exploration of the cosmos -- but before that we have some serious work to do! :-)

>Why on earth would a President who came to office in the closest >election in U.S. history, not even winning the popular vote,

No, 911 did not set it back, I imagine 911 was part of it -- as difficult as that is to say. I don't think this is about delaying the release of the papers, only about bringing out the information in a timely way that addresses the issues that need to be addressed before UFO disclosure can occur.

>Why raise the point publicly? Easy. The journalists trying to >understand Bush's actions are in no way considering the UFO/ET >factor because it is not permitted or they don't know better.

>Raising the matter publicly is one way to prod these journalist >to think outside the box of their "safe" protocols.

Good idea... but maybe a bigger box is an idea, a box that includes the other disclosures so closely related to UFO disclosure.... ! ;-)

Very valid opinion, in my opinion John! ;-) And while I disagree with Steve on some issues, as above, and also with Greer on many issues, I also appreciate very much and respect what they have gone through (and anyone for that matter, including the

I don't think you are spreading dis-information, I think you are though I disagree with some of it!

>Under such circumstances it can be readily ascertained who is That's funny! ;-) Thanks!

>Hi Alf,

I'm not partial to "Alf", Mr. Goldstein. Alfred or Mr. Lehmborg, please.

>To answer your question of "what made Cooper?":

>Paranoid Schizophrenia. His imbalanced neurotransmitters made >his brain go ////////////;l;l;=E6?''[]=3D;][l,'=C5,, :

Very colorful... but that wasn't altogether my question, Mr. Goldstein, forgetting for a moment that while it may be that you could get select headshrinkers to agree with your broad brushed contention, you're not really competent to make that call yourself, are you? Additionally, there is stuff going on around us that made his alleged psychosis seem attractive to more than a few people across this nation. Denial of that "aggregate craziness" which provides fertile ground for someone like Mr. Cooper demonstrates a naivet=E9 on your part that I think you later thinly accuse _me_ of.

>I don't remember if you saw him perform live or met him >personally. If you did, then I fail to see how even you would >try to defend him.

I think you would _have_ me defend him to satisfy a personal issue you make a little plainer, later, but I don't _defend_ him, Mr. Goldstein... I point out that there was considerable grist for Cooper's too strident mill... I question his very genesis -- what's in the grassroots to sustain him, why he continues (or continued) to get the validation that he continued to get... Not defense, Mr. Goldstein, interested speculation.

>I just posted that if you would just look at >his newsletter and learn what he has done to other people you >would not ask that question.

What question, sir? "Why"? And what "one man did to many people" is not the issue, and a digression. The issue is what has to occur for someone like Cooper to achieve viability. Hitler, already used in comparison, had a bad faith deal for Germany with France and GB wading in to steal everything they could "fair and square..." after the first war. It's argued that Hitler was not so much the cause of WWII, but the rest of the European leadership... fertile ground. You'll remember that that identical mistake was NOT made at the conclusion of the second war...

>I sure hope you don't harbor any >illusions that he died as some sort of counter cultural hero in >that police shootout.

Please -- but I think you would be happy (and oddly relieved somehow) if I were... and what's up with that?

>He was as crazed as a rabid dog and just >baiting the police to get into a gunfight. The crazed Cooper was >too cowardly to surrender and instead shot a good family man, >his wife, and kids. All I want to do is forget about Cooper and >I hope everyone else does.

Ok... then what about that guy that replaces him? Forgetting Cooper does not provide for the end of all Coopers... Forgetting him seems to court the unremembered history coming back to repeat itself. Forgetting him is not the best answer in that light. Would you agree?

>Alf, sheepishly speaking, sometimes you just get my goat. That's >in plain English with a direct and profound meaning.

Ah yes. Well, sometimes when I get really irritated with someone it's because I know how right they are. That's not quite as direct, but the English is just as plain, and a little more profound I think.

>You crack me up. Your positions on what is happening on this >planet, in the cosmos, and its relationship to other humans is >that most people have been manipulated by the controlled mass >media propoganda machinery serving those who hijacked our >society.

Boy. I hope you'll let me write that down -- a very succinct impact statement on my position.

>They do not see things as do you and a handful of >visionaries.

It's the poetry isn't it? Me and a handful of visionaries... that's rather insulting. Did you mean that the way it sounded? I reject that out of hand, regardless, as an invention all your own. It's like me painting you and a handful of your like-minders as ethnocentric troglodytes, a condition you would find equally objectionable and rejectable... I regret you perceive me that way, forgetting that I won't be changing a thing...

>You have created your own duality that all mass >media are controlled together and you have kicked them all over >to the dark side of the fence. On the white side of the fence >are you and the alternative media to set the people and the >planet free.

You're making the call...

>Alf, this is the information age,

That's correct, Mr. Goldstein, and I suggest you sift yours a little less personally and a little more personably.

>A great many people are on the >internet can access just about any point of view on just about >every subject, except government secrets. Thousands of book >titles of all kinds are in print. A lot of people also look at >both mass media and alternative media then do something >miraculous, think for themselves and care for all else.

That was lovely. I'm relieved to discover we have so many people out there thinking for themselves. Really, it's a load off my mind.

>Just who are these hijackers of our society, in your opinion?

Or... we could just leave that alone, a moment, to examine your implied contention that our society is not being hijacked, is on an upward path, healthy, and not needing our worried concern. Have you been paying attention to current events?

But, who are **they**? I answered that in another thread, but **they** are... " ...the privileged arbitrary, the unelected, and far too many of the elected. "They," are those that have, and having had, would keep on having despite an aggregate detriment to the common good of "have nots." "They," are in possession of information that would credit or be to the advantage of anyone who knew, specifically outlining why most know not. "They" are the secret keepers. "They" are the jealous manipulators of the mainstream, the covetous who encourage bland employees while they discourage critical thinkers. "They" are the ones with hidden agendas, duplicitous plans, and secret programs. "They" are the few willing to profit at the expense of the many. "They" are above the law, outside reasonable ethics, and hold the many beneath their privileged contempt...

Everyone knows what is meant by "they"; it requires no citation. "They" are the ones having none of the concern for you that "they" would demand of you for them. That's the hijacker, in a nutshell.

>I never met John Ford. I just read a lot of things those years >and saw some video, etc. My question to you is: Why do the >courts and a lot of people in the UFO field think he has a >mental problem?

He very likely does... now! So would you! The point is that he was likely not crazy... then! Ford was torpedoed, Mr. Goldstein, for busily investigating a powerful man (subsequently a convicted criminal) who could bear NO investigation because of that criminal activity, and who I'd wager did not spend one freaking day in jail for his crimes... Your obvious appreciation of "courts" and the veracity of the members of political machines is abundantly descriptive of the naivet=E9 I spoke about earlier...

>Does that add strong fuel to your fire against >those "self serving entities" who have manipulated the people >through the mass media?

If I understand the question? In a word, yes.

>Alf, maybe some people are gullible simply because they have not >learned to think the things through on a deeper level before >they are hooked.

I'd say likely. But then most people aren't getting solid information up front to preclude that gullibility. And did you know that the word "gullible" was not in the dictionary?

>People who prey on gullible people have a well >developed appeal to emotions and fears that can be overpowering >to people who don't have a strong sense of self.

The fear, Mr. Goldstein, has to be there first. Seeds don't sprout in infertile soil.

>They are >looking for something and the emotional pull blots out reason, >so now they feel they belong, empowered members of something >that helps with their fears.

Where does the fear come from, Mr. Goldstein? The Mr. Coopers of the world aren't making it up... they only make use of it, when it is there... why is it there?

>They are too gullible to see it is >a foolish path, one that usually ends up with its members having >personally suffered from its demands.

Nonsense, it works for them or they wouldn't be involved. I don't think you're seeing the wide view on this, I think that you're occluded with personal issues, and I don't think that you are being sufficiently fair with me. Maybe I'm up your nose so far you can feel little knees on your top lip, but I don't think it requires your insult, and I don't think it justifies your sneer. Still cracked up?

A REPLY FROM THE STIMSON CENTER

The November 13 issue of Secrecy News reported on testimony by Amy E. Smithson of the Henry L. Stimson Center in which she called upon the government to take legal steps to remove certain environmental data from non-governmental web sites, if those web sites declined to remove such data themselves.

Secrecy News unfairly portrayed her position, Dr. Smithson said in a written reply today.

"As a closer reading of my testimony reveals, I thoroughly respect and advocate the public's right to know of the industrial dangers in their communities," she wrote.

"The issue is not IF this information should be accessible, but HOW easily people should be able to access it. My testimony never advocated general censorship or the blanket withholding of this information, only a more careful and considered approach to its distribution."

Mt. Adams UFOs are Still a Mystery

PORTLAND (KPTV) -- The Pacific Northwest is no stranger to the UFO phenomenon. For years, Mount Adams, in south central Washington, has been a hub for UFO activity.

Mount Adams is home to what some call UFOs and others call naturally occurring lights or satellites. Hundreds of people have claimed to see the lights, and one man who lives near the mountain even claims to have contact with the extraterrestrial beings who are behind the lights.

When James Gilliland built his home just outside Trout Lake, Washington, he had no idea it sat right in the middle of a UFO flight path. He and hundreds of other who frequent his 70 acre property near the mountain believe the lights are UFO's. Gilliland has recorded over 15 hours of video of the strange lights.

Gilliland also claims he has had direct contact with the inter-dimensional spiritual beings who control what he calls light ships.

"These are very advanced beings technologically, spiritually we have to rise to the occasion," said Gilliland.

Others say the strange lights are just natural occurring nocturnal geo-thermal lights or satellites. OMSI planetarian director Jim Todd, says the images on James Gilliland's video look like ordinary satellites to him.

"I can understand their excitement cause they see something moving across the stars. I've seen a lot of satellites space station shuttle and their fun to watch they really are," said Todd.

More than 30 years ago, scientists from around the country began documenting the strange light phenomenon. In 1972, "The Investigation of Nocturnal Light Phenomena at Toppensh, Washington" was released.

The report outlines several encounters, such as the following:
"The light moved so fast it gave the impression of a streak. It would appear stationary for a moment and then almost instantaneously appear some distance away."

Now, over thirty years later, there are still no clear answers to the mysterious lights, but Gilliland does say the aliens have a message for all of humanity.

"We need to clean up our consciousness. Clean up our environment and raise up and lead a spiritual way of life."

Well, well! A 100% throwback, gen-u-wine contactee, as full of B.S. as his predecessors were. "Inter-dimensional spiritual beings" eh? All noble and pure and such-like. How charming.

Hello Stephen,

You responded:

>freezer full of trout, my intentions regarding this issue were >clearly stated in my previous post.

You can opine about my comments all you wish, that is your prerogative. However, I would have appreciated some answers to some of the valid questions I asked. In lieu of the following I do understand why you didn't.

>However, intentions don't always match up with execution. I

Calling it a 'sales pitch' is not such a stretch Stephen. I'm sure that once you are able to review the program you'll agree that I didn't make any quantum leaps characterizing your presentation as a "hard sell."

>Perhaps, my frustration at seeing the political efforts toward >disclosure significantly set back by 9-11, was showing. I shall >endeavor to be more careful.

Completely understandable Stephen. I can empathize with your feelings. Don't ever take any of my critiques personally. I'm just 'calling em as I see em' and there is never anything 'personal' in that. My genuine interest and concern for how this UFO issue is handled is rooted in a very deep personal involvement with the subject, and one that I care very much about.

When it comes to "ufology" if it isn't honest, straightforward and "the best quality" - I'm on it like ugly on an ape. No matter 'who' is putting it out. Again, nothing at all personal. I'm always careful to be very specific about what I say and what I mean. How it gets interpreted by others is beyond my control.

Regards,

John Velez

Subject: Re: Rendlesham Revelation - Bruni

Since my 16 November post on UpDates, I have received some private e-mails. One List member asked me, if, in the light of new information, my publishers had decided to omit the a section that I had planned to include on the lighthouse theory in my paperback, You Can't Tell The People. If so, would I be prepared to post it on Updates.

The truth is, that I personally decided to exclude it because the new information, especially that from Halt and one of the primary witnesses, seemed to demolish the theory that it could have been a lightship, as Robert McLean now thinks.

The fact is, that Halt admitted that the red light was in the forest and when it stopped in front of him at eye level, it was a solid object. I cannot imagine that a lighthouse or a lightship for that matter, would able to fly through the sky, move in and out of the trees and hover at about five foot. Unless of course, Dr Who had anything to with it :-)

I am posting the piece that was intended for the paperback, here on Updates. This is based on Robert McLean's research into the lighthouse/lightship theory. I respect Robert's research but if you have read the paperback update, you will see why I made this decision. Apart from Halt's latest, there are so many other things to consider, such as the events that happened 100 years ago. Even if the lighthouse was around at that time, which I have not yet checked, I don't think the lightships were in operation. The other factor is that Robert has not proved anything, and for me, I'd rather go with first hand witness testimony and facts, such as the recently discovered USAF photographs of the landing site which feature ground indentations exactly like those mentioned in Halt's tape recording of the event. And let us not forget the famous memo, which describes one of the objects.

We simply must move on with the case and the sceptics should accept that the lighthouse and lightships were not responsible. After all, there is so much else to take in. One cannot just take a fraction of this huge case and spend a lifetime trying to make things fit into a theory. You must take the whole case and try to understand what the UFOs were and where they came from. That is what we need to understand.

Here then is the piece that was intended for the paperback.

It was not my intention to give more space to the tired lighthouse theory, especially as I have dedicated an entire chapter to addressing this and other sceptical claims. However, several sceptics have accused me of not dealing with these theories in detail, but it is worth mentioning that these same people have totally ignored the new evidence, which proves that the lighthouse was of no significance. But not to further disappoint those who favour the lighthouse theory, I consulted local researcher Robert McLean, who is himself somewhat of a sceptic. McLean does not believe it was a real UFO encounter and argues that the lighthouse was not the only factor, but that other terrestrial lights may have been partially involved. Just the same, he is sceptical of the traditional lighthouse theory and is of the opinion that the latter does not stand up to careful analysis.

As we know, the traditional sceptical theory is that Lieutenant Colonel Halt mistook the beam of the Orfordness lighthouse for a UFO, and followed it into the farmer's field where it can be seen to line up with the Boast house. According to McLean, the line of sight to the lighthouse, using a compass for measurement, would have been about 98 degrees. However, Halt's audio recording of the event clearly reveals that the light the patrol initially followed was about 110 or 120 degrees on the compass, and as such, the debate continues whether or not there was a 12 or 22 degree measurement error. McLean points out that a clue to the identity of this light is given by Halt on his tape, that they "made sighting again at about 110 degrees" when in the "second farmer's field". When Brenda Butler discussed the incident with Halt in 1983 he apparently mentioned that during their walk they had reached a hill where they could see a river below. Brenda thinks the location is probably that of Burrow Hill, which is about 2.5 km east of the landing sites. McLean states that the lighthouse cannot be seen from the top of Burrow Hill because trees and farm buildings block the view. But he explains that there is an unobstructed line of sight at about 115 degrees on the compass to where the Shipwash lightship was situated at the time of the incident. This was taken out of service on 25 October 1993. Charles Halt has confirmed that the patrol recognised the lighthouse, which he has described as a white light that was 30 to 35 degrees off to the right of the UFO. But McLean is of the opinion that Halt was referring to the beam of the Shipwash lightship. He has it in writing from Trinity House that the beam was indeed white and was not blanked off at any point, but was an "all around" light.

However, the implication of this, according to McLean, is that the light initially seen in the forest was also that of the Shipwash lightship, or sceptically, the light from Orfordness lighthouse, and that the UFO appeared off to the left shortly afterwards. He refers to a section on the tape where Master Sergeant Ball says "at about 11 o'clock" and "Look to the left." Followed by Sergeant Nevilles "There's two lights. One light to the right and one light to the left." McLean points out that the flash sequence of the Shipwash lightship, matches the interval of the light initially seen just as well as the regular five-second pattern of Orfordness lighthouse. Sceptic Stuart Campbell was the first to argue the lightship theory after listening to Halt's recording of the incident in the 1980s. He was also of the opinion that the flashes of the UFO were consistent with the Shipwash lightship. But McLean is certain that there was no direct view of the Shipwash lightship from the alleged landing sites because of intervening trees in Oak Wood. Only the light from Orfordness lighthouse could have been visible, however this disappears from view at a point of 126 m from the eastern edge of Rendlesham Forest. This in turn begs the question of what happened during the subsequent 2.4 km on the way to Burrow Hill, when no lighthouse or lightship could have been visible. Assuming this was the route taken, Colonel Halt's patrol would have needed to cross, or find ways around, up to ten drainage ditches on their way to Burrow Hill and not just the one ditch that he has often mentioned. It is worth pointing out that I personally came across the ditch Halt refers to, in fact I almost fell into it, and as far as I am aware, it is not in the position recognised by Robert McLean.

As a result of these difficulties McLean questions whether the location of the landing sites have been correctly identified. He suggests that if Burrow Hill were the location of the second farmer's field, then Colonel Halt's patrol would have seen the light from yet another lightship 26.5 km distant, with the odd name of Sunk. The Sunk lightship is still visible today from Burrow Hill, and would have been seen in 1980 at a magnetic heading of about 171 degrees. McLean suggests that this lightship may have been the source of the "strobe-like flashes" mentioned by Halt. I commend McLean's research and there is no doubt that he has done an excellent job of mapping and measuring the area but like Charles Halt and indeed all the witnesses, I have to argue that there is far more to this case than flashing lights from a nearby lighthouse or lightships.

Yeah, it's amazing what sprouts up and grows in the soils of a suspiciously indifferent mainstream 'science' as far from its basic tenets as any full blown aggregate net loony... but at least the net loony (...a regrettable title I've recently 'earned') is trying to go where the evidence leads him. This is forgetting, for that moment of uncomfortable but necessary conscience, that we do need to clean up our consciousness, clean up our environment, and then be graced with the time to raise up to do... something!

I've always thought that colonizing the asteroid belt was a pretty good idea. It'd get all these eggs out of one basket, for sure. And I've always been enamored with the idea of the 21st century being able to fly back down to me in the event of some cataclysmic, Velikovski-like catastrophe...

The Rendlesham Revelation!

From: Tim Matthews <TMMatthews99@aol.com>
Date: Sat, 17 Nov 2001 21:54:34 EST
Fwd Date: Sun, 18 Nov 2001 13:31:07 -0500
Subject: The Rendlesham Revelation!

STATEMENT

'BUFOSC's Tim Matthews announced today at an event held in Runcorn, Cheshire, that he had solid information that a serious leak of radioactive material had occurred at the Sizewell A nuclear power station, situated on the coast a short distance from RAF Woodbridge-Bentwaters, during the Christmas period in December 1980.

He reported that his information came from a credible source, a former manager within the nuclear industry, and from people within the anti-nuclear movement. "Leaks from Sizewell A and similar facilities were well known at the time," he said, "and continue today. the late 1970s/early 1980s have been described to me as "dark times" for the British nuclear industry."

Matthews said that he was convinced that many of the stories regarding aliens and crashed craft that emerged in East Anglia in January 1980, in some cases before the Halt Memorandum was written, were part of a deliberate smokescreen put in place by elements associated with both the nuclear industry (security) and the MOD. Matthews particularly concentrated upon stories generated by a "mystery" character, Steve Roberts, who contacted Rendlesham researchers Dot Street and Brenda Butler at the time and was the first to spread what proved to be disinformation of the worst sort.

Tim also called into question the role of Jenny Randles who, it emerged, wrote letters to the MOD in 1983 and 1984, now in his possession, offering to assist the MOD in terms of its "public relations position", to help educate the public that there was "no UFO cover up" and much, much more besides. Her private letters to the MOD and public statements were, he said, seriously at odds with each other. He said he intended to publish the Randles letters, in their entirety, at some point next week.

Eric Morris and Carolyn Buckley had, it emerged, agreed to reopen their investigation into Rendlesham after speaking to a number of witnesses to events in December 1980 featured in contemporary newspaper reports. Their testimony had not been included in later magazine articles and books on the incident. Perhaps new information might move the overall investigation forward?

Matthews also noted the interesting parallels and timing of the operations of the US Air Force Office of Special Investigations (AFOSI) in North America and the UK between 1980-1983. he said, "It is worth pointing out that, at the same time, Master Sergeant Richard Doty was spreading stories of aliens and crash retrievals around the US UFO research community. Why not do the same thing in Britain? According to Georgina Bruni, AFOSI had several operatives close to the Rendlesham Incident."

In January 1981, the exact same time the Halt Memorandum was written and Steve Roberts first came forward, a Public Enquiry, subsequently chaired by Sir Frank Layfield, into the construction of a second, controversial, nuclear plant at Sizewell (Sizewell B) was announced. At the most crucial time of the enquiry, held between 1983 and 1985, the massively exaggerated mass media reporting of the supposed "alien crash landing and UFO retrieval" began in earnest. October 2nd, 1983, saw the first report in the News of the World newspaper which, according to staff at the MOD, "stirred up a hornet's nest" and which, Matthews added, possibly directed people away from the truth behind the events of December 1980...

In another coincidence, a "whistleblower" and peace activist, Hilda Murrell, said to have vital information on actual and potential leaks from UK nuclear facilities, and who had written a damning report on the subject that later vanished, died under mysterious circumstances in March 1984.

One writer described the Murrell situation as follows: "At the time she died, Hilda Murrell was writing a paper to present at the Sizewell [B] Enquiry. To do this, she had been in contact with other people in CND and the anti-nuclear movement. She had been helped by Don Arnott, an anti-nuclear campaigner living in Wales. Arnott believes he was under surveillance and harassment by the security forces. Most damning here is the anxious phone call Hilda Murrell made just a few weeks before her death, to her friends, Gerard and Fern Morgan-Grenville, to tell them she believed her own life to be in danger."

The truth, said Matthews, was that between 1980-1983 Cold War paranoia, the stationing of Cruise missiles at UK bases and the failings of the nuclear industry were all political hot potatoes. He said that the intelligence services were working overtime to keep a lid on possible leaks of information and on the situation in general. Perhaps the hapless UFO community might be a useful target for disinformation?

Tim added that an unusual, albeit genuine looking "hoax" document, revealing information on a claimed "contact" scenario involving alien beings "of 1 1/2 metres in height" and US Air Force personnel, written on headed Ministry of Defence notepaper, had made its way into the 150 page Rendlesham File recently released to BUFOSC and others. The MOD, it emerged, "had no idea" where the document came from, despite the fact that it seems to have been internally generated. Was this document used to mislead UFO researchers back in the early 1980s or was the information contained therein a template for subsequent disinformation? It would seem so...

All in all, there is much to research and many new leads to follow. Tim Matthews is not claiming to have anything like all the answers but this new information requires us to reconsider the events of December 1980.'

Another Weird Crater...

The image above shows what appears to be a crater surrounded by concentric rings, perhaps caused by the shock of the impact. But the nature of the impacting object - assuming this is a meteoric crater - is mysterious. The caldera is interestingly "leveled," much like a large-scale mining operation on Earth. The center of the formation consists of bright, rectilinear furrows, and the right "wall" of the crater appears unnaturally ruler-straight. One does not typically expect craters to exhibit "straightness." Although Mars' erosion can certainly produce interesting effects that suggest artificial construction, the crater above (looking somewhat like a "bootprint") seems well-preserved. That the narrow concentric rings are visible at all implies that this crater appears much as it did when it was formed. That is, of course, assuming it's a crater...

Dear Richard Hall, List and Errol,

This just in. Film with sound, at eleven. From the Canal Street UFoological Society and etc...

NOCTURNAL LIGHTS LOCATED AND FOUND TO BE DUE TO NOCTURNAL EMISSIONS

Dick, I hope you don't mind me calling you Dick, Dr. G. just completed his night work up there in ... uh ... wherever, and decided that you are quite incorrect as to the BS. Fortunately however, the emissions did come from the same body, just from the other end.

The nocturnal lights had been defined as swamp gas, then later as pelicans. But now, after testing his new vines on the fresh wine, Gesundt has determine beyond a shadow and further even than that, that nocturnal emissions will look like nocturnal lights if and ONLY if, fresh NightTime wine from Canal Street vines are drunk before having them.

Then, they glow and flit here and there, back and to, and even fro even. So the next time you see nocturnal lights, look for a man (or lady) drinking themselves into a stupid. And make sure that stuff is Gripple NightTime Fresh or it MAY be a UFO.

Thanks, and happy notcurnal emissions to you all. I am sorry, I meant to write "nocturnal," I just had a slug. Whew! It's damned hot in here ain't it?

Morty for Docca Gesundt

The Devil You Say

From: Christopher Kelly <tophar@iprimus.com.au>
Date: Sun, 18 Nov 2001 14:44:13 +1100
Fwd Date: Sun, 18 Nov 2001 13:39:29 -0500
Subject: The Devil You Say

Dear list and readers,

I think psychologist would agree with me when I say, the events surrounding Cooper is enough for a case study into paranoia and its effects on the human mind.

I can however sympathise somewhat with Cooper; it wasn't all that long ago that the penny dropped for me in regards to the UFO mystery or what I thought are the facts. I, back then wanted to rush out and tell the whole world. There is even the odd UFO researcher out there that can testify to this from the letters I would send them. The poor Nexus magazine here in Australia bore most of the brunt of my frustrations, small wonder they never replied to any of them.

Why I thought this was so important to tell the world isn't totally clear to this humble man, but it was the worst period of my life. It was as if I would die by drowning if I didn't tell the world or warn them. So I can see a little of Cooper's frustration's in me or a little of the way I used to feel when I am reading about Cooper.

So, in light of this recent demise and the fact that this will probably not be the last, I am embarking on a mission to bring to us researchers the kind of data we have been longing for. It is an ambitious idea to say the least, so I expect much criticism from all quarters, most notably NASA. At first I was thinking to keep the whole idea to myself and try and get it off the ground, but it is after all an idea to benefit all researchers, also just in case it is a good idea and I am unable to see it thought. Someone else just might.

My idea is a simple one, first a company is set up and shares are sold at a set rate. Only 20% of the shares will be aloud for-sale in any given country, this is to stop the data being monopolised and not being shared around fairly. Once enough shares are sold a second hand satellite is purchased from Russia and refitted with as much state of the art equipment and cameras as the budget will aloud.

Russia has a number of rockets sitting around just waiting to be used. So launching the satellite isn't as big a problem as one might think. There are three good-sized radio telescopes here in Australia and the Russia that are free for use, so collecting data isn't a big problem. The satellite would not be aloud to orbit Earth as NASA ECT would start screaming blue murder saying we are spying on them.

But the satellite would be free to travel to the moon so we can get a better idea about what is on the far side and then it can travel off to Mars so people like Mac Tonnies and others could finally get their teeth into so REAL DATA to analyse. Well, at least they would be free to look to areas of greater interest and study them more closely and freely.

There are lots of problems still to be sorted out before getting something like this off the ground I know, but I think it is a workable idea or at the very least heading in the right direction. The governments of the world have been dictating what we see and hear and what we are aloud to know for far to long, they say this is done in/for our best interest? I think or I know I'm not alone in disputing this. Maybe it is time to take the bull by the horns and see what is what for ourselves.

Money could be recouped from selling our findings/imagines and research information to TV net works ECT, which would raise the value of the shares and give shareholders and/or the company a return or more funds to build and send up better satellites/equipment to greaten our research abilities.

I don't know how laws regarding companies work in other countries, but here in Australia if it is a profit free company there is very little tax payable, but seeing the cost of getting something like this up and running, I don't think this will be a path we need to look at. It would be some years before we started showing a profit worth taxing.

I'm a little tried with a bad head cold at the moment so I am not going into this with as much detail as I would like, though I am very interested in hearing what others here think about such an idea?

Also would we get away with it? I have visions of an unnamed party taking over control of all satellite dishes here in Australia and wherever else they can to stop us, which is why other counties being involved would be helpful here. Russia is quite open minded about things like this and would also welcome the money I dare say. Plus their experience would be invaluable in getting the satellite up and headed in the right direction. Technology/Computers and programs are such now days that once it was up we wouldn't have to much trouble in making sure it did what it was programmed to do. Guess this is a case of technology coming back to hunt those whom are trying to keep us clueless.

OK that is about all I can handle for the moment, it is a beautiful day outside and I am stuck inside with a head-cold I wouldn't wish on my worst enemy.

Enjoy the light show tonight everyone and watch out for falling pieces LOL.

Cheers Tophar.

Subject: Phillip Krapf on SDI

Hello All,

Just wanted to say how much I enjoyed hearing Mr. Phillip Krapf on 'Strange Days... Indeed', Saturday night. We may not share the same 'take' on the 'visitors' and their 'intentions' but he came across as an open, straightforward and sincere person.

It takes courage for a person to come forward publicly and deliver a report of their own experiences to their incredulous peers. There is no one way to interpret the range of contact experiences that are reported by so many individuals from all over the globe. His account is an interesting addition to the body of reports already in hand.

I also like that he expressed that he wasn't interested in convincing anyone of anything. That he is only reporting what has happened to him. Sharing the same feeling myself, I concur and completely understand where he is coming from. I welcome the addition of his voice to the "chorus" and I tip my hat to Mr. Krapf for an open and well made presentation of his own experiences.

Regards,

John Velez , Ambassador number 444 ;)

There is a typo in once place in yesterday's statement that should read, 'January 1981' not 1980. Sorry, that's what happens when you write at 3am in the morning!

I made a copy of Ecker's piece available to Senator Thurmond's chief of staff, and a few days ago, I received in return copies of several very interesting items. One of these is the release form in the senator's office file, on which ALL the blanks in text are, well, blank. No "undersigned," no "author," but, most important, no book title, not even the generic "Roswell Book." This clearly is the same form reproduced in UFO, as the senator's signature and date of signing match--but it is as it was when the original left the senator's office, BEFORE someone (gee, wonder who?) typed in "Roswell Book." Hmmm...

Along with this revealing document, I received the complete outline for I Walked With Giants, wherein nary a word about UFOs or Roswell (incident or town) is found. A perusal of this outline and a reading of the senator's foreword leave no doubt in any reasonable mind that the latter was intended for the outlined proposed memoir, not the ufoological (NOT a typo) wet dream to which it was appropriated. Other than the inclusion of many of the non-UFO-connected tall tales and pulp-fiction prose that appeared in and animated TDAR, the only resemblance between the proposed book and what finally saw print is Corso's Walter Mittyish ego strutting across the pages.

Also included in the package were the senator's June 5, 1997, press release about the matter ("Right Foreword, Wrong Book"), and his June 11, 1997, letter to Simon & Schuster Deputy General Counsel Eric Raymond, demanding the removal of his misappropriated foreword from TDAR.

I will not engage in further debate on this matter, on this list or in any other forum, but will be glad to provide copies of any or all of these documents to anyone who's interested enough to cover the cost of copying and mailing. Those who'd like the full details of the Right Foreword, Wrong Book Caper, will find them in chapter 16 of my book. Oh, and for what should be a last laugh, don't miss the hilarious transcript of Paola Harris' July 5, 1997, interview with Corso in the Nov.-Dec. 2001 NEXUS New Times magazine (pp. 59-60; website: www.nexusmagazine.com), wherein you'll find babblings that were too goofy even for TDAR.

First I want to thank Kevin for his thorough and constructive reply to me.

>What we need to do, as I agree, and in fact I think we need full transcripts (and if possible audio and video tapes) of researchers' interviews with abductees. There are serious privacy issues, though. Many abductees would never talk to researchers if they thought their material would be shown to others.

>>What does he mean by "archetypal structure of an abduction"?

>I believe this is just a fancy way of saying "the abduction >experience."

But what aspect of the experience? John does have his fancy ways of talking, but it's important here to know, again, if he means the things abductees say happen to them, or the overall meaning they give to those things.

>All true, but remember, contrary to what has been reported in >other quarters, we did interview Hopkins and Mack on video tape.
>Not to mention listening to their lectures, listening to their >radio appearances, watching them on documentaries and reading >material through our own filters and put our own spin on the >writings and lectures, have seen this "matching" of experimenter >to researcher.

In the end, I think there's no substitute for knowing the abductees who work with a given researcher. You need to spend time with them, and spend time watching the researcher work with them, both one on one and in groups. That way you begin to see what the relationships might be, in a way you never can from interviews or any of the other sources Kevin mentions.

For instance, I've known abductees who've worked with Budd for a number of years, and still disagree with him on the meaning of the phenomenon. They'd be in what's perceived as John Mack's camp, even though they keep going to Budd's support group meetings (very rare these days) and public seminars. I've known a couple who went both to Budd's events, and to those of a more new-agey abduction group in New York. Some have worked with both

Budd and John Mack. Lately, he may have burned his bridges with some of them -- but that, it's interesting to see, wasn't by trying to change their opinions of abductions. It was by criticizing Stephen Greer, who some of these more new-age abductees apparently revere.

Of course, this is just anecdotal reportage on my part. But I really think you have to be there -- to observe these things first hand -- before you can even begin to grasp what's going on. I wouldn't doubt, for instance, that Budd influences the views of many of the abductees he works with. But how, exactly, does that occur?

Last night I was at one of the monthly seminars the Intruders Foundation holds. "Seminar" is maybe not quite the right word -- these are informal lectures, open to the public, where someone speaks about UFOs or abductions. On this occasion, an abductee who'd worked with Budd many years ago was talking about his experiences. He was a very grounded man in, I'd guess, his early sixties, very factual in the way he described what he said were his experiences.

Budd stood near the lectern with him, in a perfect position to dominate the proceedings, had he wanted to. At one point someone from the audience asked this abductee, "Do you think the aliens have our interest at heart, or their own?" "I don't know," said the man, in a completely relaxed, impartial tone. "Maybe a little of both"

Budd didn't say a word, and that was all we heard about the subject. Budd's only major intervention in the proceedings was, at another point, to tell a perfectly awful joke. (Anyone who knows him won't be surprised to hear that.) Obviously, the abductee's answer I've quoted didn't reflect his own views, but he didn't jump in to "correct" the answer, or to establish what he felt to be the truth.

For whatever it's worth, that's how I've observed him almost all the time I've watched him work with abductees. In my experience, he discourages discussion of the aliens' motives, because he feels it's only speculation. At his support group meetings (there might, in the time I've known him, have been three or four a year, at most), he mostly encourages abductees to express their feelings, and often their doubts (even about the reality of the phenomenon). That's what he seems to think the support groups are there -- to help abductees deal with their feelings about abductions, and not to develop any ideas about what the phenomenon really means.

How, then, does he influence abductees' opinions? The process is clearly much more subtle than any theories or assumptions about it I've ever read. I'd suggest one way in which it might work -- abductees who feel angry or frightened about their abductions are more likely to get a hearing than those who feel positive. This is because anger and fear are, apparently, much more common than awe or delight when abductees first explore their experiences. I've even heard John Mack and people in his group say that. They'll explain that abductees have to work through negative feelings before they can accept what Mack and his people believe is the truth.

Besides, abductees who feel angry or frightened have raw feelings, easily understood. They don't have to theorize about what's going on. They just say, "I felt frightened because I was helpless. And I was angry because I felt used." Abductees who feel positive usually feel that way because they have theories. "Yes, I was frightened, but I thought the aliens were here to do us good." And as I've said, that kind of discussion is discouraged. Equally, abductees wouldn't be encouraged to say, "I felt used, and that's because the aliens only care about themselves." That, too, would be speculation, and wouldn't be a popular line of thought at Budd's groups. (Believe it or not, but that's what I've observed.) The point, in any case, is that you don't have to theorize to explain why you feel negative emotions, so those are easier to express.

Thus, you tend to hear and express unpleasant memories of the experience when you work on abductions with Budd. That, conceivably, could influence you to form a negative opinion of what's going on -- though I have to say that I didn't observe that going on. A cautious, balanced "who knows?" opinion seemed more common among the people I've known. (The man from last night's seminar is a pretty typical example.) We'd be underestimating these abductees, in any case, if we thought they weren't capable of forming opinions on their own, away from Budd and his sessions. Which is exactly what many of them have done, and the opinions might be nothing like Budd's. They just don't regard Budd's sessions as a place for figuring out what it all means.

>So, what you're suggesting is that we are getting the spin of >the researchers and not necessarily what the abductees say >during their sessions. That we need access to all the raw data >so that we can learn what all has been said.

Absolutely!

>However, it has been my experience that abduction researchers >are not as open with their records as we would like. When, for >example, we attempted a survey to find out how many abductees >reported a precipitating event that mirrored sleep paralysis, we >didn't even receive the courtesy of a response to the question >from the various researchers that we queried.

>Yes, I know that some of these records must be protected, and >that some of the data are gathered in confidence, but to >understand the whole, we need to see the pieces. In the end, >we're left drawing the information from their books, their >lectures, their TV and radio appearances, and the video taped >sessions that they provided for us.

This is unfortunately true. I think Budd and Dave Jacobs should each write one book in which the raw material is more faithfully preserved. One alternative, as I suggest, is to spend a lot of time with the abductees in question. But there are also big questions of privacy there, and of course questions about access. I only got access because I was seen as friendly, supportive, and discreet. That hasn't stopped me from being critical, but a proclaimed skeptic would probably have a harder time getting access, no matter how open-minded and honest he or she truly was.

On the other hand, people from one of the big cable networks have been spending a lot of time at Budd's events lately, and in the past other TV shows were able to (including NOVA, which didn't use the access very intelligently). I know a therapist who's an abduction skeptic, and still came to at least a few support group meetings. So it may be that an outsider who was sympathetic -- without necessarily believing abductions are real -- could get much of the access I had. Trust is the key issue, and in my experience it's not necessary to be a believer to earn that trust.

>Which is all well and good, but doesn't answer the point that >Mack and Jacobs have made... that there is a matching of >experiencer with with investigator. Instead, we are presented >with a flawed argument for the reality of abduction rather than >provided with all the data to make an informed decision.

>And by flawed arguments, I mean that if the researcher is >eliminating the information that doesn't conform to his or her >beliefs, then any conclusion we draw from the published body of >evidence, from the lectures and interviews will be flawed. Not >that the abduction experience itself is flawed, only the >conclusion drawn about the work of a specific research is >flawed.

I'd put it a little differently -- that we're not in a position to know whether it's flawed or not. the presentation is flawed; the research may not be. (Though Sue Strickland has a very good point about research and support to some extent contradicting each other, which Kevin also makes later in his post.)

>Actually, when we move into some of the therapeutic arenas, we >do see that the therapists belief structures begin to take over
>and that allegations of abuse, for example, might be more >consistent with the therapist's view of the world than the >client's. That is not to say that all therapists implant their >views on their clients, but to say that some do. The >psychological literature is full of examples and both "He Who >Shall Remain Nameless" and Edith Fiore lost their licenses >because they did implant their belief structures on their >clients.

Yes, of course it goes on, and the history of the past decade or so with allegations of sexual abuse (some of them prompted by incompetent therapists) demonstrates how true this is.

On the other hand, I think it's easy to overstate how common this is. The standard experience in psychotherapy is that people learn what their feelings really are. You don't need to be facing something gigantic like sexual or spousal abuse for this to happen. All you need is to be unhappy. Very likely you're not facing up to what you feel in some everyday situation like your job or your marriage. In the process of therapy, you begin to straighten yourself out. It's not yet proved that what abductees do with Dave Jacobs is essentially any different from that.

Hello Greg and Kevin,

A very interesting post.

The purpose of group therapy is to help people with (in this case) common experiences live normal lives.

Perceived abductees do not refer to the people responsible for their presence in the group?

It would be very surprising that any group therapist would refuse such a connection. After all, the victim's hope resides in resolving the issue with the tormentor. Anger and despair stem from helplessness: the soul topples over the edge when you surrender your fate to the torturer.

The key is you and the SOB responsible for your feelings, the link between the two of you, the recalled abject submission you couldn't help to feel and, somewhere deep inside, the guilty need to do it again.

I believe anything should go if it leads to some serenity. If hating aliens or loving them give you this edge, go for it.

But discourage any attempt to get a grasp on your reality?

Hair raising.

Regards,

Serge Salvaille

I agree Mac, it doesn't have the tell tail signs of a classic impact, the hole isn't round, no signs of fall-out from the impact, the surrounding mountain seems totally unaffected if it is an impact crater, which really shouldn't be the case.

To me it looks very much like a sink hole, after I was at you site looking at the second crater you have there and then going to have a look at the link to the 'Investigating the Allegations of Indian Nuclear Test Preparations in the Rajasthan Desert'. I too started to wonder if these craters might have been made by a large explosions; the first one could have been made by an large explosion beneath it.

Very interesting.

I still think that Mars was inhabited at one stage, but it seems something went wrong, very wrong. I'm still in two minds as to weather or not it was a Natural disaster or a man made one (So to speak) I wouldn't be surprised one little bit if it turned out the ET's that are hanging around here on Earth are from Mars and moved into space because of a disaster of some kind, those with the money and the technology went into space and the rest made a mad dash for Earth the best way they could as I feel they would have known a disaster was on the way. Maybe Noahs ark was an space ark.

Cheers

Chris

Hi John and listeners of Errol's SDI.

While listening to Phillip Krapf I had some very different and less generous adjectives to yours come to my mind about this person. I was certainly surprised and found it strange to hear Phillip speaking about his alleged E.T. alien encounters on Errol's UFO radio show.

>It takes courage for a person to come forward publicly and

Yes, it is an interesting addition to the growing body of direct alien contact accounts but I thought his UFO story and views were more in harmony with that of the most dubious UFO contactees and even old Star Trek episodes.

>I also like that he expressed that he wasn't interested in

For someone who has contributed so little of substance towards furthering our understanding of UFOs or E.T. Life and who does not even know what he really thinks about his alleged UFO experiences, Phillip already has two books out on this subject, with further installments on the way!

Assuming that this Phillip is not just another Corso, the only conclusions I could come to without discarding any of his unsupportable testimony is that the very human-looking extraterrestrials he claims to have encountered (including the female alien who has taken a special liking to him) are more likely to be ultraterrestrials (mischievous fairies, lying demons, etc. - if one believes in such things) or possibly even an officially sanctioned disinformation plot.

More Baloney Detection

How to draw boundaries between science and pseudoscience, Part II

By Michael Shermer

[Michael Shermer is founding publisher of Skeptic magazine
(www.skeptic.com) and author of The Borderlands of Science.]

When exploring the borderlands of science, we often face a "boundary problem" of where to draw the line between science and pseudoscience. The boundary is the line of demarcation between geographies of knowledge, the border defining countries of claims. Knowledge sets are fuzzier entities than countries, however, and their edges are blurry. It is not always clear where to draw the line. Last month I suggested five questions to ask about a claim to determine whether it is legitimate or baloney. Continuing with the baloney-detection questions, we see that in the process we are also helping to solve the boundary problem of where to place a claim.

6. Does the preponderance of evidence point to the claimant's conclusion or to a different one? The theory of evolution, for example, is proved through a convergence of evidence from a number of independent lines of inquiry. No one fossil, no one piece of biological or paleontological evidence has "evolution" written on it; instead tens of thousands of evidentiary bits add up to a story of the evolution of life. Creationists conveniently ignore this confluence, focusing instead on trivial anomalies or currently unexplained phenomena in the history of life.

7. Is the claimant employing the accepted rules of reason and tools of research, or have these been abandoned in favor of others that lead to the desired conclusion? A clear distinction can be made between SETI (Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence) scientists and UFOlogists. SETI scientists begin with the null hypothesis that ETIs do not exist and that they must provide concrete evidence before making the extraordinary claim that we are not alone in the universe. UFOlogists begin with the positive hypothesis that ETIs exist and have visited us, then employ questionable research techniques to support that belief, such as hypnotic regression (revelations of abduction experiences), anecdotal reasoning (countless stories of UFO sightings), conspiratorial thinking (governmental cover-ups of alien encounters), low-quality visual evidence (blurry photographs and grainy videos), and anomalistic thinking (atmospheric anomalies and visual misperceptions by eyewitnesses).

8. Is the claimant providing an explanation for the observed phenomena or merely denying the existing explanation? This is a classic debate strategy--criticize your opponent and never affirm what you believe to avoid criticism. It is next to impossible to get creationists to offer an explanation for life (other than "God did it"). Intelligent Design (ID) creationists have done no better, picking away at weaknesses in scientific explanations for difficult problems and offering in their stead "ID did it." This stratagem is unacceptable in science.

9. If the claimant proffers a new explanation, does it account for as many phenomena as the old explanation did? Many HIV/AIDS skeptics argue that lifestyle causes AIDS. Yet their alternative theory does not explain nearly as much of the data as the HIV theory does. To make their argument, they must ignore the diverse evidence in support of HIV as the causal vector in AIDS while ignoring the significant correlation between the rise in AIDS among hemophiliacs shortly after HIV was inadvertently introduced into the blood supply.

10. Do the claimant's personal beliefs and biases drive the conclusions, or vice versa? All scientists hold social, political and ideological beliefs that could potentially slant their interpretations of the data, but how do those biases and beliefs affect their research in practice? Usually during the peer-review system, such biases and beliefs are rooted out, or the paper or book is rejected.

Clearly, there are no foolproof methods of detecting baloney or drawing the boundary between science and pseudoscience. Yet there is a solution: science deals in fuzzy fractions of certainties and uncertainties, where evolution and big bang cosmology may be assigned a 0.9 probability of being true, and creationism and UFOs a 0.1 probability of being true. In between are borderland claims: we might assign superstring theory a 0.7 and cryonics a 0.2. In all cases, we remain open-minded and flexible, willing to reconsider our assessments as new evidence arises. This is, undeniably, what makes science so fleeting and frustrating to many people; it is, at the same time, what makes science the most glorious product of the human mind.

'Abduction in My Life' - Review

Abduction In My Life
by Bruce Maccabee

Review by Mac Tonnies

Dr. Bruce Maccabee's 'Abduction in My Life' is a part-fiction, part-fact overview of the UFO phenomenon written from the perspective of an incredulous science fiction writer. While Maccabee's treatise-written-as-a-novel may fail somewhat as a piece of literature (the characters are basically props on which to erect the author's ufological insights), 'Abduction in My Life' succeeds wonderfully in introducing the reader to the bizarre world of UFO sightings and the implications of contact with nonhuman intelligence. A crisply written nonfiction book is interwoven in Maccabee's narrative, nicely complimenting the fictional abduction investigated by the protagonist.

Maccabee saves the best for the final chapter, in which Maccabee's alter-ego (?) Dr. Mac Sargent takes us on a first-rate ontological crash-course, framing the UFO/alien problem in its cosmic and societal contexts. Do we dare admit the presence of alien craft in our skies? What does the UFO phenomenon tell us about our species' past? Will homo sapiens survive the next millennium? Such questions form the heart of this book. Maccabee's speculations are sanely presented and mentally invigorating. 'Abduction in My Life' is a brisk yet erudite introduction to the subject of alien contact.

While Shermer put in no qualifiers here, he is apparently stating that:

1) The vast majority of SETI people proceed from the null hypothesis that there is no intelligent life anywhere out there.

2) The overwhelming majority of ufologists take the position that ETI do indeed exist, AND that the ETs have come here to visit us.

I'm sure this belief/position/opinion is taken by a great many ufologists, but I would not count myself among them.

Assuming ET has discovered Earth somehow, and being so advanced, would send intelligent robotic/cybernetic probes; baffling as those might be.

Others would argue for beings or machines from "other dimensions", or perhaps time-travel and so forth. A few would argue for religious phenomena, but lets not get into that.

How about a straw poll? I'll cast the first vote if nobody beats me to it:

* Are there other intelligent beings elsewhere in the cosmos, perhaps within our own galaxy of billions of stars? I would vote yes with a 99% likelihood. Your vote? _____

* Have living beings from other stars come here in the flesh (muck, protoplasm, tentacles or whatever) ? I would vote no. Seems dumb to me, see above. Your vote? _____

(Now I would like but I don't know how) to ask a large representative group of SETI people, against whom I bear no rancor really, to tell us whether they indeed proceed from the assumption that humankind is alone in the universe, in term of thinking rational beings .. capable of asking these very questions.

Maybe they would prefer to speak for themselves; I'm sure the UFO people would.

Best wishes

- Larry Hatch

PS: I rather agree with the rest of Shermer's presentation, odd as that might seem. -LH

Conventional Wisdom For Feebz, Dweebz, And NCC's

From: Alfred Lehmborg <Lehmborg@snowhill.com>

Conventional Wisdom for Feebz, Dweebz, and NCC's

There's a lot of myopic griping from the ufological luminary about Ufology not deserving its identification as a breeding ground for nitwits, crackpots, and cuckoos (NCCs). And there's lately been considerable moaning about its infestation of same. To this end, NCC's are arbitrarily identified by, largely, self appointed and ax grinding gatekeepers in a badly approached attempt to clean their ufological temple of that undisciplined dross and intemperate corruption... yea and verily...

But what about the provenance of that so-called dross? Where does it come from? What compels the corruption and the foolishness?

To be sure, this conjectured foolishness is the result of bald ignorance. On that point this writer would agree with the most strident skeptibunky. Where the SB and this writer diverge is that the SB won't cop to the awful expansiveness of that ignorance. He won't admit the contrived enormity of it... It is an ignorance of wide horizons, encompassing many disciplines, and it is corrosively pervasive in ways so smooth and reflexive that its mechanisms are all but undetectable.

Is it an ignorance of design? The short answer is yes. We are nationally programmed to have a predicted feeling given a specific stimulus and that programming is very busily engineered by a media firmly controlled by interests assuredly not our own, to grind axes, predictably, not in our interest.

The aforementioned skeptibunky sees that ignorance as self-induced and holds the ignorant individual accountable for their own ignorance. They reason that it is a bed that the ignorant himself has insensibly made, despite the SB's 'solid' information to the (oh so convenient) contrary. Enter the fallacy of "Conventional Wisdom", and the believable possibility that Americans, in particular, are very carefully conditioned to believe all the wrong things to buttress a short-sighted bottom line.

Tim O'Shea, recently featured on the Rense site at www.rense.com/general12/believe.htm, makes a pretty good case for a kind of artfully crafted 'common' sense that rewards the few as it plunders the many - at least as it pertains to health, the health system, and the practice of medicine in the United States. This writer asks: why stop at that institution?

If an institution with the hoary mantle of presumed integrity like 'Medicine' can be so thoroughly corrupted and embroiled in conspiracy, why can't ANY institution be corrupted just as thoroughly for similar reasons? A recent paper I've completed attempts to demonstrate the potentiality for ready utilization of ANY opportunity empowering the 'few' to take criminal advantage of the 'many', if it is profitably possible to do so <<http://www.rense.com/general7/socio.htm>>. Isn't the study of UFOs just such an institution ripe for a similar abuse?

O'Shea quotes from 'Trust Us We're Experts', written by Stauber and Rampton. It is a textbook on the history of molding public opinion, and it clearly demonstrates the seriously unethical (and many times criminal lengths) that corporate entities (among other organizations of easy conspiracy) have gone to in the unethically passionate bid to control their contrary bottom lines.

"Conventional Wisdom" is at issue. Legitimate questions can be asked to challenge that "Conventional Wisdom" is any kind of 'wisdom' at all... In other words, 'Common Sense' assumed, presumed, and consumed since the cradle might be something less than the efficacious best move that it is too reflexively thought to be. Are rank and file Americans patsies in a cruel shell game of subtle, and not so subtle, manipulations? Yes, again. These manipulations are exposed so frequently, even in a whorish mainstream press, that they require no citation.

UFOs, an understanding of which might truly raise human beings to a new quantum level, are a subject, then, likely to be a target of the manipulations O'Shea describes. UFOs touch on all the levels illustrating the complete human condition. Their affectations cover the sociological, implicate the psychological, and dictate the resistance of a current power elite to any reduction of ignorance regarding it!

The truth is, many times, an amanita to the corporate bottom line. Consider the story of Erin Brockovich... Truth has no respect for stockholders and has no regard for their future's prediction of mere profit and loss...

The truth is out there. That's the problem, the ever present threat to the suspect status quo, and a hanging sword of unending concern for the powers that be...

Where is the evidence that a Ufological institution might be subject to related manipulations referenced in Stauber and Rampton? If there is such evidence, is it no less convincing than the programming Americans have endured in other venues (regarding distortion of the truth for self serving ends)? Pardon the digression, but if this writer were to perform socially in a similar manner (?), he would be rightfully accused of fraud and sent to jail.

Evidence abounds, actually. To limit the scope and the length of this essay we will snapshot the contributions of one pioneering ufologist as seemingly far from kookdom as it is possible get and still maintain a balanced interest in UFOs. This man was Dr. Josef Allen Hynek, an astronomer of considerable credibility with brother and sister scientists all over the world.

Dr. Hynek was, and remained throughout his life, a true scientist. The reader might ask what a true scientist is. It is a question simply answered. A true scientist goes where the data leads despite personal concerns, personal desires, or the destruction of personal beliefs. For a real scientist, it is the truth that is sought... though heaven falls...

Dr. Hynek was hired as a likely ringer by a government agency, ostensibly to get to the bottom of the Flying Saucer Situation (FSS) by matching UFO sighting reports with explainable atmospheric and celestial events. The only problem was that the aforementioned agency received its marching orders from a jealous institution of the powers that... were... - personages that had begun to cop to the next-level implications of a real understanding regarding the FSS...

It was not at all clear, you see, that the "powers that were" would continue to officiate in a world of 'new' understanding... It was a condition identical to the one faced now by the "powers that 'are'." Dr. Hynek might help, as Dr. Menzel had (a skeptibunky of the first water), to shoot this unsettling UFO thing down...

Pursuant to a Top Secret clearance, Dr. Hynek endured an interview with the aforementioned agency, and had to answer some odd questions. He was a no nonsense scholar with impeccable credentials who, when asked to express his opinion on the subject of UFO's, said that he thought UFOs were nonsense... He did think they were nonsense. Demonstrating that (perhaps preferred?) personal bias, he was hired.

Here are his own words:

"During this entire period of nearly twenty years I have attempted to remain as open-minded in this subject as circumstances permitted, this despite the fact that the whole subject seemed utterly ridiculous, and many of us firmly believed that, like some fad or craze, it would subside in a matter of months."

And:

"In 1948, I was asked by the U.S. Air Force to serve as a scientific consultant on the increasing number of reports of strange lights in the sky. I was then Director of the Astronomical Observatory of Ohio State University, and am now the Chairman of the Astronomy Department at Northwestern. I had scarcely heard of UFOs in 1948 and, like every other scientist I knew, assumed that they were nonsense."

Dr. Hynek was privately confident, even while he was professionally open-minded, that a detailed scientific examination of the Flying Saucer phenomena would shred these UFO's up like tissues in a tropical typhoon. But unsettlingly, as the reports came in and he involved himself with their undeniable details, his initially easy confidence began to fade:

"Despite the seeming inanity of the subject, I felt that I would be derelict in my scientific responsibility to the Air Force if I did not point out that the whole UFO phenomenon might have aspects to it worthy of scientific attention."

As his private confidence faded Dr. Hynek reluctantly transitioned into that rarest of ufological beasts. He began to become a convert...

"All of this increased my own concern and sense of personal responsibility and motivated me to urge the initiation of a meaningful scientific investigation of the UFO phenomenon by physical and social scientists. I had guardedly raised this suggestion in the past and at various official hearings, but with little success. UFO was a term that called forth buffoonery and caustic banter precisely because scientists paid no attention to the raw data - the reports themselves."

...and then found himself saddled with some of the aspects of a rank believer:

"Still, on the average, if several pilots and/or policemen concur on the main points of the story, particularly if the duration of their experience was long enough (a matter of minutes rather than seconds) to have brought their judgement into play, it is difficult to brush aside their seemingly hardheaded testimony. And when one gets reports from scientists, engineers and technicians whose credibility by all common standards is high and whose moral caliber seems to preclude a hoax, one can do no less than hear them out, in all seriousness."

Additionally:

"As a scientist, I must be mindful of the lessons of the past; all too often it has happened that matters of great value to science were overlooked because the new phenomenon simply did not fit the accepted scientific outlook of the time. I cannot dismiss the UFO phenomenon with a shrug. I have begun to feel that there is a tendency in 20th Century science to forget that there will be a 21st Century science, and indeed a 30th Century science, from which vantage points our knowledge of the universe may appear quite different than it does to us. We suffer, perhaps, from temporal provincial-ism, a form of arrogance that has always ir-ritated posterity"

Dr Hynek, among significant others, was an obvious portal of ufological respectability that the mainstream consciously, and with arbitrary malice of forethought, took pains to avoid. The mainstream, then as now, preferred ridicule to seriousness, mockery to earnestness, and active scorn to productive investigation. Why?

Dr. Hynek was an EARLY indicator of the validity of the UFO phenomenon, its veracity as a fulcrum of scientific advancement, and finally, its portentous reality. Dr. Hynek made it abundantly clear that UFOs were real, operated in a manner that was not consistent with anything man made, and, moreover, he demonstrated that quality people from all walks of life and station... from general officers to general contractors... thought so, too.

Quality people have always thought there was something to unidentified flying objects. It is only a jealous and intransigent mainstream that paints a ufological interest as the domain of green toothed trailer dwellers - the inappropriately maligned feebs, dweebs and NCCs... unfortunate individuals that, bad as they are, are still better than their skeptibunky detractors because they're at least trying to go where the data leads!

The reader is cautioned that it is not an unfortunate infestation of the ufological temple that is the issue. Rather: it is the suspected abundance of quality data that cannot be accessed by researchers of any type. It is the sullen recalcitrance and lack of general forthcomingness of closed institutions that encourages the actions of these confused NCCs who must surely (and conveniently for the establishment) take deconstructive advantage of their inexplicable informational void... And it is, finally, the lack of collegiality of the current crop of investigators, their professional snobbery, selfishness, and ego (plus their credulously dotting appreciation for that dotting mainstream 'science' that does not appreciate them) that keeps the subject of UFOs in the Sargasso sea of tepidly complacent indifference presently endured.

UFOs are real, they have always been real, and they will continue to be real. It is the establishment's concern for a convenient status quo that makes the arbitrary decision to dismiss the ufological as a province of gullible fools, weak minded new-agers, and credulous revisionists. It is not the current crop of NCC's that keeps UFOs in an informational limbo; they're a logical reaction to that suspicious informational void... It is, rather, the mechanism of a duplicitous mainstream that keeps them in ubiquitous shadows for perfectly predicable reasons all its own.

Dear Listers,

I would like to debate each of Michael Shermer's statements in his article, 'More Baloney Detection'. However, for brevity's sake, I have chosen to point out only his first big boo-boo, on which he bases all of his other premises for his argument (which by the way is unclear). It appears that Mr. Shermer believes that it is necessary to draw distinct boundary lines between what may be perceived as 'possible' vs. 'impossible'.

>When exploring the borderlands of science, we often face a >'boundary problem' of where to draw the line between science and >pseudoscience.

First boo-boo. A well-trained scientist does not draw boundaries, either in theoretical thinking nor in application of theory. We would still be trying to invent the wheel, if that were the case. Although scientists have themselves made a distinction between what defines them as primarily a 'theoretical' scientist or a 'research' or 'experimental' scientist, neither form is applauded nor denigrated as 'better than', or 'worse than' the other. Both use the scientific method and both try exceptionally hard to avoid drawing boundaries between what is 'possible', and what is 'impossible'.

Max Planck and Albert Einstein were considered 'theoretical' scientists. They were able to 'think outside the box'.. Planck won the Nobel Prize in 1918 for his quantum theory, from which lasers, neon lights, and florescent lights were later designed and built by 'experimental' scientists. In 1921, Einstein won the Nobel Prize for his photoelectric effect, from which theory the TV and video cameras were later invented by 'experimental' scientists. In 1956, 3 'experimental or 'research' physicists (Bardeen, Shockley & Brattain) received the Nobel prize for their invention of the transistor, which was built on quantum theory. This distinction is well-known and accepted by scientists practicing either form, because one form compliments the other. None of the above scientists drew imaginary lines in their minds to reach the theoretical or practical applications for which their work is applauded. They apparently did not feel the need to do so, or were able to counteract whatever tendency they may have felt to do so, in order to get to the 'truth' about the subject at hand, wherever that might lead them.

Apparently, Mr. Shermer is unaware of this bi-lateral, cohabitating distinction between scientists, or has chosen to ignore a boundary that is commonly accepted in the scientific investigative community. Mr. Shermer has chosen to lump both the theoretical and research goals and methods of scientific investigation into one nebulous group. The only 'scientific' group that fits that description is the nefarious 'scientific' group now calling itself 'Ufologists.'

Rather than defining camps of scientific investigation into 'theory' vs. 'experimental research' into the UFO phenomena, ufologists have defined themselves as 'believers' vs. 'debunker' investigators. They have already drawn lines in their minds by allowing this to occur. By his questions, Mr. Shermer has defined himself as a 'debunker' in the 'research' camp, looking for methods to debunk theory, which theory is not yet tested, much less accepted. In his efforts to 'test the theory,' he proposes ways and means to make the theory 'less fuzzy,' by drawing lines and boundaries for how and what we should theorize. Here again, we are getting the cart before the horse, if we do so.

>The boundary is the line of demarcation between >geographies of knowledge, the border defining countries of >claims. Knowledge sets are fuzzier entities than countries, >however, and their edges are blurry. It is not always clear >where to draw the line.

If 'ufologists' want to practice science, 'fuzziness' must be accepted as part 'n parcel of the process to gain knowledge. Accept it. See where it takes you, theoretically. BTW, the metaphor Mr. Shermer uses to define 'geographies of knowledge,' is a poor one to argue his point. We, the human species, have drawn lines on maps to demarcate boundaries. Those 'boundary lines' don't exist in reality. If you're flying in an airplane looking down on the land being discussed, you won't see the states or countries outlined in red. If you're up 10 miles in space, the Sahara desert is only a brown patch amongst white filmy clouds and a blue expanse of oceans. Our little planet Earth does not resemble the globe we have chosen to depict our reality. We draw our own boundary lines on maps and in our minds.

It is obvious Mr. Shermer has a great deal of trouble thinking 'outside the box,' and must for his own sense of security, draw lines and boundaries to demarcate that which he finds too 'impossible' to contemplate. It is time for all of us to throw out the 'believers' vs. 'debunkers' concepts and begin to think in terms of 'theoretical' vs. 'experimental.' I am better able to accept my possible bias as an experimenter under those labels, and look beyond for possible solutions in the 'experimental' camp. It does no positive good to wallow in what I cannot comprehend, when other's inability to 'think outside the box' only limit my thinking or behavior further. (Maybe that's why Einstein became such a recluse in his later years.) Therefore, I will not accept Mr. Shermer's questions about how to discern 'baloney' as valid or invalid at this time. Maybe he can state the questions with fewer 'boundaries' later, with less obvious bias.

Sincerely,

Sue Strickland
ex-abductee

Dear List,

If anyone in the Chicago area sees an article on alien encounters in their newspaper this week, would you please let us know?

We helped a reporter out a couple days ago but we didn't remember the name of the paper. It may be one of the smaller papers, not the major ones. Anyway we'd love to read it.

Thanks!

The Rendlesham Case - Lighthouse

From: Georgina Bruni <georgina@easynet.co.uk>
Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2001 20:53:07 -0000
Fwd Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2001 23:20:27 -0500
Subject: The Rendlesham Case - Lighthouse

One List member asked me, if, in the light of new information, my publishers had decided to omit the a section that I had planned to include on the lighthouse theory in my paperback, You Can't Tell The People. If so, would I be prepared to post it on Updates.

The truth is, that I personally decided to exclude it because the new information, especially that from Halt and one of the primary witnesses, seemed to demolish the theory that it could have been a lightship, as Robert McLean now thinks.

The fact is, that Halt admitted that the red light was in the forest and when it stopped in front of him at eye level, it was a solid object. I cannot imagine that a lighthouse or a lightship for that matter, would able to fly through the sky, move in and out of the trees and hover at about five foot. Unless of course, Dr Who had anything to with it :-)

I am posting the piece that was intended for the paperback, here on Updates. This is based on Robert McLean's research into the lighthouse/lightship theory. I respect Robert's research but if you have read the paperback update, you will see why I made this decision. Apart from Halt's latest, there are so many other things to consider, such as the events that happened 100 years ago. Even if the lighthouse was around at that time, which I have not yet checked, I don't think the lightships were in operation. The other factor is that Robert has not proved anything, and for me, I'd rather go with first hand witness testimony and facts, such as the recently discovered USAF photographs of the landing site which feature ground indentations exactly like those mentioned in Halt's tape recording of the event. And let us not forget the famous memo, which describes one of the objects.

We simply must move on with the case and the sceptics should accept that the lighthouse and lightships were not responsible. After all, there is so much else to take in. One cannot just take a fraction of this huge case and spend a lifetime trying to make things fit into a theory. You must take the whole case and try to understand what the UFOs were and where they came from. That is what we need to understand.

Here then is the piece that was intended for the paperback.

It was not my intention to give more space to the tired lighthouse theory, especially as I have dedicated an entire chapter to addressing this and other sceptical claims. However, several sceptics have accused me of not dealing with these theories in detail, but it is worth mentioning that these same people have totally ignored the new evidence, which proves that the lighthouse was of no significance. But not to further disappoint those who favour the lighthouse theory, I consulted local researcher Robert McLean, who is himself somewhat of a sceptic. McLean does not believe it was a real UFO encounter and argues that the lighthouse was not the only factor, but that other terrestrial lights may have been partially involved. Just the same, he is sceptical of the traditional lighthouse theory and is of the opinion that the latter does not stand up to careful analysis.

As we know, the traditional sceptical theory is that Lieutenant Colonel Halt mistook the beam of the Orfordness lighthouse for a UFO, and followed it into the farmer's field where it can be seen to line up with the Boast house. According to McLean, the line of sight to the lighthouse, using a compass for measurement, would have been about 98 degrees. However, Halt's audio recording of the event clearly reveals that the light the patrol initially followed was about 110 or 120 degrees on the compass, and as such, the debate continues whether or not there was a 12 or 22 degree measurement error. McLean points out that a clue to the identity of this light is given by Halt on his tape, that they "made sighting again at about 110 degrees" when in the "second farmer's field". When Brenda Butler discussed the incident with Halt in 1983 he apparently mentioned that during their walk they had reached a hill where they could see a river below. Brenda thinks the location is probably that of Burrow Hill, which is about 2.5 km east of the landing sites. McLean states that the lighthouse cannot be seen from the top of Burrow Hill because trees and farm buildings block the view. But he explains that there is an unobstructed line of sight at about 115 degrees on the compass to where the Shipwash lightship was situated at the time of the incident. This was taken out of service on 25 October 1993. Charles Halt has confirmed that the patrol recognised the lighthouse, which he has described as a white light that was 30 to 35 degrees off to the right of the UFO. But McLean is of the opinion that Halt was referring to the beam of the Shipwash lightship. He has it in writing from Trinity House that the beam was indeed white and was not blanked off at any point, but was an "all around" light.

However, the implication of this, according to McLean, is that the light initially seen in the forest was also that of the Shipwash lightship, or sceptically, the light from Orfordness lighthouse, and that the UFO appeared off to the left shortly afterwards. He refers to a section on the tape where Master Sergeant Ball says "at about 11 o'clock" and "Look to the left." Followed by Sergeant Nevilles "There's two lights. One light to the right and one light to the left." McLean points out that the flash sequence of the Shipwash lightship, matches the interval of the light initially seen just as well as the regular five-second pattern of Orfordness lighthouse. Sceptic Stuart Campbell was the first to argue the lightship theory after listening to Halt's recording of the incident in the 1980s. He was also of the opinion that the flashes of the UFO were consistent with the Shipwash lightship. But McLean is certain that there was no direct view of the Shipwash lightship from the alleged landing sites because of intervening trees in Oak Wood. Only the light from Orfordness lighthouse could have been visible, however this disappears from view at a point of 126 m from the eastern edge of Rendlesham Forest. This in turn begs the question of what happened during the subsequent 2.4 km on the way to Burrow Hill, when no lighthouse or lightship could have been visible. Assuming this was the route taken, Colonel Halt's patrol would have needed to cross, or find ways around, up to ten drainage ditches on their way to Burrow Hill and not just the one ditch that he has often mentioned. It is worth pointing out that I personally came across the ditch Halt refers to, in fact I almost fell into it, and as far as I am aware, it is not in the position recognised by Robert McLean.

As a result of these difficulties McLean questions whether the location of the landing sites have been correctly identified. He suggests that if Burrow Hill were the location of the second farmer's field, then Colonel Halt's patrol would have seen the light from yet another lightship 26.5 km distant, with the odd name of Sunk. The Sunk lightship is still visible today from Burrow Hill, and would have been seen in 1980 at a magnetic heading of about 171 degrees. McLean suggests that this lightship may have been the source of the "strobe-like flashes" mentioned by Halt. I commend McLean's research and there is no doubt that he has done an excellent job of mapping and measuring the area but like Charles Halt and indeed all the witnesses, I have to argue that there is far more to this case than flashing lights from a nearby lighthouse or lightships.

End

>To: UFO UpDates - Toronto <ufoupdates@home.com>
>Subject: The Rendlesham Revelation!

In response to the latest statement from Tim Matthews regarding the Rendlesham Revelation, I have several comments to make.

Firstly, I am disappointed that Tim claimed to have some new revelations to the case, to quote from one of his posts

'A completely new revelation on Rendlesham, quite remarkable and perhaps the British UFO story of the year.'

The revelation is not what it seems and unfortunately is another of Tim's famous spins. And don't we just love them ;-)

>'BUFOOSC's Tim Matthews announced today at an event held in Runcorn, Cheshire, that he had solid information that a serious leak of radioactive material had occurred at the Sizewell A nuclear power station, situated on the coast a short distance from RAF Woodbridge-Bentwaters, during the Christmas period in December 1980.

>He reported that his information came from a credible source, a former movement. "Leaks from Sizewell A and similar facilities were well known at the time," he said, "and continue today. the late 1970s/early 1980s have been described to me as "dark times" for the British nuclear industry."

Tim, the Sizewell leak was not an isolated one and it is not exactly a short distance from where the incident took place. There were several problems at that plant. The alleged 1980 leak was reported to me during my research for the book, but like so many other rumours that were going on, I did not think there was enough substance to it. As I explained to your colleague Eric Morris, who kindly wrote to me recently concerning this and the rumour about HMS Norfolk, even if there was a radiation leak, it is unlikely it had anything to do with the incident in Rendlesham Forest. Don't forget that the radiation readings were much higher inside the landing site than they were on the outside, this especially applies to the trees.

>Matthews said that he was convinced that many of the stories regarding aliens and crashed craft that emerged in East Anglia in January 1980, in some cases before the Halt Memorandum was written, were part of a deliberate smokescreen put in place by elements associated with both the nuclear industry (security) and the MOD.

What about all the incidents prior to the 1980 incident, as reported in my book? And what about the events that took place before we had aircraft or nuclear plants?

>Matthews particularly concentrated upon stories generated by a "mystery" character, Steve Roberts, who contacted Rendlesham researchers Dot Street and Brenda Butler at the time and was the first to spread what proved to be disinformation of the worst sort.

Steve Roberts was probably telling the truth when he first talked to Chris and Brenda a few days after the incident. I have come to this conclusion due to the latest information from Halt and one of the primary witnesses. I managed to find Roberts, not his real name of course, and interviewed him for my book, so he's not a mystery anymore, at least not to me. I think the later stories were disinformation, which was a result of influence by Colonel Halt. Recall they arrived in England at the same time and Roberts was a messenger for Halt when he visited Chris and Brenda. It's not the first time that Halt has influenced the witnesses into not being open about certain aspects of the case, as I report in my book. Penniston and Burroughs were shocked that he led the Strange But True? TV team to the wrong landing site. Halt has his own reasons for this, and I'm not going to go into this at this time. But suffice to say that he does not want all the truth to come out because it would be too shocking.

>Eric Morris and Carolyn Buckley had, it emerged, agreed to reopen >their investigation into Rendlesham after speaking to a number of >witnesses to events in December 1980 featured in contemporary >newspaper reports. Their testimony had not been included in later >magazine articles and books on the incident. Perhaps new information >might move the overall investigation forward?

I'd be interested to see what Eric comes up with because I spent days reading newspaper reports from that period and other dates, interviewing many of the civilian witnesses. I'm sure there are many more out there which have not yet gone public.

>Matthews also noted the interesting parallels and timing of the >operations of >the US Air Force Office of Special Investigations >(AFOSI) in North America and the UK between 1980-1983. he >said, "It is worth pointing out that, at the same time, Master >Sergeant Richard Doty was spreading stories of aliens and >crash retrievals around the US UFO research community. Why >not do the same thing in Britain? According to Georgina Bruni, >AFOSI had several operatives close to the Rendlesham Incident."

Sorry Tim, no way was the AFOSI spreading disinformation of a UFO nature, quite the opposite in fact. I interviewed Wayne Persinger, the Deputy Base Commander of the AFOSI for the bases. The disinformation was that they were trying to cover up the UFO story, not what you suggest. His wife (see my book) finally admitted that she also witnessed the UFO during Christmas week and that her husband refused to accept her testimony at the time, suggesting it was a helicopter. Diana's testimony to me proves that this was not the case. AFOSI did have several operatives at the bases. In fact it was Wayne Persinger who set up the original AFOSI units in the UK, the first one being at RAF Lakenheath. There are AFOSI units in most US bases, with a head office, that at the time was at Uxbridge. I also reveal the names of all AFOSI agents including the commander and those who briefed (interrogated) the witnesses. One of these names was confirmed by Jim Penniston, and at the time I did not offer him that information. Not only did Penniston's information match, but the agent, I learnt (not from Penniston) said the files on the incident ended up at the Pentagon.

>In January 1981, the exact same time the Halt Memorandum >was written and >Steve Roberts first came forward, a Public >Enquiry, subsequently chaired by >Sir Frank Layfield, into the >construction of a second, controversial, nuclear plant at Sizewell >(Sizewell B) was announced. At the most crucial time of the >enquiry, held between 1983 and 1985, the massively exaggerated >mass media reporting of the supposed "alien crash landing and >UFO retrieval" began in earnest. October 2nd, 1983, saw the >first report in the News of the World newspaper which, according >to staff at the MOD, "stirred up a hornet's nest" and which, >Matthews added, possibly directed people away from the truth >behind the events of December 1980...

I am sure that the Government would want to keep the UFO incident a secret for several reasons, including the fact that the Bentwaters base deployed nuclear weapons, but I think you are going off track here by suggesting that this the Government invented this incident to take the heat off something else. This is not at all a revelation, but a ridiculous theory, almost in line with the lighthouse and tractor stories we hear. The very fact that the MOD files record that the evidence was given to a

US General, that Defence Intelligence Staff were involved in the inquiry, along with numerous other data, is sufficient to prove that the government did not invent this. And what about the USAF photos I discovered recently, and all the countless witnesses. The only reason the case was finally reported in the press was because CAUS had acquired Halt's memorandum, which was given to Dot Street, who went public with it at a BUFORA conference, which resulted in it becoming public knowledge. Nothing conspiratorial here. The rest is history.

In another coincidence, a "whistleblower" and peace activist, Hilda Murrell, said to have vital information on actual and potential leaks from UK nuclear facilities, and who had written a damning report on the subject that later vanished, died under mysterious circumstances in March 1984.

When I first heard about the alleged Sizewell connection during my research, I borrowed a book from my father, titled "Enemies of the State" by Garry Murray. I recommend this as excellent reading for anybody interested in the Sizewell plant and especially Hilda Murrell. The reason I took an interest was because Murrell's son had contacted Brenda Butler wanting to discuss his mother's murder. As far as I can remember, it was nothing to do with Rendlesham, but because Brenda lived in the area and had been mentioned in the press. However, Brenda did not follow it up because it was too sensitive. Anyway, Gary Murray gives a full account of the Sizewell story, and as a former RAF Police Special Forces Investigator, and private investigator assisting MI5, he exposes the facts behind Murrell's murder.

>The truth, said Matthews, was that between 1980-1983 Cold War >paranoia, the stationing of Cruise missiles at UK bases and the >failings of the nuclear industry were all political hot >potatoes. He said that the intelligence services were working >overtime to keep a lid on possible leaks of information >and on >the situation in general. Perhaps the hapless UFO community >might be a useful target for disinformation?

Please read my book, chapter "Defending The Realm" where I report on several nuclear accidents and cover a good deal of information concerning the Government cover-up. If anything, it is more likely that the UFO events were a result of our harbouring these weapons. Several such bases around the world have had similar UFO encounters. Nothing to do with the Government instigating UFO incidents.

>Tim added that an unusual, albeit genuine looking "hoax" >document, revealing information on a claimed "contact" scenario >involving alien beings "of 1 1/2 metres in height" and US Air >Force personnel, written on headed Ministry of Defence >that it seems to have been internally generated. Was this >document used to mislead UFO researchers back in the early >1980s or was the information contained therein a template for >subsequent disinformation? It would seem so...

Tim, this document has been around since 1984. We have a very good idea who was responsible for it. Dot's 1983-84 tapes offer good explanations. I did not include this in my book because it was so ridiculous, and besides I might have been tempted to reveal other hoaxes perpetrated by well known ufologists. One such incident involved using Halt's son (I have the original recording) as a witness, dressed up to make him look older, and ready to talk to the media. These hoaxes were not only time wasting but very childish. I felt by reporting them it would make British ufology look ridiculous.

I know how much you like to spin Tim :-)) but I didn't think you would bring up old information and claim it is:

"A completely new revelation on Rendlesham, quite remarkable and perhaps the British UFO story of the year."

Come on, you can do better than that! Isn't it time you got your facts right.

>(atmospheric anomalies and visual misperceptions by

This is crummy reasoning. Ufology began with unexplained sightings (acknowledged by the Air Force). "Ufologists" developed in response to the failure of the Air Force and scientific community fully address the unexplainable sightings. Ufologists did not "begin" with the assumption that ETIs exist, but rather arrived at that as a tentative conclusion after analyzing unexplained cases.

To argue that SETI folks proceed from the assumption that there are NO ETIs is silly. Why look for them if there are none? SETI began with the suggestion that there might be ETIs (hence the Drake equation as an attempt to justify the assumption) and that we would never know the answer unless we searched (using radio as being the longest range means of communication.... nowadays expanded to optical/laser communication).

Not surprising that the SETI folks agree that they must provide convincing proof. They have already "overlooked" some transient signals which MIGHT be ETI evidence (transient because of "scintillation" in the interstellar medium, we are now told) because the "proof" will only come with a steady signal of clearly non-solar system and non-natural origin.

But, by the same token the ufologists have claimed that there is evidence for Other Intelligence (OI) flying around, but that that evidence has not been fairly treated. The evidence became available in 1947 (and I don't necessarily refer to Roswell), long before anyone was saying "There must be ET's so we should look for spaceships flying around).

I wonder what the SETI people will be saying ten years from now after there have been hundreds of transient signals that are unexplained, yet not long enough duration to "prove" they are signs of ET communications. Will some SETI'ists say, "Well, we have a lot of evidence that ET's exist, but the evidence has been ignored as not convincing. Therefore we should keep looking in spite of the poor quality evidence we have."

If there were no truly unexplainable sightings that also provide considerable details of the phenomenon being observed, and many of these sightings going back to the early days 1940's, early 50's, before "ufologists", I probably wouldn't be here. Dear List, EBK,

First off, a little levitation, levity, sorry ... regarding your remark about nitwits, crackpots and cuckoos ... I occasionally resemble that remark, so watch it Bub!

As for the gatekeepers, they never get it right. Rather than mitigate, they augment the search for absolute truth by adhering only to their own opinion of that which is right. Which is often wrong for the research.

Hynek, of whom you write below, is the prime example of a scientific mind allowing for all the variables to percolate without the negativity of the skeptic, the absolute truth of the skeptibunker or the angst of the so-called true believer.

Truth be known, Hynek may be the best example of the UFO researcher this subject has ever known. Way before his time, he approached the subject with his science as the ally of the research, rather than the enemy of the subject studied. Will wonders never cease?

And still, J. Allan Hynek is not often quoted on this list.
Perhaps his association with Blue Ball (sorry, that's a town in Pennsylvania), I meant Blue Book ... his association with that project made him anathema. And he did coin the phrase, "Swamp Gas." His dissociation with Blue Book was not a mistake, but is often referred to as a negative in his career - and by researchers of this subject.

So why is it I ask, that Hynek's book is not used as a model for the research done today? At least in terms of attitude. And as well, in the face of the present attitude of mainstream science, should be required reading of any so-called scientist who chuckles at the mere mention of UFO.

Hynek wrote:

"A critic of the UFO scene once remarked, ' ... unexplained sightings do not constitute evidence in favor of flying saucers any more than they constitute evidence in favor of flying pink elephants.'" "

Writer's note: I am relatively certain he meant pink flamingoes!

Hynek went on to say that the "strangeness spectrum" of UFO reports is narrow, so narrow that not only have flying pink elephants not been reported, but a "... definite pattern of strange 'craft' has. If these objects are indeed not what they appear to be, then it is strange that the imaginations of those who report them should be so restricted.

I'll accept that. But even more important is his commentary on this "strange spectrum" of reports. He says that they are so narrow that they CAN be studied. He wrote, "Scientific study presupposes data patterns and a measure of repeatability, and by and large, UFO reports lend themselves to classification within their domains of strangeness."

And what of the scientists? Hynek placed them in two categories, the first being those who treat the phenomenon with ridicule and the second, those who come to believe that the phenomenon is generated by individual or group mental activity. He states and I quote:

"No scientist who examines the subject objectively can claim for long that UFO's are solely the products of simple misidentification of normal objects and events." The second group constitutes those who have taken the time to study the phenom.

"Scientists who have taken the trouble and time to examine the problem ... should be heard."

Hynek says that the views of the former group must be discounted, as this group has not examined the data. He chides scientists and therefore "science," for not advancing science. Quoting Thomas Goudge, who was a noted Canadian philosopher as defining how science advances.

"... the necessary condition of scientific advancement is that allowance must be made for (1) genuinely new empirical observations and (2) new explanation schemes, including new basic concepts and new laws."

In this arena of scientific non-study, science is by Goudge's reasoning, not advancing. I might add that Hynek quotes Goudge in his book, "The UFO Experience."

I again wonder how many of you on this list have read that book and how many of you have comments about the content. It should, as I wrote, be required reading for anyone interested in this subject.

As an aside, I was surprised at how Hynek was so able to communicate his ideas in writing. Clearly and concisely. And whilst I am at it, may I, again with Errol's countenance, commend Al Lehmberg for what I consider to be the best essay on this subject I have ever read. I wish the hell I could write that well. You are to be commended for that work, Al, and commended as well, for bringing up the subject of Hynek, which is blatantly missing on this and other lists.

I would hear the comments on this List, of others on the subject of Hynek's book. I shall await withall. But don't take too long, I have discovered a new brew of Mexican beer. It has within that I don't think there's any doubt that Mars was "killed" rather abruptly. I tend to think the impact that created the Hellas basin did the job, blasting most of the atmosphere into space. Such a thing would wipe out most life but might be survivable--especially if you happen to be on the other side of the planet (i.e. Cydonia).

MAGNETOMETER SURVEY RESULTS

COLIN ANDREWS - 2000, Milton Farm

Dr. Jean-Noel Aubren has finished his preliminary analysis of my magnetometer survey carried out in a crop marking at Milton Farm, near Pewsey, Wiltshire during 2000.

Scientists who have looked at the results so far believe them to be significant and more work is planned DURING 2002.

Tim,

This premise surely falls at several obstacles.

Firstly, there is that copious, documented evidence of those perceived 'UFO' events which occurred during the early hours of 26th December and the night/early morning of 27th/28th.

These 'stories' were borne of experiences - five of which are recorded in the statements Halt requested from Burroughs, Cabansag, Penniston, Buran and Chandler at the beginning of January 1981.

We also have numerous accounts from such as Chris Arnold - his 26th December, approximately 0400 call to the local police is documented on their records, as was Halt's query to Eastern Radar at 0325 on 28 December, etc.

The 'UFO' perception existed at ground zero - it's long proven this was never an added 'smokescreen' afterwards.

Secondly, how do we therefore equate the observations of 'strange lights' within Rendlesham forest, or Halt's ['two nights' later] 'beams of light' being direct onto the base complex for a couple of hours, etc. with a 'leak' at Sizewell?

This does seem to exemplify so many 'Rendlesham' claims - it's announced that someone says 'x' happened, whilst another declares 'y' occurred, then we have a new story from 'z', yet there's no attempt to explain why none of these agree with the previous evidence from 'a', 'b', 'c' and 'd'... which is frequently the exact opposite.

Thirdly... the recently released MoD documentation proves there was no 'cover up', in any respect.

>Matthews particularly concentrated upon stories generated by a >"mystery" character, Steve Roberts, who contacted Rendlesham >researchers Dot Street and Brenda Butler at the time and was the >first to spread what proved to be disinformation of the worst >sort.

Presumably, you do know that 'Steve Roberts' is a pseudonym.

I'm not sure why he would be regarded as 'mysterious' - he was a friend of Brenda's beforehand. The background is explained in 'Skycrash', by Jenny Randles, Brenda Butler and Dot Street.

According to Larry Warren, Steve's real name was Danny. During discussions with Larry, I mentioned: "On 2 January 1981, an airman friend of Brenda Butler's first broke the story of a UFO which had crashed in Rendlesham Forest. In 'Skycrash', he was given the pseudonym of 'Steve Roberts'."

Larry confirmed in response:

[some material deleted for now - James]

"But sadly, Danny was the A Flight Desk Sgt. for Law Enforcement and did not witness the three night UFO incident".

Validating that Larry Warren did know 'Steve Roberts', this is an extract from that pivotal May 13, 1997 'Microsoft Network' online interview, under the auspices of 'Project: watchfire', when Salley Rayl asked of Halt:

RAYL: Questions coming in about Larry Warren. What is your opinion overall of Larry Warren's version of what happened as written up in 'Left at Eastgate'?

HALT: Well, I felt kind of sad when I read the book. It's sort of Larry Warren's, how shall I say, his life. A lot of misfortune. I think Larry Warren has either relived a fantasy so many times that he sincerely believes it or he's been meddled with. By that, I mean hypnosis, drugs or whatever. I think he may have been a lightning rod and drawn a lot of attention and something may have happened to him. I don't know for a fact. And he's admitted this to me. He and I have talked a couple of times.

RAYL: We received an e-mail earlier in the day from a fellow by the name of James Easton who lives in Scotland and apparently has been researching this case during recent months. He said that he had an almost two hour long trans-Atlantic phone conversation with a new witness to some of the events. He said he's not strictly a new witness. It's just that he's now come forward. One thing that he mentioned and a question that I would like to pass on to you is why have there been variances in the dates given for both incidents? Your memo claims that the dates were on the evening, early morning of the 26th, 27th and 28th, 29th of December, respectively. But elsewhere, you know, the dates have been given as 25 to 26 and 29 to 30, he says. So why, why are there differences in those dates?

HALT: Well, I tried to go back and recover the police blotter and the security blotter think I mentioned to you earlier to re-affirm the dates. Keep in mind, I wrote the memo several weeks later. And it was not a really important memo. The date was not critical. The critical portion was, you know, what happened and are you interested? And how about getting involved and let's investigate this. It's possible that I, I put the date down wrong. But I don't believe so. I tried to verify later and the police blotters had been taken from repository, probably by a, how shall I say, curiosity seeker...

RAYL: Hmm.

HALT: ...but I don't know that for a fact.

[...]

RAYL: [...] He said that Warren was originally repeating stories of alien contact that were circulating and were, which later admitted by the source, a fellow, a pseudonym given, Steve Robert...?

HALT: Uh huh.

RAYL: ...to have been a deliberate fabrication. So, apparently, this fellow, Steve Roberts which is a pseudonym, went out and told this story and then later said it was a complete fabrication and now is saying that Larry Warren just picked up the story. Do you know anything about that? Does that make sense to you?

HALT: That individual I'd rather not reveal his name since he doesn't want it revealed worked in the back office with Larry Warren in the security police squadron and was closely associated with him. I know who that person is.

RAYL: And did he tell you that he had deliberately fabricated stories and that Larry picked up on them?

HALT: No. He didn't tell me that personally. I heard that second-hand.

RAYL: Okay. But you have heard this before. This is not a...

HALT: Oh, my yes. It's no surprise.

RAYL: ...this is not new news to you?

HALT: I've listened to many of Larry Warren's tapes. He goes around the country. He's on the, how shall I say, the talk circuit? And, and I, I've, I have half a dozen of them and I've listened to them several times and the story changes. It keeps getting embellished and, and the book is even different. So, what can I say? [END OF EXTRACT]

This also contains Halt's critical insight, replying to my question, why the dates in his memo to the MoD might be wrong.

They are of course now proven to be and we further realise from the MoD's recently released 'Rendlesham file' how they were oblivious to the correct dates until Ian Ridpath informed them years later.

>Tim also called into question the role of Jenny Randles who, it >emerged, wrote letters to the MOD in 1983 and 1984, now in his >possession...

Isn't it true that in Jenny's 1987 publication, 'UFO Conspiracy' [pages 197-9], the contents of these letters were detailed some 14 years ago?

>...offering to assist the MOD in terms of its "public relations >position", to help educate the public that there was "no UFO >cover up" and much, much more besides.

Clearly Jenny was, as such evidence reiterates, ahead of some colleagues in perceiving the true perspective.

How many years later before Nick Pope, commenting in what is a recent, fundamentally revealing internal memo, implored the MoD should do exactly the same?

As Jenny didn't have the benefit of Pope's 'inside knowledge', she must have been an astute judge. And she is also of course now proven to have been absolutely correct.

>Her private letters to the MOD and public statements were, he >said, seriously at odds with each other. He said he intended to >publish the Randles letters, in their entirety, at some point >next week.

The material 'in your possession' is readily available, and freely so from Jenny herself. As it has been before now, perhaps worth contemplating why there hasn't been a rush to publish.

Perhaps, outwith those who have historically 'crossed swords' with Jenny, it's palpable this was of underwhelming interest and zero relevance.

Whatever this reflects on, it certainly won't be Jenny Randles, or the standards in 'ufology' which she accomplished, over so many years, more than anyone.

Regrettably, it's increasingly evident that was ufology's zenith and it's all been rapidly downhill since.

By the way, I understand that Max Burns, having served his time for those drug dealing charges, is the featured speaker at BUFORA's December lecture.

>Tim added that an unusual, albeit genuine looking "hoax"

>recently released to BUFOSEC and others. The MOD, it emerged, >"had no idea" where the document came from, despite the fact >that it seems to have been internally generated.

This blatant hoax - are you sure it could be considered as being on what seriously resembled 'headed Ministry of Defence notepaper'?

A copy of this letter has been available for several years and I recall the MoD ridiculed it as a hoax long time ago.

It's surprising you believe this resembles something that "seems to have been internally generated".

>Was this document used to mislead UFO researchers back in the >early 1980s or was the information contained therein a template >for subsequent disinformation? It would seem so...

No, you might want to check the facts about this again. I don't think you'll find anyone was fooled by it, at the time.

>All in all, there is much to research and many new leads to >follow. Tim Matthews is not claiming to have anything like all >the answers but this new information requires us to reconsider >the events of December 1980.'

There is evidently nothing therein which isn't unsubstantiated or perhaps requires some further examination of available facts.

On the point that we do have to explain why pieces of the puzzle fit together and equally rationalise if they don't, a classic example pertaining to any 'UFO' case is in fact 'Rendlesham' and the typically wild tales which primarily emerge when a claimed witness is 'hypnotised'. In Rendlesham, one setting for these is a supposed, secret underground base complex where the *real* gummit are in cahoots with aliens.

Great story, but no surprise that even Col. Halt refutes there was an underground site. Check out the CD-ROM [available from FUFOR's web site] of his lecture at Prince Georges Community College, in August 1997. Halt explains that he would definitely have known about an underground complex and it simply didn't exist.

How many also realise the USAF did in fact, many years ago, put in writing that there were no underground facilities at either RAF Bentwaters, or, RAF Woodbridge [in a written reply to Mark Birdsall, of 'UFO Magazine' (UK)].

Fair enough, solving this part of the puzzle is child's play. The 'UFO cover up' evidence doesn't get much more incongruous or absurd; how can we have the AFOSI, witnesses being terrorised, MJ-12, aliens and spaceships all located in a place which didn't actually exist...!

>Dear List,

>If anyone in the Chicago area sees an article on alien

<snip>

There's the Tribune, Sun-Times, Daily Herald, and Southtown covering multiple areas. Many of the suburban papers run only once or twice a week, i.e., the Oak Lawn Star. There are also independent weeklies here; The Reader is the biggest, also Windy City Times. Try going to newsgroups.com, look up Illinois, Chicago is in Cook County if you need to search by county.

I've never sent a post before, but I'll gladly follow through if I read anything.

Hola Laroo,

You propose:

>How about a straw poll? I'll cast the first vote if >nobody beats me to it:
>
>* Are there other intelligent beings elsewhere in the cosmos, >perhaps within our own galaxy of billions of stars? I would vote

Yes.
Likelihood: I'll raise you 9/10's of a percentage point to, 99.9%

>* Have living beings from other stars come here in the flesh
>(muck, protoplasm, tentacles or whatever) ? I would vote no.
>Seems dumb to me, see above. Your vote? _____

A resounding yes! My reason for saying so: they've dragged my ass out of my house. Through a wall one time, through the ceiling on another occasion.

"They" (whoever/whatever) have a unique way of declaring their presence that I'd be "dumb" to forget or to deny. :)

If the Universe banged on your front door... would you open it?

Regards,

John Velez

And the real shame is; their 'program' works!

My rebellious and truth speaking friend, we're not dealing with amateurs. The 'puppeteers' are consummate dream weavers. If there is ever to be any hope of freedom from the Maya that they spin, it resides in the 'inherent' human quality that; once a certain level of awareness is attained by each individual, the 'sleeper' automatically, (as a direct function of accumulated knowledge/mental energy) awakens. It is the almost mechanical manifestation of that aspect of Mind/consciousness that hopefully will free enough people to make a difference from their mental shackles. In the meantime, you just keep on trying to raise their awareness about it. It's about all that anyone can do under the circumstances.

I always enjoy reading the stuff that comes out of you after you've gone for a deep dive in that ocean of mind and soul of yours. You do good, and many times, 'spiritual level' work Kemosabe. ;)

If only more folks had the 'ears to hear'.

Warm regards,

John Velez

Subject: As The World Turns

A little levity yet again, if Errol permits. And with the levity, a wish for a happy Birdday to all who celebrate it as Thanksgiving. To those who do not, pray for peace where you are. To see your beloved country attacked, your flag desicrated and your people murdered by the thousands is probably the worst thing which can happen in your world. And of the families who are left behind, there is no joy. Not for a long, long time.

Last, before the news, a note on Cookie, my cousin. To those who wrote, thank you. She has sixteen screws in her arm, along with three plates. She is not able to ambulate that arm but will likely have limited use of it after therapy.

And now, the news. Canal Street mourns the death of an Icon.

Dear Friends,

It is with the saddest heart I pass on the following: Please join me in remembering a great icon - the veteran Pillsbury spokesman. The Pillsbury Doughboy died yesterday of a yeast infection and complications from repeated pokes in the belly. He was 71.

Doughboy was buried in a lightly greased coffin. Dozens of celebrities turned out to pay their respects, including Mrs. Butterworth, Hungry Jack, the California Raisins, Betty Crocker, the Hostess Twinkies, and Captain Crunch.

The gravesite was piled high with flours. As long-time friend, Aunt Jemima delivered the eulogy, describing Doughboy as a man who never knew how much he was kneaded.

Doughboy rose quickly in show business, but his later life was filled with turnovers. He was not considered a very "smart" cookie, wasting much of his dough on half-baked schemes. Despite being a little flaky at times, he even still, as a crusty old man, was considered a roll model for millions.

Toward the end it was thought he would rise again, but alas, he was no tart. Doughboy is survived by his wife, Play Dough; two children, John Dough and Jane Dough; plus they had one in the oven. He is also survived by his elderly father, Pop Tart.

The funeral was held at 3:50 for about twenty minutes.

Dear Wilbur and Larry, also List and EBK,

>How about a straw poll? I'll cast the first vote if
>nobody beats me to it:

>* Are there other intelligent beings elsewhere in the cosmos, >perhaps within our own galaxy of billions of stars? I would vote

>* Have living beings from other stars come here in the flesh
>(muck, protoplasm, tentacles or whatever) ? I would vote no.
>Seems dumb to me, see above.

Your vote? _____

Why dumb? Presuppose these dudes are the explorer type, or maybe like to infiltrate life forms on various planets in order to improve the breed, or for that matter, their own breed using our DNA. Who are we to assume human terms for what may likely be a very high form of life compared with our own?

Let's do a "What if!" What if there was a way beyond our own knowledge of physics, with which to span the distances sans the need for long trips? And what if that method required small amounts of energy? On that assumption, which is not at all a wild assumption, wouldn't YOU go from here to Plaeides to see the people? IF you answer "no!" I just don't have any faith in your brew. Try something donestic.

>(Now I would like but I don't know how) to ask a large >representative group of SETI people, against whom I bear no >rancor really, to tell us whether they indeed proceed from the >assumption that humankind is alone in the universe, in term of >thinking rational beings .. capable of asking these very >questions.

>Maybe they would prefer to speak for themselves; I'm sure the >UFO people would.

Yeah, well, just what the hell is a "UFO people" anyway, Larry? It almost sounds as if we are a cult of nerds and nitwits, and worse.

Allow me to answer for me at least. A UFO people is someone who allows for the possibility that we've been visited. Someone who has the imagination to at least perceive the level of attribution of truth of those who claim to have seen them. Not counting the really crazy loonies who think they've been abducted by space aliens, God help their souls.

Dammit, Larry, this one got my juices going. I am a little surprised at the tone of the post toastie. I know you are someone with an open mind. Heck, it was you who invented the phrase, "Pair of Dimes" and without Gripple even. So what's all this negativity about?

No one has more doubts about what is in my memory than I. And even thru all of that doubt, there is not one iota of evidence that anything else could have happened than what I recall did happen.

>PS: I rather agree with the rest of Shermer's presentation, odd >as that might seem. -LH

It does seem odd. Having seen Squirmin Sherm in the flesh in NY and witnessed the veritable joy he has when he makes fun of us, I can tell you that anything he has to say, even if true, comes from a mind hell bent on making fools out of all of us who have sightings of perceive abduction. That man should seek help.

Now for the really important news. Tomorrow I shall break bread at mom and dad. And at 89 years of age, I want you all to know that my dad makes the best martini the world has ever known. Aha! you say, the man boasteth verily too much.

Well, just aks Lehmberg. Lehmberg, sir Alfred of the word and rhyme, support me here Bubba. The world is waiting for your truth as to the taste and strength of Pop's martini. Don't make me hang out here all alone. Tell the truth. Or I shall not send you his elixir as promised.

As I said, tomorrow I shall have not one, nut TWO of dad's martinis. And I shall discount any and all sightings, abductions or that sort of ilk, until at least 48 hours past the falling down in joy stage of inebriatation.

Happy Birdday to all, and to all, a safe flight.

Jim Mortellaro

Ah! Now we got two votes in, and only one dimpled chad, the "in the flesh" bit.

I can certainly understand your reasoning!

I'm wondering however, if the critters seen are genuinely biological as you, I, the dog and the cat are; or whether they are robotic or cybernetic (not necessarily clanky-metallic mind you) beings.

Automata like that might even be better suited to the purposes of "exploring" this planet and everything on it, in gory detail, if that is indeed the program.

Sufficiently advanced, the line between living and non-living things could become quite blurred, as least as seen by us.

Best wishes

Has Shermer really not noticed all the claims of loads of civilizations based on the Drake equation? None of these claims involve any evidence that there is ETI out there, but the claims are made anyway.

Clearly it is the SETI (Silly Effort To Investigate) cultists who have abandoned the accepted rules of reason and tools of research. They have almost completely ignored the scientific data about flying saucers. Check their references. Still they make many proclamations about them. They have almost completely neglected the many scientific publications about interstellar travel by aeronautics and astronautics professionals, though it is a subject about which they seem to have no professional knowledge, and about which they make frequent proclamations.
They make proclamations about how aliens would act, despite having no professional knowledge of the motivation and behavior of earthlings, no less aliens. They seem totally ignorant of how security works. I have done a piece showing how using Shermer's first 5 rules for testing pseudoscience, it is easy to show that proclamations about UFOs by Asimov, Bova, Sagan, Menzel, and USAF Sec. Donald Quarles are clearly pseudoscience.

Careful here Larry. Who says they are here "to Visit us"? I did one paper listing 26 reasons for coming to Planet Earth. If I am looking for gold in them thar hills, it doesn't mean I am there to visit the prairie dogs.

Try doing some homework about interstellar travel to nearby stars. The shuttle goes around Earth in 90 minutes. Magellan's ship did it in a couple of years. Nuclear Fusion rockets can kick particles out the back end having 10 million times as much energy per particle as in a chemical rocket .

>* Are there other intelligent beings elsewhere in the cosmos,

>yes with a 99% likelihood. Your vote? _____

My vote is YES 99.9%, only because there is so much evidence that aliens are coming to Earth, not because of grandiose theories based on a total lack of relevant data such as the Drake equation which also assumes there has been no interstellar travel and that aliens, if they exist, use radio (or lasers) for communication: . A pretty silly assumption roughly equivalent to saying slide rules are the most advanced type of portable computer.

>* Have living beings from other stars come here in the flesh
>(muck, protoplasm, tentacles or whatever) ? I would vote no.
>Seems dumb to me, see above. Your vote? _____

Definitely, yes. There still people flying from Los Angeles to Australia though telephones, faxes, and the internet are much faster, cheaper and easier. Kind of dumb but real. 37 light years at 99.99% of the speed of light only takes 6 months pilot time.

>Maybe they would prefer to speak for themselves; I'm sure the

It seems a pity that the SETI Cultists can't bother to look at the UFO data or the interstellar travel data. One might hope that they would preface their remarks with "This is only a personal opinion, since I have not studied any of the relevant data which a professional opinion would require"

>Best wishes

>PS: I rather agree with the rest of Shermer's presentation, odd Shermer does give some tests which when applied to the proclamations of SETI Cultists and other UFO debunkers clearly indicate they are pseudoscience.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD WITH SKIES OF BLUE AND CLOUDS OF WHITE AND EVEN SOME UFOs. They have been reported in New York, New Jersey, North Carolina, Georgia Wisconsin, Missouri, Texas, Arizona, Idaho, Oregon/Washington, California, Canada, Argentina, and Chili.

GIVE THANKS: Our world changed on September 11, I ask for your prayers for the sick who write us and our country and the world. Give thanks with a grateful heart; give thanks to the Holy one who gave his Son. And now let the weak say I'm strong and the poor say, I am rich for what the Lord has done. This is a decisive time of hatred and war, at Thanksgiving its time to pray, give thanks, and reflect. Prayer can heal sickness and help you personally a great deal. The Bible says, "If my people who are called by my name will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and heal their land." Happy Thanksgiving to everyone and remember there is someone out there watching.

ASTRONAUT COMMANDER EUGENE CERNAN

Eugene Cernan was the commander of Apollo 17 that flew to the moon. In a Los Angeles Times article in 1973 he said, about UFOs: "I've been asked (about UFOs) and I've said publicly I thought they (UFOs) were somebody else, some other civilization."

PRIME MINISTER BLAIR REVEALS EVIDENCE AGAINST AL QAEDA

LONDON -- The British government has announced that in an unbroadcast video tape made last month, Osama bin Laden declared that his al Qaeda network "instigated" the attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon. Bin Laden's video states, "if avenging the killing of our people is terrorism, let history be a witness that we are terrorists." Bin Laden made the video on October 20 for secret distribution to al Qaeda members, but British intelligence learned of its contents. Prime Minister Tony Blair said in an address to Parliament that Bin Laden admitted the attacks, saying, "It is what we instigated, for a while, in self-defense. And it was revenge for our people killed in Palestine and Iraq. Bush and Blair don't understand any language but the language of force. Every time they kill us, we will kill them, so the balance of terror can be achieved." The British government did not release the video. It is interesting to note that during Congressional Iran Contra Hearings fifteen years ago, Lt. Col. Oliver North warned that the terrorist Osama Bin Laden had threatened him and his family and in his opinion, "He is the most evil person alive that I know of."

LEONID METEOR STORM!

Sunday morning I was one of many who watched the Leonid meteor storm light up the early morning sky at 5:00 AM. It was the best show in some 35 years. There were hundreds of meteorites making the most exciting display, I have ever seen. A combination of clear skies and no moon made for a great show.

NEW YORK CIGAR

PLEASANTVILLE -- On November 11, 2001, at 11:20 PM the witness saw a very large cigar shaped object traveling very fast. The witness reports, "I was looking at the sky while my dogs got their nightly exercise. Very dim lights traveling across the sky caught my peripheral vision. There were 4 or 5 of them that came from a long object traveling south very quickly at about 60 degrees above the horizon. It was silent. I could see the lights for 4 or 5 seconds then lost it in the glare from the Ford dealership lights. Thanks to Peter B. Davenport, NUFORC www.UFOCENTER.com Reporting Hotline:(206) 722-3000

NEW JERSEY CIGAR SIMILAR EARLIER REPORT

CARNEYS POINT -- At 12:35 PM, a veteran police officer and private pilot, accompanied by a legal professional saw a brownish black cylinder shaped object flew over their vehicle at 250 feet altitude on May 18, 1996. The sighting lasted five seconds before it vanished. One 50 feet long cylinder shaped object, dull brownish black in color, with a metal tail structure, crossed S.W. to N.E. across dual highway at moderate speed over our vehicle. The sighting lasted about five seconds, after which object vanished. The leading edges of structure appeared to display the dull pattern typical of "re-entry burn" on the space shuttle. Local weather verified to be: Bar: 29.99, Visibility: 2 miles, ceiling 800 feet, Temp: 66 Deg. F, Dew Point: 63 F, Hum: 90%, Wind: SSE 6 mph. Thanks to Peter B. Davenport, NUFORC, www.Ufocenter.com.

NORTH CAROLINA FLYING TRIANGLE

SHILOH -- On November 11, 2001 at 6:20 PM a large triangular shaped object with large blue lights suddenly made a quick u-turn and hovered a mile away. The witness reports, "My husband and I were driving and as we approached an intersection near a small airport. There was a large triangular shaped object very close to the ground slowly moving over the intersection. We drove toward the object and as we got closer to about 30 feet away, we could see three large blue lights (one in each corner). It suddenly rose up and made a fast u-turn. In less than five seconds it was gone, quickly heading the other way. About three miles from the intersection, my husband and I looked back and it seemed to be a hovering bright light at or near the airport. The strangest thing about the whole ordeal was there was no sound at all. There was a car about two car-lengths in front of us who I am sure saw it too. Believe me, you couldn't miss it. Thanks to Peter B. Davenport, Director National UFO Reporting Center www.UFOCENTER.com

OKLAHOMA FLASHING RED LIGHT

CHICKASAW STATE PARK, SULPHUR -- On November 10, 2001, from the south the witness observed what appeared to be a small, round, white light moving fairly slowly in all directions at 9:35 PM. At first it was behind trees but then it increased it's altitude and moved above the trees. The witness thought the light was no more than 100 yards away. Another witness thought it was no closer than a mile. At first its movement was slow and steady, moving toward the west while traveling up and down. It looked more like it was floating as apposed to flying. After a minute or two, it picked up speed moving toward the west or northwest. At this point, I grabbed my binoculars and lost visual contact for a few seconds. When I found it in my binoculars, it was traveling at a high rate of speed and had a flashing red light on its tail, like an airplane. One of the witnesses confirmed that I was indeed still observing the same object. It now moved and looked like an airplane. I couldn't see wings or anything like that but like I said, it now had a flashing red light on its "tail." When the red light would blink, the front portion of the object appeared to have a slight tint of yellow to it. I noticed that I could hear a jet in the far distance but have no idea if it was coming from an actual airplane or from this object. Thanks to Peter B. Davenport, Director National UFO Reporting Center www.UFOCENTER.com Reporting Hotline: (206) 722-3000

GEORGIA ABDUCTIONS

Researcher John Thompson has some thoughts on abductions related to the new Terrorist situation. One of the possibilities why so many abductions have taken place across America during the last decade is to weaken the resolve and resistance of America. As you know, I've advocated for a long time that abductions are really about "mind-control" and not the fanciful extraterrestrial kidnappings that many entertain. We have to assume that along with the general population an equal percentage of our nation's leaders have been abducted and "conditioned" over the years. Listening to recent talk radio shows some callers have expressed outrage that our response to the 09/11/01 slaughter has been far too politically correct. Coalition building and sensitivity to concerns of Muslims have over-ridden a true and strict military retaliation against the Islamic killers responsible for much of the world's terrorism over the last quarter-of-a-century. Diligent mind control and "programming" applied to selected individuals in the United States could do much to defeat America and the West. While abductions have occurred worldwide, their frequency and dispersion seems to pale in comparison to the estimated millions of Americans that have been abducted. Indeed, there is almost no data to suggest that abductions are numerous in the Third World. The target of the abductors seems to be more of where the real power of the world resides: America and Western Europe. While culture, language difficulties, and lack of investigators in the Third World may keep reports of abductions low, I personally have heard of none from the Modest and South-central Asia while hearing of some in Africa, which is far more improvised. America is the leader of the non-Muslim world. To many Muslims, America is the enemy and the leader of the infidels; that is, non-believers. It may well be that we are engaged in a grand Crusade and abductions are simply another weapon being employed by demonic entities to give an edge to an otherwise weaker enemy. ## MISSOURI SILVER CIGAR UFO

KANSAS CITY -- On November 10, 2001, James A. Tutt Jr. saw a silver cigar shaped UFO flying over East 87th Street toward the Kansas City limits near the over and under pass area of I-435. It was 11:00 AM, and the sky was clear. James was using his powered + binoculars and noticed an object standing still east of him at about 25 to 30,000 feet altitude. The object continued hovering over the I-435 until he lost sight of it. The cigar was silver color and may have had fins on it, but it was too high to tell. This is not the first time that a similar object was seen. On September 27, 2001, there was a sighting of another cigar shaped craft with several fins on its side. The craft was the size of a small house. Thanks to James Allen Tutt Jr

TEXAS LIGHTS

HOUSTON -- F Beau Spikes reports he and his wife saw unexplainable lights in the sky each night from October 30, to November 4, 2001, on several nights, two other friends also saw them. The friends were located five miles away nearer to Spring, Texas. We saw many light patterns from it with all colors. It would hover from side to side and up and down. We saw it for 30 or 45 minutes then went to bed, at 11:00 PM The second night we saw it again, 35 degrees up a little to the south from previous night. We watched for 2.5 hours, until 2:00 AM. The third night there was only one; I observed it from 12:00 to 12:30 AM. Fourth night there were three UFOs a little more south in a pattern like a check mark. They took turns being "active." We watched from 7:30 to 9:30 PM. In addition, my friends my neighbor too had binoculars so I could see the colors as little bit better. There were brilliant colors of every shade, but mostly blue, purple, and green. Last night was a full moon too, and these "devices" still were plainly visible but the stars were not. We called the local FOX weather desk; they reported no meteors or weather balloons etc. These sightings in my opinion are definitely mechanical in nature. I don't know what they are but stars don't jiggle and bobble, stars don't appear to flash symmetric and lit appendages with alternating colors. Stars don't often change shape and have straight-line emissions and stars or planets don't change patterns in a group within a couple of hours. This is why my wife and I were convinced we were watching something bizarre. Seeing that they appear (from my perspective) near a major international airport, I doubt it would be foreign technology. Thanks to F Beau Spikes (Beauknowz@yahoo.com) who writes, thanks for your reply, I would like to be contacted by a MUFON investigator. In addition, I have already entered a report at the form on the MUFON main page.

ARLINGTON ALIEN ACCOUNT -- A college student worked in a paint store frequented by a painter who claimed to have alien encounters. He was a peculiar kind of guy who lived, alone, in a small house outside the city limits. "He often talked about being visited by beings from other planets and strange futuristic technology that they had showed him and space ships and the like. The painter and college student became friendly as the painter began to talk about his leaving this earth to go to live on another planet. They showed him all their strange machines. The painter told the college student that he had no family and that before he left this earth to go and live on another planet, he wanted to deed his house and land to him. The student told him (with tongue in cheek) that, "sure," before he left for outer space, he could deed his house to him. The painter transferred his house, and land and all his assets to my business associate. In addition, within a matter of days from doing so, the painter called him and told him to come to a certain field on his property at a certain time that very evening. He told him that he would be leaving this earth with the men from outer space tonight, never to return, and that the student would be able to see him leave on the space ship if he would be at the field at the appointed time. The student drove up to the man's property, parked his car, and walked to the particular field that the painter had specified. As he approached, he could see a strange kind of green mist-like light coming from behind the rise of earth ahead of him. When he reached the edge of a berm he saw a saucer shaped craft hovering just a couple of feet or so above the ground and glowing green. The painter appeared and looked over at him, and acknowledged his presence with a wave. An opening appeared in the saucer and the painter entered.

The craft shot straight up in the air and in a matter of only seconds was a bright dot that just disappeared. After a while, when he realized the painter was really not coming back, he and his wife and children moved into the house that the painter had deeded to him. They did not stay very long. He said, "You wouldn't believe all the strange, eerie things that went on in that house." He added that some of the technology (having to do with computers and nanotechnology) that exists today are things that the painter had told them about that seemed so far-fetched at that time. He is a very no-nonsense kind of person, which makes me believe his story even more. Talk at you later, ufopi@aol.com (name removed) Mike_Harman @rocketmail.com

ARIZONA GOLD UFO

GLENDALE -- Rick reports seeing what appeared to him as a UFO on November 6, 2001. He says, "I just witnessed the best thing ever." I have never seen one before only read about them on different sites. However, the object I saw at about 9: 25 PM, was lower than most aircraft in the area and shooting across the sky at a high rapid rate much faster than the aircraft here. The object was round, the bottom looked like a reddish gold color, no lights and no sound. I ran downstairs, from my apartment, went to the parking lot, not 3 to 4 seconds later and the object was gone. I read your site and other's and has had many mixed feelings until now. Now, I myself have become a believer. I thought you would like to know my story; I'm very excited about the entire event and wanted to share this extraordinary night. Thank you for your time. Thanks to Rick Glendale at Eichbaum74, and Joe Trainor Masinaigan

IDAHO FLYING WING

NAMPA -- D. Kennedy reports a flying wing entered our line of site as we were watching the Leonid meteor shower on November 18, 2001. It flew directly over us then off to the south at 2:45 AM. It made "NO" noise, and had "No" lights. There was a faint temperature glow on the leading edge of the wing, tip to tip. Altitude was impossible to tell. If it were higher than 5,000 feet the craft would have been extremely large. It did resemble a B-2 Stealth bomber, but without the sharp angles. All the edges were rounded, more like a boomerang. My wife observed it as well. The color was dark, possibly black with a rounded boomerang shaped flying wing with temperature glow on leading edge of wing. The height and speed are unknown. The higher it was? The larger and faster it would have been. Joe Trainor writes, "Here's a sighting from Idaho. However, it sounds less like a UFO than some sort of flight test of a prototype "flying wing" aircraft of our U.S. Air Force. I was amused to see that this event took place in Nampa. In 1883, this town was the site of a very unusual Fortean event. A man named M.A. Kurz began drilling a well, and the sump pump spit up a human figurine of incalculable age from a depth of 300 feet below ground. Part of the "doll" had begun to metamorphose, showing an age of hundreds of thousands of years. Good luck with The UFO Store. Thanks to Joe Trainor Masinaigan

CALIFORNIA DISC

Last Sunday, November 11, 2001, my mother and I saw a UFO. It was about four minutes after seven when my mother called me out of my room to our back porch. She pointed out an object that at first looked like a bright star. Then it started to move very slowly and we began to see more detail. There was a red intense red aura type of light surrounding the object just enough to make out a shape with binoculars. This thing was far away at least a thousand feet up, and kind of a disc shape with a black mass to it. It appeared then it would disappear for about 4 to 6 seconds. Then a red ball object came out of the lighted end and seemed like it dropped like a flare after you shot in the sky. I can tell I never been so excited I finally saw one after all these years of looking in the sky. Thanks to RT

OREGON TV NEWS REPORTS ON UFOs

PORTLAND -- The 10 o'clock KPTV News reports on November 15, 2001, includes video film of alleged UFOs. -- The Pacific Northwest is no stranger to the UFO phenomenon. For years, Mount Adams, in south central Washington, has been a hub for UFO activity. Mount Adams is home to what some call UFO's and others call naturally occurring lights or satellites. Hundreds of people have claimed to see the lights, and one man who lives near the mountain even claims to have contact with the extraterrestrial beings that are behind the lights. When James Gilliland built his home just outside Trout Lake, Washington, he had no idea it sat right in the middle of a UFO flight path. He and hundreds of other who frequent his 70-acre property near the mountain believe the lights are UFO's. Gilliland has recorded over 15 hours of video of the strange lights. Gilliland also claims he has had direct contact with the inter-dimensional spiritual beings who control what he calls light ships. "These are very advanced beings technologically, spiritually we have to rise to the occasion," said Gilliland. Others say the strange lights are just natural occurring nocturnal geo-thermal lights or satellites. OMSI planetarium director Jim Todd says the images on James Gilliland's video look like ordinary satellites to him. "I can understand their excitement cause they see something moving across the stars. I've seen a lot of satellites space station shuttle and their fun to watch they really are," said Todd. More than 30 years ago, scientists from around the country began documenting the strange light phenomenon. In 1972, "The Investigation of Nocturnal Light Phenomena at Toppensh, Washington" was released. The report outlines several encounters, such as the following: "The light moved so fast it gave the impression of a streak. It would appear stationary for a moment and then almost instantaneously appear some distance away." Now, over thirty years later, there are still no clear answers to the mysterious lights, but Gilliland does say the aliens have a message for all of humanity. "We need to clean up our consciousness. Clean up our environment, raise up, and lead a spiritual way of life." Thanks to darkwynnter@att.net

CANADA THREE CYLINDER UFOs

ONTARIO -- Paul wrote I told my father was visiting me last week and I showed him the on line video of the Disclosure seminar. He reminded me of his unexplained encounter he had. This encounter happened a few years ago while he was working far up in Northern Canada. He was a hydro station inspector. He spent many nights awake looking at the skies and wolves. He is an amateur photographer and was looking to get shots of the wolves feeding at night, anyway he was gazing at the perfectly clear mid winter night, when he noticed three objects in the sky that were quite high in elevation. They were side by side and the middle object was longer than the outside two. The 3 objects were cylindrical shaped, joined together by small joints, like balls on a string. Then one of the outside objects split off, flew a wide circle around the sky, and then shot off out of sight. The middle larger object and the smaller object beside turned lengthwise and seem to face end down towards him. They had very bright lights. They held this position for a while then separated and shot out of sight. He has never told anyone of his encounter for fear of ridicule. He is a very honest person and knows aircraft as he was flying in helicopters all the time in the north. He does have a photo of the objects, which I have seen and are amazing. We both firmly believe we are not alone, how can you not with the billions of solar systems out there. Its time for governments to admit it. Thanks to Paul Cook in Toronto.

ARGENTINA STRANGE FAST STROBING LIGHTS

BUENOS AIRES -- An air of confusion and suspicion surrounds an hour-long incident in the night skies over the South Atlantic Argentine airspace. The Argentinean newspaper Clarin, reports a Lear Jet carrying Lt. Governor Daniel Gallo, encountered unidentified bright flashing lights in the sky over Patagonia. Piloted by commander Mariano Zalotti and copilot Mario Beban, the aircraft had left Jorge Newbery Airfield at 20.50 hours, November 12, and set course for the airport at R=Alo Grande. The jet was traveling at a height of 10,000 meters when they saw a nearby blinking lights in the darkness. The "estroboc=A2picas" [strobe] lights appeared on the left side of their aircraft. "Nevertheless, I never thought that it could be a foreign military airplane invading our airspace," the three occupants of the aircraft discounted the lights as being either a UFO and theorized that they could have belonged instead to a British aircraft, whose base is at Mount Pleasant, in the Falkland Islands." When flying over the city of Commodore Rivadavia, 75 miles out to sea [Strait of Magellan G-fs], we observed for the first time the flashing lights that followed a short distance, flying the same map course to a height superior and of greater speed", Commander Zalotti said later. "Then we flew at a cruising speed of 900 kilometers per hour." A British Embassy spokesman in Buenos Aires denied that it could have been an aircraft from that country and described the claim by the pilots as "speculation without sense." There was confirmation that no other Argentinean aircraft had been flying in the area at this time. Thanks to FarShhores@canada.com, Wilmar Caballero

CHILE UFO VIDEO TAPED

The following message was received by Inexplicata from Rodrigo Cuadra Salazar of Chile's TOC (Tecnologia, OVNIS y Ciencia) Channel 13 of the Catholic University of Chile broadcast a UFO filmed by Eric Martinez, a member of the GEO group, on Saturday, November 10, 2001. The UFO was filmed over the hills surrounding the La Florida commune. A curious detail is that one object was filmed by day, and another object was filmed at night. They could be one and the same. #### NEW NASA SHUTTLE VIDEO OF UFOs IN SPACE

Jeff Challender has prepared a new tape of various UFOs that were caught on recent Shuttle video footage. Jeff has over an hour long tape of UFOs shot in space. Jeff spends hundreds of hours watching the shuttle broadcasts from space and is now an expert on NASA missions and even those onboard the shuttle are unlikely to see what Jeff does. Using Jeff's directions you will be able to learn the difference between space junk, ice crystals and real UFOs. Hello Bill: ( and thanks for voting! )

I meant planets orbiting other stars of course. So far votes are 3/3 for life elsewhere with high probabilities.

Its 2 to 1 against me for natural living beings from beyond coming here in the flesh (or goo or whatever). Again, I stress the perhaps subtle distinction between natives of some planet way out there, and bio-engineered and/or cybernetic 'entities' which might be sent instead.

I think Shermer's assertions were rash and simplistic. I wonder how many SETI people feel that he is qualified to speak for them as a group. Even if he were 'pro-UFO' I wouldn't want him putting words in my mouth; not after that Baloney Detection article in Scientific American .

Hello all:

I found this article captivating. Its a tough read for some of us, but give it a try.

I have a sneaking suspicion that if any solid part of the UFO problem is ever solved, it will come from advances in our own sciences, most especially physics.

PHYSICS NEWS UPDATE

The American Institute of Physics Bulletin of Physics News Number 566 November 21, 2001 by Phillip F. Schewe, Ben Stein, and James Riordon

HIDDEN OBJECTS REVEALED WITH QUANTUM HOLOGRAPHY.

Second sight and remote viewing are terms used to explain charlatans' supposed psychic ability to see hidden objects in terms of pseudoscientific gibberish.

Quantum holography, on the other hand, is a method firmly grounded in modern physics that permits the imaging of hidden objects with entangled photons. Of the quantum entanglement phenomena that Einstein described as "spooky action at a distance," quantum holography may be the spookiest to date.

Researchers at Boston University's Quantum Imaging Laboratory (Bahaa Saleh, 617-353-7176, besaleh@bu.edu) propose to create holographic images of objects concealed in a spherical chamber.

Ideally, a small opening in the chamber wall permits light to enter, but lets no light out. The photons in a beam of light directed through the hole scatter from the enclosed object, and ultimately strike the inner wall of the chamber - see figure at:

<http://www.aip.org/mgr/png>

According to the scheme, the inside of chamber would be designed to detect the time when a photon hits the wall but not where it hits.

Classically, there is no way to generate an image of an object with this sort of configuration. Quantum mechanically, however, it's possible to build a hologram of the hidden object provided that the photons in the illuminating beam are entangled with photons in another beam.

[Quantum Entanglement is marvel in itself, with certain apparent super-luminal properties. -LH]

Each photon in an entangled pair has properties (such as momentum or polarization) that are unknown until a measurement is performed on one photon or the other.

When a property of one of the photons is measured, corresponding information about its entangled mate is instantly determined. That may seem spooky enough, but in quantum holography, things get spookier still.

Holograms are typically constructed with interfering beams of light, which provides more information about a subject than simple illumination can. The additional information helps build a three dimensional image of a three dimensional object.

In quantum holography, the researchers measure the simultaneous arrivals of an illuminating photon that is sent into the chamber and a companion photon in the other entangled beam. This measurement tells the researchers about the interference of various possible paths that the single photon inside the chamber could travel. And it's the interference of the possible paths that encodes the holographic image of the hidden object. Very spooky indeed.

For the moment, quantum holography exists only on paper. But the researchers assert that there are no technological obstacles to the proposal, and they hope to begin building an experimental system soon.

(Ayman F. Abouraddy, Bahaa E. A. Saleh, Alexander V. Sergienko, and Malvin C. Teich, Optics Express, 5 November 2001.)

In for the penny (?), I'm in for the pound... simplistic rashness gives way to suspect motivations, artful obfuscation, shallow dimensionlessness, and rank intellectual suicide in the tradition Dr. Menzel.

I suspect that they are comforted in some way that would be pathetic if it weren't so tragic. It is a seriously silly effort to investigate... If the Neanderthal had had a notion of the extra terrestrial, they would have expected to communicate with signal fires?

Which really goes a long way towards demonstrating the bald duplicity of mainstream science, doesn't it, when a biased axe grinning confabulator like Shermer can get open handed validation in "Scientific American" and Stanton Freidman can't?

Hello Jimbo, friends, romancers and Canadians:

I say "dumb" because bio-engineered and/or cybernetic critters could do ALL of those things above and below, and possibly much better, while the native Curtuglians (or whatever) enjoyed umbrella drinks by the methane pool as grass-skirted Wahikis and musicians provide entertainment.

>Let's do a "What if!" What if there was a way beyond our own >knowledge of physics, with which to span the distances sans the >need for long trips?

That's a tough call! If such a thing were possible, and I see absolutely no sign of it being possible, then Yes!! By all means go and see it for yourself!! [Stock up on nicotine gum first of course.]

Problem is, it may not be possible. Even the tantalizing findings of "quantum entanglement" in physics, which seem to imply FTL (faster than light) travel possibilities to the layman, offer NO such prospect if you read the fine print.

So far, nobody is seriously proposing that you can send _one single bit of information_ , let alone a living being anywhere, FTL. Zero. Zippo.

It may well be that this is a fundamental, and forever impenetrable law of nature; one which _no_ mortal being may overcome, for all time.

Prove otherwise, and they will scrap the Nobel Prize and name the new one after you!

Failing that, as I strongly believe we will for all time, we are left with slow trains to Georgia ( or wherever. )

>And what if that method required small amounts of energy?

Oh heck. ET, sufficiently advanced has _loads_ of energy. That's no real problem.

>On that assumption, which is not at all a wild assumption, >wouldn't _YOU_ go from here to Plaeides to see >the people? IF you answer "no!" I just don't have any faith in >your brew. Try something donestic.

I would go there in one hot second if it weren't for my asshole of a boss. Of course I would. Just give me the formula for FTL travel, and I can kiss my cruddy job goodbye.

Negativity? Please Jimbo! I just don't think that the native Glerkoids come here in person, that's all. I see absolutely no need for that.

None of this rules out the abduction scene, or anything else associated with UFOs in general. Its almost a non-issue as we could not tell a super intelligent but artificial "being" from a native (you-name-it) if we went out with them for a round of golf.

>No one has more doubts about what is in my memory than I. And >even thru all of that doubt, there is not one iota of evidence >that anything _else_ could have happened than what I recall did >happen.

Hello Alfred:

Well, life elsewhere looks unanimous.

As for them being "here", if they are "there" (as all agree so far) I am stopped by the horrendous times and distances involved, not to mention the sheer boredom.

That's why I still vote for intelligent cyborgs, something of that sort. Such created "astronauts" could be designed solely for the purposes of exploration, leaving their designers free to pursue their disgusting slimy (whatever) on the planet(s) that are natural to them.

I just cannot see any reason for natural born Xyrkians (or whatever) to come here in person, and several reasons to send highly intelligent (whatever) in their place. [burp!]

There! That's another reason. Lousy beer in space, more likely none at all. Cyborgs don't drink or smoke. You can't smoke on a space-ship. I had to chew nicotine gum on a flight to Boston for Chrissakes.

Best

Hello again Morty!!

I forgot something.

I am obviously as much a "UFO People" as anyone else.

Having spent most or all of the last seventeen years compiling the *U* UFO Database, I could not pass up this opportunity to boast about it, even to the point of providing this URL:

mental hospital you can name!

UFO people are simply people interested in UFOs, like most everyone on this list.

Very best wishes for a fine holiday!

Perhaps, and maybe definitely because of remembered scenes in my Gripple-addled mind. But I also remember en titties who looked very much like more normal, non-constructed or engineered types.
But whadda I know? Anyway, so bioengineered thingies can do

But Larry, don't you see that the evidence of the "possibility" of such travel is there? On the assumption that it is even remotely possible, one should be able to extrapolate the evidence which Hynek brings forth in his argument for ET visitation. And his arguments were presented by moi as well as Alfred Lehmberg. Did you read his book?

>Problem is, it may _not_ be possible. Even the tantalizing >findings of "quantum entanglement" in physics, which seem to >imply FTL (faster than light) travel possibilities to the >layman, offer NO such prospect if you read the fine print.

And I retort that if it may not be possible, then it equally, MAY be possible. Half full or half empty? My Bud's half full.

Which in our silly fossify implies that it may be possible as above.

Oh come on, use that God-given imagination and think up some possibilities. Remember, paradigms change. Go back ten years and lemme know.

In the first place those times and distances are as you would measure them with a pretty short experiential base, even if you had the proverbial best and brightest passionately working for you. Besides, the distances are reachable even with engine technology we had near the middle of last century. My dad (tres limited) and Stanton Friedman worked on it at AeroJet General near the middle of last century. We could'a done it for a coupl'a aircraft carriers in the seventies...

The second place concerns how easily one becomes bored... and how easily can one become bored on a continuous adventure, with all the toys necessary, into the unknown... for a life of unguessed at length... time and space...

>That's why I still vote for intelligent cyborgs, something of >that sort. Such created "astronauts" could be designed solely >for the purposes of exploration, leaving their designers free to >pursue their disgusting slimy (whatever) on the planet(s) that >are natural to them.

Neither one of us knows what they might do or not do. Besides, if you can conceive of them at all, why not conceive of them that smoke, drink, and run around with partridge feathers in their bums?

I read a book on a recent flight from California... Ruppelt's "Report on UFOs"... (picked it up for two dollars at a used book store). On the third reading now, I discover that I did not miss his humourlessness at all... sex, substance addiction, and UFOs just get unfunnier as time goes on...

Hello again 'taliano!

>of such travel is there?

Yes, but only if your get past that terrible FTL (faster than light) matter. It may seem a detail to the readers of science fiction, but its a real bear for physical realists. Most physicists, even the ones who enjoy thinking "out-of-the-box", find this virtually impenetrable for practical matters ala' sending pies thru space.

Maybe a few physics classes are in order here. They ain't easy bub, and neither is the calculus needed just for an entry ticket. That's what makes it so tough to reason with the public.

In a word, they aren't in on things. Sci-fi, Art Bell howlers and cotton-candy mind-fuck is so-so-so much easier.

>Alfred Lehmberg. Did you read his book?

I read every Hynek book I could find, over and over and over again. Here is a list of my sources:

<http://www.larryhatch.net/USOURCE.html>

You will find Hynek (whom I sadly never met) and his old student Vallee ( whom I did ) listed over and over right up at the top.

Both of them influenced me greatly, but for different reasons. Neither of them influenced me for being unrealistic nor illogical, no matter how much I might disagree with their final assessments.

Hynek stressed (and I quite agree) that there is something here not properly understood nor studied by scientists as a whole.

Vallee argued for the systematic collection of evidence or sightings cases at the very least. No argument here!!

I personally believe it is a mistake to go too far beyond our present, and obviously limited understanding of physical principles as presently understood! To do so violates every time-tested and time-proven methodology of natural science.

Speculation? Wonderful! You bringa lasagna, and not that crappy canned shit from Chef-Boy-ar-Sweden. I'll supply the wine. We will have a fine time, but don't expect me to buy into anything too far out of the box, please!

Magic? I'm no deist.

I think there are a whole lot of neat things that lay awaiting discovery. Real things now! Again, I'm just kicked back by superconductivity... at any temperature, even the liquid helium temps SC was discovered at, nearly a century ago!

Jimmy M: I really like you like a pal. Thats a fact. If you want to quote me (much appreciated of course) please forget about two dimes and try this:

==>Physics is stranger than fiction.

I hope like hell nobody else said it first. If so, I humbly apologize. Its goddam true either way.

Nobody can explain gravity to my satisfaction yet.

I can't see how any natural law which denies us a "free lunch" (thermodynamics) and fucks up wheel bearings with such a vengeance, can possiply provide us with superconductivity at any goddam temperature. .. yet there it is.

I maintain that the best and most significant way to learn about UFOs is to (re)learn how they work. We gotta do it ourselves.

All the brain-jelly, sociology and horse-crap can come later. We have lots of under-employed experts for that.

Cheese and crackers guy!?

Its simple. The Glixoerds send foozo probes in all promising directions. They report back all the time. Having found Earthlike planets here and there, they report back.

Those planets with the best slot machines (or whatever) receive more attention, while the original senders just ooze back and forth in a thoroughly disgusting manner. Having long since discovered how to control the aging process, their greatest fear is 'accident of old age' (ala Saddam).

If it takes 1000 years for a 'return on investment' i.e. to find out some scientific data, then so be it. I planted a lemon tree and it died. Tree #3 is finally working for a living (the dumb shit)

It is my fond hope that some ET Globurbulons will laugh at all this, maybe centuries or milleniafrom now, and consider us both rather decent fellows, given the conditions under which we must now live.

I don't think they want us for 'pets'. If they did, they could send back DNA codes and save a ton of "postage" (not to say interstellar damage).

I think its just nuts to send living breathing mortals beyond the solar system, when little chips can beat up on Boris Spasski at chess, even now.

Regarding:

>We also have numerous accounts from such as Chris Arnold

Exactly. Chris Arnold's stories are well known to certain British researchers. They are a mixture of several events. I for one cannot except his stories because he admitted with a vengeance, his dislike for Halt and Burroughs, and all this is something you fail to mention when you use him as a debunking tool. (His report is featured in my book)

>Thirdly... the recently released MoD documentation proves there was no 'cover up', in any respect.

Amazing! When you selectively quote you can make everything appear the way you want it to be. Your take on the MOD documents is from a debunkers angle. You fail to discuss the documents as a whole, forget to mention that the MOD lied, forget to mention that the USAF general was given the "evidence", and a number of other important factors.

>Presumably, you do know that 'Steve Roberts' is a pseudonym.

>According to Larry Warren, Steve's real name was Danny. During >discussions with Larry, I mentioned: "On 2 January 1981, an >airman friend of Brenda Butler's first broke the story of a UFO >which had crashed in Rendlesham Forest. In 'Skycrash', he was >given the pseudonym of 'Steve Roberts'."

His name is not Danny. Unfortunately Larry has a habit of doing this. He is now claiming that he recalls General Gabriel's visit to the base, which is quite extraordinary considering only a few senior officers were aware of it.

>Larry confirmed in response:

>"But sadly, Danny was the A Flight Desk Sgt. for Law Enforcement >and did not witness the three night UFO incident".

Read my book where I devote a whole chapter to Steve Roberts. He was with Security Police Investigations, not Law Enforcement.

You quote (as ever) Rayl's interview with Halt.

>RAYL: ...to have been a deliberate fabrication. So, apparently, >this fellow, Steve Roberts which is a pseudonym, went out and >told this story and then later said it was a complete >fabrication and now is saying that Larry Warren just picked up >the story. Do you know anything about that? Does that make sense >to you?

>HALT: That individual I'd rather not reveal his name since he >doesn't want it revealed worked in the back office with Larry

>Warren in the security police squadron and was closely >associated with him. I know who that person is.

This is simply not true. As I explained in a previous post to Tim Matthews, Halt had his reasons for hiding the true identity of Roberts. It is my firm opinion, based on several points (including conversations which I cannot reveal, that came, from a senior officer), that Halt was most probably responsible for Roberts changing his story. Don't forget that Halt and Roberts travelled to England from Germany on the same day, and that Roberts went straight in search of Brenda and Dot to pass on a message from Halt, whilst at the same time debunking his original story.

Considering that Rayl has Halt and another witness on contract for a book, I do hope that Halt tells her some of the real facts, and that if the book ever gets written, that we don't get a story to cover up the real story that senior officers are afraid to talk about in public. It's such a shame that she hasn't managed to do anything in all this time. I'm sure he would have been more open about his case if he hadn't signed a contract that seems to be going nowhere.

Rendlesham Stage 1 Conclusions

From: Tim Matthews <TMMatthews99@aol.com>
Date: Thu, 22 Nov 2001 18:59:04 EST
Fwd Date: Fri, 23 Nov 2001 07:25:52 -0500
Subject: Rendlesham Stage 1 Conclusions

Dear All,

As expected, the last few days have thrown up significant heat, and some light, on the ongoing Rendlesham debate.

It would be foolish to go into every comment made but here goes:

1 - We have now completed Stage 1 whereby certain information has been made public. The attitudes of the Ufologists were entirely predictable; whatever we produce will be derided. This makes no difference to our continued efforts re; Rendlesham.

2 - Ufology does not appear to be able to see outside its own bubble. As things currently stand, our view is that the UFO incident/s at Rendlesham over the Christmas 1980 period were quite possibly incidental, not central, to what followed. Much of James Easton's research has been directed towards witness statements, what s/he said and what he thinks s/he actually saw. Some of this is very valuable and, despite his debunking Penniston, Burroughs et al and writing about tractors in fields (there is a certain irony in the tractors story but not right now....!) being responsible for the UFO incident/s he still clings to the belief that something UFO-related happened, if I've understood him correctly. He says that we should not ignore the UFO sightings, despite having explained many of them himself.

3 - People should not be so afraid of new theories and evidence. There may not be one all encompassing explanation for what we call the Rendlesham Incident.

4 - With this in mind, Stage 1 of our efforts, gaining publicity within and outside Ufology and encouraging new witnesses to come forward and seeking new information has been unusually successful.

5 - Many things trouble us including the allegations that Margaret Thatcher indicated that UFOs were a big issue and/or that she knew anything about Rendlesham. We have a letter, dated 12th November 2001, from the former PM's Personal Assistant, telling us that, having worked with Mrs. Thatcher for some time, she is often heard to say, "you must get your facts right." Furthermore, we are told that, "You should not read much into" the statements about getting facts right and "You can't tell the people." For Georgina Bruni to suggest that Mrs. Thatcher/her PA "would say that wouldn't she" means that, in effect, Thatcher cannot be relied upon to tell the truth in the first place! Georgina's use of Margaret Thatcher is, therefore, is NOT justified.

6 - Given the vague and almost meaningless comments made by Mrs. T we are interested to know rather more about the circumstances in which these comments were made, times, dates, places etc. As a journalist I would have taken either shorthand notes or made a recording, especially if I was going to ask specifically about UFOs.

Georgina Bruni, who I quite like actually but who keeps claiming that I am attacking her, has made much of Mrs. T's comments and wrote to me suggesting that Macmillan, her publishers, must have been satisfied that she (Georgina) had accurately reflected her conversation with the former PM. Our view is that Macmillan, like other publishers, are only concerned to make money, to sell books. They are not taking a position as regards the evidence, only seeking to maximise sales via spin and clever marketing. I don't blame them.

7 - Furthermore, Mrs. Thatcher's comments, as limited and as vague as they were, are being taken as seriously as Ronald Reagan's public comments about "an alien invasion" made during the 1980s. It is doubtful that he had any hard data on aliens and, if we are to believe the cover up and conspiracy merchants, wouldn't have blabbed in public anyway. Nevertheless, his comments were typical of the man; written for effect and high drama, trying to explain difficult concepts (nations working together) in simple terms. He probably didn't even write the words himself. His comments about "aliens" do not mean that either he or his British opposite number were the thirteenth and fourteenth members of MJ-12!

8 - It seems, from some quarters, that people are having a problem finding data on nuclear accidents of any magnitude in the UK. That is because much of the data has been in dispute since the industry began in the mid 1950s. Some has been buried, some covered up.

Nuclear power is and has been a much hotter political potato than anyone is giving credit for and people forget the symbiotic relationship between nuclear weaponry and nuclear power generation. They also forget the political realities and paranoia of the Cold War, which many of us are convinced had a bearing on UFOs. The Hilda Murrell case and many others strongly suggest that we are in no way party to the facts in relation to the nuclear industry. In any case, people who have worked within the industry have been the most dangerous to the industry in highlighting its safety failures.

9 - We are not saying, and neither are our sources, that this was a 'major leak' of material. It didn't have to be to set alarm bells ringing. Simply because there is no official documentation (or appears not to be) is neither here nor there.

It has been suggested to me in the strongest possible terms that the British government operated something of a 'forward sanitation' process re; certain MOD documents whereby only the lesser material, at lower level of categorisation, would be released. Such is the case with the 155 pages of Rendlesham material. Not all the documents are there. Of course, only one (Halt Memo) mentions anything to do with radiation but we are not using Halt's comments as gospel.

In Britain, we are subjects not citizens and many of our "rights" are little more than theoretical and certainly not practical. We have very little right to access highly classified information. There are still World War Two documents that remain classified. There may be a "new openness" but all we have learned thus far is that many documents will remain classified despite a new UK FOI Act. Sure, Dave Clark and co have made progress with the MOD but are they party to all the facts, documents and data? Probably not and, in any case, there may well be thousands of documents that would take us a lifetime to read...

10 - Related to the above are other obvious nuclear-type incidents, like Cash Landrum. Not the same we know, but it still remains within the UFO literature, despite the fact that this was not an "alien" incident. Furthermore, there are other incidents where it seems as if the aliens and UFOs stories were very useful in persuading people against concluding that some earthly technology was responsible for an accident, whether it be the secret testing of FT technology here in 1993/4/5, in Hudson Valley or Groom and Papoose Lakes.

11 - We agree that there was a certain "psychological" element to Rendlesham.

12 - Despite the Doty affair and the scandals surrounding the Bennewitz/Moore/MJ-12 hoax business we find ufologists in the UK denying that AFOSI, stationed here and with plenty of power within its remit, could have had anything to do with disinformation at Rendlesham. This is, quite frankly the worst kind of armchair BS. Not only do people NOT know what AFOSI was doing for sure, but they simply ignore the fact that the same agency was using and abusing Ufology and Ufologists during the period we are interested in, 1980-1983.

13 - Ironically, we have discovered new information about UFO activity in the last two weeks that indicates that something intriguing was going on in East Anglia in the mid-late 1970s. (This may not related to my personal belief that RAF Alconbury was a temporary station for secret/black project aircraft in the UK in the late 1970s (from 1978 onwards).)

14 - So, there is much for us to do, hence Stage 2, which begins now. The evaluation of existing research, such as it is, and researching new information, which could take some time. We never expected any help from the UFO community, do not ask it and, probably, do not need it although there are some notable exceptions. People have privately e-mailed us saying things like, "well, we think this is really good stuff but couldn't admit it in on the forums!"

In conclusion I should say that, unlike so many people, we do not have fixed beliefs about Rendlesham and it is with an open mind and new facts that we look forward to the challenge of presenting our considered opinions in due course.

For now, we thank you all for listening.

Over and out.

I truly believe this is how we will solve the UFO mystery, I've said it before and I'll say it again. I didn't get into researching UFO's because I saw one or just started believing in them, I didn't even care if they were real or not, I just wanted to build a better space craft. It was while I was doing this over a ten year period that I started to realised it was possible and that using magnetic fields was the way to go in terms of propulsion.

When Lazar come onto the scene it was like a revaluation, which is why I felt he was telling the truth. He answered many questions I was asking myself about the kinds of magnetic drive configurations. I had my space craft using a magnetic ring configuration which got its energy from matter travelling at high speed inside the ring. But I was having so much trouble working out how to control the direction I wanted to go in. Lazar answered all of this question and problems for me. I have no evidence as to wether or not Lazar was telling the truth, but in my eyes he either has seen or worked with a real UFO or he is the must brilliant person on the planet. The space craft he showed us was just way to close to the mark to have been just a coincidence, as far as I can see. That craft would fly and fly just about anywhere one might want to go.

I abandoned my research for two reasons;

1: I learnt magnetic fields and humans just didn't get along and never ever would. I tried looking at a space suit one could wear to get around this problem using liquid oxygen to keep the crystal outer suit away from the skin, but with ever problem I would solve ten more would pop up. The only way around it that I could see, was to engineer a human body that wasn't effected as much by magnetic fields. Getting rid of waste was another problem as you couldn't take the suit off while out in space. Once you were in it that was you until you returned to Earth.

2: The fuel or power source I concluded the Grey are using. I found a link between us and all other life throughout the Universe with magnetic field being part and parcel of us getting to and from the afterlife/heaven. (what ever you religion says it to be) This started worrying me. Anyway I will not bore everyone here with what I think, but there is something very strange about how Mars came to be the way it is now and that pile of rocks orbiting the Sun in between Mars and Jupiter which cannot be there under natural circumstances, other wise there would be more of them in between all of the planets in our solar system. That pile of rocks might well have been a planet and were all our problems started. Oh and then there is the fact our moon stopped rotating, now why did that happen? Too many question with answers that lead one down a path with one conclusion standing out, Mining of resources.

Regardless of whom you are, all space craft need resources to build and power them. Even though there are lot's of rock, comets, ECT floating around out there in our solar system that could be used, I see it being easier to get these resources from Earth or the Moon and I am willing to bet my last dollar the Greys would take the easy path not the hard one.

One things is now without doubt though, magnetic drives are the way to go when looking at travelling long distances in space. But for the moment this will only be good for sending probes out into space.

NASA is looking into these magnetic waves at the moment. Information about the Cassini-Huygens mission is available online at:

November 15, 2001

ASU researchers set criteria for recognizing extraterrestrial life

For as long as people have gazed at the night sky, they have wondered if neighboring planets could be populated by living things. In fact, recent explorations of our solar system have relayed several enticing hints that the life-supporting conditions on Earth may not be so unique.

Evidence for water and organic compounds on Mars and Europa has astrobiologists seriously pursuing the possibility that primitive life once existed on other planets and moons. As they gear up for the real acid test - collecting samples from these distant bodies to examine them directly for evidence of life - they are tackling nothing less profound than the origins of life in the universe.

But this pursuit is nagged by an uncertainty: We have never seen our extraterrestrial cousins before. How will we recognize them if we meet face to face? Peter Buseck and Martha McCartney, new members of ASU's arm of the NASA Astrobiology Institute, are among many scientists who predict the best clues are to be found in lowly bacteria.

Buseck, Regents Professor of geological sciences and professor of chemistry and biochemistry at ASU, and McCartney, a research scientist at ASU's Center for Solid State Science, were recently funded by NASA to help develop reliable criteria for identifying traces of life, or "biomarkers," for use during future astrobiology missions.

Study of organisms from Earth, Buseck and McCartney argue, is the most promising way to start. After all, Earthly life is the only life we know, making it our one reference point in judging whether extraterrestrial life exists. Therefore, Buseck reasons, "if you find something in extraterrestrial samples that resembles life on Earth then it's reasonable to think that you have found traces of life" on other planets.

Because astrobiologists expect extraterrestrial life, if it exists, to be simple, terrestrial bacteria are getting top billing as model Martians. Bacteria are single-celled organisms, among the most primitive life forms on Earth. But the hunt for ancient bacteria presents some special challenges. Bacteria, all soft parts and no bones, do not usually leave any traces in the rock record, making their presence hard to prove. To unequivocally demonstrate that bacteria were ever present, Buseck stresses that "you need some sort of biomarker, some sort of remainder." Preferably, that biomarker should be a durable material, such as a mineral, that can survive for billions of

Just such a long-lasting biomarker may have already been found - in a NASA scientist team's 1996 claim of fossil bacteria in a 4.5 billion-year-old Martian meteorite, perhaps the most stunning evidence to date of extraterrestrial life. Not surprisingly, the claim continues to spark heated controversy. Buseck and McCartney aim to moderate the debate by putting the Martian life hypothesis to a very thorough test.

The group of scientists originally studying the now-renowned meteorite - known as ALH84001 - presented a slew of findings, including organic chemicals and "bacterium-shaped objects," that collectively cried "life." Since then, intense scrutiny by other researchers has shown that most of that evidence could have resulted from non-biological processes or artifacts introduced during study of the meteorite.

Only one of the original findings is still thought to be a unique indicator of life: Crystals of an iron-based mineral called magnetite. The crystals found in the meteorite are striking because magnetite grains with similar size, purity, and structural perfection previously have been seen only in bacteria found on Earth. According to the NASA group's report, no inorganic process could have produced the meteoritic crystals. Only so-called "magnetotactic" bacteria, which form the magnetite grains through a controlled process, can generate these particular shapes.

Magnetotactic bacteria, common in aquatic and marine habitats, produce and carry the magnetic crystals in a chain. The chain, which looks like a faux backbone under a microscope, acts like a compass as the bacterium swims along Earth's magnetic field lines.

These crystals are at the center of Buseck and McCartney's planned work. If bacterial synthesis is the single possible explanation for the magnetite grains found in ALH84001, they could be the one clear indication that life ever existed outside Earth. But, Buseck worries, if no major holes have yet been punched in this argument, that may be because it has not been examined closely enough.

And when Buseck says "closely," he means it quite literally. "These crystals are at the limit of what one can see, even with powerful electron microscopes," he says.

At 40 to 100 billionths of a meter wide, magnetite nanocrystals have evaded clear three-dimensional imaging. That's a problem for the hypothesis of life on Mars, which now hinges on precise matching of the complex shapes of the magnetite crystals from ALH84001 and from magnetotactic bacteria.

"There are questions about how well we know the shapes of these tiny crystals and how secure the identity is between those in the meteorites and those in the bacteria," says Buseck.

To be able to match the crystals from the two sources with confidence, Buseck says astrobiologists must first fulfill four clear objectives. "What we need to do is determine the shapes in the meteorites with high accuracy, determine the shapes of the crystals in bacteria with comparable accuracy, demonstrate their identity, and then somehow determine that there are no other ways of forming such crystals. Then we'd have a tight case." Of these four steps, Buseck and McCartney intend to test the first three. They are studying the shapes, chemical composition, and magnetic properties of both the meteoritic and bacterial magnetite grains in unprecedented detail. New developments in transmission electron microscopy, a technique in which samples are viewed with a beam of electrons rather than a beam of light, have only recently made such precise study of crystal shapes possible.

Using the recently improved techniques, the team will generate dozens of two-dimensional images taken from different angles as well as three-dimensional holograms of each magnetite grain. The resolution of their images will be in the range of hundreds of trillionths of a meter.

In these efforts, Buseck and McCartney plan to continue ongoing collaborations with fellow scientists Dennis Bazylinski (of Iowa State University), Richard Frankel (of the California Polytechnic State University), Rafal Dunin-Borkowski, (of Cambridge University, England), and Mih=Elly P=F3sfai (of the University of Veszpr=E9m, Hungary).

Their work will provide improved data and criteria for use in evaluating whether other magnetite grains, from meteorites or from samples collected in outer space, have a biological origin. Of course, ALH84001 will be the first Martian rock subjected to Buseck and McCartney's uncompromising analysis.

Naturally a person would realize that the attitudes of the skeptics are also entirely predictable.

1) It absolutly can't be therefor it isn't.

2) All evidence, whether it comes up now or years in the future all point to the existance of some "hoax" "misidentification of other such.

then we are told the witness was misidentifying stars.

4) If a witness were to say "I saw a meteor blazing through the

People have been breathlessly waiting for an all encompassing explanation for Rendlesheim...and so far the skeptics and some of the so called UFOlogists have been asleep at the switch so to speak.

Did the former PMs assistant "deny" in writing the context of the book and or Rendlesheim?

No more vague and meaningless then any politicians speech, say Tony Blair, GW, or Clinton.

Actually publishers are quite sensitive to things that go into books. If the former PM hasn't denied the comment and or context in public it says alot about the truthfulness of the comment.

Nor, does it appear that these sources are any more reliable then so called intelligence community sources (whose information is instantly vomited in the public arena on the Art Bell show by researchers) who are billed in such terms as top drawer, totally

That was always a possibility in the back of my mind, but the black

When you unload this theory with the accompanying evidence you

If the evidence stands and can take the examination great. If it doesn't then it will just be another theory on the Rendlesheim

>the statements about getting facts right and "You can't tell the >people." For Georgina Bruni to suggest that Mrs. Thatcher/her PA
>"would say that wouldn't she" means that, in effect, Thatcher >cannot be relied upon to tell the truth in the first place!
>Georgina's use of Margaret Thatcher is, therefore, is NOT >justified.

Did the former PMs assistant "deny" in writing the context of the book and or Rendlesheim?

>6 - Given the vague and almost meaningless comments made by Mrs.
>T we are interested to know rather more about the circumstances >in which these comments were made, times, dates, places etc. As >a journalist I would have taken either shorthand notes or made a >recording, especially if I was going to ask specifically about >UFOs.

No more vague and meaningless then any politicians speech, say Tony Blair, GW, or Clinton.

>Georgina Bruni, who I quite like actually but who keeps claiming >that I am attacking her, has made much of Mrs. T's comments and >wrote to me suggesting that Macmillan, her publishers, must have >been satisfied that she (Georgina) had accurately reflected her >conversation with the former PM. Our view is that Macmillan, >like other publishers, are only concerned to make money, to sell >books. They are not taking a position as regards the evidence, >only seeking to maximise sales via spin and clever marketing. I >don't blame them.

Actually publishers are quite sensitive to things that go into books. If the former PM hasn't denied the comment and or context in public it says alot about the truthfulness of the comment.

>7 - Furthermore, Mrs. Thatcher's comments, as limited and as >vague as they were, are being taken as seriously as Ronald >Reagan's public comments about "an alien invasion" made during >the 1980s. It is doubtful that he had any hard data on aliens

This comment assumes facts not yet in evidence.

>and, if we are to believe the cover up and conspiracy merchants, >wouldn't have blabbed in public anyway. Nevertheless, his >comments were typical of the man; written for effect and high >drama, trying to explain difficult concepts (nations working >together) in simple terms. He probably didn't even write the >words himself. His comments about "aliens" do no mean that >either he or his British opposite number were the thirteenth and >fourteenth members of MJ-12!

>8 - It seems, from some quarters, that people are having a >problem finding data on nuclear accidents of any magnitude in >the UK. That is because much of the data has been in dispute >since the industry began in the mid 1950s. Some has been buried, >some covered up.

>Nuclear power is and has been a much hotter political potato >than anyone is giving credit for and people forget the symbiotic >relationship between nuclear weaponry and nuclear power >generation. They also forget the political realities and >paranoia of the Cold War, which many of us are convinced had a >bearing on UFOs. The Hilda Murrell case and many others strongly >suggest that we are in no way party to the facts in relation to >the nuclear industry. In any case, people who have worked within >the industry have been the most dangerous to the industry in >highlighting its safety failures.

>9 - We are not saying, and neither are our sources, that this >was a 'major leak' of material. It didn't have to be to set >alarm bells ringing. Simply because there is no official >documentation (or appears not to be) is neither here nor there.

Nor, does it appear that these sources are any more reliable
then so called intelligence community sources (whose information is instantly vomited in the public arena on the Art Bell show by researchers) who are billed in such terms as top drawer, totally reliable, everything they say is truth, and so on. Point is by your own admission what these people are telling you and claiming apparently cannot be independently documented or verified thus far.

<snip>

>10 - Related to the above are other obvious nuclear-type >incidents, like Cash Landrum. Not the same we know, but it still >remains within the UFO literature, despite the fact that this >was not an "alien" incident. Furthermore, there are other

Nor do we actually and truly know that it was some kind of "nuclear incident" "spy sat reentry" "test of some advanced technology" and so on.

<snip>

>12 - Despite the Doty affair and the scandals surrounding the >Bennewitz/Moore/MJ-12 hoax business we find Ufologists in the UK >denying that AFOSI, stationed here and with plenty of power >within its remit, could have had anything to do with >disinformation at Rendlesham. This is, quite frankly the worst >kind of armchair BS. Not only do people NOT know what AFOSI was >doing for sure, but they simply ignore the fact that the same >agency was using and abusing Ufology and Ufologists during the >period we are interested in, 1980-1983.

Likewise you have no solid, verifiable information that the AFOSI was conducting some kind of disinformation program in the UK.

>13 - Ironically, we have discovered new information about UFO >activity in the last two weeks that indicates that something >intriguing was going on in East Anglia in the mid-late 1970s.

So what is it?

>(This may not related to my personal belief that RAF Alconbury >was a temporary station for secret/black project aircraft in the >UK in the late 1970s (from 1978 onwards).)

That was always a possibility in the back of my mind, but the black project was likely UK as the only known USAF was the stealth and it didn't get out of the US until later.

>14 - So, there is much for us to do, hence Stage 2, which begins >now. The evaluation of existing research, such as it is, and >researching new information, which could take some time. We >never expected any help from the UFO community, do not ask it >and, probably, do not need it although there are some notable >exceptions. People have privately e-mailed us saying things >like, "well, we think this is really good stuff but couldn't >admit it in on the forums!"

>In conclusion I should say that, unlike so many people, we do >not have fixed beliefs about Rendlesham and it is with an open >mind and new facts that we look forward to the challenge of >presenting our considered opinions in due course.

When you unload this theory with the accompanying evidence you can just about guarantee that it will be checked and rechecked
If the evidence stands and can take the examination great. If it doesn't then it will just be another theory on the Rendlesheim dung heap.

Robert

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD WITH SKIES OF BLUE AND CLOUDS OF WHITE AND EVEN SOME UFOs. They have been reported in New York, New Jersey, North Carolina, Georgia Wisconsin, Missouri, Texas, Arizona, Idaho, Oregon/Washington, California, Canada, Argentina, and Chili.

GIVE THANKS: Our world changed on September 11, I ask for your prayers for the sick who write us and our country and the world. Give thanks with a grateful heart; give thanks to the Holy one who gave his Son. And now let the weak say I'm strong and the poor say, I am rich for what the Lord has done. This is a decisive time of hatred and war, at Thanksgiving its time to pray, give thanks, and reflect. Prayer can heal sickness and help you personally a great deal. The Bible says, "If my people who are called by my name will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and heal their land." Happy Thanksgiving to everyone and remember there is someone out there watching.

ASTRONAUT COMMANDER EUGENE CERNAN

Eugene Cernan was the commander of Apollo 17 that flew to the moon. In a Los Angeles Times article in 1973 he said, about UFOs: "I've been asked (about UFOs) and I've said publicly I thought they (UFOs) were somebody else, some other civilization."

PRIME MINISTER BLAIR REVEALS EVIDENCE AGAINST AL QAEDA

LONDON -- The British government has announced that in an unbroadcast video tape made last month, Osama bin Laden declared that his al Qaeda network "instigated" the attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon. Bin Laden's video states, "if avenging the killing of our people is terrorism, let history be a witness that we are terrorists." Bin Laden made the video on October 20 for secret distribution to al Qaeda members, but British intelligence learned of its contents. Prime Minister Tony Blair said in an address to Parliament that Bin Laden admitted the attacks, saying, "It is what we instigated, for a while, in self-defense. And it was revenge for our people killed in Palestine and Iraq. Bush and Blair don't understand any language but the language of force. Every time they kill us, we will kill them, so the balance of terror can be achieved." The British government did not release the video. It is interesting to note that during Congressional Iran Contra Hearings fifteen years ago, Lt. Col. Oliver North warned that the terrorist Osama Bin Laden had threatened him and his family and in his opinion, "He is the most evil person alive that I know of."

LEONID METEOR STORM!

Sunday morning I was one of many who watched the Leonid meteor storm light up the early morning sky at 5:00 AM. It was the best show in some 35 years. There were hundreds of meteorites making the most exciting display, I have ever seen. A combination of clear skies and no moon made for a great show.

NEW YORK CIGAR

PLEASANTVILLE -- On November 11, 2001, at 11:20 PM the witness saw a very large cigar shaped object traveling very fast. The witness reports, "I was looking at the sky while my dogs got their nightly exercise. Very dim lights traveling across the sky caught my peripheral vision. There were 4 or 5 of them that came from a long object traveling south very quickly at about 60 degrees above the horizon. It was silent. I could see the lights for 4 or 5 seconds then lost it in the glare from the Ford dealership lights. Thanks to Peter B. Davenport, NUFORC www.UFOCENTER.com Reporting Hotline:(206) 722-3000

NEW JERSEY CIGAR SIMILAR EARLIER REPORT

CARNEYS POINT -- At 12:35 PM, a veteran police officer and private pilot, accompanied by a legal professional saw a brownish black cylinder shaped object flew over their vehicle at 250 feet altitude on May 18, 1996. The sighting lasted five seconds before it vanished. One 50 feet long cylinder shaped object, dull brownish black in color, with a metal tail structure, crossed S.W. to N.E. across dual highway at moderate speed over our vehicle. The sighting lasted about five seconds, after which object vanished. The leading edges of structure appeared to display the dull pattern typical of "re-entry burn" on the space shuttle. Local weather verified to be: Bar: 29.99, Visibility: 2 miles, ceiling 800 feet, Temp: 66 Deg. F, Dew Point: 63 F, Hum: 90%, Wind: SSE 6 mph. Thanks to Peter B. Davenport, NUFORC, www.Ufocenter.com.

NORTH CAROLINA FLYING TRIANGLE

SHILOH -- On November 11, 2001 at 6:20 PM a large triangular shaped object with large blue lights suddenly made a quick u-turn and hovered a mile away. The witness reports, "My husband and I were driving and as we approached an intersection near a small airport. There was a large triangular shaped object very close to the ground slowly moving over the intersection. We drove toward the object and as we got closer to about 30 feet away, we could see three large blue lights (one in each corner). It suddenly rose up and made a fast u-turn. In less than five seconds it was gone, quickly heading the other way. About three miles from the intersection, my husband and I looked back and it seemed to be a hovering bright light at or near the airport. The strangest thing about the whole ordeal was there was no sound at all. There was a car about two car-lengths in front of us who I am sure saw it too. Believe me, you couldn't miss it. Thanks to Peter B. Davenport, Director National UFO Reporting Center www.UFOCENTER.com

OKLAHOMA FLASHING RED LIGHT

CHICKASAW STATE PARK, SULPHUR -- On November 10, 2001, from the south the witness observed what appeared to be a small, round, white light moving fairly slowly in all directions at 9:35 PM. At first it was behind trees but then it increased it's altitude and moved above the trees. The witness thought the light was no more than 100 yards away. Another witness thought it was no closer than a mile. At first its movement was slow and steady, moving toward the west while traveling up and down. It looked more like it was floating as apposed to flying. After a minute or two, it picked up speed moving toward the west or northwest. At this point, I grabbed my binoculars and lost visual contact for a few seconds. When I found it in my binoculars, it was traveling at a high rate of speed and had a flashing red light on its tail, like an airplane. One of the witnesses confirmed that I was indeed still observing the same object. It now moved and looked like an airplane. I couldn't see wings or anything like that but like I said, it now had a flashing red light on its "tail." When the red light would blink, the front portion of the object appeared to have a slight tint of yellow to it. I noticed that I could hear a jet in the far distance but have no idea if it was coming from an actual airplane or from this object. Thanks to Peter B. Davenport, Director National UFO Reporting Center www.UFOCENTER.com Reporting Hotline: (206) 722-3000

GEORGIA ABDUCTIONS

Researcher John Thompson has some thoughts on abductions related to the new Terrorist situation. One of the possibilities why so many abductions have taken place across America during the last decade is to weaken the resolve and resistance of America. As you know, I've advocated for a long time that abductions are really about "mind-control" and not the fanciful extraterrestrial kidnappings that many entertain. We have to assume that along with the general population an equal percentage of our nation's leaders have been abducted and "conditioned" over the years. Listening to recent talk radio shows some callers have expressed outrage that our response to the 09/11/01 slaughter has been far too politically correct. Coalition building and sensitivity to concerns of Muslims have over-ridden a true and strict military retaliation against the Islamic killers responsible for much of the world's terrorism over the last quarter-of-a-century. Diligent mind control and "programming" applied to selected individuals in the United States could do much to defeat America and the West. While abductions have occurred worldwide, their frequency and dispersion seems to pale in comparison to the estimated millions of Americans that have been abducted. Indeed, there is almost no data to suggest that abductions are numerous in the Third World. The target of the abductors seems to be more of where the real power of the world resides: America and Western Europe. While culture, language difficulties, and lack of investigators in the Third World may keep reports of abductions low, I personally have heard of none from the Modest and South-central Asia while hearing of some in Africa, which is far more improvised. America is the leader of the non-Muslim world. To many Muslims, America is the enemy and the leader of the infidels; that is, non-believers. It may well be that we are engaged in a grand Crusade and abductions are simply another weapon being employed by demonic entities to give an edge to an otherwise weaker enemy. ## MISSOURI SILVER CIGAR UFO

KANSAS CITY -- On November 10, 2001, James A. Tutt Jr. saw a silver cigar shaped UFO flying over East 87th Street toward the Kansas City limits near the over and under pass area of I-435. It was 11:00 AM, and the sky was clear. James was using his powered + binoculars and noticed an object standing still east of him at about 25 to 30,000 feet altitude. The object continued hovering over the I-435 until he lost sight of it. The cigar was silver color and may have had fins on it, but it was too high to tell. This is not the first time that a similar object was seen. On September 27, 2001, there was a sighting of another cigar shaped craft with several fins on its side. The craft was the size of a small house. Thanks to James Allen Tutt Jr

TEXAS LIGHTS

HOUSTON -- F Beau Spikes reports he and his wife saw unexplainable lights in the sky each night from October 30, to November 4, 2001, on several nights, two other friends also saw them. The friends were located five miles away nearer to Spring, Texas. We saw many light patterns from it with all colors. It would hover from side to side and up and down. We saw it for 30 or 45 minutes then went to bed, at 11:00 PM The second night we saw it again, 35 degrees up a little to the south from previous night. We watched for 2.5 hours, until 2:00 AM. The third night there was only one; I observed it from 12:00 to 12:30 AM. Fourth night there were three UFOs a little more south in a pattern like a check mark. They took turns being "active." We watched from 7:30 to 9:30 PM. In addition, my friends my neighbor too had binoculars so I could see the colors as little bit better. There were brilliant colors of every shade, but mostly blue, purple, and green. Last night was a full moon too, and these "devices" still were plainly visible but the stars were not. We called the local FOX weather desk; they reported no meteors or weather balloons etc. These sightings in my opinion are definitely mechanical in nature. I don't know what they are but stars don't jiggle and bobble, stars don't appear to flash symmetric and lit appendages with alternating colors. Stars don't often change shape and have straight-line emissions and stars or planets don't change patterns in a group within a couple of hours. This is why my wife and I were convinced we were watching something bizarre. Seeing that they appear (from my perspective) near a major international airport, I doubt it would be foreign technology. Thanks to F Beau Spikes (Beauknowz@yahoo.com) who writes, thanks for your reply, I would like to be contacted by a MUFON investigator. In addition, I have already entered a report at the form on the MUFON main page.

ARLINGTON ALIEN ACCOUNT -- A college student worked in a paint store frequented by a painter who claimed to have alien encounters. He was a peculiar kind of guy who lived, alone, in a small house outside the city limits. "He often talked about being visited by beings from other planets and strange futuristic technology that they had showed him and space ships and the like. The painter and college student became friendly as the painter began to talk about his leaving this earth to go to live on another planet. They showed him all their strange machines. The painter told the college student that he had no family and that before he left this earth to go and live on another planet, he wanted to deed his house and land to him. The student told him (with tongue in cheek) that, "sure," before he left for outer space, he could deed his house to him. The painter transferred his house, and land and all his assets to my business associate. In addition, within a matter of days from doing so, the painter called him and told him to come to a certain field on his property at a certain time that very evening. He told him that he would be leaving this earth with the men from outer space tonight, never to return, and that the student would be able to see him leave on the space ship if he would be at the field at the appointed time. The student drove up to the man's property, parked his car, and walked to the particular field that the painter had specified. As he approached, he could see a strange kind of green mist-like light coming from behind the rise of earth ahead of him. When he reached the edge of a berm he saw a saucer shaped craft hovering just a couple of feet or so above the ground and glowing green. The painter appeared and looked over at him, and acknowledged his presence with a wave. An opening appeared in the saucer and the painter entered.

The craft shot straight up in the air and in a matter of only seconds was a bright dot that just disappeared. After a while, when he realized the painter was really not coming back, he and his wife and children moved into the house that the painter had deeded to him. They did not stay very long. He said, "You wouldn't believe all the strange, eerie things that went on in that house." He added that some of the technology (having to do with computers and nanotechnology) that exists today are things that the painter had told them about that seemed so far-fetched at that time. He is a very no-nonsense kind of person, which makes me believe his story even more. Talk at you later, ufopi@aol.com (name removed) Mike_Harman @rocketmail.com

ARIZONA GOLD UFO

GLENDALE -- Rick reports seeing what appeared to him as a UFO on November 6, 2001. He says, "I just witnessed the best thing ever." I have never seen one before only read about them on different sites. However, the object I saw at about 9: 25 PM, was lower than most aircraft in the area and shooting across the sky at a high rapid rate much faster than the aircraft here. The object was round, the bottom looked like a reddish gold color, no lights and no sound. I ran downstairs, from my apartment, went to the parking lot, not 3 to 4 seconds later and the object was gone. I read your site and other's and has had many mixed feelings until now. Now, I myself have become a believer. I thought you would like to know my story; I'm very excited about the entire event and wanted to share this extraordinary night. Thank you for your time. Thanks to Rick Glendale at Eichbaum74, and Joe Trainor Masinaigan

IDAHO FLYING WING

NAMPA -- D. Kennedy reports a flying wing entered our line of site as we were watching the Leonid meteor shower on November 18, 2001. It flew directly over us then off to the south at 2:45 AM. It made "NO" noise, and had "No" lights. There was a faint temperature glow on the leading edge of the wing, tip to tip. Altitude was impossible to tell. If it were higher than 5,000 feet the craft would have been extremely large. It did resemble

a B-2 Stealth bomber, but without the sharp angles. All the edges were rounded, more like a boomerang. My wife observed it as well. The color was dark, possibly black with a rounded boomerang shaped flying wing with temperature glow on leading edge of wing. The height and speed are unknown. The higher it was? The larger and faster it would have been. Joe Trainor writes, "Here's a sighting from Idaho. However, it sounds less like a UFO than some sort of flight test of a prototype "flying wing" aircraft of our U.S. Air Force. I was amused to see that this event took place in Nampa. In 1883, this town was the site of a very unusual Fortean event. A man named M.A. Kurz began drilling a well, and the sump pump spit up a human figurine of incalculable age from a depth of 300 feet below ground. Part of the "doll" had begun to metamorphose, showing an age of hundreds of thousands of years. Good luck with The UFO Store. Thanks to Joe Trainor Masinaigan

CALIFORNIA DISC

Last Sunday, November 11, 2001, my mother and I saw a UFO. It was about four minutes after seven when my mother called me out of my room to our back porch. She pointed out an object that at first looked like a bright star. Then it started to move very slowly and we began to see more detail. There was a red intense red aura type of light surrounding the object just enough to make out a shape with binoculars. This thing was far away at least a thousand feet up, and kind of a disc shape with a black mass to it. It appeared then it would disappear for about 4 to 6 seconds. Then a red ball object came out of the lighted end and seemed like it dropped like a flare after you shot in the sky. I can tell I never been so excited I finally saw one after all these years of looking in the sky. Thanks to RT

OREGON TV NEWS REPORTS ON UFOs

PORTLAND -- The 10 o'clock KPTV News reports on November 15, 2001, includes video film of alleged UFOs. -- The Pacific Northwest is no stranger to the UFO phenomenon. For years, Mount Adams, in south central Washington, has been a hub for UFO activity. Mount Adams is home to what some call UFO's and others call naturally occurring lights or satellites. Hundreds of people have claimed to see the lights, and one man who lives near the mountain even claims to have contact with the extraterrestrial beings that are behind the lights. When James Gilliland built his home just outside Trout Lake, Washington, he had no idea it sat right in the middle of a UFO flight path. He and hundreds of other who frequent his 70-acre property near the mountain believe the lights are UFO's. Gilliland has recorded over 15 hours of video of the strange lights. Gilliland also claims he has had direct contact with the inter-dimensional spiritual beings who control what he calls light ships. "These are very advanced beings technologically, spiritually we have to rise to the occasion," said Gilliland. Others say the strange lights are just natural occurring nocturnal geo-thermal lights or satellites. OMSI planetarium director Jim Todd says the images on James Gilliland's video look like ordinary satellites to him. "I can understand their excitement cause they see something moving across the stars. I've seen a lot of satellites space station shuttle and their fun to watch they really are," said Todd. More than 30 years ago, scientists from around the country began documenting the strange light phenomenon. In 1972, "The Investigation of Nocturnal Light Phenomena at Toppensh, Washington" was released. The report outlines several encounters, such as the following: "The light moved so fast it gave the impression of a streak. It would appear stationary for a moment and then almost instantaneously appear some distance away." Now, over thirty years later, there are still no clear answers to the mysterious lights, but Gilliland does say the aliens have a message for all of humanity. "We need to clean up our consciousness. Clean up our environment, raise up, and lead a spiritual way of life." Thanks to darkwynnter@att.net

CANADA THREE CYLINDER UFOs

ONTARIO -- Paul wrote I told my father was visiting me last week and I showed him the on line video of the Disclosure seminar. He reminded me of his unexplained encounter he had. This encounter happened a few years ago while he was working far up in Northern Canada. He was a hydro station inspector. He spent many nights awake looking at the skies and wolves. He is an amateur photographer and was looking to get shots of the wolves feeding at night, anyway he was gazing at the perfectly clear mid winter night, when he noticed three objects in the sky that were quite high in elevation. They were side by side and the middle object was longer than the outside two. The 3 objects were cylindrical shaped, joined together by small joints, like balls on a string. Then one of the outside objects split off, flew a wide circle around the sky, and then shot off out of sight. The middle larger object and the smaller object beside turned lengthwise and seem to face end down towards him. They had very bright lights. They held this position for a while then separated and shot out of sight. He has never told anyone of his encounter for fear of ridicule. He is a very honest person and knows aircraft as he was flying in helicopters all the time in the north. He does have a photo of the objects, which I have seen and are amazing. We both firmly believe we are not alone, how can you not with the billions of solar systems out there. Its time for governments to admit it. Thanks to Paul Cook in Toronto.

ARGENTINA STRANGE FAST STROBING LIGHTS

BUENOS AIRES -- An air of confusion and suspicion surrounds an hour-long incident in the night skies over the South Atlantic Argentine airspace. The Argentinean newspaper Clarin, reports a Lear Jet carrying Lt. Governor Daniel Gallo, encountered unidentified bright flashing lights in the sky over Patagonia. Piloted by commander Mariano Zalotti and copilot Mario Beban, the aircraft had left Jorge Newbery Airfield at 20.50 hours, November 12, and set course for the airport at R=Alo Grande. The jet was traveling at a height of 10,000 meters when they saw a nearby blinking lights in the darkness. The "estroboc=A2picas" [strobe] lights appeared on the left side of their aircraft. "Nevertheless, I never thought that it could be a foreign military airplane invading our airspace," the three occupants of the aircraft discounted the lights as being either a UFO and theorized that they could have belonged instead to a British aircraft, whose base is at Mount Pleasant, in the Falkland Islands." When flying over the city of Commodore Rivadavia, 75 miles out to sea [Strait of Magellan G-fs], we observed for the first time the flashing lights that followed a short distance, flying the same map course to a height superior and of greater speed", Commander Zalotti said later. "Then we flew at a cruising speed of 900 kilometers per hour." A British Embassy spokesman in Buenos Aires denied that it could have been an aircraft from that country and described the claim by the pilots as "speculation without sense." There was confirmation that no other Argentinean aircraft had been flying in the area at this time. Thanks to FarShhores@canada.com, Wilmar Caballero

CHILE UFO VIDEO TAPED

The following message was received by Inexplicata from Rodrigo Cuadra Salazar of Chile's TOC (Tecnologia, OVNIS y Ciencia) Channel 13 of the Catholic University of Chile broadcast a UFO filmed by Eric Martinez, a member of the GEO group, on Saturday, November 10, 2001. The UFO was filmed over the hills surrounding the La Florida commune. A curious detail is that one object was filmed by day, and another object was filmed at night. They could be one and the same. #### NEW NASA SHUTTLE VIDEO OF UFOs IN SPACE

Jeff Challender has prepared a new tape of various UFOs that were caught on recent Shuttle video footage. Jeff has over an hour long tape of UFOs shot in space. Jeff spends hundreds of hours watching the shuttle broadcasts from space and is now an expert on NASA missions and even those onboard the shuttle are unlikely to see what Jeff does. Using Jeff's directions you will be able to learn the difference between space junk, ice crystals and real UFOs. I feel confident we could go into a court of law and convince any jury that there are UFOs moving at high speed around the Earth. ## Like A Rollin' Stone

From: Jim Mortellaro <Jsmortell@aol.com>

Fwd Date: Sat, 24 Nov 2001 10:21:03 -0500
Subject: Like A Rollin' Stone

How does it feel? To be on your own. Like a complete unknown... like a rollin' stone...

There is a down side to the abduction experience. It's called depression. Some call it post traumatic syndrome. Others call it just plain painful in ways unimaginable. I call it worse than all that.

The abduction experience is for me, a life long series of unnatural events, culminating in some strange inability to comprehend just what it was that happened. It is completely unexplainable in our paradigm. And much worse, it is a horridly complex mix of feelings, emotional and physical feelings, which do not belong together in any normal circumstance.

When such occurs, it's like having to undergo surgery for the umpteenth time. You know exactly what is going to happen all over again. Ever had that experience? As a young man I was burdened with having had multiple surgeries on the exact same area. Every time it was required, I was nearly in tears. I knew what I would have to suffer all over again. I knew the pain. I remembered the indignities of having to be in the hospital under those circumstances. Etc.

The abduction experience is much like that. Only worse. Worse, because it happens over, and over and over again. Without let up and like the jingle for that old Candid Camera program, "When it's least expected ..." This can be torture of the worst kind. It is for most.

But there are some redeeming features to this scenario. For one, it engenders in me at least, an anger against my abductors which is most cathartic. I merely hate their guts. That hatred is strong, it assists in letting the charge go, much like a lightning rod. Into the night goes the charge, into the ground, shorting the strike. Me.

But some feel their pain within, to the extent that it becomes a part of them. They attempt to get it out of their systems along with the fear, the panic, the terror, the strangeness, the expectation of that which they absolutely know for certain will come again. This is a burden which no one can bare, without a catharsis of some kind. Those who for whatever reason, are unable to catheterize those terrible feelings and emotions are bound to suffer a life of sudden and intense anger, of substance abuse and of a level of instability which at most times is bizarre.

And no one is immune. No one. The most intellectual of us, the one who assumes the posture of calm thoughtfulness, the one who is stoic and mild in his demeanor, even this person is not immune to the angst.

With me, I occasionally become depressed. Usually it is when I perceive something has happened to me (I've had an experience) or when I recall some event which for whatever reason, has eluded me for a long time. And in writing of my experiences, this recall is one of the best and one of the worst things which could happen.

It is the best because I recall things which have been lurking within for many years. Recently I recalled something which I had not remembered since 1954 or so.

The worst, because along with the recall of the perception come the exact feelings, the emotions, all the terror and the pain (if any during that perception) which was felt at the time. It all comes rushing in to a mind already burdened with hidden memories and which has reeled from previous recalled events.

Can you imagine remembering when you were a kid and fell down and broke your arm or leg? But not just the memory of falling off your bike or being hit by a car, but actually feeling ... _feeling_ ... the pain exactly as you did then ... feeling the terror, calling your mommy, screaming when the EMT's had to get you into the ambulance? Can you imagine reliving all those feelings in a rush?

This is the experience which I've had. And without hypnosis. In fact, this is the experience which has been explained to me by some of those who have had the regression. The only difference between this writer and those I've polled, is that this writer has little doubt that no one has influenced my memories. Notice I used the word "little." The doubt is always there. Otherwise I would be a little ferblungit as well as fresh fallen off the turnip truck.

This is the life of one who thinks he is an abductee. I wanted you people who perceive that you are researchers on this List, to take a glimpse into my world. It is a world in which I, just like you, must work, play, have a family and deal with the vagaries of life. Add to that mix, the other feelings, memories and emotions which I've outlined, and there you have a life made much more difficult by the combination and addition of these extra burdens.

Now, ever wonder why some of us go a little bonkers now and again? Or need to howl with the dogs? Or create creatures like Gesundt to take the pain away for just a little while? Ever wonder how a man can recreate his life with those horrible memories, the recall, etc., and still function?

I do and I am not an alcoholic, drug abuser or even a drinker. I am merely afraid. All the time. And the shrinks I've seen think it's just phobia.

And the check is in the male.

To be successful in life with these things over your shoulders makes you look and feel like superman.

Dr. J. Jaime Superman Gesundt and my dog Pepe, he lives in there with me too.

Tim Matthews wrote:

>that she knew anything about Rendlesham.

Margaret Thatcher said exactly what I quoted her as saying, nothing more, nothing less. Rendlesham was not even mentioned.
Please read my book where the conversation is explained in more detail.

>We have a letter, dated 12th November 2001, from the former >PM's Personal Assistant, telling us that, having worked with >Mrs. Thatcher for some time, she is often heard to say, "you >must get your facts right."

Well, there you have it then. I have never worked for Thatcher so I don't know what words she so often uses. I just know that she used those exact words when she answered my questions concerning the UFO problem.

>Furthermore, we are told that, "You should not read much into"
>the statements about getting facts right and "You can't tell the >people."

Really!. Well, did Thatcher's PA offer any explanation why her boss should use these words (some she so often uses) and yet you are told not to read too much into them. So when Thatcher talks to people in government or otherwise, telling them that they must have their facts, is she not to be taken seriously?

And isn't it very interesting that the PA did not deny that Thatcher said these words to me, especially "You can't tell the people". Even more to the point is the subject matter which prompted these responses. UFO's.

>For Georgina Bruni to suggest that Mrs. Thatcher/her PA
>"would say that wouldn't she" means that, in effect, Thatcher >cannot be relied upon to tell the truth in the first place!
>Georgina's use of Margaret Thatcher is, therefore, is NOT >justified.

I do not agree with that statement from you. I simply meant that there is no way that Margaret Thatcher would admit to that conversation. I did not say that she would deny it ever took place. You have to understand the repercussions if she admitted to it, which I doubt she would ever do. I certainly respect her for not denying it though.

>6 - Given the vague and almost meaningless comments made by Mrs.

First of all, there was nothing vague or meaningless about that conversation, or indeed her comments. I would have thought that needed no explanation.

The details of this event were given to my publisher and certain respected journalists. You say that you would have taken notes or made a recording if you were going to ask specific questions about UFO's. Well, let me fill you in on a few facts. You have obviously not paid attention to my book, in which I explain what took place that evening.

I was a guest that evening at a table of lawyers. I did not talk to Baroness Thatcher until the end of dinner. I had no intention of discussing UFOs, I was in a conversation with her that was very private, the conversation went on for about ten minutes. It was only when she said: 'It's these private things that the people don't know about that make the Conservative party so good,' that I realised that was an ideal opening to ask her to comment concerning some interviews I had done with former military personnel and scientists regarding back engineering of alien technology and so on.... Because of the seriousness of our previous conversation, and the fact that she knew I was a guest at this very prestigious dinner, she obviously felt that she could make these comments. So, your idea that I could have taken notes or recorded that conversation is so ridiculous. It was not planned! For your information, I was so amazed by what she had said that I called Nick Pope at 2am, when I arrived home, and he made notes.

>Georgina Bruni, who I quite like actually but who keeps claiming >that I am attacking her, has made much of Mrs. T's comments and >wrote to me suggesting that Macmillan, her publishers, must have >been satisfied that she (Georgina) had accurately reflected her >conversation with the former PM. Our view is that Macmillan, >like other publishers, are only concerned to make money, to sell >books. They are not taking a position as regards the evidence, >only seeking to maximise sales via spin and clever marketing. I >don't blame them.

You have obviously not worked with any major publishing house. My publisher required a great deal of information from me, including details of the Thatcher meeting. I gave them a list of the prestigious guests and the names of the organisers, which included the wife of a former Minister of State for Defence. The only thing I cannot prove is the actual content of that conversation because my only witness is Maggie's husband, Denis Thatcher and possibly the two Special Branch protectors that were standing close by.

By the way, The rest of your post is also based on speculation.

Best wishes

Georgina

Budd Hopkins' Holiday Party & Art Sale - 12/8/01

Budd Hopkins Intruders Foundation
Annual Gala Fundraiser And Art Sale

Date: Saturday, December 8th
Time: 7:30 PM - 10:00 PM
Location: Budd Hopkins Art Studio, New York City

Many members and IF supporters will remember, with pleasure, last year's fundraiser - a combination party and art exhibition and sale at Budd Hopkins' Chelsea studio. We're going to do it again this year, but it will be bigger and better than ever. The party starts at 7:30 p.m., and we will offer red and white wine, soft drinks, coffee, hors d'oeuvres, cakes, homemade pastries, and other treats. There will also be some surprise guests noted UFO researchers and experiencers plus a raffle for a desirable door prize, an intriguing art exhibition, and a tour of Budd Hopkins' studio and personal art collection.

As before, there are two ticket prices: a $25 contribution to IF entitles you to join the festivities, but for those who make a $100 contribution to IF, you not only attend the party and bring a guest with you, but you also receive a gift of a work of art, a painting, drawing, collage, signed lithograph, etching or photograph, framed and ready for hanging! Many of these works are by artists of national reputation and are worth far more than the $100 contribution you are making to IF.

For those making the $100 contribution, you will select your work from a wall of desirable paintings, drawings and other artworks in the following way. When you arrive at Hopkins' studio, you take a number from out of a hat, lottery fashion. The lucky person who picks number one gets first choice from the wall of artworks. Number two gets second choice, number three, third choice, and so on. And so it is highly possible that if a contributor receives, for example, number fifteen, that person's first choice, the work he or she most desires might still be available, not yet having been selected by anyone else. But in any case, each $100 contributor is guaranteed an artwork.

Attendance will be limited to 75 people, so we recommend making an early reservation. Reservations can be made by calling IF at 212-645-5278. Checks made out to IF for the type of contribution you wish to make can be mailed to IF, Box 30233, New York, NY 10011. Remember, you are making a contribution to a not-for-profit organization whose goals you share, and whose accomplishments you have recognized. Thus, for $100 you receive not only a personal sense of satisfaction for having aided a cause in which you believe, but also you and your guest will enjoy a party in an artist's studio and you will obtain an artwork for your home. A bargain, no matter how you slice it.

We look forward to seeing you there!

UFO Photo Cards

On newsstands beginning the month of October is a collection of Edis Edition photo cards entitled "Misteri e Magie" ("Mysteries and The Magical").

The album (costing 2,900 lire) comprises 204 photo cards subdivided into six sections: mysteries of land, of nature, of history, of humankind, and of space, plus an atlas of mysteries.

The UFO section consists of 30 photo cards, all related to classic cases (Arnold, Mantell, Roswell, Socorro, Hill, Walton, etc.).

Among the sources recommended for further research over the Internet, the only Italian one on UFOs is the Website of the CISU UFO ONLINE (www.ufo.it).

On November 24, James Oberg wrote exasperated that he is unable to find some of the famous UFO quotes that are sometimes used by Ufologists.

In particular Oberg was puzzled by the following Eugene Cernan, Apollo 17 Commander quote,

"I'm one of those guys who has never seen a UFO. But I've been asked, and I've said publicly I thought they were somebody else; some other civilization..."

One of Oberg's long time acquaintances has suggested to me he look at,

Chriss, Nicholas, "Cernan Says Other Earths Exist," Los Angeles Times, January 6, 1973.

I asked Barry Greenwood to check his clipping collection for the article containing Cernan's quote. His answer:

The article is authentic, Jan. 6, 1973: "Cernan Says Other Earths Exist"

"I'm one of those guys who has never seen a UFO (Unidentified Flying Object). But I've been asked, and I've said publicly I thought they were somebody else,
some other civilization." Gene Cernan, 1-6-1973

It goes on about his positive views on life in space and the abundance of other civilizations.

So the quote is slightly different than given many places on the web, but it is authentic.

Hi John,

Sorry for the few days in responding, just very busy these days as usual. Colin or Paul Vigay would be better able to answer these questions in terms of studies done in England. In Canada, our studies so far have been more limited, by funding and time (or lack thereof), etc. We have, however, documented magnetic anomalies in some formations here over the last few years, and other anomalies as well, including the physical changes to affected plants and so on. I would like to pursue these areas in much more depth as I do think they are important. One factor that BLT has noted over the past few years is that a significant number of formations (from studies in England) appear to be related to underground aquifers, with more or less formations appearing in a given year depending on the height of the water table in that given area. I like the idea of mapping areas prior to a formation's appearance, except that you don't know exactly where a new formation will appear next. This is even more difficult in Canada, where there is much more land area to cover on the prairies, etc., even in Saskatchewan alone, than in southern England. Some hoaxed or known man-made formations have been mapped in this way from what I understand, with negligible or no results, but more needs to be done. I would be interested in doing a test formation made by one of our teams here, and mapping it afterward for comparison as well.

I'm quite interested in the 'blur' anomaly I found on two of the still (35 mm) photos I took over one of the formations at Midale, Saskatchewan this summer. I call it a 'distortion' but it looks more like one of those fuzzy spots you see on TV sometimes to blot out someone's face, etc. to hide their identity. Same colour as background field (or else no colour, just opaque) and roughly circular in shape. It is beside the formation in the photos, largest in the first one and about half the size in the second shot. It is also in the digital video footage taken at the same time as the still photos, just looking through two different windows on the same side of the plane. In the video, it moves across the field of view from upper right to lower left in about three seconds or so. That the formation was situated between two electrical towers in the field may be significant? Could this be related to magnetic/electrical disturbances, either captured on film or affecting the film itself? Any thoughts on this would be welcome. Copies of both the prints and video can be provided. We were flying fairly low, within a few hundred feet at most of the ground. Not seen in any other photos or video sequences at all except over that formation, and only in those two photos over the formation. I also noted that the shutter would not work on my camera whenever I tried using the zoom lens while we were circling the patterns in the plane. It seemed to work ok afterwards for the most part.

Re language, communication, etc., my own take is that we need to be able to separate the genuine formations from known or likely man-made ones, which admittedly has been frustratingly difficult, before we can go about 'deciphering' them, otherwise the data pool is contaminated by hoaxes, and makes any 'translation' mute for the most part. Some formations have been more obvious religious/sacred symbolism, etc. but most are not, and can be interpreted differently by different people (but maybe that's the point?). Many have tried deciphering them, with a wide range of results as may be expected.

Relating to this though, we are planning some new experiments for next summer in Saskatchewan with BLT. The specific idea came about during a lunch discussion with John Mack while at the Journeys Beyond conference. Details to be worked out yet, but it would involve a system of more specific criteria in terms of any 'responses' to what we initiate. While this seems radical to many I'm sure, even me, I've had enough experiences myself now, as well as others I know, that do suggest an interaction of some kind between us and who or whatever is making these patterns, implying there is intelligence involved somehow or that at least our own consciousness is somehow connected to all this. The question is how to proceed from that point, if indeed this is the case. On a related note, relating to your area of research, it was good to finally meet John Mack and Budd Hopkins in person at the conference, I have a lot of respect for the work of both gentlemen. I've also had many unusual experiences going back to my childhood and continue today.

Btw, please note again too that I forwarded the report for information purposes; CCCRN (formerly CPR-Canada) is no longer directly associated with Colin/CPRI, although we still correspond, share information, etc. Our 'split' did not have anything to do with Colin's statements on his position of 80% of formations in England being hoaxes which caused so much controversy, it was simply an internal organizational change within CPRI itself, having no more affiliate offices in other countries.

Best,

Paul Anderson

Mr. Oberg,

Well, now you have some documentation. Perhaps you should do your own digging before dismissing things. I'm surprised at you.
While I don't know what your research capabilities are, I can imagine that you would have access to many resources to find the data you need.

Mr. Filer was somewhat specific in repeating the quotation, providing a year and the LA Times. Seems simple enough to check, if you wanted to go directly to the source. But the UFO field has some fantastic resources of its own. Perhaps you can inquire of Barry Greenwood or one of his associates to query his vast collection of newsclippings the next time a question such as this comes up.

I understand that the burden is upon the person making the claim; however, as I said before this seemed a simple matter to check (as quickly proven true by the number of responses to your message) and it is something you should have done.

Hmm, let's see who needs a finger wagged at, and who's been lazy. Regarding Cernan's quote, thanks for the date of the original citation, I presume 28 years is barely enough time to verify that a newspaper clipping reflected the astronaut's true opinion, especially when that attributed opinion was 'useful' as propaganda. Have we established that EVERY ONE of us on this discussion is in agreement that the newspaper article was an accurate reflection of what Cernan really said or meant? Just trying to establish the consensus here.

Second, I note that NOBODY has touched the X-15 Bob White 'testimony' fraud that my investigation on original cited sources uncovered, and details of which I posted recently? Do we presume from this that 'silence implies consent' and that everybody here is agreeable to posting the faked version of his actual description of the small, tumbling, paper-shaped doohingee he spotted outside his window? Is that the consensus, and if not, what is anybody going to DO about it (right, other people's mistakes are not our responsibility to correct -- you can sense this attitude from some smarmy posts about 'how-dare-he?' question useful propaganda bites, whether accurate or not.

Third, here's another piece of original research on another 'famous' pro-UFO quote from Wernher von Braun. Your reaction (or lack of reaction) will be interesting.

Famous 'Wernher von Braun' UFO quotation debunked.
James Oberg

There is a widespread quotation attributed to Wernher von Braun in 1959, apparently first printed by Timothy Good, as follows:

"We find ourselves faced by powers which are far stronger than we had hitherto assumed, and whose base is at present unknown to us. More I cannot say at present. We are now engaged in entering into closer contact with those powers, and in six or nine months time it may be possible to speak with some precision on the matter."

This comment comes from "News Europa" Jan. 1959 and refers to mysterious events during the re-entry phase of the Juno 2 rocket during a test flight.

One Internet example is:

<http://www.connect.net/mattvest/sciufo.htm>

The reference is to the Pioneer-IV moon probe, launched by the Army-built Jupiter IRBM with upper stages, in December 1958.

My colleague Tasillo Roemisch of Space Service Intl. in Mittweida, Germany, went to the Deutsche Buecherei in Leipzig and found out the following:

The magazine 'Neues Europa' (14 issues per year, all issues had only 8 pages.) ceased publishing at the end of the sixties. Its full title reads correctly:

Neues Europa. Das f=FChrende Weltblatt fuer alle Fragen der kommenden Entwicklung. Verlag August Kraemer GmbH, Stuttgart (New Europe. The leading World Magazine for all questions of the coming development).

Roemisch checked all issues of the years 1959 and 1960 and found out that they had been supporting a Karl Michalek who lived in Santiago de Chile at that time and who claimed to be the "President of the Coming World Republic Earth". He was sure that the Venusian ET's were going to land in Berlin soon. Furthermore the writers often wrote about the well known UFO personality George Adamski and his associates.

Wernher von Braun was only mentioned one time, and that was in issue no. 3 (Febr. 01, 1959) when they wrote that "Prof. Oberth, the colleague of the German-American Wernher von Braun... believes in the existence of extraterrestrials living in the star constellation Tau-Zeta, the Uranides."

The article footnoted by Good and so widely and trustingly disseminated (issue no. 1, January 01, 1959, page 2) doesn't mention von Braun at all. It read as follows. The headline was "Sensationelle Zeichen aus dem Weltraum" (sensational signs from outer space), and this is the sub-text:

"Interplanetarische Kr=E4fte, welche die irdischen Mond- Raketen aus ihrer Bahn lenken" (interplanetary forces which direct terrestrial moon rockets out of track), followed by "Russische und amerikanische Fern- Raketen, die ihre Ziele nicht erreichen - Demonstration der Venus- Kr=E4fte?"

(Russian and American rockets which don't reach their goals - demonstration of the Venusian forces?)

The article itself: Saturday Dec 06, 1958. Fourth attempt of the USA moonrocket failed. Juno 2 was hindered in an altitude of 100,000 km to fly higher and came back.

"Amerikanische Sachverst=E4ndige betonen, dass es im Weltall Kr=E4fte gibt, welche die irdischen Raketen aus ihren vorberechneten Bahnen ablenken, ihre Fluggeschwindigkeit reduzieren und sie wieder in die Lufth=FClle der Erde zur=FCckdirigieren."

(American specialists emphasize that there are forces in outer space to mislead terrestrial rockets out of their calculated tracks to reduce their speed and to send them back to the atmosphere of the Earth)

The author was Albert Laurent and he claimed the Russian and Indian researchers have said about the same.

As one would expect from an Adamski-ite rag, the real science and technology was hopelessly garbled. The American moon probes had followed gravitational trajectories with no outside interference suspected, even then; instead, problems with the booster rockets put them on the wrong initial courses.

This investigation of the actual rather than the distorted 'quotation' inaccurately attributed to Wernher von Braun is not expected to have any impact on the false versions now extant on the WWW.

Dear List and Readers,

I know Lazar has been covered in-depth before, though I still find his alien craft very interesting. Whether his claims are a hoax or not, the spacecraft he has brought before the world does in many ways fit the criteria required for reliable space travel in a spacecraft.

Looking deeply into the craft's design does show consistencies with the sorts of requirements required for such space travel. The one requirement that I have concluded is a most when considering the design of such craft is the fact that you cannot have moving parts. The moment you have moving parts the life of that part and its reliability runs out the door.

Lazar has three cylinder type units beneath the floor as moving, I really don't think these move at all, these three cylinders rather just regulate the polarity and strength of the magnetic/electromagnetic field. With the craft now in this configuration, there are no moving parts at all. The reliability and life of the craft is now supreme. This conclusion in itself points to the possibility of the craft's existences. After all the seemingly successful debunking that has been done on Lazar himself, the craft on the other hand has stood up well to criticism. It is if nothing else a great design, one any designer would be proud of. If this design is just someone's imagination they are very very good and should be working for JPL or NASA or ME.

The craft looks like a short-range scout class vessel to me. I cannot see this one travelling from a distant Galaxy to here, so this brings up the question of how did it get here? By mother ship, would seem to be the logical answer or it was built nearby.

Lazar has an official web site but it costs to join, though it says Robert pops in for chats now and again, so I'm thinking about joining just to see if I can take this up with him personally.

I would also like to ask him about this back engineering thing, what could be the advantages of an alien race giving us something like that to back engineer? That to me would be like giving a third world country an armed atom bomb to back engineer. There is no way we can use such a craft, even though women fair better than men do around magnetic fields, those sorts of levels of magnetic fields would still bring a female to a screaming mess on the ground. So I fail to see what benefits it is or was supposed to bring to us.

I'm starting to think along the lines that this craft if it is real is something the US has had for ages and just hasn't been able to figure out completely. Maybe even our AA friend used to once pilot aforesaid craft?

I wouldn't be surprised to find or learn that this was the case. Much seems to revolve around those events and time period. Roswell I mean.

Cheers Tophar

Dear colleagues,

Whilst on a research trip to Wiltshire, this summer gone, I spent some time in Avebury stones. I took a few pictures that day, with my new Digital Camera. After getting back home, and downloading the images on to my PC, I noticed a very odd picture. Please click the link below to view this picture, and it's zoom images.

That's bad debating technique to be squirming obstinately against the factual. There is evidence that would convict at a murder trial. The Cernan expression as recorded is accurate or not. I suspect it is accurate. This abundantly justifies your discomfiture as evidenced by the squirm.

>Have we established that EVERY ONE of us on this Ahh! The inevitable leap to the absurd! Our 'agreement' with the veracity of 'articles' is not the issue and is not required. Is the expression in question accurate in spirit? No need to attempt impossible agreement on the absurd.

>Just trying to establish the consensus here.

No you're not, sir! You're here to fan the bottom, complicate the issue, and distract from the facts, whatever the hell

I wouldn't get too excited about it, Mr. Oberg. A lot of the broadbrushed critical paint sticks to you, you front for a suspect worldview... forgetting that I might front for an ignorant one... regardless, I would do something about my ignorance, sir.

>Third, here's another piece of original research on another

You're using the convenient microcosm to prove the macrocosm, Mr. Oberg. You do that, a lot. In the aggregate, you know that the preponderance of quality evidence demonstrates a clear need for the serious, passionate, and conscientious, but broadbased (of course, public)... scientific investigation of UFOs. Your agenda is no investigation. You denounce, confuse, and repudiate investigation, sir. Your reputation precedes you.

You may be right about Werner, yet! But, so? Your explanation does not scale up even to the little that has been found out in 50 years of nebulous investigation...

Point a finger at Rebecca and feel three waggle ominously back wondering).

This is a tired argument that has little value. "Scientific principals" are not defined by a majority vote, but a consensus. I would concur that a good attorney, arguing the case forcefully with evidence to support his contentions, could likely work to convince a jury. But, while a jury could likely be swayed, that doesn't by definition lend credence to the testimony. In addition, there is ample evidence of juries that have reached the wrong conclusions at times. IMO, the use of this analogy to prove a point merely gives more fodder to those who are skeptical.

You're right, it is a bogus argument; science is not done by proclamation or a majority vote. I'll never use that argument that way again...

But then neither is it done with a minority vote, and it is a minority of unelected individuals that sets the tone for an obstinate mainstream science suspiciously recalcitrant in the extreme. Furthermore, ufological negativism is heralded by these mainstream apologists who get to stand on the global stage with easy pontificating indifference while more worthy men and women willing to follow the data where it leads languish in an unsettled audience.

Hiya Larry,

I heard a lady astronomer (sorry, don't recall her name) on some PBS special speculating about how an advanced space faring civilization might create a race of beings that are genetically/physically engineered for the rigors of long space voyages, rather than going themselves. So your ruminations may not be so far fetched at all.

I wish I knew 'who' or 'what' was behind the UFO phenomena. That there is "someone" or "something" manufacturing and piloting those craft is beyond question for me. Maybe one day it will all be 'common knowledge.' I only hope that that day comes during my lifetime. I'd hate to depart this mortal coil not knowing.

Regards,

John Velez

Italian UFO Newsflash No. 332

ITALIAN UFO NEWSFLASH

ISSUE NO. 332 - 31 OCTOBER 2001

by the Italian Center for UFO Studies (Centro Italiano Studi Ufologici, CISU)

Contents:

- Analysis of the =93Angel Hair=94 at Arezzo
- The C.I.S.U. Agrees to the UFOIN Code Of Ethics
- The "UFO Myth" in Bookstores
- "UFO Baby", a New Comic Strip

Analyses of the =93Angel Hair=94 at Arezzo

The rounds of investigation are still ongoing in regards to the recent phenomenon concerning the falling of whitish filaments last 11 October in the province of Arezzo; but for now, it has been ascertained that the phenomenon involved additional residents from the area, and over a time period of at least an hour, from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m., and included various witnesses numbering approximately ten. The filaments were also very long (up to 5-6 meters), and fell copiously and continuously, eventually becoming entangled in trees, on gates, and on the ground.

Some analyses were conducted on the gathered samples, among these an examination under the microscope of the filaments, a colorimetric exam of their structure, and a fusion test. Exams such as these ultimately revealed a structure that was varied, yet prevalently polysaccharide and irregular, leading to speculation that the filaments were of a natural and not artificial origin, thus contributing to dismissal of some local fears about the possibility of industrial contaminants.

[Investigation by Massimiliano Grandi.]

The C.I.S.U. Agrees to the UFOIN Code Of Ethics

The council of directors of the Italian Center for UFO Studies has ratified the C.I.S.U.=92s adoption of the =93Behavioral Code of Ethics=94 reached in Great Britain by UFOIN (The UFO Investigation Network) and adopted already by BUFORA and other UFO associations.

The code, which identifies the rules of behavior to which UFO investigators are bound, were originally drafted between 1981 and 1982, and thereafter emended on several occasions.

Subsequent to the code=92s publication in an Italian translation in "UFO Forum" magazine (August 2000), deliberation has now also taken place regarding its adoption in Italy as a code of ethics to which all CISU members will be thereafter held, in the course of the investigative activities of the latter.

The text may be reviewed on the C.I.S.U.=92s Internet site, at Webpage <http://www.cisu.org/etica.htm>.

[Collaboration by Giuseppe Stilo.]

The "UFO Myth" in Bookstores

The religious publishers =93Il Segno=94 have just published the volume by Stefania Genovese, =93UFO: complessit=E0 ed anomalie di un mito=94 (=93UFO: Complexities and Anomalies of a Myth=94) (150 pages, 20,000 lire): this is an expanded reissue of the original version of her graduate thesis published in monographic form in the =93Documenti UFO=94 (=93UFO Documents=94) series following conferral upon the author by the C.I.S.U. of the 1999 Alberto Lazzaro Award. Due to constraints at the university level, however, the thesis was heavily modified and watered down.

The book examines, from various sides, the elements relative to the implications which, in Ufology, encompass the human sciences (philosophy, anthropology, mythology, sociology and parapsychology). The preface is penned by the physicist Elio Sindoni, while the afterward is by the English Ufologist and writer Hilary Evans.

C.I.S.U. members who have difficulty finding it in bookstores, may purchase the book directly through our Book Service.

[Collaboration by Stefania Genovese.]

"UFO Baby", a New Comic Strip

On newsstands beginning 26 October is the first installment of a new monthly comic strip entitled "UFO Baby" (published by Play Press of Rome, 192 pages, 7000 lire).

It concerns a feature originally published between 1998 and 1999 in Japan (where last year, a televised version of it was also aired).

Two teenagers observe a UFO and subsequently discover a newborn extraterrestrial, together with its babysitter and a stroller shaped like an Adamski-esque flying disc, which landed on Earth due to a space-temporal distortion.

[Report by Roberto Labanti; UfoItalia, 29 October.]

Collaborators on this edition: Stefania Genovese, Massimiliano Grandi, Roberto Labanti and Giuseppe Stilo.

Have you read the article? If I want to, I have a couple of sources from which I could get a copy. I don't choose to. I wasn't making the claim that the quote wasn't real. While you didn't exactly make that claim, you certainly hinted at it.

Do you have some evidence that suggests that the story doesn't reflect his view (at the time)? If so, quit beating around the bush and present it.

As for the rest of your message, 'who cares'? I'm sorry, I don't. What you posted had nothing to do with the comment I made. I think you have and you can do good work. I think you were wrong about the Cernan quote. If you have proof that suggests otherwise, let us know. Otherwise, why can't you admit you made a mistake?

It is interesting that George Filer conceded he could be wrong and even thanked you for correcting him. It would appear that some take your word/work at face value. Hopefully, this incident will be a lesson to all of us.

Hi,

After examining the picture - and it is interesting, by the way - my guess is that the 'orbs' are some kind of reflection, such as dust motes, airborne seeds (like dandelion) or even from the puddle below. The 'orbs' all appear to be 'moving' in the same direction, and fairly close to the camera. To me, they have that same lack of depth of the famous Salem, Massachusetts photo that was later shown to be reflections of inside lights on the window.

Course, that's only my opinion...

Was gone for the weekend or would have chimed in sooner. I was living in the LA area when the Cernan article appeared. Called the journalist to see if the quote was accurate. He said it was and referred me to NASA Houston for the transcript. The quote was accurate. I located Cernan. The quote was accurate. He even gave me a lecture I could have given him about UFOs and evidence and the huge universe etc.

I would certainly agree that there are lots of phony UFO quotes out there including some attributed to me. Each must be taken on its own merits or demerits as the case might be.

I am a few years behind in my filing, and have moved several times since the article appeared, so probably cannot easily lay my hands on it now.

Dave,

If I may, a correction on your viewing of the picture. The 'orbs' are actually not all moving the same way. Having blown this image up to 1600 x 1200 in Photoshop, one can clearly see a varied path of flight, movement, call it what you will. Having had a wide audience of people view the image, some have commented on the aspect of the main 'Straight' light coming from the centre of the picture.

Here is one comment on the image: Matthew Williams.

"What I find most interesting is the fact that one rises up vertically and the others all slant to one side. This would imply that multiple exposure theory would have to be triple exposure, which is sounds less plausible if your camera cannot do this"

My camera on flash has only one blip. Prior to shoot.

Also, look closely enough at the water droplet on the top of the rock, you will see clear aspects of " heat shadow " when heat is manifesting. The sun was behind me when I took the picture. The dark object was not visible when I took it. Prior to taking the picture I had the lens cover on, and it had stopped raining some 20 minutes prior to me taking the image.

Try blowing this image up in your image software, and see the direction the small lights within the grass are taking.

Thanks for your comments on this picture Dave, it seems that if we are not writing slanderous verbals about each other on UpDates, then people just don't reply!

Best to you and yours for Christmas!

Roy

Hello Stan, List, Errol,

Here is a situation where NASA in their infinite lack of wisdom, also lacks the Cajones to say the truth. Yet again. In 1966, 1967 and in 1968, whilst assigned to OAO, and with my own ears,
I listened to Courten and Sagan say the truth. In a bad place in Baltimore. In fact, it was East Baltimore Street where them loose womens removed their raiment. As I recall, the place was called the Gaiety Bar and Strip Joint ... or something to that effect. East Baltimore Street was and still is, one hummer dinger of a Street... woof!

(sigh)

I was there only to do research on dance, as an art form, of course!

Ahem, anyway, Sagan AND Courten both understood the value of UFO reports and told me straight on that there was something to the phenom. Sagan was then a believer. So was Courten. Why or whether Sagan changed his mind or had it changed for him is quite another question. After leaving Grumman and NASA, I went to work for Singer Kearfott on the NAGS Polaris Poseidon project. There, I continued to teach astronomy at Fairly Dickenson and kept my relationship with both men until about 1975. Never once did either man change his opinion on the subject. In fact, their interest and their knowledge grew.
Problem then was, they were becoming a lot less vociferous (in private) about what they knew or suspected.

Another victory for the absolute Untruth, also known as "Truthus Interruptus. The moral of this story, the moral of this song, is that one should never be, where one does not belong.

Which in the cases of Sagan and Courten, was the Gaiety Bar and Strip Jernt in beautiful Downtown Baltimore. A place where the bottom end of large Coke bottles miraculously disappear ... sort of.....

RELEASE: 01-232

HUBBLE MEASURES ATMOSPHERE ON WORLD AROUND ANOTHER STAR

Astronomers using NASA's Hubble Space Telescope have made the first direct detection and chemical analysis of the atmosphere of a planet outside our solar system. Their unique observations demonstrate it is possible with Hubble and other telescopes to measure the chemical makeup of extrasolar planets' atmospheres and potentially to search for chemical markers of life beyond Earth.

The planet orbits a yellow, Sun-like star called HD 209458, a seventh-magnitude star (visible in an amateur telescope) that lies 150 light-years away in the autumn constellation Pegasus. Its atmospheric composition was probed when the planet passed in front of its parent star, allowing astronomers for the first time ever to see light from the star filtered through the planet's atmosphere.

Lead investigator David Charbonneau of the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, and the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics, Cambridge, Mass.; Timothy Brown of the National Center for Atmospheric Research, Boulder, Colo.; and colleagues used Hubble's spectrometer (the Space Telescope Imaging Spectrograph, or STIS) to detect the presence of sodium in the planet's atmosphere.

"This opens up an exciting new phase of extrasolar planet exploration, where we can begin to compare and contrast the atmospheres of planets around other stars," says Charbonneau. The astronomers actually saw less sodium than predicted for the Jupiter-class planet, leading to one interpretation that high-altitude clouds in the alien atmosphere may have blocked some of the light. The team's findings are to be published in the Astrophysical Journal.

The Hubble observation was not tuned to look for gases expected in a life-sustaining atmosphere (which is improbable for a planet as hot as the one observed). Nevertheless, this unique observing technique opens a new phase in the exploration of exoplanets, or extrasolar planets, say astronomers. Such observations could potentially provide the first direct evidence for life beyond Earth by measuring unusual abundances of atmospheric gases caused by the presence of living organisms.

The planet was discovered in 1999 through its slight gravitational tug on the star. The planet was estimated to be 70 percent the mass of the giant planet Jupiter, or 220 times more massive than Earth. Subsequently, astronomers discovered that the tilt of the planet's orbit makes it pass in front of the star -- relative to our line-of-sight from Earth -- making it unique among all the approximately 80 extrasolar planets discovered to date. As the planet passes in front of the star, it causes the star to dim very slightly for the duration of the transit. Transit observations by Hubble and ground-based telescopes confirmed that the planet is primarily gaseous, rather than liquid or solid, meaning that the planet is a gas giant, like Jupiter and Saturn.

The planet is an ideal target for repeat observations because it transits the star every 3.5 days -- which is the extremely short time it takes the planet to whirl around the star at a distance of merely four million miles from the star's surface. This close proximity heats the planet's atmosphere to a torrid 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit (1,100 degrees Celsius).

Observations of four separate transits were made by Hubble in search of direct evidence of an atmosphere. During each transit a small fraction of the star's light on its way to Earth passed through the planet's atmosphere. When the color of the light was analyzed by STIS, the telltale "fingerprint" of sodium was detected. Though the star also has sodium in its outer layers, STIS precisely measured the added influence of sodium in the planet's atmosphere.

The team, including Robert Noyes of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics and Ronald Gilliland of the Space Telescope Science Institute in Baltimore, plans to look at HD 209458 again with Hubble in other colors of the star's spectrum to see which are filtered by the planet's atmosphere. They hope eventually to detect methane, water vapor, potassium and other chemicals in the planet's atmosphere. Once other transiting giants are found in the next few years, the team expects to characterize chemical differences among the atmospheres of these planets.

The Space Telescope Science Institute (STScI) is operated by the Association of Universities for Research in Astronomy, Inc. (AURA), for NASA, under contract with the Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Md. The Hubble Space Telescope is a project of international co-operation between NASA and the European Space Agency (ESA). The National Center for Atmospheric Research is sponsored primarily by the National Science Foundation.

Hi Roy,

I'm fascinated with the picture. Look behind the house. There are more little light orbs emanating from the back corner of the house toward the bushes.

Hiya Roy, Dave, All,

I have to agree with Dave on this one. Camera lenses are composed of multiple elements. The number and variety of reflections that can (potentially) happen are almost infinite if a stray beam or flash of light is reflected back into the lens during the exposure. I'm sure that Bob Shell (if he's listening) could elaborate on this multi-surface aspect of camera lens construction and how light can get bounced around inside of them.

"Direction" doesn't matter with lens reflections. Depending on how many times a stray beam is bounced inside the lens assembly reflections can appear to originate from just about any direction. Like echoes in a big canyon. Hard to tell which direction the original sound came from.

And, this is just a 'suggestion' as to how the 'lights' manifested themselves in your photo. For all any of us really knows, you may very well have captured an image of something truly anomalous.

>Also, look closely enough at the water droplet on the top of the >rock, you will see clear aspects of " heat shadow " when heat is

Which means that the light can be reflected right back at the lens from just about any reflective surfaces in the foreground.

Sorry for delay in response Roy. Some of us still have to work for a living, and time for the List can be hard to schedule when the demands of keeping a roof over ones head and food on the table take precedence. I looked at the pix in Photoshop the same day you posted them. I was meaning to post sooner. Just busy amigo. I'm sure others are just as preoccupied now that the holiday season is upon us. Don't take the lack of responses personally. In case you haven't noticed, the List has been 'dead' on any and all running threads. Folks are just otherwise preoccupied at the moment. ;)

Regards,

John Velez

UFOs Inaugurate Chilean Festivities in San Pedro
Source: El Mercurio de Calama

Last Friday's festivities in the Chilean town of San Pedro de Atacama began with the strange appearance of at least 3 UFOs. According to different testimonies given by residents of the town, strange lights appeared in the clear Atacama skies during early hours on Saturday.

The residents described the objects as bright lights making strange movements, which according to them, were not typical of normal airplanes. Local San Pedro residents who witnessed the phenomenon could only describe them as UFOs.

Local authorities claim that they did not receive any reports about the strange phenomenon. They also stated that these sightings are very common in the area, so this may have not been as relevant as previous accounts.

Bright UFO Illuminates Chilean Capitol Source: Tele 13, Chile

In light of recent declarations by high-ranking Chilean military officers regarding the existence of ufos in Chile, another luminous object was seen in the Chilean capitol of Santiago by dozens of spectators. Tele 13 Journalist Rodrigo Ugarte covered the breaking news when the strange object illuminated the clear skies above the rouged mountains in the outskirts of the capitol city.

Last Saturday, at approximately 10:00 PM, Eric Martinez received a call about a strange object near the mountains of the suburban area of Florida, near Santiago. The light was very bright and changed colors very rapidly. The object disappeared and reappeared numerous times in the same area. The spectacular sighting lasted approximately an hour.

Amazingly, Eric Martinez, who is an investigator from the GEO UFO Research Center, captured video images of a similar object earlier during the afternoon. Martinez believes it was the same object. "This object was about four times brighter than Venus", said Martinez. "Furthermore, the object seemed to make sudden and rapid vertical movements". Local residents corroborated with Martinez's claim. According to them, they saw an object as big as a full moon. Moments later, the object suddenly appeared to shrink in size.

Security guards at a nearby construction site said they saw small blue spheres or probes flying very close to the ground. "I know the sphere that I saw was no star because it had a bright blue color and it was about 50 centimeters from the ground", said one of the guards. They claim that these phenomena occur very frequently in the area.

Chilean villagers describe an alleged capture of a Chupacabras

Source: Ovnivision Chile

Chilean law enforcement agencies have conducted an apparent successful operation to capture the legendary chupacabras creature in the small village of Huasco, Third Region of Chile.

Due to the constant animal deaths in the area, the community of Huasco had been very worried. Recent attacks on domestic animals have created panic and fear among local residents. Numerous reports of these attacks have prompted Customs officers of the area to conduct special operations in an effort to capture the so-called chupacabras. The purpose of the operation was to avoid new animal slaughters.

According to several eyewitnesses, police and customs officers were seen conducting searches and chasing an animal that was finally captured in a cave. "Local residents heard gunshots during the intense pursuit in the nearby village of O'Higgins", said Darwin Godoy, a local ufo and "chupacabras" investigator.

Finally, the group of officers finished their search in a local cave, where they captured what appeared to be a strange giant bat. "According to descriptions, the creature was about 80 centimeters in height and it had a wingspan of approximately 1.7 meters", said Godoy.

The cave where the alleged capture took place is located near the thermoelectric power plant of Guacolda, just south of Huasco. Several of the eyewitnesses were employees of the electric power plant. Residents that live nearby the local cemetery also witnessed the operative.

EBK & UpDates Listers,

Friday, November 9th, while driving in California, I experienced a fall of what can only be described as angel hair.

I collected two samples and I was wondering if someone on the list would be interested in analyzing one of them. Please contact me if you feel you have the knowledge, equipment and desire to take a close look at this very interesting material.

Hi Paul,

You wrote:

I've been busier than usual with web jobs myself. We have to "make hay while the sun shines" I suppose. ;) I would imagine that many other Listerions are equally preoccupied judging by the small number of daily posts being submitted the last couple of weeks. No need to explain the delay. I understand. I also want you to know that I appreciate the time you took to compose your thoughtful and detailed response.

>Colin or Paul Vigay would be better able to answer

Yeah. After talking to Nancy Talbot on Saturday night regarding the quality of the research coming from the Andrews camp I think I'm better off talking to you. :) Nancy is a pip. The lady speaks her mind and has a 'damn the torpedoes' attitude about it. I like that!

>In Canada, our studies so far have been more limited, by funding >and time (or lack thereof), etc.

Nancy has managed to track down 'some' funding according to her statements Saturday night. You might want to approach those same funding sources to finance your own research efforts. Talk to her. What could it hurt?

I would imagine that many of these aquifers have been 'mapped/surveyed' over the years, and that areas that have already been affected by crop formations could be compared to existing survey maps. No need to even go out into the field.
Strictly an academic study using existing data. Compare agri-glyph locations with local subsurface water surveys. Farms (where crop circles appear) usually depend on on-site water wells. When someone is sent out to investigate a formation they can inquire with the property owner if they have any survey maps of underground water sources and how they flow through the property. Correlations will either manifest or not. Until the grunt work of making the comparisons is done though, we'll just never know for sure.

I know. I had sites like Avebury in mind when I made the suggestion. Farms and areas that experience crop circle formations from year to year. It would be easier to 'pre-map' such contained areas and have a shot at a crop circle forming at a later date when you're dealing with a much smaller over-all area of real estate.

If you do, please let us know on-List. It would either make or break the case for 'artificially' or 'mechanically' induced magnetic anomalies in connection with circle making. If a hoaxed circle presents the same set of magnetic anomalies we'd still have a conundrum, but it would prove to be much less 'paranormal' in nature.

You should compare notes with Roy Hale who recently got pix of a similar nature in Avebury. It's a current thread on the List. Jump on in. :)

As an experienced graphics professional I would be interested in studying the pix. Contact me privately and tell me how I might secure copies for further study.

Many others report strange effects when taking photos inside of recently made formations. They too report that their equipment seems to work just fine once outside the affected area. Interesting.

It would be really neat to turn loose a team of philologists and code breakers on this question. In a 'better world' maybe. Hope you secure the funding you need to continue and to advance your own studies.

Yep. In addition to myself you should talk to Bill Hamilton about this aspect of the phenom too. I have first-hand experience with an unidentified flying object (apparently) responding to my own thoughts. It gave me the willies then, and talking about it is still hard because of my own incredulity that such things should be possible. But then there you are. If it's happening, then it needs to be considered as a real possibility and investigated. You have to go where the evidence leads you regardless of your own dogma's or prejudices eh. :)

Write to me privately Paul. I'd be interested in hearing them. And yes, both Budd and John, (Dave Jacobs too) are extremely bright and interesting people to spend time with and interact with. Especially Budd who loves to talk and ruminate about the subject. It was an education for me to spend all those years working with him. We'd spend hours together sometimes just travelling to and from speaking engagements and it was like sitting in a classroom dedicated to UFO and abduction related studies/information. Over time he poured an encyclopedia of info into my head about his own cases and research. His own and that of others. It would just flow out of him like running water. An education I couldn't have 'bought' if I'd wanted to. The more time you get to spend around those guys the more you learn. Time well spent if you ask me. ;)

Yeah I got the unedited version of that from Nancy on Saturday. She tells it like it is. Nothing wrong with that my friend. It's the way I do business myself. ;)

Warm regards, best of luck in your work, and thanx for all the time and labor you invest on our behalf. (Keeping us informed)

Gordon Cooper Talks UFOs With Defense Secretary

Subject: Gordon Cooper Talks UFOs With Defense Secretary

In an August 30, 2001 Dr. Steven Greer made the following statement:

"Recently I was in Washington meeting with a very famous astronaut. Everyone would know this person's name... This particular astronaut had during his career been in possession of a very specific piece of incontrovertible piece of evidence related to UFOs.

It is something that if disclosed would clear and definitive.

This astronaut described how he had approached and worked directly with President Clinton's Secretary of Defense William Cohen to look into and retrieve from classified projects this specific piece of evidence - of that which he had all the specific details... the words used by this astronaut to me were 'there was an inordinate large amount of money and personal time by the Secretary of Defense William Cohen was spent to locate this evidence, and he was never given access to it.'"

The identity of the astronaut is Gordon Cooper. That fact is confirmed in a September 13, 2001 Disclosure event in Salem Oregon.

<http://disclosureproject.org/audiogallery.htm>

The event involved a UFO landing film, which Greer had mentioned in an earlier lecture.

Greer met with Cooper at the International Platform Association speakers convention in Washington in August 2001, where they were both presenting.

Finally gone, eh?

Now the secret can be told.

The Doughboy was no Man of La Muncha.

He was an ALIEN!!!!

Didn't you notice that pale complexion, those large eyes and slender limbs? Well, maybe not so slender.....

Doughboy had a reverse implant (human implant into an alien) which acted as a form of shortening thereby keeping him to a small size (several inches).

Alas, he shall not rise again.

So if it is a "direct quote" of Cernan and Cernan has not denied it in 28 years, nor disavowed it, does it still count as useful propaganda? What this sounds like is any potential 'Pro-UFO quote' is considered useful propaganda. Of course to the 'debunking' crowd, any quote by Phil Klass, Menzel and Oberg could also be considered useful propaganda.

So, what does that have to do with the subject matter of the

From everything I have seen and read, Jim screwed up, and won't admit that he screwed up. Instead of saying "Houston, we have a problem....." using this logic, the Astronauts should have said something like "Well what about that problem with such and such back in 1958..."

As to the alleged Von Braun quote, I couldn't care less. I don't use the quote, and would be suspicious of any quotes both pro and con on the Internet so it means nothing to me. Naturally if it was a debunking quote, whether it was false or not, that wouldn't matter to the debunking crowd... after all it can't be so therefore it isn't.....

Cheers,

Robert

Doubt About Life On Europa

UA Study Casts Doubt About Life On Jupiter's Moon Europa

MARI N. JENSEN
Citizen Staff Writer
Nov. 21, 2001

A study by two University of Arizona planetary scientists shows the icy crust covering Jupiter's moon Europa is thicker than some scientists had hoped, making it less likely the moon harbors life.

Europa is a target in the search for extraterrestrial life because scientists think an ocean lies under its layer of frozen water.

"Where there is liquid water, there is the possibility of life," said University of Arizona planetary scientist Elisabetta Pierazzo.

The study by Pierazzo and co-author Elizabeth Turtle shows the ice crust is at least 2 1/2 miles thick. Some scientists had thought the crust might be less than a mile thick.

Because sunlight and organic material penetrate thin ice more easily, scientists suggest the thinner the ice, the more likely Europa's ocean harbors life. A thick ice layer also would make it harder for a space probe to explore Europa's underwater world.

Turtle said her team's finding is a good first step in resolving the thickness controversy.

"We can't get maximum, but we can get a minimum," she said.

Jupiter, its great red spot and four moons are shown by Galileo. Europa, whose icy crust is being studied by two University of Arizona experts, is the moon second from the top.

Slightly smaller than our own moon, Europa is the fourth largest of Jupiter's 16 known moons.

Images of Europa taken by the Galileo spacecraft show its surface has large impact craters and at least six have small peaks in the center. The peaks formed within minutes after a comet smashed into the planet, much as slow-motion photographs of a rock tossed into a pond show a central splash of water upward in addition to the spreading circles of waves, Turtle and Pierazzo said.

But in a watery surface, the central splash subsides. On a solid surface, the material pushed up by such an explosive impact remains. So Turtle and Pierazzo decided to calculate how deep the ice had to be for central peak craters to form on Europa.

By running computer simulations of comet impacts, the team found that the craters with central peaks had to be formed on ice at least the 2 1/2 miles thick.

The team's report is in the Nov. 9 issue of the journal Science. Turtle and Pierazzo's next step may settle the thin-crust-vs.-thick-crust debate.

The two plan to study the rest of the crater creation process. Turtle said preliminary results suggest that Europa's ice may be about six miles thick.

Raelians - "First to Clone Embryos"!

Canadian Cult Says It Was First to Clone Embryos

Updated: Mon, Nov 26 6:25 PM EST

By Robert Melnbardis

MONTREAL (Reuters) - A U.S. company's claim to have cloned a human embryo is simply a case of "been there, done that" for a Canadian UFO cult linked to a secretive cloning company, the movement's leader said on Monday.

Claude Vorilhon, the 54-year-old former sports writer now known as Rael who founded a religious movement based on the premise that life on earth was genetically created by visiting extra-terrestrials, said on Monday he welcomed the claim by Advanced Cell Technology Inc. that it had cloned a human embryo.

"Very happy, and a bit amused because we did that some time ago," Rael told Reuters.

Worcester, Massachusetts-based Advanced Cell Technology caused a uproar on Sunday when it announced it had cloned a human embryo as part of its research to perfect a technique in which embryos could be used as a source of valuable stem cells to treat diseases.

Researchers at the company said they had grown several embryos using eggs from several women and the DNA from another woman's cumulous cells, those found in the ovaries that nourish the eggs. One of the embryos survived long enough to divide into six cells.

While some experts questioned the scientific veracity of the company's claim, others observers, from U.S. President George Bush to the Vatican and women's rights groups, condemned the research.

Not so for the Quebec-based Raelians, who openly support Clonaid, a company headed by cult member Brigitte Boisselier, a 44-year-old French biochemist determined to produced the world's first cloned baby. That is why Clonaid, which purports to have established a new research laboratory in an undisclosed country, will not be making announcements on its progress in the project, Rael said.

"The first communique that Clonaid will make will be to announce the birth of the baby, but not for such a small thing," he said, referring to Advanced Cell Technology's announcement.

Clonaid was forced to abandon its U.S. laboratory after the U.S. Food and Drug Administration warned in March that it would not allow experiments on cloning humans. But Rael said the research continues at Clonaid.

"They set up a laboratory in another country where it is not prohibited and things are going forward," Rael said.

Clonaid already has more than 3,000 individuals seeking to clone a person, and 55 women, all "Raelians," who are prepared to carry the cloned embryos to term, Rael said.

"Of course, Clonaid's goal is not to make a monster or a handicapped child, which would be terrible. The first child must be perfect, let's say in a health that is recognized as perfect," he said.

Rael added that opponents are actually more worried that Clonaid's first cloned baby would be "beautiful, perfect and in good health."

In an even more science-fiction twist, Clonaid eventually would like to clone fully grown individuals in a sort of "accelerated-growth process" where memories and personality could be "downloaded" to the clone from the donor, Rael said.

"That is what interests us -- it is to be able to live eternally through several bodies," he said.

Although Clonaid and the Raelians want to produce the world's first cloned person, they also support the prospect of using cloned embryos to harvest stem cells to combat a range of diseases including cancer, he added.

Sue,

Yes, this picture has fascinated a lot of people, and I ask people to really look at the light formations within it. If you also look at the top of the tree where the dark object is, just above the tree, you can also see some kind of " heat distortion" similar to the one above the rock.

Here is the link again for those who missed it:

<http://www.thelosthaven.co.uk/AveburyLights.htm>

And for those people who are saying that this is just rain on the camera lens, then why out of over 30 images taken on that trip to Wiltshire - Avebury and other parts, was this the only one with those lights on? I took several pictures before this one and after, about 10 pictures in about 12 minutes?

Thanks for your comment Sue, much appreciated.

Best,

Roy..

I asked for documentation on an Internet quote, and that got attacked as 'finger pointing' and 'screwing up'. When the documentation was provided from credible sources, I'm happy to accept the newspaper account as authentic. The connection between the newspaper account and Cernan's actual statements or beliefs remains undefined, although the newsman in question - Nick Chriss - was a veteran reporter known for accuracy.

As to the X-15 ("White's UFO") fraud, or the von Braun false quote, now suddenly we hear that people never believed stuff on the Internet anyway, so no big deal. Hmm, isn't this inconsistent?

Yet when I suggested that without documentation I wouldn't believe something just because it was on the Internet, I wind up whipped with Klassical ad hominems. Isn't consistent logic such a delight when you find it, or even when you don't? <grin>

I'll continue to dig into the accuracy of stuff widely published on the Internet, out of this curious obsession with getting real facts right and false facts exposed and documented. I guess that obsession is sort of crazy to many people! <again, grin>

I don't have chemical analysis equipment.

I hope you placed the material in a sealed glass jar, even if it is already inside a plastic bag.

Angel hair has a way of disappearing. But even if it becomes invisible in the jar there may be a gaseous residue that could be detected by a gas analyzer. Whatever you have it in, don't open it. It should only be opened in a controlled surrounding or by sticking in a needle and sucking out some of the gas inside.

>>The identity of the astronaut is Gordon Cooper.

I believe Grant must be correct on this. Cooper's story about the film he inspected at Edwards AFB in May 1957 is in his book 'Leap of Faith' in some detail. He reports that the object landed in front of the witnesses.

The account of every other person involved with that incident -- the two primary witnesses, the officer who did the blue book interviews (Lt. Hubert Davis), the actual report filed with Blue Book (which included the film), the account of the case described by James McDonald before Congress in 1968 -- describe only a light drifting past the observers, with no landing. One witness, plus Davis, stated unequivocally that Cooper had no connection with the sighting at all, was not in the chain of command, and in fact was never noticed by them. I have also talked with the engineer who was Cooper's boss during this interval.

As regards this discrepancy between Cooper's version and everybody else's, I offer no explanation.

My 1983-1984 investigation of this story is at:

<http://www.zip.com.au/~psmith/cooper.html>

and I'd be happy to receive comments on-line or off-line.

My report on Cooper's book's story about a Gemini space camera and secret photos of Area-51 is at:

http://www.space.com/sciencefiction/phenomena/cooper\_questioned\_000929.html and may provide some insight into the 1957 incident versions discrepancies.

Did I see my name mentioned? Ahhh, yes. First-hand experiences with UFOs responding to my thoughts. It happened several times over a 3-year period in the 1950s. That is what convinced me that I was in contact with something unearthly. That is what gave me the idea with Skywatch to take a pro-active approach.

George A. Filer, Director, Mutual UFO Network Eastern November 28, 2001, Majorstar@AOL.COM.
Webmaster Chuck Warren <http://www.filersfiles.com>,

UFOs HAVE BEEN REPORTED: in New York, Florida, Mississippi, Tennessee, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, California, Canada, Mexico, and Italy. Our satellites are picking up hundreds of uncorrelated targets each day that may include UFOs.

NEW PLANET SPARKS HOPES FOR ALIEN LIFE

Tim Radford, science editor of the Guardian reports that:
"Astronomers have used the Hubble space telescope to detect the atmosphere of a planet circling a star 150 light years away." The discovery reawakens the dream of detecting extraterrestrial life in other star systems. A new breed of astrobiologists is convinced that life on any distant planet would leave its signature in the air -- just as methane and oxygen in the Earth's atmosphere would be a clue to any passing aliens that the planet was inhabited. "Only a decade ago, planets outside the solar system were still in the realm of science fiction," said David Charbonneau, of the California Institute of Technology, who led the study. "Searching for a star's unseen planetary companion was crazy, and hoping to see its atmosphere was even crazier." Now planets are discovered monthly, and even their atmospheres are in reach, he said. "Suddenly, discussing searches for Earth-like planets seems quite reasonable." But he discovered no sign of life. The atmosphere of the planet that circles the star HD209458, in the constellation Pegasus, is rich in sodium. The planet itself is likely to be an inhospitable gas giant, like Jupiter. More than 80 planets have now been identified around distant stars. Thanks to Joe Stefula and Guardian 11/28/01

Editor's Note: Dr. Robert Trundle author of "UFOs: Politics, God and Science" from Northern Kentucky University notes that this is an important step in the search for extraterrestrial life. Astronomers have made the first direct detection of the chemical composition (sodium) of the atmosphere of a planet orbiting a distant star.

INTEL ADVERTISING ALIENS

In case you missed it, the computer company Intel has been running two different ads for its Pentium 4 featuring those Gray Aliens. The commercials are shown during Prime Time. Thanks to Robert M. Collins.

EUGENE CERNAN, APOLLO 17 COMMANDER

Debunker James E. Oberg who wrote the article concerning astronauts never seeing an actual UFO in "The Encyclopedia of Extraterrestrial Encounters" questioned the statements attributed to Astronaut Cernan in last week's Filer's Files. My quote was that: Eugene Cernan who was the commander of Apollo 17 that flew to the moon. In a Los Angeles Times article in 1973 he said, about UFOs: "I've been asked (about UFOs) and I've said publicly I thought they (UFOs) were somebody else, some other civilization.

"I must admit I'm unable to get on the Internet due to computer problems, so I was unable to find an exact copy of the article. Jan Aldrich helped me out by finding the article in the Los Angeles Times, January 6, 1973, Chriss Nicholas, "Cernan Says Other Earths Exist," Jan says, "The article is authentic." Cernan says, "I'm one of those guys who has never seen a UFO (Unidentified Flying Object). But I've been asked, and I've said publicly I thought they were somebody else, some other civilization." Gene Cernan goes on about his positive views on life in space and the abundance of other civilizations. So the quote is slightly different than given many places on the web, but it is authentic. Thanks to Jan Aldrich and James Oberg.

NEW YORK TEARDROP SHAPED UFO

BROOKLYN -- The witness was in a park on November 15, 2001, I noticed that the clouds were being blown by the wind, and from behind the clouds I noticed a white glowing sort of teardrop shaped craft. Behind the teardrop craft was a little blue dot, trailing it. It seemed to be attached to the teardrop or was being pulled by a blue glowing beam. It was moving pretty fast, but it seemed to circle the whole park, which is at least four miles in diameter. Then it just left it made no sound at all. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

FLORIDA FLYING V

EDGE WATER -- On November 9, 2001, the witness was outside aligning his satellite dish, when he looked up, and right above him was something like a lit up flock of flying birds. This was impossible because there were no lights shining up and it was dark at 8:20 PM. The lights moved closer to each other and moved away making a V-shape. It was like a big bird flapping it's wings. The witness said, "This is the first time, I've ever seen anything like this and it didn't make a sound either. The thing that freaked me out the most was that there were three planes, immediately after I saw the V- shaped craft. I don't even believe in UFOs, but I'm not sure now."

PANAMA CITY BEACH -- At 2:55 AM, the witness saw a glowing orange chevron shaped object fly rapidly across the sky from west to east on November 9, 2001. The witness is a sane, sober 51-year old professional who has always been skeptical of UFO sightings. He says, "Last night I saw something, which I cannot explain. I fell asleep early in the evening and had to walk my dog at 2:55 AM. I decided to look for meteors when I noticed a glowing pale orange "shape" rapidly moving east, very faint to be barely discernible. The orange light seemed almost translucent and was shaped like a boomerang or chevron, except the leading edge was straight across as opposed to a "V" shape on the front edge. It was perfectly symmetrical across its width. I had difficulty determining the true size, altitude, or speed but it covered 100 to 120 degrees in 5 to 7 seconds. This seemed to be an unbelievable rate of speed. I would judge the width of the object to be 5 or 6 times a full moon's diameter. The length of the object from front to rear was perhaps 1 X a full moon's diameter. The object made no sound. I am 100% convinced the object was not a natural phenomenon such as a meteor or a cloud. Peter Davenport reports he spoke at length with this witness, and we found him to be exceptionally credible. We suspect this was a very interesting sighting, similar to others that have been reported to NUFORC recently. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

GEORGIA AERIAL OBJECT A GLIDER

LA GRANGE -- Researcher John Thompson says today I thought I saw a rare daytime UFO. It went back and forth slowly; left-to-right, right-to-left repeatedly, for about five minutes. It seemed to stop on a dime and reverse direction. I took several photos of the object as it, occasionally, flickered brightly with the reflection of sunlight. Guess what? It was a glider catching thermos! I called the La Grange Airport to confirm. If I had a video, however, shot from afar everybody would swear, as another person with me who was watching agreed, that no plane could do that. Gliders can because they have an unbelievable low stall speed. I now know what the darting and reversing object in the famous 1994 Mexico City UFO video was probably a glider. It was shot from a similar distance as it went in and out of a cloud. Thanks to John Thompson

MISSISSIPPI DARK TEARDROP UFO

VICKSBURG -- My lady friend and I had gone to the Dollar General Store on November 16, 2001. She was baby-sitting two children who were with us. My friend went into the store and I sat in my truck with the kids and waited for her. It was about 5:30 PM, and the sun was going down. The sky was very clear and a light color, but the ground was almost as dark as night. The four year old child pointed to the sky and said that she saw a light in the sky, which I'm sure, was the crescent moon. When I looked up to see what it was, I saw the moon and at a distance was a dark object shaped like a plump Hershey's Kiss, or perhaps a teardrop with a slightly flattened-out bottom. It was black in an appearance with a pointed top and seemed to have an extremely faint aura around it that my friend also noticed. There were no lights on it, and it made no sound. It was east of us in the direction of the Mississippi River. Several others also sighted the UFO. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

TENNESSEE FLYING TRIANGLES

MEMPHIS -- The witness reports, "I was on my way to work, traveling eastbound on Winchester Road on November 2, 2001, just outside of the Memphis city limits." There was low cloud cover covering the sun at 5:00 AM. I noticed a long, black object traveling south at high speed beneath the clouds. The object was traveling far faster than any flock of geese could fly. There appeared to be a black "smudge" behind the object. I at first thought this might be a black vapor trail, but the "smudge seemed to move in tandem with the object but didn't linger in the sky. As we got closer I saw an acute triangular shape with blurred indistinct edges. It moved across the sky at high speed and was out of sight within seconds. I'm a professional with two college degrees and skywatch planes regularly at Memphis International Airport. I've never seen anything to compare with what I saw this morning.

MEMPHIS -- Two weeks later a Flying Triangle was spotted on November 14, 2001, by the same witness. He says, "Leaving for work at 5:28 AM, I stopped to pick up the newspaper in our driveway. A definite and very well defined and dark lengthy shadow flitted across the driveway." There was no sound associated with the passing of this shadow. The shadow startled me so I jumped into my car instead of picking up the paper. My first impression was that something huge had flown beneath the streetlight and cast the shadow. This explanation was quickly discarded due to the physical impossibility of such an event, but I was puzzled by what I saw. It appeared that our cat had been startled as well by the passing shadow because she ducked for cover under a hedge.

At 5:35 A.M., an hour before sunrise, and I am traveling east on Winchester Road going to work early to complete a project. The usual Fed Ex jets are flying past on their flight paths to Memphis Airport. When I passed the Nike plant, I noticed a "plane" that seemed much lower than normal for this part of the landing pattern. It definitely caught my attention. It appeared to be hovering in place at a spot just east of the Nike plant on the north side of Winchester Road. This area is about five miles away from my home. I slowed down and came almost to a stop to get a better look at the "plane." It was my perception that it was not moving at all. As I studied it, I realized that there was no strobe light on it. It also did not cast its lights ahead of it, as you would normally expect to see the lights of a jet beamed straight ahead. Instead there were three white lights aimed downward. It was then that I perceived that I was looking at a triangular-shaped craft with three bright white lights, one at each corner, and a single red light in the middle of the underside of the craft.

The craft was the size of a fifty-cent piece held at arm's length and a quarter to a half-mile away hovering in place. It seemed to be hovering over an empty field. I got quite a good look at it for a period of time I would estimate as long as two minutes. I continued heading slowly eastward until I lost sight of the object as I passed some trees. It was then that I resolved to make a quick U-turn, go back, and get another look.

I found a place about two blocks farther on to turn around, and I raced back to look at the object again. There was no trace of it whatsoever! I searched the sky for several minutes in vain. The object had quite simply vanished. This craft was lower than the passing jets, and the lights appeared to be of a different intensity. Thanks to NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

MICHIGAN DIAMOND SHAPED UFO

BOYNE CITY -- At 8:00 PM my husband and I sat down to watch TV and I heard a loud rumbling sound outside on November 15, 2001. I looked out the window and did not see anything. The next morning our office gal told me she had heard the loud noise at the same time, and saw a flying object over her home heading west that then came back east over her home a second time.

BOYNE CITY -- A second witness also reports hearing a loud rumbling noise at 8:00 PM the same night and went to her back door to listen. Thinking it was a jet plane she went back inside but the noise continued getting louder, so she went out again. She only saw stars, and went back inside and asked her husband, son, and son's friend, "Can't you hear that?" They thought it was just a slow jet but went outside to look. They rushed back in, and said, "Come out and see this!" The witness states, "We could see this huge diamond shape UFO with elongated bottom, with a light at each tip and an orange light in the middle." It gradually moved off to the northwest but within five minutes it was coming back. We all watched as it traveled over our home traveling southeast, when it got over Boyne City all of a sudden all of the outside lights started to spin around. Shortly the light on the right side veered off over Lake Charlevoix, which was to the west, while rest of the craft continued on its course, but soon the lone light came back and was heading the same direction as the large craft. It traveled until it was out of sight. I then started calling law enforcement agencies, FAA, and local airports but was unable to find out anything.

MANCELONA -- Also on November 15, 2001, about ten minutes later at 8:10 PM, my husband and I saw a UFO. It was a bell shape cylinder top with saucer like bottom. It had three red lights on it in the shape of a triangle. It glowed reddish with a little whitish light. It had some time of a grill around its middle. It moved very slowly to the left as it was faced towards us. There were two other normal aircraft following it. We saw it for about eight minutes before it went out of our sight behind the trees. We took 3 pictures but they didn't turn out very well. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

WISCONSIN SHOOTING STAR FALLS INTO FOREST

ONEIDA COUNTY -- Mr. Iman reported to UFOWisconsin that on November 21, 2001, traveling north on Highway 51 near Minocqua, he noticed how bright the stars were that night. Mr. Inman is from the Chicago area where the city lights impair viewing. Suddenly at 8:30 PM in front of us, what looked like a bright star fell into the forest at a VERY fast rate. My girlfriend also saw it and we couldn't figure out what it was. Too fast for anything else and it looked to be ten miles north of us. Never seen anything like it before. Thanks to Jenny Hoppe Jenny@ufowisconsin.com, UFOWisconsin: http://www.ufowisconsin.com/county/reports/r2001\_1121\_oneida.html

ILLINOIS TEAR DROP SHAPED OBJECT

CHICAGO -- On November 15, 2001, a female witness reports. "I just turned onto our street, I saw an object float over a building across from us. I was a little taken aback; I told her to look, and then decided it must be a plastic bag, blown up by the wind. The only thing was that it was clearly moving at a constant rate; it had a specific direction (east north east) and had an orange glow that was not from ambient light. I can only describe its shape as akin to a baby pacifier. It moved quickly, but with a simultaneous rocking motion, that seemed very measured and constant. It moved so quickly, about the distance of three quarters of a mile, at about a minute's passing. I might add that even though I'm in Chicago, it was a particularly still day today. Very strange, for some reason, seems noteworthy

BATH -- On November 6, 2001, the witness observed a disk shaped object at 9:15 PM, and took five minutes of video of an orange round bright light (zoomed), it had six smaller lights illuminating around it. From a distance without the camera you could see the outline of the saucer. Zoomed in on the saucer you could see the small lights and 1 bright orange color light that would get brighter and bigger and then fade away into nothing but then would come back again. The saucer was coming toward my direction and once I was filming it remained in the same spot. After filming I got in my car and was traveling east. As I was moving it was moving east also. I stopped at a friend's house and she also saw the red/orange color light and the outline of the saucer. It remained in the same spot. I got back in my car approximately 10 minutes later headed back west to my home. The light was still there but in a different location and further away. Thanks to NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

COLORADO FLYING TRIANGLE

FRASER -- There were four of us laying out in the back yard to watch the Leonid Meteor shower on November 16, 2001. It was the day before the peak, but there were a few around 10:10 PM as we watched. Person #1 is male, 16, and in the 10th grade in high school. Person #2 is female, 16, and in 11th grade in high school. Person #3 is male, 16 and in 11th grade in high school. Person #4 is female, 14, and home schooled. Person #1 and #4 are brother and sister.

The sky was crystal clear. Person #1 fell asleep. At 10:10 PM persons 2, 3, and 4 all saw five red jagged triangular shaped crafts, flying in a perfect V shape across the sky. They stayed in perfect formation, and flew fast from east to west. They didn't make a sound, and seemed to be flying at about 150 feet above us. We were all frozen, staring at them with disbelief until after they passed. Then, petrified, we all ran inside as fast as we could and told person # 1 and 4's mother about what we saw. We then looked up "UFO sightings in Colorado." Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

CALIFORNIA DISKS

SACRAMENTO -- The witness says he is reporting this event for my wife - who on November 4, 2001, sometime between 12:00 and 1:30 in the afternoon, claims she saw a UFO at the intersection of Florin Road and Franklin Boulevard. Before making a left hand turn on Franklin Blvd, at a red light, she noted that many witnesses were on the sidewalk pointing their fingers in the sky yelling, "UFO, UFO!" My wife then looked up into the sky, while heading west on Florin Road and looked up towards the western sky and claims to have witnessed two silver shaped dishes. The dishes hovered for about 2 or 3 minutes before disappearing before her eyes. After the saucers disappeared, her light turned green, and she proceeded to make her left hand turn. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

VENTURA/SANTA BARBARA COUNTIES -- Don Robertson reports he just received an email from David Anderson saying he and the family had seen the Camarillo/Holiday UFO last night, and so did I. It appeared in a clear patch of sky surrounded by clouds, at my location near Saticoy, CA. at 4:55 PM. It was visible for ten minutes, and then disappeared. I saw two downward jumps with the naked eye, and then it disappeared rather slowly...blurring out. There did seem to be a blurry light before it went, altogether. I've observed this effect before.

On November 19, 2001, I saw the object for the first time this year. It appeared, and disappeared, just before 5:00 PM. David Anderson said he'd seen it on October 31, 2001. I think this is the sixth year in a row that this object has been observed. For those of you unfamiliar with the object's history, David discovered the UFO on Thanksgiving, six years ago. Still photographs and video tape have been shot of it over the years, and many of us from the Ventura/Santa Barbara Counties MUFON, have been watching for it ever since. Thanks to Don Robertson
GBR262

CALIFORNIA BRIGHT LIGHTS

David, Same thing happened to me last night. I went out and looked to the NW, didn't see it and then turned to check the Moon, and found the object gleaming almost overhead. It was the same on Thanksgiving. Here are the appearances so far this year, as far as I know: October 31, 2001, in Camarillo. November 19, in Ventura...appeared and disappeared. November 22, over Ventura/Saticoy...10 minute sighting November 23, NW, high Somis, 5 minute sighting at Saticoy Country Club November 25, over Camarillo and Ventura...4:54 to 4:58 PM very bright. I shot some pictures through a 250 mm lens, but am unsure what the results will be. I'm going to try to video tape it, too. Can you all go out and check to your southwest very high up, about 4:50 PM. Please check when the sky is clear. We still need people in Bakersfield to check, also, to their southwest. Understand that this is the only time a star is out at this time of the evening, but it is very bright...almost as bright as Venus. If you see a star at this time, it is the object. I trust most of you know the difference between a star and a plane. The object will not move, neither will a star! Watch for at least ten minutes, and you will see the object disappear. Stars do not disappear. If possible view the object through binoculars and you'll really see it!! Keep checking, and write down what time the object appears and disappears. Thanks to Don GBR262e.russo@cisus.org (Edoardo Russo) cisufly-owners@yahoo.com.

Editor's Note: In November, Mars is low in the SSW at dusk and sets in the WSW at about 10 PM. Its possible viewing conditions may be playing tricks, UFOs generally move after hovering for a while.

CANADA FIREBALL

HALIFAX, NS -- As I gazed at the night sky on November 15, 2001, I saw something, and I didn't know what it was, at first. It was glowing red and traveling very fast at 11:00 PM, and I realized this was no comet or shooting star. It stopped very suddenly and let down two more fireballs. I was thinking, that's weird. It stopped for only four more minutes, but that was long enough for me to get what was happening. It was emitting long beams of light in a pattern 1, 2. Then stop 3, 4. Then stop. I hurried inside to get my binoculars but by the time I came out it had started moving again. The other two Fireballs' went in opposite directions. One flew east and one south. Thanks to Peter Davenport NUFORC www.ufocenter.com

MEXICO UFO FLEET OVER MEXICO STATE

SAN LUIS TLATILCO -- Sixteen metallic-white objects were sighted at 9:32 AM on November 21, 2001 as they flew over in the municipality of Naucalpan in the state of Mexico. Fourteen of these objects remained close together while the remaining two stayed apart. The sighting lasted 15 minutes enabling Mrs. Guillermina Vargas and her son to see the objects through binoculars, record them on video, and even count them one by one from their own home. Antena V=F3rtice has in its possession a three minute video of these objects. In an interview, Mrs. Vargas stated: "the objects moved slowly toward the center of Mexico City. What saddens me the most is having not been aware of the moment in which they disappeared." Thanks to Joe Trainor Masinaigan@aol.com and Scott Corrales

ITALY UFO NEWSFLASH #332

AREZZO -- The Italian Center for UFO Studies (CISU) reports that the analyses of the "Angel Hair" is continuing concerning the falling of whitish filaments on October 11, 2001, in the province of Arezzo. The phenomenon involved additional residents from the area, and over a time period of at least an hour, from 2 to 3:00 PM, and included ten witnesses. The filaments were also very long (up to 5-6 meters), and fell copiously and continuously, eventually becoming entangled in trees, on gates, and on the ground. Microscopic examination of the filaments, a colorimetric exam of their structure, and a fusion test revealed a structure that was varied, yet prevalently polysaccharide and irregular, leading to speculation that the filaments were of a natural and not artificial origin.

"UFO Baby", a New Comic Strip on newsstands beginning 26 October is the first installment of a new monthly comic strip entitled "UFO Baby" (published by Play Press of Rome, 192 pages, 7000 lire). It concerns a feature originally published between 1998 and 1999 in Japan (where last year, a televised version of it was also aired). Two teenagers observe a UFO and subsequently discover a newborn extraterrestrial, together with its babysitter and a stroller shaped like an Adamski-esque flying disc, which landed on Earth due to a space-temporal distortion. #### CORRECTION OLIVER NORTH

Several people wrote that during the Congressional Iran Contra Hearings, Lt. Col. Oliver North warned that the terrorist Osama Bin Laden had threatened him and his family and in his opinion, "He is the most evil person alive that I know of." Hal Putoff writes, that Oliver North fingered the terrorist Abu Nidal, rather than Osama Bin Laden. Others reviewed the transcripts and claimed there was no specific terrorist name mentioned. #### INTELLIGENCE FEEDBACK

Robert Collins received the following message from Major Darren, "Your web site is most impressive, especially the items about MJ-12. Having been involved with that subject area for many years, I can say most of what you state is fact. Although I don't know about the Aviary ( the so called list of intelligence operatives given names or birds). I do know MJ-12 was an active group of quasi-government personnel involved in the safeguarding of UFO and ET secrets. Were you involved in this program? I am retired Air Force Major (O-4) and worked with the Office of Special Investigation and AF intelligence for most of my 24 year career. Regarding James Jesus Angleton, he was never a member of MJ-12. He might have been privy to some information from MJ-12 but never a member. Angleton, in 1970, wrote a counterintelligence assessment of the UFO phenomena. In this document, Angleton mentioned the Roswell incident, also an incident in the New Mexican Desert in 1964 and an exchange program between EBEs and us in 1965 and 1969. This document was entitled, " Assessment Number 7." I know Rick Doty read this along with some other former government employees. The document was classified Top Secret, codeword, with limited distribution. I saw the document while assigned to Air Force Intel in the late 70s. Too bad we couldn't get our hands on this document. I'm sure it is tucked away in some obscure vault with CIA headquarters. Thanks to Darren and Robert Collins See

NEW NASA SHUTTLE VIDEO OF UFOs IN SPACE

Jeff Challender has prepared a new tape of various UFOs that were caught on recent Shuttle video footage. Jeff has over an hour long tape of UFOs shot in space. Jeff spends hundreds of hours watching the shuttle broadcasts from space and is now an expert on NASA missions and even those onboard the shuttle are unlikely to see what Jeff does. Using Jeff's directions you will be able to learn the difference between space junk, ice crystals and real UFOs. I feel confident we could go into a court of law and convince any jury that there are UFOs moving at high speed around the Earth. I think everybody on the List read correctly that James Oberg was attempting to debunk the quote by insinuating that it was never made.

Cernan made his remarks at a press conference of Apollo 17 astronauts on January 5, 1973 in Houston, where Mr. Oberg lives, I believe, since he works (worked?) for NASA.

I suspect all Mr. Oberg would have had to do to verify the quote would have been to walk over to the NASA public relations office and ask about it, or maybe ask a NASA archivist. Not only would he have probably come up with some press clippings, but maybe the original press conference transcript and videotape as well.

He could have also called up Eugene Cernan and simply asked him about it. Or, as it turns out, he could have politely asked about it on UFO Updates, where he got instantaneous results.
Instead he found it so much easier to sneer at the "rich and famous UFO believer quotes."

Although I completely agree that these quotes often turn out to be spurious and do require documentation, the impression I think we all get is that Mr. Oberg didn't try all that hard to document this one.

He only had all the resources of NASA at his disposal to track the quote down, if it came to that. But he didn't even have to do that. See immediately below.

>Hmm, let's see who needs a finger wagged at, and who's been Cernan's quote is in Timothy Good's "Above Top Secret." Good accurately provides the citation as the Jan 6, 1973 Los Angeles Times (see page 579). I bring this up here because notice below how Oberg slams the quote Good uses from Werner von Braun in the same book in the same chapter.

In other words, kiddies, all Oberg had to do to get the original citation for the Cernan quote was go to the same page of citations in Good's book that he used to check the von Braun quote.

What does this say about the truthfulness of his statement that he was unable to find the original citation?

The irony here, is in going after Good to deflect attention from his screw-up on Cernan, Oberg is unwittingly providing the rope to hang himself.

>I presume 28 years is barely enough time to

No, I don't see consensus building here, just a lot of hand-waving to try to remove his foot from his mouth.

>Second, I note that NOBODY has touched the X-15 Bob White >'testimony' fraud that my investigation on original cited >sources uncovered, and details of which I posted recently?

Why should anybody "touch it", since it wasn't the topic of discussion? Wasn't the topic Eugene Cernan's "questionable" quote?

Oberg is simply trying to change the subject after getting the screws rightfully put to him for his slimy debunking tactics.

>Do we >presume from this that 'silence implies consent' and that >everybody here is agreeable to posting the faked version of his >actual description of the small, tumbling, paper-shaped >doohingee he spotted outside his window? Is that the consensus, >people's mistakes are not our responsibility to correct -- you >can sense this attitude from some smarmy posts about >'how-dare-he?' question useful propoganda bites, whether >accurate or not.

Ironic how Oberg uses classic propoganda tactics to dodge responsibility for his mistakes if not prevarications, then accuses others of employing "propoganda bites."

>Third, here's another piece of original research on another
>'famous' pro-UFO quote from Wernher von Braun. Your reaction (or >lack of reaction) will be interesting.

More changing of the subject instead of simply apologizing. He got Cernan completely wrong, so he tries to rehabilitate himself with his past "triumphs."

>Famous 'Wernher von Braun' UFO quotation debunked.
>James Oberg

>There is a widespread quotation attributed to Wernher von Braun

Yes, the very same Timothy Good who also provided the correct citation for the Cernan quote, which Oberg said he couldn't obtain.

Yes, that's the citation Good provided in his chapter on NASA (p. 579). Of course, further down on the same page of citations is the Los Angeles Times one for Cernan. And all these years, poor Jim Oberg would have us believe he was unable to obtain this citation from the propagandistic "UFO believers!"

I think I see some fingers wagging out there.

In the case of the Cernan quote, we have all seen just how hard he tries to track down the original source material before making insinuations about the truthfulness of it. But I guess we'll just have to trust Jim Oberg on this one, that the quote from von Braun really isn't there and Good bungled this one.

But Good didn't bungle the Cernan citation, the one trustworthy Jim Oberg claimed he couldn't obtain from the UFO believers. Looks to me like the game of Good vs. Oberg is tied at one all.

Refuting Fermi: No Evidence for Extraterrestrial Life?
By: John B. Alexander

In a recent article Seth Shostak drew attention what has become known as the Fermi Paradox. Typically discussants raise the famous off-hand luncheon comment by Enrico Fermi, "Where is everybody?" when dismissing the existence of intelligent extraterrestrial life. The invocation of such a distinguished figure is polemic and used to make the position academically unassailable.

In the ranks of scientific loyalists there is a constant refrain pertaining to the existence of intelligent extraterrestrial life. Best phrased by Carl Sagan, known for his "billions and billions" quotation in developing the hypothesis that we share the universe with other forms of intelligence, he added "but there is not one shred of evidence to support it." Really? Actually, the book he co-edited with Thornton Page, UFOs: A Scientific Debate, refutes his own statement. The deductive error is conflation of lack of evidence with proof beyond a reasonable doubt.

Edward Condon fostered this misconstruction in his fatally flawed and internally inconsistent report on UFOs. Despite the widely published conclusions, his report too contained substantial evidence supporting the physical existence of these objects. The error is the a priori assumption that UFOs cannot exist therefore no evidence to the contrary will be considered, never mind accepted. Few scientists would allow such faulty logic to prevail in their own field of expertise. Yet, in the emotionally laden field of UFOs, scientists let Condon stand uncorrected and disregarding pertinent facts has become the accepted norm.

The undeniable reality is that there are a substantial number of multi-sensor UFO cases backed by thousands of credible witnesses. In the physical domain there are many photos, videos, radar tracking, satellite sensor reports, landing traces including depressions and anomalous residual radiation, electromagnetic interference, and confirmed physiological effects. Personal observations have been made both day and night, often under excellent visibility with some at close range. Included are reports from multiple independent witnesses to the same event. Psychological testing of some observers has confirmed their mental competence. Why is none of this considered evidence?

There are over 3000 cases reported by pilots, some of which include interference with flight controls. On numerous occasions air traffic controllers and other radar operators have noted unexplained objects on their scopes. So too have several astronomers and other competent scientists reported their personal observations. Many military officials from several countries have confirmed multi-sensor observations of UFOs. The most senior air defense officers of Russia, Brazil, Belgium and recently a former Chief of Naval Operations in Chile all have stated that UFOs are real. These cases and comments are a miniscule fraction of the total body of evidence.

Of course they do not constitute irrefutable proof. However, to state there is no evidence suggestive of intelligent extraterrestrial life simply belies the facts. Decades in duration and global in nature, there are too many hard sensor data-points and millions of eyewitnesses to ignore. We certainly can debate the significance of specific data and question whether or not it establishes a causal relationship between the observations and extraterrestrial life. However, it is only through ignorance or pomposity that one can say no evidence exists.

I'm glad that we agree that there are such things as Klassical ad hominem.

Beyond that, all of us, or at any rate most of us, don't want to believe in things that aren't so. That conceded, maybe we can all stop pointing fingers and saying grumpy things to each

>(Unidentified Flying Object). But I've been asked, and >I've said publicly I thought they were somebody else,
>some other civilization." Gene Cernan, 1-6-1973

>It goes on about his positive views on life in space and the >abundance of other civilizations.

>So the quote is slightly different than given many places on the >web, but it is authentic.

Don't be fooled by Oberg's claim that he couldn't find the citation, because Timothy Good used the exact same quote in "Above Top Secret" and provided the correct citation. Oberg should definitely have know of this, because in another post to Updates, to deflect attention from his screw-up on Cernan, he attacked another quote from Good's book. This involved an alleged quote from Werner von Braun from a highly obscure German periodical. Oberg said he had somebody in Germany check out the von Braun citation. Both citations (of the quote from von Braun and the quote from Cernan) are on the same page in "Above Top

So how come he could find the von Braun citation in Good's book and even check it out, but not the Cernan citation?

But that's not the main subject of this post. I live near UC Berkeley, which has an excellent microfilm collection, including the L.A. Times. It was no problem finding the article. Cernan's remarks were made during a press conference of Apollo 17 astronauts in Houston (where Oberg lives) on Jan. 5, 1973.

Cernan's remarks about UFOs and his belief in the probability of many ET civilizations made up the bulk of the L. A. Times article. Towards the end of the article, it had Harrison Schmitt's comments on some strange, orange moon soil they brought back which was volcanic and thought to be very recent in origin. Then the article ended with a paragraph about the astronauts' future plans. Cernan and Ronald Evans said they intended to remain with the space program, but Schmitt wasn't sure.

I assumed this press conference would be reported in other newspapers as well. So in the time I had, I also checked the New York Times and the San Francisco Chronicle. Both carried an Associated Press article. Almost the entire article was about the young volcanic soil. Like the L.A. Times article, the ending paragraph was about the astronauts' intentions.

But there wasn't a single word about what Cernan had said regarding UFOs and alien civilizations, the major focus of the L. A. Times article. If somebody read only the AP article, they would never know Cernan had made these remarks. (Insert your conspiracy theory here about the Associated Press censoring UFO material.)

I may go back and check some of the other major newspapers, such as the Chicago Tribune and Washington Post, to see if maybe they carried some other version of the press conference. The UCB library doesn't have the Houston Post, which might have a local version. However, I bet even James Oberg might be able to find that.

fit...

Your microcosmic contentions, awash with all the veracity you'd

I'm somewhat less than amused considering how readily you can >and may provide some insight into the 1957 incident versions >discrepancies.

I have read the article which mentions Cooper's 1951 UFO. It does not state the duration and dates of Cooper's tour in Europe. However, there is this comment:

Other veterans of Cooper's unit concurred. "I was a pilot and weather officer at Neubiberg 1948 thru 1951, but I can't recall any reports of these sightings," wrote one.

I don't know about anything in 1951, but in 1948 there was indeed a UFO sighting at Newbiberger.

See:

<http://www.project1947.com/fig/jtt.htm>

First, USAFE Intelligence stated that they received recurring reports of flying saucers. Newspapers throughout Europe had reported on the Neubiberg Air Base incident referred to in the cable:

On October 29, 1948, newspapers throughout Europe reported this sighting near Munich:

"Five U. S. Air Force pilots observed a mysterious, silvery object similar in appearance to a so-called flying saucer hanging high over Neubiberg Air Base in Bavaria. The object disappeared at a terrific speed after having remained over the air base more than 30 minutes. A similar object had been seen days before by another group of American pilots."

The above quote is from Hammet's "Flying Saucers Come to Europe" which apparently is no longer on the web. However, I believe I have a copy here and will attempt to post it. A former "Top Secret" report from USAF, Europe does refer to UFO reports in Germany and at Neubiberg in 1948. This doesn't match Cooper's account. It has been my experience that people have difficulty remembering dates unless there is a significant event around that time to which one may refer.

Further comments:

Unit histories are unreliable for determination if UFOs were reported by certain military organizations. I have consulted hundreds of such histories, only a small percentage of these histories mention UFO cases, even when the UFO sightings by a particular unit made national headline. Ditto US Navy ships logs.

I have copies of the original 1952 TWX's from the aircraft carrier USS Philippine Sea and information from the ship's operations officer that there were additional sightings afterwards. These additional sightings were reportedly made when the ship was operating with the USS Missouri. However, on consulting the deck logs of the both the Philippine Sea and the Missouri no mention was found of any UFO sightings. The earlier Philippine Sea report while in Project Blue Book also is not mentioned in the ship's log. Nor were there any mention in the logs of other ships in both the task forces. (Out of 72 dates and ships, I had reference to UFO reports, only two were mentioned in ships' logs. The USS Chippola in 1947, and the Greenwood off of Key West in 1952.) There were no long entries for Operation Mainbrace although there were UFO reports made during the exercise.

Lack of comments about UFO incidents in unit histories or ship's logs does not establish anything about the existence of such reports.

Evening all,

Wow, what a great convention that must have been. One I would have really liked to have attended. Thx to Grant for passing this link along.

However, I do have one issue I would like to take up in regards to something Dr Steven Greer talked about. This mistaken idea that the energy source the Grey's ect are using will be a good replacement for our energy consumption needs.

Oil will run out soon and we do need to either find another source or learn to make sacrifices by living without some of these so-called luxuries we have become so reliant upon. It would seem more logical to do without the 10 percent of people using these resources than to stumble around hoping to find another source or risking self extinction by rushing in and using another resource we know little or next to nothing about.

Resource like what ET's are using as a fuel source is one of these that I know we know nothing about, especially what effects these have upon our world and upon us. (Well for most anyway.)

My research into magnets and what powers magnets lead me to believe a craft using magnetic fields was possible and was 'the only way to go' for travelling around in outer space in a short enough time to make travelling worth while. But what I also found out was that these elements that are needed to make all this kind of space travel possible, come with a price. When mined and processed for just such use, it takes away the magnetic field/magnetic properties from the planet it is mined out of. So if we started mining and processing these elements here on Earth it wouldn't be too many years down the track before the effects of all this mining started to make its presents felt. I dare say everyone here would be able to understand what would happen to our planet if we started the reckless mining of the very elements that keeps this remarkable little planet of ours orbiting the sun. Not to mention these magnetic fields keep the Moon were it is.

I took up the UFO challenge to find out if my research into magnetism was correct and to work out if the Greys or any other alien race was getting their resources to build and power their vessels from our planet or Moon. If this is the case I am very determined to stop them and tell the world as to what is going on. This goes for any people of Earth that wish to start messing around with these same elements.

I mean why does everyone think these ET's live in space for? If you think about it, couldn't they just find another planet and settle down on it? Of course they could, but they don't, because they like what they have and what they are doing, not to mention they get to live incredibly long lives and they aren't about to give up this life style any more than many of us would give ours up. But as with all such life styles there comes a price for someone or something.

As I listened to Dr Greer talking it suddenly occurred to me that perhaps this very knowledge of such elements/alchemy was in fact what was being kept from us, not so much the ET's themselves.

I can see why this would happen now, as we all know even if the whole world knew that the use of these elements/resources would see an end to Mother Earth and all life on it, there would still be those idiots out there that would use it and gladly put all of our lives at risk for a profit. So on one hand, whom ever it is, that is keeping this info from us is really doing us a bigger favour than we might think. On the other hand they also might be just keeping it all for themselves.

It is a fact of life that the dollar drives science and scientists into areas they would never under normal circumstance go or even dream of going. This greed and short mindless that now drives most of our science may just be our greatest undoing if we aren't careful.

We as a race have to make a decision about what is an acceptable use of limited resources by the few that get to use them; there is no such thing as free energy. We have one planet left in this solar system that will support terrestrial life such as ours. So any mistakes we make now we will be paying for very dearly in the future. Reincarnation will be pointless if there is no planet for one to be reincarnated on.

We can have a great life with a life style to rival a king, without putting the planet or any other life at risk. It will take time, it will take commitment for us all, it will take scarifies and compromises. It will take longer than our life times to achieve. But it can be done, if we want it too.

I see this period in Human kinds history as being a turning point, were we go from here will either see us head towards our extinction or our continued existence. There is no short, quick, easy answer, no quick fix to get us out of our pending energy crisis.

So I can see why some are rushing to find solutions to these problems, but hast makes waste. Better I think we start to learn to make sacrifices and start using less.

Sincerely

Christopher (Tophar)

Another great example is the X-15 'sighting' by Bob White which fraudulently omits explanatory details from the cited source (Time magazine),

The cited article is TIME magazine, July 27, 1962, pp. 12-13, entitled 'SPACE: Inside the Sky'. It is a portrait of Major Robert White.

The final paragraph reads: 'New Mystery: After the sky-stabbing record flight last week, four X-15 pilots -- White, Walker, North American's Scott Crossfield, and Navy Commander Forrest Petersen -- journeyed to Washington, where President Kennedy gave them the Robert J. Collier Trophy, presented annually since 1911 for outstanding achievements in flight.

But for White and his fellow X-15 pilots, the greatest reward for their work is the satisfaction of probing the mysteries inside the sky. In last week's flight Bob White found a new mystery for scientists to puzzle over: through the X-15's thick left quartz window, he saw a strange sight: 'There ARE things out there,' he radioed enthusiastically over his voice radio. 'There absolutely is.'

As White later described one 'thing': 'It looked like a piece of paper the size of my hand tumbling slowly outside the plane. It was greyish in color, and about 30 to 40 feet away. I haven't any idea what it could be.'

Oberg continues: engineers postulated he was seeing ice flaking off the engine nozzle, super-cooled by the liquid oxygen propellant and broken loose by the firings of the X-15's attitude control thrusters once it was in space. This explanation came to satisfy everybody in the X-15 program, especially in hindsight when nearby tumbling ice flakes became a common sight on orbital missions.

In ANY case, the use of the TIME article with omission of the explanatory comments such as the small size of the sighted object and its appearance -- tumbling, looking like a piece of paper -- is a simple case of fraud. Somebody expected to have no problem promulgating this deliberately distorted story among the UFO buffs at whom it was aimed. And as far as I can tell, it's worked.

What I can add is to get a tape of that press conference from NASA-JSC and see if it was a question asked during the conference, although it might have been asked face-to-face either before or after the formal event.

Jerry Clark's admonitions are very appropriate. And use of words

>I asked for documentation on an Internet quote, and that got >attacked as 'finger pointing' and 'screwing up'.

Can't imagine why. First you suggested the quote was bogus because "nobody" (nobodies unspecified) would provide you with an original citation. But you had the original L. A. Times citation all along in Timothy Good's book ("Above Top Secret"), you know, the one that had the chapter on NASA and quotes from von Braun and Cernan. You ran down the Good's von Braun quote, but not Cernan's. Why?

>When the >documentation was provided from credible sources, I'm happy to >accept the newspaper account as authentic.

If you could check out Good's citation on von Braun, you could have run down Good's citation on Cernan as well, and much more easily (many libraries have a major paper like the L.A. Times on microfilm, maybe even in Houston). Both citations were on the same page. If that isn't "screwing up," then what is it?

>The connection >between the newspaper account and Cernan's actual statements or >beliefs remains undefined, although the newsman in question - >Nick Chriss - was a veteran reporter known for accuracy.

>As to the X-15 ("White's UFO") fraud, or the von Braun false >quote, now suddenly we hear that people never believed stuff on >the Internet anyway, so no big deal. Hmm, isn't this >inconsistent?

Maybe you would care to address the inconsistency of your claim that you couldn't find the Cernan citation, even though it was right there with the von Braun citation in Good's book.

>Yet when I suggested that without documentation I wouldn't >believe something just because it was on the Internet, I wind >up whipped with Klassical ad hominem.

And you wouldn't know anything about using ad hominem, would you?

>Isn't consistent logic such >a delight when you find it, or even when you don't? <grin>

Others of us may not share your "delight", since your ability to find the von Braun quote citation in Good's book is logically inconsistent with your seeming inability to find the Cernan citation in the same book, in fact, even on the same page.

>I'll continue to dig into the accuracy of stuff widely published >on the Internet, out of this curious obsession with getting real >facts right and false facts exposed and documented. I guess that >obsession is sort of crazy to many people! <again, grin>

You were so "obsessed" with documenting the Cernan quote and getting your "facts right" that you completely ignored or overlooked Good's citation. Somehow, however, you found the von Braun quote in the same chapter on NASA and UFOs, and used Good's citation to run it down. They you proudly announced how you had debunked the von Braun quote.

As to the Cernan quote, you wrote on Updates Nov. 21:

"Cernan's quotation keeps being repeated, but whenever I've asked for the original citation, or a photocopy of the actual article, nobody's been able to actually produce it."

The insinuation here was that the quote was false, because "nobody's been able to actually produce" "the original citation or a photocopy of the actual article."

I don't know about you, but I usually do my own legwork instead of relying on the knowledge of Internet "nobodies." A good place for you to have started was turning to the index of "Above Top Secret.." you know, the book with those erroneous NASA/astronaut quotes you like to debunk, such as von Braun and Bob White. In about 3 seconds you would have had the page number of Cernan's quote.

In 3 more seconds, you could have thumbed to the page with Cernan's quote and gotten the number of the citation footnote. Then turning to the reference section in the rear of the book, in a few more seconds you would have had the actual citation: p. 579, "Chris Nicholas: 'Cernan Says Other Earths Exist,' Los Angeles Times, 6 January 1973."

Boy, that was hard!

Perhaps you can explain to us why you couldn't bother yourself in your great obsession to track down the facts. Maybe it was because there is so much for you to debunk and so little time! <grin>

Incidentally, given your past record of spin-doctoring (your current response to your screw-up, yes SCREW-UP, on the Cernan quote being a very good example), I don't consider YOU to be a highly credible source.

I don't know if von Braun actually made the quote attributed to him by Good. I guess we'll just have to take your word for now that it isn't in Good's citation, Neues Europa, 1 January 1959. But I do know for a fact that von Braun was in Germany at that time attending the funeral of his mother, who died Dec. 28, 1958 in Munich. (This can be verified with a quick thumb through the New York Times index, available at most major libraries, even in Houston I'm sure.)

The point is von Braun was in the right place at the right time to have been directly quoted by the German press. I wouldn't be too quick to dismiss the possibility that the quote in question is floating out there, perhaps in one of the Munich newspapers instead of Neues Europa. Somebody, however, would have to spend the time doing a diligent search of German newspapers and magazines to see what the German press quoted von Braun as saying about anything. (I'm sure it would have been big news to have von Braun back in Germany. The papparazzi probably would have been all over him).

For all we know, maybe the German equivalent of the L.A. Times has him saying "Other Earths Exist" or "I thought they were somebody else, some other civilization." Famous people affiliated with NASA have been known to say such things, hard as it may be for James Oberg to accept in his zealous quest for the truth.

Even if the German quote turns out to be completely bogus, it should come as no surprise to many on the Updates list that some people associated with von Braun have claimed he spoke to them about the reality of UFOs. Here are but two examples from a quick Net search:

1. Michael Lindemann and CNI News, reporting on Clark McClelland comments on NASA covering up UFOs and von Braun telling him of the Roswell crash

http://hardtruth.topcities.com/nasa\_knows\_ufos.htm

2. UFO/Disney/von Braun connection with additional comments by Bruce Maccabee and Stanton Friedman, including this by Stan: "I should add that I have recently been told that the late Dr. Hans Nieper, a rather remarkable German Physician, has told people that Von Braun told him that indeed aliens and flying saucers were real."

Humbly submitted as a measure of what we've lost, continue to lose, and know to get back. This points up the value, utility, and validity of the different drumming individual, each of us to one degree or another, and provides a valid framework from which to reach further in that rewarding attempt to increase ones grasp...

The Pyramids of Maslow

An Epic song
by Alfred Lehmborg

It's called "self actualization," and it comes to one with luck -- if one's found out its existence, and ones courage measures up. A cosmic drug, but safer (in fact healing, I should say). Surely, vanquishing the shadows as it drives them far away. It's built up, like a pyramid, just one level at a time, and when it's been constructed there's a treasure one might find!

Why, one can look for miles, friend, and perceive the grandest things; one could feel very deeply, but could still detach from things; and one could SEE, at last, some "thing" - for what it really was, and write it down for you and me, describing what it does...

The FIRST tier of this pyramid's a wide based, harsh, affair. Requirements must dictate what the 'real world' shares. Food - and plenty of it, food for health, and day to day. Food that feeds the body (and the mind I'm quick to say). Food that's never ending, food that's always there, food that won't distract you from that 'upward' path so near. Without it one must perish; without it one looks down; without it one is looking for its smell or taste and sound. Without food one will perish and shall think of nothing else; One's, at the least, distracted as one tightens at ones belt.

The NEXT tier of this pyramid's 'almost' as wide and harsh. It presupposes shelter, a roof, some clothes - a hearth. Ones life requires sanctuary, security - retreat. Refuge and good cover are essential, basic needs. Without it one's distracted from a self-affirming path. Without it one is doomed to beg - and grovel for a laugh! Without it one is lost at sea without a hook to use. Without it one will suffer if his home has been abused.

The THIRD tier is relaxing and it gives one time to think. It hinges on security - or how closely lies the 'brink'. It's SAFETY that concerns one - no 'gators in the swamp... as one might work to drain it (?) - be undistracted by their "romp"? It's protection from disaster, and defense against disease, it's redress from all the worrying if one gets up off ones knees. It's a loss of all ones anxiousness, that distraction from the path... that ruins satisfaction, and runs a motor out of gas. With safety one has time to think - to ponder, more, the stars . . . to give some thought to flying things, like saucers and guitars.

The FORTH tier's near as massive though maligned - misunderstood. Worshipped and detested, call it lust or something 'good'. It's tumultuous, a wildcard! It can make you sick as hell. It's like dancing with the stars and hearing ringing - pealing bells. Providing for ones basic drive it's woven into love, or pounded into razor blades and used to prod and shove. One shall not rise above it... this tyranny of genes - denied it sneaks upon you, and shall visit you with 'dreams'. A column for ones total drive, it shall not be dismissed. This tier of your potential is the tier that would be 'kissed'.

. . . And then one wants "belonging" as a FIFTH tier finds its place. One wants to feel useful and... a PART of something, Ace! And, this is fine and dandy 'till it's used to take your hand, and then lead you down some prim rose path - mere fodder to be damned. One finds belonging to ones SELF a better path, you see - a path so ever upward in a climb to make one free. Free from despotism that will take away ones edge, free of harsh elitists that would have us live THEIR dread. Free from all behaviorists, their programs and their chains, free from all the guilt imposed, the charges, and the blame. Belonging's fine until it's used to cause one further pain. It's, then, a mechanism for a collar on your brain.

Oh, then there's recognition, and rewards that that entails. A SIXTH tier may be added, and one reaches, grasps... or fails. Yes, here there's contribution. Here, ACHIEVEMENTS can be made that makes repairs or shreds and tears - to clarify or fade. One's competence unquestioned (?) and esteem needs justly met (?), one looks around for what is left, to pick up, savor - GET! Perhaps one takes the high road and decides, instead, to give ... in a manner chance providing one - with WHAT one can believe. Perhaps it is the time one has... to put her hand on things... undistracted by the children that still fall - torrential rain. Perhaps it is the time one has to clarify his mind, to look instead into a light he's 'warned' would strike him blind?

The SEVENTH level's sweeter than the pyramid implies. Greater than its sum of parts, a synergy's contrived. It's here there's elevation that your 'God' has even feared. It's here there comes advancement as one cuts away ones fear. It's here there is progression as the grasp assumes its reach. It's here, perhaps advancement as the reachers turn to teach. It's here, mayhap, improvement of an efficacious kind; it's here one knows the pleasure of the perspicacious mind.

At seven one's 'self-actualized' and is reaching for the stars... one touches shining levels that are bright as golden bars! "Reach" and "grasp" become as one, and magic happens fast. Reality is sorted out, and firmly gripped at last. Acceptance is ones common sense for others as they are -- themselves, the world or what's outside... the space between the stars.

The flavor's spontaneity. The behavior is the creed - the evidence considerable... for routine there's little need. The problem's at the center of the point of the concern, the self is secondary (though the hardest to be learned). The theme is rare detachment, the "forest for the trees". Gestalt is common - usual... avoids behaviorism's fleas.

Requiring modest privacy so the thinking bubbles up, these 'actualized' are worth the time they spend apart from us. They change the world's thinking as they think the thoughts they do. Improving our humanity, they can see a problem through. Required (?) - an independence from distraction lower down on the levels of their pyramid that they've built on quaking ground. They NEED their grand autonomy that they EARN by giving back... useful fruits of thoughtful labor as they take us 'there' and back!

Resistance is mechanical to any dogma one has brought. Stereotyped behaviors are eschewed as more than not. They don't judge, but don't participate; not flamboyant, they don't try... to stretch the unconventional to a point one should despise. They seek the common welfare, and an increase of the same. They're not apart from empathy so that suffering is tamed. Relationships are deeper (with a few), and less is more. Superficiality is detested to its core. They see the democratic as the path to be maintained, where misery is shared on out, thereby, wiping out that pain. The joy is shared the same damned way, but increases for the daring. The reward's a satisfaction we achieve for earnest sharing!

...And then comes their transcendence, they don't cope, they SOAR and CLEAVE! Environment's a treasured thing that keeps one off her knees. Creation is the answer and the fund of real wealth; it satisfies the 'hunger', and provokes a better health. It brings a PEAK EXPERIENCE ; it is RAPTURE ; it is JOY; it's self regenerating so there's independence, boy! It's excitement, and it's insight, and it's not for just a few! More could well achieve it with their structures so imbued.

Imbued with what, you're asking? Well, imbued with what supports! A better wage, and time to think, clean WATER, by report. The path is SELF-constructed in a pyramid one makes to reach the sky and grasp the truth from charlatans and fakes. Expand upon potential! Elevate your mind, and cleave to soar unlimited, unbound, and unconfined!

Lehmborg@snowhill.com

Self-actualization. More could (should) have it, and all would (shall) be IMPROVED for these having it. Read on.

I am in full agreement with John having discussed the "Fermi Paradox" in my 2001 MUFON paper "Flying Saucers and the Cosmic Neighborhood". It should be noted that Fermi's comment came after a discussion that strongly suggested that a civilization could colonize the galaxy in a few million years.

He may have asked the question as a teaching tool, expecting colleagues to suggest that they may have been visiting and quarantining us, or making sure we couldn't take our brand of friendship out there. After all, considering that Zeta 1 and Zeta 2 Reticuli are about a billion years older than the sun and less than a light year apart, and only 37 light years away, they may have long ago colonized the neighborhood or set us up as a colony, a game preserve, a prison for banishment of bad boys and girls, etc. As I noted in the paper, there could have been dozens of civilizations here over the past billion years about which we know nothing. Schliemann had to dig down 75 feet to find Troy from just a few thousand years ago. How many civilizations here have been destroyed by asteroids, comets, wars, continental upheavals, volcanos, etc etc.?

My paper also points out the fallacy of using the Drake equation as a means of determining how many civilizations are out there.

The worst aspects of such SETI cultists as Shostak, Drake, Tartar, Sagan are their failure to examine both the UFO evidence and the astronautics data about interstellar travel. Their ignorance hasn't stood in the way of their totally baseless proclamations about both matters. Check their references and you begin to understand why I think SETI stands for Silly Effort To Investigate.

My paper is in the 2001 MUFON Conference Proceedings and is also available as a separate item from UFORI, POB 958, Houlton, ME 04730-0958. Only $4.00 including S and H.

UFO Sinks Fishing Boat

The Portsmouth-registered fishing boat 'Fin Ar Bed' struck an unidentified floating object shortly before 1130 yesterday morning, holing so badly that the three crew were forced to abandon ship and take to the liferaft. The vessel sank within 45 minutes of the collision.

Holyhead Coastguard received a Mayday call at 1130 on Monday morning. The Fin Ar Bed had been potting in deep water, 15 miles NNW of South Stack off the Holyhead peninsula, when she hit - or was hit by - an object at 53=B0 34N 04=B0 47W. A large hole was carved in the side of the hull and she started taking on water quickly. The crew had just enough time to send a Mayday call before abandoning the vessel in liferafts.

Holyhead Coastguard immediately alerted RAF Valley's SAR wing, requested the launch of Holyhead lifeboat and prepared the Holyhead Coastguard rescue team. The call was also relayed on Ch 16 and several nearby vessels responded with offers of assistance.

A rescue helicopter was scrambled from RAF Valley and the three men were winched to safety and taken to Holyhead Coastguard Station where the men were found to be shaken and cold but otherwise well.

"The three fishing vessel crew were quickly retrieved after their ordeal and were in some ways fortunate in that the weather was reasonable for the rescue with south westerly Force 2 winds, good visibility and blue skies," said David North, Watch manager at Holyhead Coastguard.

"It is a mystery as to what the vessel could have hit in the water, however it must have been quite substantial to have made such significant damage in quite deep water." Gales have prevented any reconnaissance of the area but everything points to a collision with a lost container.

New Planet Sparks Hopes For Alien Life

Astrobiologists speculate over star system 150 light years away

Tim Radford, science editor
Wednesday November 28, 2001
The Guardian

Astronomers have used the Hubble space telescope to detect the atmosphere of a planet circling a star 150 light years away.

The discovery reawakens the dream of detecting extraterrestrial life in other star systems. A new breed of astrobiologists is convinced that life on any distant planet would leave its signature in the air - just as methane and oxygen in the Earth's atmosphere would be a clue to any passing aliens that the planet was inhabited.

"Only a decade ago, planets outside the solar system were still in the realm of science fiction," said David Charbonneau, of the California Institute of Technology, who led the study. "Searching for a star's unseen planetary companion was crazy. Hoping to see its atmosphere was even crazier."

Now planets are discovered monthly, and even their atmospheres are in reach, he said. "Suddenly, discussing searches for Earth-like planets seems quite reasonable."

But he discovered no sign of life. The atmosphere of the planet that circles the star HD209458, in the constellation Pegasus, is rich in sodium. The planet itself is likely to be an inhospitable gas giant, like Jupiter.

More than 80 planets have now been identified around distant stars. Most of these planets have to be inferred from the gravitational wobble they create in their parent star. But this one was different. The tilt of its orbit meant that it had to pass in front of its star, causing it to dim very faintly, every 3.5 days, which meant that, for the first time, researchers could detect an extraterrestrial planet directly.

But the planet orbits at a distance of only 4m miles from the mother star's surface. This closeness heats its atmosphere to more than 1,100C (2012F). It also meant that every 3.5 days some of the star's light passed through the planet's atmosphere on its way to Earth. Astronomers could use a technique called spectroscopy to analyse this light and read the "signature" of any elements in the atmosphere. This is the same technique that first identified the element helium in the sun.

Both Nasa and the European Space Agency have elaborate plans for fleets of spacecraft that will use subtle techniques to sift the evidence from presently-invisible planets far across the galaxy. None of these are likely to be launched for a decade. The detection of sodium in the light of HD209458 could add new urgency to their plans.

"It is hugely exciting to nail down anything at all about something as mysterious as planets outside our solar system," said Timothy Brown of the National Centre for Atmospheric Research, who worked with Dr Charbonneau. "Is this planet's chemical personality unique or is it typical of a certain class of extrasolar planets? We have no clue. We hope to find out."

UFO Crash 'Blinded My Cows'

A Brazilian farmer says an explosion from a mid-air crash between two UFOs has blinded his cattle herd.

Five other villagers in Corguinho, south-west Brazil, also say they witnessed the crash.

Farmer Getulio Alves says the explosion burned nearby trees but police say they haven't found any evidence.

Maria Lucia Vidal de Souza, from the Doorway Project which provides UFO information to tourists, is heading the investigation.

She told O Estado de Sao Paulo: "The blast happened in a hard-to-reach place, we still haven't found the wreckage, but soon we'll find it and prove it's all true."

Several witnesses in a Brazilian city
Claim Having Seen Exploding UFO
DPA
Campo Grande (Brasil)

The alleged explosion of an unidentified flying object (UFO) drew attention to the small Brazilian city of Corguinho, a community of 3,800 people in the southwestern corner of the state of Matto Grosso do Sul. The "silent explosion" that lit the skies over Corguinho occurred around 23:00 hours last Saturday attracted a group of UFO researchers with Proyecto Portal, an organization dedicated to alleged extraterrestrial activity.

"Between 15 and 20 people witnessed the explosion," stated Mar=EDa Lucia Vidal de Souza, a member of Proyecto Portal, who guided the group of tourists who saw the phenomenon. The group included Fabio Jr. a well-known Brazilian actor and singer. "We reached the site at midnight on Saturday after having received notice from a local landowner of lights crossing the sky from one end to another. Finally, the light intensified. Since [the explosion] occurred in a hard-to-reach location, we still haven't found any remains, but we hope to do so soon," concluded Vidal de Souza. In spite of this, the sheriff of Corguinho, Marco Antonio Balsamini, who visited the site on Monday, claims not having found any trace whatsoever of aliens.

NOTE: The Institute of Hispanic Ufology (IHU)M has received cautionary messages from Esdras Martins in Brazil and Luis Eduardo Pacheco in Argentina regarding the possible fraudulent nature of this case.

Fermi's Paradox III: Zookeepers, Alien Visitors, Or Simple Life;
How Can We Explain Our Isolation?

By Seth Shostak
Astronomer, Project Phoenix
posted: 07:00 am ET
29 November 2001

We seem to have the Galaxy to ourselves. At least, that's the obvious conclusion from the apparent lack of aliens in the neighborhood.

But this conclusion might be a bit too obvious, and possibly wrong. In previous articles, we've considered why extraterrestrial intelligence is even if common would have restrained itself from spreading to every half-decent star system in the Galaxy. It's possible that the aliens have done cost-benefit analyses that show interstellar travel to be too costly or too dangerous to warrant ambitious colonization efforts. An alternative suggestion that would explain our apparent solitude is that the Galaxy is urbanized, and we're in a dullsville suburb.

Yet another resolution for the so-called Fermi Paradox is that we've been singled out for special treatment: we are an exhibit for alien tourists or sociologists. Our world may be known to the extraterrestrials, but they observe us through a sophisticated type of one-way mirror.

While there's no evidence to give credibility to this last idea (known as the "Zoo Hypothesis"), many would argue that evidence does exist for another possibility - namely, that the Paradox is just a red herring because the aliens are in the neighborhood. In fact, they're in our back yards, or just above them.

Many thousands of sightings of unidentified flying objects (UFOs) are reported each year, and polls show that one-third to one-half of the population believes that at least some of these aerial apparitions are alien spacecraft. The presence of aliens on Earth would neatly resolve the Fermi Paradox.

But while this is a prevalent idea among the public, the evidence for alien visitation has failed to sway most scientists. To convince researchers, who are inherently skeptical, unambiguous and repeated detection of flying objects by satellites or ground-based radar would be required. Better yet would be some indisputable physical evidence, such as the landing lights from an alien craft. In other words, something better than witness testimony is necessary, since such testimony isn't good enough, no matter how credible the witness.

Consider the fact that lots of people claim to have seen ghosts, and will be pleased to tell you what they saw. But the case for the existence of these shrouded spirits isn't what you would call convincing. You don't read a lot about the parameters of ghosts in scholarly journals.

Until and unless better evidence is collected, few scientists are inclined to accept the premise that the Fermi Paradox can be resolved by the claim that aliens are either soaring through the stratosphere, or are stashed away in meat lockers at Area 51.

Of course, there's no doubt that aliens in the neighborhood would be dramatic news, and that's part of the appeal of such claims. But the opposite circumstance would be similarly startling. What if we have failed to spy the extraterrestrials simply because there aren't any? After all, the evolution of intelligence may be a rare occurrence, even if biology is common. Could it be that in the enormous reaches of the Milky Way, ours is the only planet with thinking beings? That would neatly solve the puzzle posed by Fermi. And no matter how discouraging (or otherwise) the thought of being unique may be, we still haven't the proof that it isn't true.

While possible resolutions of Fermi's Paradox are as plentiful as gas stations, we still have no idea which, if any, is correct. Perhaps the universe is teeming with societies so subtle we can't prove their presence. Or haven't yet. On the other hand, maybe we're alone.

It's all a bit perplexing, but in fact there's hope. SETI experiments offer the promise of relegating the Fermi Paradox to the dustbin of historical curiosities by proving that other intelligence is out there. So while it's interesting and instructive to consider the pros and cons of galactic colonization, we should also make sure that we do some careful observing. In science, speculation is desirable, but experiment is definitive.

Hi Jim.

I took a few minutes off work to visit the York University library which has back issues of TIME magazine to locate this article and check out this last paragraph for myself. I found the article which you (and George Filer) mentioned in your e-mail above. It was found in the 'SPACE' section of the magazine and has the title 'Inside the Sky'. The article itself (which I photocopied and can provide copies to anyone who is interested) starts with one column on page 14 and ends with two columns and two pictures on page 15 (not pages 12 and 13). The first picture, which shows the X-15 in the background, is captioned 'MAJOR WHITE WITH SON AFTER THE FLIGHT "There ARE things out there"' (The word ARE is underlined). The second picture is captioned 'WHITE WITH WIFE' (They are kissing in this picture).

The last paragraph of the TIME magazine article is reproduced below (New Mystery is in bold letters) and agrees with the version that George Filer wrote in his newsletter:

New Mystery. After the sky-stabbing record flight last week, four X-15 pilots - White, Walker, North American's Scott Crossfield and Navy Commander Forrest Peterson - journeyed to Washington, where President Kennedy gave them the Robert J. Collier Trophy, presented annually since 1911 for outstanding achievement in flight. But for White and his fellow X-15 pilots, the greatest reward for their work is the satisfaction of probing the mysteries inside the sky. In last week's flight Bob White found a new mystery for scientists to puzzle over: through the X-15's thick left quartz window, he saw a strange sight. "There ARE things out there," he said dramatically over his voice radio. "There absolutely is." As White later described one "thing": "It looked like a piece of paper the size of my hand tumbling slowly outside the plane. It was greyish in color, and about 30 to 40 feet away. I haven't any idea what it could be."

The "greatest reward" for the X-15 pilots was "probing the mysteries inside the sky". What mysteries are there at the edge of space? White, an experienced pilot and I presume keen observer, is quoted as saying "there ARE things out there" and "there absolutely is", do you really think he confused ice flaking off his plane for UFOs?

Years ago I got a phone call from the owner of an optical manufacturing business just north of Toronto near York University. He called to tell me that a certain General, head of the U.S. military space program, visited him and wanted to know if he could construct optical tracking equipment for rapidly moving things in the upper atmosphere. My friend wanted to know what things and asked the General in jest if he was really interested in observing UFOs, to his surprise, the General answered in the affirmative... Maybe White was right - there ARE things out there.

Exactly what part in George Filer's original story do you feel is incorrect and should be retracted?

Nancy Talbot And Crop Circles

From: Nick Balaskas <nikolaos@YorkU.CA>
Date: Thu, 29 Nov 2001 10:22:25 -0500 (Eastern Standard Time)
Fwd Date: Thu, 29 Nov 2001 23:23:07 -0500
Subject: Nancy Talbot And Crop Circles

Hi Everyone,

Permit me make some comments of my own regarding Nancy Talbot's crop circle research.

There were some details in Nancy Talbot's description of the beams she and Robbert v/d Broeke saw and mentioned on Errol's UFO radio show last weekend that do not support her interpretation that they were flashes of light (about a second in duration) coming down from the sky to the ground. Since Robbert (who was in the first floor) saw a 4 inch diameter beam of light while Nancy (who was on the second floor) saw an 8 to 12 inch diameter beam of light, which she describes as a "searchlight" in her written report, it must have been just that. Many cars have 4 inch diameter headlights and so do some 1 million candlepower searchlights one can readily buy at most hardware stores which produce such diverging beams of light. It is not unusual for cows to become excited with some unfamiliar and unexpected activity at night, such as a stranger with a powerful flashlight.

Since Nancy failed to prove to me that the short duration beams of light came from above and not below (how could one even say considering how fast light travels) and failed to establish a connection to the bawling cows (have they been known to bawl at other occasions too or just when the beams of light were noticed?), she cannot claim to be a witness to the creation of a crop circle. Considering the lights were on and her room well lit, I am a little surprised that Nancy even noticed the beams of light outside, even if her bedroom window had no curtains (she didn't say).

The small orbs of light often photographed at night within crop circles but which are rarely or ever reported to be seen visually, can only be bugs very close to the camera lense. Nancy did make mention on SDI of such flying bugs around the head of one person within a crop circle. Since most flashbulbs give off a bright bluish-white light, one would expect this colour to be very prominent in the reflected bodies of the out-of-focus bugs close to the camera. The bluish orbs of light in the few photos Nancy posted on Rense's web site support the conclusion that they are bugs, not some mystery visible light that can readily be recorded on regular film but not detected with the human eye.

As for the mysterious particles found within crop circles but not outside which could only be created by extremely high temperatures and/or pressures but did not cook or totally crush the crops is scientific evidence that the crop circle sites were seeded with these particles by the aliens or hoaxers that produced them. Charcoal and diamonds are made up of the same Carbon atoms but have different crystal structures. We know that we need extremely high temperatures and/or pressures to create diamonds from charcoal. If Nancy found such diamonds within crop circles, would she also conclude this is proof of their alien origin or would she use her common sense and scientific reasoning and come to the reasonable conclusion that the crop circles were seeded with these diamonds.

As for crops that exhibit differences within the circles not found in the crops outside the circles, let me just say (without giving future crop circle hoaxers any new ideas) that there are readily available products at most garden stores that can rapidly accelerate growth and even change the cellular elastic properties in plants.

I admire researchers like Nancy who are trying to make an effort to understand the crop circle phenomena but I feel that even with what she has come up with so far, we still do not have any compelling evidence for an alien or unnatural explanation for even one crop circle. Maybe we never will if all crop circles were all hoaxed - but some of us would never be satisfied with this conclusion...

It was refreshing to listen to Nancy's crop circle research and honest comments on Errol's UFO radio show last weekend. I cannot no say the same about Phillip Krapf who was on Errol's 'Strange Days... Indeed' show the previous weekend. Maybe Phillip's alien friends were either lying to him about certain things or they know much less about space travel, astronomy and other such topics than we humans do.

<snip>

James' position is logical and quite consistent.

Any serious student of the UFO phenomena is bound to reach the inescapable conclusion that there MUST be something out there that is outside the boundaries of the human experience.

If you reach the conclusion that there is nothing there, that allcases are - will be - explainable, then one should suspect that you haven't studied enough, or that you didn't catch it, or that you'll never understand it, or you'll never admit it.

We should not be surprised by those blind points, voluntary omissions, short, middle and long term amnesia, selective recollections and so forth. They are the trademark and the essentials of the debunkers: one must be very well equipped to negate reality and have the facts fit the beliefs.

My take is that debunkers have egos so big that that it prevents them from admitting the evidence. They made the wrong choice from the start ("there is nothing out there") and will never admit that they were wrong.

Ufologists have the same inflated egos, mind you, but the difference is that, luckily for them, they made the right choice from the start: there is something there.

Regards,

Serge

Hi James,

Flakes of ice in the vacuum of space I can buy into but not within the atmosphere at supersonic speeds-and thirty to forty feet away tumbling in front of the pressure wave-which incidentally should be well aft of the X-15. That's one strong piece of ice flake. NASA et al seem to be getting away with the ice flake explanation for a lot of sightings and to be honest-I think it's getting a bit old.

Open to any reasonable suggestions.

Dear Friends,

The story of a UFO crash in the small city of Corguinho, state of Mato Grosso do Sul, is completely false. It was created by a very unreliable individual who has been caught in many other tricks in the past. He is Urandir Fernandes Oliveira, who was publicly exposed 5 years ago as probably the all-time most successful 'UFO hoaxer' in the world. His co-hoaxer, in this new 'case', is Maria Lucia Vidal de Souza, who claims to be a UFO researcher but isn't recognized as such by anybody. Both are members of a suspicious Project Portal (Doorway), which has been relentlessly criticized in Brazil for its fanatic behavior. Urandir is the founder of it and a "Guru" to its members.

Project Portal has become the largest 'UFO Cult' in the world today. Urandir and a few of his 'co-workers' have gathered a considerable fortune in money and properties with their hoaxes. The Brazilian UFO community has frequently exposed their actions and national press has largely published negative material on him, but he still continues his 'activities'. Major sources of income to Urandir are the visits that tourists and interested people make to his Project Portal, which are very expensive. It is estimated that over 50,000 people have been to the place, and more than 200,000 have attended to his so-called 'Contact Classes' in many parts of Brazil. He was caught many times using laser pointers and special type of lights to fool tourists and other people who go to his farm, near Corguinho, where his project is based.

On March 2000, Urandir and Maria Lucia were arrested in Porto

Alegre for four days for selling parts of a farm that didn't belong to them. Over 6,000 people, who were induced by him to believe that they would be safe from Armageddon and rescued by ETs if they move to the property, purchased the land. They never saw a piece of it! Over the years Urandir has tried several maneuvers to keep fooling people in lectures, workshops and expensive lessons on 'How To Contact Ets'. He claims to be, but was never recognized as, a 'contactee' in Brazil by the UFO community and is now totally discredited. One of his many stories is that he's an extraterrestrial living on Earth. Urandir generally presents himself as an Mine Engineer, but his formal education didn't reach secondary level (high school). His last occupation was as a construction worker. He is not to be taken seriously.

The supposed explosion took place on Saturday, 24 November, 23:00 h. The place is a very beautiful location near the city of Corguinho, 85 km from Campo Grande, capital of Mato Grosso do Sul, where I reside. I have been investigating Urandir and Project Portal since 1995. In 1997 I exposed, nationwide, the complete scheme to be a hoax and described its purpose, which is to make money. My life has been threatened many times because of that and local authorities have been informed. Last Monday, 26 November, I went to the farm where the 'events' took place. I interviewed the witnesses and found several contradictions. What they saw was nothing more than a ball of light at a distance of 200 m. It came from sky, descended close to ground but did not touch it. Then it went up some 50 m and descended again, again not touching the ground. At this point, it increased its size and disappeared without any explosion, sound, marks on the ground, nothing. There is no evidence of crash at all.

This kind of sighting is common in the area and in many other places in Brazil. The main witness is Getulio Alves, the owner of Fazenda Boqueir=E3o, the farm where it happened. Conveniently for Urandir, this property is a neighbor of his Project Portal. Getulio and Urandir are 'together' in this story. Getulio actually saw something, as I described above, but it was Urandir, with the sole purpose of attracting more people and tourists to his scheduled "UFO-Christmas" events, that invented the story of the crash. This fake news is now big in Brazil and reaching overseas, unfortunately.

The fact that animals have been affected by the explosion is also a fake. These animals had been injured for one entire week before the 'happening' of 24 November. They are only two calves that each had an eye injured. Nothing more. Also, there's no confirmed sign of radioactivity, just as there is no sign on the vegetation that indicates any crash. No tree was damaged, grass burned, rocks disturbed. Local police have been to the place and Sheriff Marco Antonio Balsamini confirmed that absolutely no evidence of such a crash exists.

All the best,

A. J. Gevaerd
Editor, Brazilian UFO Magazine
National Director, Mutual UFO Network

Don, I think you are subconsciously 'adding in' details to the X-15 case, which as far as I remember it, actually DID occur in space, not 'within the atmosphere'. Do you have any evidence that this flight in question and this sighting in question was in the atmosphere?

I don't think NASA or other real space experts are 'getting away' with the ice explanation, I think it's become this generation's 'swamp gas', a story at which all manner of ridicule and ignorant mockery is aimed, to discredit it as the true, prosaic explanation of some striking visula cases which seem to have gotten mainstream ufologist blessing.

The part that left out the 'minor detail' about what White saw out his window, that "It looked like a piece of paper the size of my hand tumbling slowly outside the plane."

I assert that without those additional details, a typical reader would jump to very erroneous interpretations about what kind of 'thing' White was describing. And the error, I believe, was intentional, not accidental, because such explanatory testimony is often omitted.

AN UNCLASSIFIED CIA DEATH

The death of CIA officer Johnny Micheal Spann in Afghanistan was acknowledged with dignity and eloquence on November 28 by Director of Central Intelligence George J. Tenet.

In an extraordinary departure from past practice, however, the CIA issued a press release about Spann's death:

http://www.odci.gov/cia/public\_affairs/press\_release/pr11282001.html

Why did the Agency take this unusual step?

CIA spokesman Bill Harlow told Reuters that "Some circumstances will permit you to identify people who have given their lives for their country and for the Agency and when we can do so, we do."

But this is not a satisfactory explanation or an accurate description of CIA disclosure policy.

There is a stubborn, irrational resistance to disclosure of such information, author Ted Gup found in his recent study "The Book of Honor: Covert Lives and Classified Deaths at the CIA." The Book of Honor refers to the record of those CIA officers who were killed in the line of duty (of which there are now 79), nearly half of whom are still not identified by name but only by an engraved star.

"Douglas S. Mackiernan was killed on the Tibetan border in 1950," wrote Gup last year. "His star remains nameless. So, too, does that of Hugh Francis Redmond, who died in 1970 after nineteen years in a Chinese prison. In both instances the Chinese knew they were CIA spies. Only the American public did not."

This practice is not only an injustice to the memory of those who died, it is also bad policy because it erodes the already shaky credibility of CIA classification actions.

It is possible to do better.

Thus, in the course of his investigation Ted Gup learned the identity of "a young woman [CIA officer] who died a violent and selfless death in 1996" but did not reveal her name because "The Agency made a compelling case that to identify her would put others at risk."

Information about "The Book of Honor" by Ted Gup may be found here:

<http://www.randomhouse.com/anchor/catalog/display.pperl?isbn=0385495412>

A volatile former CIA counterterrorism officer named Larry Johnson yesterday accused the CIA of engaging in a "public relations battle" at the expense of Mr. Spann's family who, he suggested, are now "at risk" as a result. Mr. Johnson spoke on the PBS News Hour:

http://www.pbs.org/newshour/bb/fedagencies/July-dec01/cia\_11-29.html

According to a CIA spokesman, Johnny Micheal Spann's middle name is properly spelled "Micheal" and not, as New York Times editors and others have emended it, "Michael."

INTELLIGENCE SPENDING FOR COUNTERTERRORISM

The House of Representatives described with unwonted specificity the amount of money allocated to the U.S. intelligence community for emergency counterterrorism activities in the Defense Appropriations bill that passed the House on November 28.

The House established a new Counter-Terrorism and Operational Response Transfer Fund in Title IX of the defense spending bill in which it directed that "$451,000,000 shall be made available to the Director of Central Intelligence."

This is unusual since, as a rule, dollar amounts for intelligence are not disclosed.

(The limited exceptions include spending for CIA retirement accounts and for the Community Management Staff, which are disclosed annually, as are funds for a variety of small tactical intelligence programs in the defense budget. In 1994, the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee accidentally published more detail. See Secrecy & Government Bulletin, Issue No. 41, November 1994; and "$28 Billion Spying Budget Is Made Public by Mistake" by Tim Weiner, New York Times, November 5, 1994.)

The House allocated the new intelligence money, with additional funds for the Defense Department, for the following purposes:

"For urgent enhancements to intelligence and military capabilities in order to prosecute Operation Enduring Freedom; to discover, infiltrate, and deter terrorist groups; to protect against terrorist attacks that might employ either conventional means or weapons of mass destruction, and to prepare against the consequences of such attacks; to deny unauthorized users the opportunity to modify, steal, inappropriately disclose, or destroy sensitive military intelligence data or networks, and to accelerate improvements in information networks and operations."

With notable passivity, the House directed the Pentagon and the DCI to report back in 90 days on how they would spend the new money. See excerpts from the bill here:

<http://www.fas.org/irp/news/2001/11/funds.html>

The White House opposed this Title IX provision of the defense bill, arguing that the money should go into existing accounts rather than into a new funding construct. "The immediate effect of this legislation would be to fragment programs and disrupt ... ongoing activities," the Administration argued. See:

<http://www.whitehouse.gov/omb/legislative/sap/107-1/HR3338-h.htm>

"Since 1995, the congressional intelligence committees have become less effective in providing public oversight and in advancing needed reforms," writes Steven Aftergood in a letter to the editor of the New York Times:

<http://www.nytimes.com/2001/11/30/opinion/L30INTE.html>

Prepared testimony from the important November 28 hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee on "Preserving Our Freedoms While Defending Against Terrorism" may be found here:

<http://www.senate.gov/~judiciary/hr112801f.htm>

In a healthy sign of resistance to unwarranted secrecy, historians and public interest groups, represented by Public Citizen, filed a lawsuit November 28 seeking to overturn the recent executive order issued by President Bush that limits access to the records of former presidents. See:

It is true that tiny bugs or dust particles close to the lens of a modern flash camera can produce "flash orb" images.

Actually the "UFO hypothesis" could be combined with the zoo hypothesis to explain why they are "above our heads" while not overtly communicating.

This shows how out-of-step Shostak really is. Regardless of evidence for or against ghosts (or astrology or bigfoot or... you name it) the fact is that UFO evidence consists of MORE than just the report of a witness "no matter how credible the witness". Multiple witness (credible witnesses) sightings combined with radar and photographic are available. Shostak suffers from the REAL reason why UFOs aren't accepted: the SELF-cover up.

This is a subject that no one wants to admit is real because it potentially... or very likely... represents a great loss in "self-importance"... humans don't control things after all and are the "mercy" of creatures of much greater ability (maybe).

Religion was established to handle this problem of lack of control of the surroundings, the environment, life itself. Pray for help. Maybe there is a great "spirit" out there that will give you a measure of indirect control over the environment, your enemies, whatever. (We see this being acted out in a big way in Afghanoistan right now!) But religion assumes a transcendent being in control. What if humanity were to suddenly come face to face with material biological beings who seem to be in control, or at least have much greater capability than we? Think about it.

Do YOU want to announce the proof of UFO reality to the world... and be responsible for the consequences?

>Until and unless better evidence is collected, few scientists >are inclined to accept the premise that the Fermi Paradox can be >resolved by the claim that aliens are either soaring through the >stratosphere, or are stashed away in meat lockers at Area 51.

Scientists always want better evidence. Even now the theory of relativity is being tested to get "better evidence." So that should not be a criterion for doing something NOW with the evidence we have already. We should accept the available evidence as pointing toward a particular explanation for UFO sightings.... and prepare ourselves for probable eventualities... when the self-cover up is ripped away by "incontrovertible proof" (whatever that might be).

Read Abduction In My Life for further amplification on this problem of what do we do with what we already know.

>Don Ledger

Don,

I have exactly the same take on this as you. Thanks for putting it out there for discussion. White reached an altitude of about 60 miles traveling about 4000 mph. I don't know at what point in his trip he sighted the object. Let's assume it was at his maximum altitude of 60 miles. There's not much atmosphere up there, but it's also not a true vacuum. Meteorites made of rock and metal, not to mention satellites, start burning up at this altitude, but not this flat, fragile, completely non-aerodynamic "ice flake." Yeah right!

Furthermore, besides this flat "ice flake" being impervious to vaporization by frictional heat, it was also immune to frictional drag. After breaking off the engine in the rear, it somehow migrated forward to be seen tumbling outside of White's side porthole.

It's truly amazing what "ice flakes" are capable of doing in the imagination of a debunker. The physical properties of such "ice flakes" are so remarkable, I'm surprised NASA doesn't make our spacecraft out of them. Why use metals and ceramics when we could use "ice flake" skins, thus eliminating frictional drag and reentry problems, all with one simple, inexpensive material?

Let's try another approach. Debunkers when attacking UFO sightings, love to point out that it isn't possible to reliably judge distance, size, and speed without a point of reference. (We'll ignore, for the moment, whether White could have judged the distance stereoscopically.) Furthermore, at 60 miles, atmospheric haze as a crude guide to distance would be eliminated. (An effect we've all seen where distant objects appear closer on a very clear day, such as after a rain.) This compounds the difficulty in judging distance out in space.

This being said, was the object really 30 to 40 feet away and the size of White's hand? What if it was a mile away? Then it might be 50+ feet across. If 10 miles away, then 500+ feet across, etc.

Now, instead of a close, small (inexplicable) curiosity no bigger than White's hand, we would have a distant, big curiosity, perhaps UFOish in nature.

I don't know what it was either and am likewise open to reasonable suggestions. But "ice flakes" strike me as physically impossible under the given circumstances.

David Rudiak

George Harrison Dies At 58

Subject: George Harrison Dies At 58

Hello All,

Off-topic and 'unrelated' but I just wanted to post something publicly about this tragic loss for us all.

George Harrison, the Beatles' quiet lead guitarist died at 1:30 p.m. yesterday (Nov. 29) at a friend's Los Angeles home following a battle with cancer. Harrison's wife, Olivia Harrison, and son Dhani, 24, were with him.

Music has always been an important component of my life. I have been an active/playing drummer for 41 years. I taught myself guitar 18 years ago. Any musician will tell you how personally important all of the people we try to emulate as we learn can be. While learning, you can become so intimately familiar with someone's music that you feel a kind of bond and a kinship with them that goes well beyond what can be experienced by mere listening. George was one of those many influences on me as I struggled to master the guitar. As with many others I have taken from him in order to create/find my own voice on the instrument. George has touched more lives in ways that are not easily seen. Touched lives in ways that go very deep into the soul. Another light has gone out.

The Beatles, (especially John) mean a lot to me. I feel George's loss as if it had been a family member. I'm sure we'll all miss him very much.

Regards,

John Velez

What sort of non-answer is that?

You were the one who came on UpDates like gangbusters claiming no one would provide you with a citation on the Cernan quote, insinuating that the quote was fabricated. All you had to do was go to Good's book to get the citation.

The fact that you are familiar with Good and his various NASA quotations is clearly evidenced by another UpDates post only last Nov. 25, where you proudly detailed you're debunking of an alleged quote he had from Werner von Braun. An excerpt from that post:

>From: James Oberg <joberg@houston.rr.com>

In the same chapter that has the von Braun quote has Cernan's quote, the one you questioned as one you couldn't find any original citation on. Yet you use Good's Neues Europa citation for the von Braun quote to try to track it down, but failed to use his Cernan citation.

Again, I ask why? Again, I'm sure you will dodge the question.

Despite your sanctimonious talk about concentrating "on the quality of the evidence rather than finding ways to avoid looking at it," this seems to be exactly what you are doing.

First, it is abundantly obvious that you didn't try all that hard to find the citation on Cernan's quote. Whatever your opinion of Good's book, it is heavily referenced, and has a full chapter on NASA with all those astronaut quotes you obviously love to debunk. If somebody had asked me about the Cernan quote and a citation for it, Good's book would have been the first one I would have grabbed to see if both were in there.

Second, when the Cernan quote was validated here on UpDates and the full citation given, what was your response? From the same Nov. 25 post:

When we cut through the Obergian double-talk, what you seem to be saying is essentially this. Even though the LA Times article and the quote in it had been verified as real, you refused to accept that it "reflected the astronaut's true opinion" or "was an accurate reflection of what Cernan really said or meant." To you it was nothing more than "useful propaganda" for the "UFO believers."

A few days later, Oberg repeated this refrain. He accepted the article as authentic, but not the quotes, even though he admitted the LA Times reporter was "known for accuracy."

```

Now who's the one actually "avoiding looking at the evidence" here? I'm sure if the shoe were on the other foot and Cernan had instead said that anyone who thinks UFOs are real is a complete loony, there would be no such huffing and puffing from Oberg about the accuracy of the quote.

The irony is that Cernan didn't say he knew for a fact that UFO's were real, merely that it was his opinion that they were, and represented some other civilization, amongst many he thought must exist in the universe on a statistical basis alone.

But even these rather benign comments, since they came from an astronaut, seemingly must be eradicated by the NASA Taliban thought police (AKA James Oberg).

In yet another post to UpDates, again dodging a response as to why he couldn't find the citation, Oberg instead said he was going to try to find the NASA videotape of the press conference:

>From: James Oberg <joberg@houston.rr.com>
>Date: Thu, 29 Nov 2001 12:04:03 -0600

>either before or after the formal event.

Well that's fine. I hope he does come up with the videotape, though I doubt if it will add anything new. If I may do a little mindreading, however, it strikes me that Oberg is hoping against hope that he will find a significant discrepancy between the videotaped remarks and how Cernan was quoted. Or, failing that, he is hoping that the remarks were not made during the public news conference, but off-the-record. Then he can do a song and dance about how the remarks lack independent corroboration, or how the reporter misunderstood or misquoted Cernan.

I doubt he will discover the latter, because the LA Times article twice states that Cernan's remarks came during the press conference:

"Cernan told a news conference: 'I'm one of those guys who has never seen a UFO (unidentified flying object). But I've been asked, and I've said publicly I thought they were somebody else, some other civilization. ...Cernan's statements came at the last news conference of the Apollo 17 crew..."

The article also notes that Cernan's remarks came after those of Harrison Schmitt: "Earlier, Schmitt said he though some of the strange moon soil that he and Cernan picked up near the Crater Shorty on the moon may be only 10 million years old."

If the remarks had been made privately, the article more likely would have read "Cernan told this reporter" or "Cernan told the Times" or "Cernan said after the press conference" or something like that.

I'm sure, with his stated concern about "quality of evidence" and not "finding ways to avoid looking at it," if he does find the tape, that James Oberg will let the world know that the tape corroborates the Time's quotes, if that's the case, just as surely as he would write some smug article about how he had disproven the quote, if that was also the case.

The good folks at SETI can speak for themselves. Their underlying assumption is that extraplanetary aliens will be hindered by the same monetary and technical challenges that keep NASA from doing anything interesting (and they're supposed to be _aliens_!)

Of course, SETI writes off the UFO phenomenon without even a cursory look at the evidence, as UFOs would threaten the "not in my backyard" mentality that governs the whole project to begin with. And if some UFOs are cited as evidence of some sort of ETI, the SETI geniuses invariably ask "Why don't they land on the White House Lawn?"

If you were an alien, would revealing yourself to the natives be the first thing on your mind? Would you even recognize political hierarchies as loci of power? (Most of the time I don't--and I live here!)

SETI pundits are the Christian Fundamentalists of the exobiological world. Their worldview is intentionally limited, and they seem bent on inflicting their interpretation of the universe on everyone else regardless of its glaring absence of logic.

White's X-15 flight in July of 1962 reached an altitude of 96 kilometers, which technically at least, qualifies as a space flight. See:

<http://jpcolliat.free.fr/x15/A.html#white>

There is probably still some atmospheric drag at that altitude, but probably not enough to prevent ice particles from "hovering" near the plane for some time rather than being swept away quickly. I do wonder, however, where the water vapor that could form such ice particles came from. If there's little air at an altitude of 96 km, then there also isn't much water vapor in that rarified air that could condense into ice particles. X-15 flights were very brief, so I would think waste water was not being dumped overboard, eliminating another possible source of ice. The ice would probably have to have formed while the plane was at lower altitudes. But this plane was moving at hypersonic speeds which generate enough friction at lower altitudes to require the plane's skin to be constructed from heat resistant alloys. How does atmospheric water condense into ice on such a hot surface?
